☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

INVOCATION.

Hear us, O gracious God!
Aid to the needy send,
And to the tempted, fainting soul,
Thy saving strength extend.

For perils thicken now,
Dread conflicts loom in view,
The seven-fold heated furnace, Lord,
O save, thou Strong and True!

A standard raise thou up
'Gainst the o'erflowing flood,
And in our direst need us save,
The purchase of thy blood.

Now thy past wondrous works
With joy remember we,
And trust our all sufficient good
Unto the end thou'lt be.

Then when on Egypt's bands
The judgment vial pours,
Merited wrath, and deep and dread,
A fearful darkness lowers;

Within thy "hiding place"
Secure, we look on high,
And Joy unfurls her trembling wing,
The Day-Star gilds our sky!

WATCHMAN, TELL US OF THE NIGHT!

Inasmuch as many have spoken and written much concerning the second coming of Christ, yet it seems that every one differs in some particular with all the rest, as to the time and manner of his coming.

Then we may well ask of the watchman, what the signs of promise are, according to the evangelists. Christ has declared that he will come again. Then what does Christ mean when he emphatically declares that he will come again? Must we not understand him to mean, that he would come a second time into this world? Not with the same design or purpose he was then here; but that he would come to reign with his people as king of all the earth.

Then it is very evident that Christ had taught his disciples of what was to take place in the future; and spared no pains to inculcate this truth into their minds. They must not expect him to set up a temporal kingdom here on earth at that time; but they could look forward with pleasing anticipation to a time yet far in the future, when he would come again, and then do what they so much then desired and expected him to do; and when they referred him to the greatness of the temple, he told them that there should not one stone remain upon another but should be thrown down. Then remembering what he had formerly told them, they asked him, privately, when these things should take place and what the signs would be of his coming; upon which the Redeemer of mankind revealed to those chosen disciples what was to take place before that great event should come to pass; which we can read in the 24th and 25th chapters of Matt., 13th of Mark and 21st of Luke.

Then in order that we may rightly understand these things, we must have some knowledge of the history of the world since the time these words were spoken; so that we may know whether any part or all of those signs have been fulfilled. History then informs us that some of them have been literally fulfilled. The death, resurrection from the dead, and the ascension of Christ was all literally fulfilled, as foretold by himself and the prophets before him; then the martyrdom of the apostles with many other disciples, and in due time the great city, Jerusalem, was destroyed, just as predicted by Christ, and that once proud and self-righteous people, yes, that people who were once God's peculiar people were now scattered to the ends of the earth, without a home or any place of refuge. This took place some seventy years after the birth of Christ, or between thirty-five and forty years after this destruction was foretold.

Then from this period until about A. D. 533, the Jews still enjoyed some privileges amongst civilized nations; but about that time it was decreed that they must become christians, or be banished or put to death; and under this decree they were driven from one place to another, and many thousands put to death just because they were Jews. But they still retained their identity as a people until perhaps in the beginning of the year of A. D. 1780, when they were again received into some nations as citizens. This must have been the time of abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel, chapter 9, v. 27.

"Then immediately after those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light." According to history and even eye-witnesses now living, these were accomplished on the 19th day of May, 1780. "And the stars shall fall from heaven." This also was fulfilled on the 13th day of November, 1833. "Then there shall be wars and rumors of wars, famines and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places," with many other signs which we have historical accounts that these prophecies have been fulfilled while many now living are eye-witnesses to many of these things. Then we have the best of authority to believe that Christ will make his second advent in person or as literal or natural, as his first advent was, and as much so, as those signs that were to foretell his near approach have been fulfilled.

The question will then be, How are we to be benefitted by his coming? The apostle Paul tells us, that to them that look for him will he appear without sin unto salvation. Also, all scriptures are by inspiration of God, and are profitable, etc. Then it is for the edification of the saints, that these things have been delivered, and since Christ has told us what is to come to pass, we should take the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. Christ says, As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it also be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man. Now if we read the Bible history of the days of Noah, that notwithstanding Noah faithfully warned the people of the destruction of the world by water, they did not hear him, but laughed him to scorn, until the day that God sent the floods upon the earth.

Now this is strong evidence that these things will come to pass. A very large majority of professed christians do not look for Christ or believe that he will come again in person; consequently they laugh to scorn those that do look for him. Some will tell us that he came the second time at the destruction of Jerusalem; but as many of those signs spoken of were not then fulfilled and which have since taken place, while those things foretold immediately connected with the coming of the Son of man had not been yet fulfilled, or, if they had been, historians have been very faithless and false in not recording such remarkable events, while they were very minute in giving correct accounts of many minor events.

"And at midnight there was a cry, behold, the bridegroom cometh." From the best information this midnight cry went forth some forty years ago. Behold the bridegroom cometh! that is, the cry went forth, that Christ the Savior was coming again. It seems that this was lost sight of by the church. This perhaps will require some little explanation, so that all may know how to understand the parable. It seems at the celebration of marriages of people in that day that the marriage took place in the night, or at least the bridegroom's coming was not exactly known to the guests at the bride's house, and that it was customary for some of the female attendants to go some distance from the house of the bride to meet the bridegroom to escort him to the house of the bride. In the parable the number is given as ten, who went out to meet the bridegroom. Now it seems that they had started early to meet him not knowing when he would come; but being sure that they were early enough to meet him, and while they were waiting his arrival, they slumbered and slept. And at midnight the messengers that were sent ahead of the bridegroom to proclaim his coming, went forth and cried, behold the bridegroom cometh, be ready, when he does come, to meet him! Then if this midnight cry was made in 1823, we thus far have had over forty years to trim our lamps and not only so but have also had time to prepare oil in our vessels. But should we act the part of those five foolish virgins, and not have oil in our vessels, we will be denied the privilege of entering into the marriage, notwithstanding we may have started out to meet the bridegroom.

Then, dear brethren and sisters, when such glorious promises are left for us, let us not be weary in well doing; but let us always endeavor to have a full supply of that oil Christ had an allusion to in the above parable. Now we must obtain these blessings by going through great tribulation; yes, we must meet with many trials and difficulties in passing through this world, but we must remember that Christ's kingdom is not of this world, and that if we are his subjects, we cannot go with the world in its vain amusements and gaudy show, with its turmoil and confusion, with its revelry, debauchery, destruction, and crime of every kind. So we must be separated from all that is opposed to the nature, word, and will of God, if we wish to have part in those promises that are recorded in the word of inspiration. And oh! what a happy thought, that God has sent his Son, that through him we can be made priests unto God, and that he will raise us to immortality at his coming, and receive us to himself, where we shall forever be happy. But oh! what a pity, that often having covenanted with God in Christ Jesus to be faithful, we should neglect to do the commandments of the New Testament and consequently lose our hope in Christ, where we will have to be cast out into outer darkness where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth!

Now, dear reader, whoever you may be, be assured of this one thing; the writer of this loves you sincerely, and desires and prays that you may so live, that when death calls you from time, you will have your peace made with God. Think of the shortness of life, the certainty of death, and of the great judgment day, when all mankind will be brought before the Judge of the quick and dead, and while you are thus thinking upon your own state, pray God to remember him who wrote this, in much mercy, that he, too, may be found among the saints in the first resurrection.

May God add his blessing to what has been written according to his word, and pardon whatever otherwise.—Gospel Visitor.

BEAR AND FORBEAR.—If we would have life move on smoothly, we must learn to bear and forbear. We must indulge the friend we love in the little peculiarities of saying and doing things which may be important to him, but of little moment to us. Like children, we must suffer each one to build his play-house in his own way, and not quarrel with him because he does not think our way the best.—Home Thrusts.

THE SAINT'S INHERITANCE; OR, The New Heavens and the New Earth.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

What did the first Methodists believe respecting the New Heavens and the New Earth? How did they view these as related to the final inheritance of the saints? Did they interpret this sentence literally or figuratively? These are proper questions for their successors to investigate, and can only be answered by an appeal to their writings. In making this appeal it may be well to repeat the following statement from "The Ency. Rel. Knowledge, Art. Methodists." "The Standard writers of the Methodists are Wesley, Fletcher, Benson, Clark, and Watson, with many others too numerous to mention." The "others" here referred to may fairly include Charles Wesley, whose hymns are sung in all our churches, Toplady, a Calvinistic Methodist, Dr. Coke, Thomas Taylor, Joseph Sutcliffe, etc., all of whom are among the earliest authors of the Methodistical persuasion." Witness the following extracts, as exhibiting the views of the foregoing writers on the doctrine in question:

Richard Watson stoutly maintained that the future abode of the good will be a "place," hence local and substantial. On the word "Heaven" he writes, "Among the numerous refinements of modern times, that is the most remarkable which goes to deny the locality of heaven. 'It is a state,' say many, 'and not a place.' But if that be the case, the very language of the Scriptures in regard to this point, is calculated to mislead us." He then proceeds to demonstrate that the saints' future abode will be a place, as well as a state, and although he is doubtful if the redeemed and renovated earth is that place, he observes that a Mr. Joseph Hallett has endeavored to prove that they will dwell upon earth, when it shall be restored to its paradisiacal state." Bible and Theological Dictionary, N. Y., edition 1837, pp. 438–9.

Joseph Benson goes further and is more explicit. In his Commentary, quoting from, and evidently endorsing Bishop Hume, he says, "Let the heavens etc., rejoice before the Lord." At the presence and approach of the Lord their Maker. For he cometh to judge the earth—to take to himself that power and authority which belong to him, and to set up his throne and dominion above all nations of the earth. The coming of Christ is two-fold; first he came to sanctify the creature, and he will come to glorify it. If creation be represented as rejoicing at the establishment of the former, how much greater will be the joy at the approach of the latter, seeing that notwithstanding Christ be long since come in the flesh; though he ascended into heaven, and have sent the Spirit from thence, yet the whole creation, as the apostle speaks, (Rom. 8: 22 pasa ktisis,) groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, expecting to be delivered from the bondage of corruption, etc.; yea, we ourselves, also, who have the first fruits of the Spirit, groan within ourselves, waiting for the redemption of the body; when, at the renovation of all things, man, new made, shall return to the days of his youth to begin an immortal spring and be forever young."

"Make a joyful noise," etc. The psalmist beholding in spirit the accomplishment of the promises, the advent of Christ and the glory of his kingdom, thinks it criminal in any creature to be silent; he bids the whole earth break forth into joy, and exult in God her Savior, with every token of gratitude and thankfulness." "Here we have the subject of the general joy—the coming of the Messiah to reform the world, to execute judgment upon the wicked, and to establish a kingdom of righteousness upon the earth. We expect his second advent to restore all things, to judge the world, to condemn his enemies, and to begin his glorious reign. Then shall heaven and earth rejoice and the joy of the redeemed be full." Benson's notes on Ps. 96: 10–13, and 98: 4–9. Many other similar passages might be quoted.

John Fletcher in a "Letter to Wesley, London, Nov. 29, 1775," while arguing in favor of the doctrine of a pre-millennial advent says, "Who does not perceive that Christ will come to give the finishing stroke to the great work begun by the might of his Spirit, to establish his kingdom upon earth, and bring those happy days, etc., when righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters fill the sea. I cannot conceive how so many divines have such an idea of God's wisdom, as to think—contrary to the plain text of his word—that so happy a time will last but a few days; and that this great revelation will no sooner take place, but the earth will be destroyed by fire." He also alludes to "the time of the purification of this globe by dissolution and fire, and exhorts us not to forget to rejoice with Abraham in seeing by faith the glorious day of our Lord, and to hasten by our fervent prayers that glorious kingdom, those happy days when narrow shall be the way of destruction, when saints raised from the dead shall converse with living saints, and the world of spirits be manifested in a great measure to the material world; in a word, when Jesus will be all in all. What a glorious prospect this is. Let us often think of these words of our Lord, "Behold I come quickly." See too, Fletcher's defense of this doctrine in his unpublished "Letters to Dr. Priestly." Works, vols. VII. and VIII., also Arminian Methodist Magazine, 1793, pp. 370.

It is fair to concede however, that the letter to Wesley here alluded to, does not clearly present this new or renewed earth as being the eternal abode of the righteous, as it more especially refers to the personal presence and reign of Christ therein during the millennium. But does he anywhere teach their post-millennial translation to some far off unseen abode?

Augustus M. Toplady writes: "It is enough for us to know that a day will dawn when a period shall be put to every disorder under which nature at present labors; and that the earth will become just what it was (perhaps considerable better than it was,) before sin destroyed the harmony, and broke the balance of the well-according system. The stupendous accomplishment of this pre-destined restoration is largely and explicitly foretold in Rev. 20, where we read that the apostate angels shall be restrained by the coercive power of God, and confined to their own place for one thousand years. That those of mankind that belong to Christ, and especially such of them as have been, or are yet to be slain for his name's sake, shall reign with him upon the earth during that period. And that the bodies of the reprobate dead shall not be raised until that period is fully expired. The next chapter opens with acquainting us, that prior to the actual commencement of the millennium, a new heaven, i. e., a new body of surrounding air, and a new earth shall be prepared for the residence of Christ and the elect.

"I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away and there was no more sea." Intimating that this terraqueous globe, and its circumambient atmosphere, will be so purified by the preceding general conflagration as to be totally changed in their qualities, and entirely divested of everything noxious, or that can cause disgust and pain. He then proceeds to describe the felicity of this "renewed world," to which he applies those splendid predictions in 2 Pet. 3: 13 and Rev. 21: 5. See His Works, Royal Octavio, London, 1837 pp. 428–29–30 (New Edition.)

Joseph Sutcliffe wrote concerning these things, setting forth views like those of Fletcher and Toplady. This millennial period he calls "the times of restitution of all things," Acts 3: 21; this being the new heavens and earth spoken of in Isa. 65: 17; the first resurrection being literal, and our Lord's second advent personal and visible at the commencement of the millennium. "But his new earth," he says, "must be different from that mentioned by Peter and John;" the only allusion he makes to the heavenly inheritance, leaving his readers to suppose that there would be such a new creation at the close of the millennial reign. Vide Introduction to Christianity, N. Y., Ed. 1817. Sec. XII., pp. 163, etc.

The views on this doctrine of the inheritance of the earth set forth by Charles Wesley are only obtained from his "Short Hymns on Select Passages of the Holy Scriptures." 2 Vols., London, 1794. But these, though constituting a series of commentaries in rhyme, are amply sufficient to exhibit the author's doctrines. Read the following detached verses and lines:

Hymn 1050 on Isa. 65: 17.

"Come, Divine effectual power,
Fallen nature to restore;
Wait we for thy presence here,
Long to see thy throne appear;
Bid the new creation rise,
Bring us back our Paradise.

Now our universe create,
Fair, beyond its first estate,
When thine eye with pleasure view'd,
When thy lips pronounced it good,
Ruin'd now by sin and curst,
Speak it fairer than at first."

Hymn 1172, on Dan. 2: 44.

"God of heaven appear below,
And let thy kingdom come;
All these worldly powers o'erthrow,
And scatter and consume!
Let the last on earth take place,
Never, never to decline,
Founded in perpetual grace—
The Monarchy divine.

Lord, as taught by thee we pray
That sin and death may end;
In the great millennial day
With all thy saints descend;
Now displayed with glorious power
Let that final empire rise,
Stand when time shall be no more,
Eternal in the skies.

. . . On Malachi 4: 6, hymn 1328, our witness is very emphatic, thus:

"Yes, we know our Lord will come,
Smite the Antichrist of Rome,
All his plagues and judgments pour,
Earth accurst with fire devour!
But the curse shall soon remove,
And the incarnate God of love,
Sitting on his throne shall show
EARTH RENEWED IS HEAVEN BELOW."

The doctrine of John Wesley is in perfect agreement with that of his poet brother, as all know who have read his "Sermon LXIX—The New Creation," on Rev. 21: 5. It is worthy of note that this eminent man interprets the sentence "new earth" as referring to a literal and substantial world where there shall be light, vegetation, pleasing healthful breezes, water clear and limpid, pure from all unpleasing or unhealthful mixtures, rising here and there in crystal fountains to refresh and adorn the earth, rivers gently gliding along for the use of both man and beast, gently rising hills, flowers, green fields, all sorts of beasts whose ferocity is now forever forgotten; the wolf dwelling with the lamb, (which words he says may be literally as well as figuratively understood.) The (ktisis) creatures in Rom. 8: 19, 20, 21, he refers to the brute creation and inanimate nature, both of which share in the curse and shall also partake of this glad renovation and redemption, "for all the earth," he says, "shall be a more beautiful paradise than Adam ever saw." Mr. Wesley is also careful to affirm that this beatific paradise will come to pass, not in the present state of things, but when this world is no more; that it is to be accomplished when the inhabitants of our earth will be equal to angels, i. e., at the resurrection of the just, Luke 20: 35, 36; and that this newly created world which he seems to people with redeemed men, will not appear till subsequent to the final conflagration. Sermons, N. Y. Ed. 1836, Vol. 2 pp. 82–87.

We here observe, too, that many of his Hymns as also his Notes on the New Testament, abundantly teach the same doctrine respecting the saints inheritance.

Thomas Taylor, who unlike Fletcher, Toplady, Benson, Sutcliffe, and the Wesleys, held to the doctrine of a post-millennial second advent, yet teaches in Sermon XV. on the joys of Heaven, as follows—"'The topography, or place of this glorious bliss will, very probably, be this earth, after the grand conflagration; for it does not appear to me that the fire will annihilate, but refine, so that there may be a new heavens and a new earth, according to the Divine promise, wherein righteousness shall dwell forevermore. 2 Pet. 3: 13; Isa. 65: 17; Isa. 66: 23. And this seems to quadrate with what the apostle John beheld in that transporting view of the heavenly state, 'And I saw a new heaven and a new earth,' etc., Rev. 21: 1. That is, the whole frame and order of things were entirely changed, so that it bore no resemblance of its former state. The antediluvian earth is supposed to have had no sea in its surface, but that the disruption thereof was at the deluge, and is assigned as one cause of the destroying flood, which deformed the face of the earth and left it in its present ruinous state. But the purging fire having done its office, a beautiful frame will arise, a meet habitation for the spirits of just men made perfect, and to which they will repair after the resurrection. . . . And that the place will be within our solar system, and probably where the earth now is, appears to me from what follows—'And I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.' Rev. 21: 2. The term city, may either mean the glorious inhabitants, or the heavenly vehicle, which Jehovah hath ordained for their eternal residence; in both senses the apostle's words will hold good. For when the new earth is restored, the divine apparatus so largely described by the apostle, may be fixed upon it; so that all may be in the form of a glorious city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God, and both the city and its inhabitants may be said to be like a bride adorned for her husband. It will then be emphatically said, 'Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people and God himself shall be with them;' with them, visibly, sensibly, and eternally, and avouch himself in very express terms to be their God and their all. Who can adequately explain those blessed and comfortable words? Here is the ever blessed God restoring all things! Here is full redemption, so that the wreck and ruin occasioned by the defection of the angels remains no longer a dreary waste, but a habitation restored for the true God, and a residence for blessed souls. 'The repairer of breaches restores all things, and harmony, order, and sweet concord shall forever dwell." Sermons on the Millennium etc., and on what appears to follow that happy era. Hull, Eng. 1789, pp. 341–342.

The learned Dr. Adam Clarke on 2 Pet. 3: 11–13 thus comments:—"All these things shall be dissolved. They will all be separated, all decomposed; but none of them destroyed. As they are the original matter out of which God formed the terraqueous globe, consequently they may enter again into the composition of a new system; and therefore the apostle says, verse 13, We look for a new heaven and a new earth, the others being decomposed and a new system is to be formed out of their materials. There is a wonderful philosophic propriety in the words of the apostle in describing this most awful event."

Verse 13. "We, according to his promise, look," etc. The promise to which it is supposed the apostle alludes is found in Isa. 65: 17; 66: 22. 'For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth,' etc. Now although these may be interpreted of the glory of the gospel dispensation, yet if St. Peter refers to them they must have a more extended meaning. It does appear from these promises, what the apostle says here, and what is said in Rev. 21: 6, that the present earth, though destined to be burned up will not be destroyed, but be renewed and refined, purged from all moral and natural imperfections, and made the endless abode of blessed spirits. But this state is certainly to be expected after the day of judgment; for in this the apostle is very express who says the conflagration and renovation are to take place at the judgment of the great day, see verses 7, 8, 10, 12. That such an event may take place is very possible, and from the terms used by St. Peter is very probable. And indeed, it is more reasonable and philosophic to conclude that the earth shall be refined and restored than finally destroyed." Vide. Com.

From the foregoing quotations and references, it will be observed that while a number of these early and standard Methodist writers were millennarians, and appear disposed to limit the Scripture predictions of a new earth to the millenary period, yet they all regard this fulfillment as literally to be accomplished hereafter, and the most eminent of them, viz., John Wesley and Adam Clarke, with others, obviously carry the predictions into the eternal state, and hold this glorious new made world to be the eternal residence of the redeemed. Indeed, they appear so generally unanimous, that may we not affirm the view to have been, not a mere private opinion, but almost an article of faith? Such were the doctrines of the fathers and founders of Methodism on the immortal inheritance and home of the saints. Is it well for their successors to attempt innovations on these early, and well-established views? If heaven, as Watson claims, will be a place, as that place must be somewhere in the vast universe of God, why not with Taylor, Wesley and Clarke, agree in believing that place to be our fallen planet restored to more than the beauty and glory of its Edenic state? And why cannot modern Methodists settle down in this view of their noble founders and so present a oneness of doctrine in regard to this important and sublime subject?

Such a view of the saints' abode was held by all the first christian writers and fathers of the church, viz., Justin Martyr, Ireneus, Origen, the fathers of the Council of Nice, Eusebius, Basil, the two Cyrils of Jerusalem and Alexandria, the two Gregories, Chrysostom, Zacharias of Mitylene, and later by Damascen, Œcumenius, Euthymius and others of the Greek writers; while Tertullian, Lactantius, Hilary, Ambrose, Augustus, and Jerome of the Latin writers, all set their hands and seals to this doctrine, that after the conflagration the world will be renewed, restored and inhabited. So testifies Dr. Burnett in his "Theory of the earth," 1697, Book IV. chap. 3. And the learned Grabe, editor of the Septuagint, who says Dr. Duffield "had carefully examined and collected the fathers generally," decisively testifies that "All primitive orthodox christians expected, according to the words of the apostle and the promises of the prophets, a new heavens and a new earth at the second coming of the Messiah to restore the happiness which flourished before the fall of Adam." Duffield on Proph. pp. 264. Grabe's Spicilegium Patrum, lib. 2. pp. 230.

To the first christians and early Methodists we may also add the names of Luther, Calvin, Knox, Melancthon, Bullinger, Bradford, Cranmer, Dr. T. Goodwin, Baxter, Bunyan, Stephen Charnock, Poole, Milton, Andrew Fuller, William Jay, Sir Isaac and Bishop Newton, Dr. Gill, Doddridge, A. Pope, Bishop Heber, Dr. Watts, Pollock, Cowper, Bossuet and Drs. Increase and Cotton Mather; while the doctrine is fortified by the high names of Dr. Griffin, Dr. Urwick, Dr. Hengstenberg, Dr. Geo. Campbell, Dr. Knapp, Dr. Carlyle, Dr. Tholuck, Dr. J. P. Smith, Dr. Hitchcock, Dr. Chalmers, Dr. Dick, Fairbairn, Irving, Spurgeon, Cumming, and a multitude of others both in Europe and America. Surely the view is no novelty. Let us embrace it and go back to PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—Advent Herald.

MEETINGS FOR HOLINESS; OR, The Higher Christian Life.

"'Tis not high power that makes a place divine,
Nor that the men from gods derive their line;
But sacred thoughts in holy bosoms stored,
Make people noble, and the place adored."

These social gatherings for spiritual elevation, for rising higher and higher, shining brighter and brighter unto the perfect day, are held in various places both in New York City and in Brooklyn, with increasing interest and edification. No meetings for worship are attended with more direct and special indications of Divine acceptance. The atmosphere is heavenly, life-giving, soul-kindling. Most of these social interviews for the higher life in holiness are on the christian union principle.

"To sect or party the large soul
Disdains to be confined,
The good he loves, of every name,
And prays for all mankind."

No questions are asked whether you are a Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Quaker, Jew or Gentile—all are one in Christ Jesus. Any one has perfect liberty to rise, speak, request prayers, relate the dealings of God with himself, drop a word of exposition, exhortation, consolation; pour out his soul in prayer and praise, give God glory, if so be special reference is had to brevity, definiteness, and condensation. No one has a right to engross the time which properly belongs to another.

These meetings are not for debate, controversy, or speechifying—but for HOLINESS. Every one that enters these consecrated halls, is expected to conform strictly to the objects and purport of the meeting. Such is the nature, exercise, and spirit of these social gatherings, we feel assured that even the skeptic, the subtle caviler, disputer, or objector, will be constrained on most occasions to exclaim, "The finger of God is in it."

If ever sectarianism is fully banished from this earth, it must be through the spirit of Bible holiness, the love of God shed abroad in the soul. All our denunciations against this giant evil will avail very little, comparatively, until God's spirit scatters it to the four winds! In these blessed interviews we hear very few allusions to sects, party views, or denominationalisms. The Bible, the blessed Bible is the text book, and we rejoice at this noble liberality and earnest adherence to christian union and fellowship—"There is one body, and one spirit, even as you are called with one hope of your calling." "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we are bond or free; and have all been made to drink into one Spirit."

The good influence of these meetings has gone out, not only in this city, but in other cities and states in the Union. The voice has sounded across the Atlantic, on, and on! Every attempt to stop this current of purity and love, to crush out this blessed doctrine of holiness, and put down those who have stood at the helm, has proved futile. The opposition and persecution in every instance have recoiled upon the opposer and caviller. "In the net they hid, is their own foot taken." As soon attempt to strike out the sun, the glorious orb of day! As soon attempt to dethrone the Almighty, as the doctrine of holiness. We regret to say, the most determined, bitter, and virulent opposition to these meetings and the cause advocated here, has not arisen from the world, but from those professing godliness, in high stations.

Friends, the gates of hell can not prevail against this doctrine of the Bible—the more it is opposed, the more it will prevail, like fire in the bones. It is dear to God as the apple of his eye. We need it, you need it—the church needs this holy baptism, this tongue of fire; ministers need it, the officers of the church, elders, deacons, class leaders, every member; the church can never rise and shine without it "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, terrible as an army with banners." The church can never prevail without it—chain Satan to the bottomless pit.

Intemperance, Sabbath desecration, infidelity, licentiousness, oppression, and every evil, can never be put down without more of the spirit of holiness, the breathings of the apostolical, the tongue of fire—the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Holiness, individual and general, in the church of every name, is what is wanting, power with God. Let holiness prevail, the cause of God prevails—sinners bow the knee, millennial glory dawns.

No more will converts then be few,
But numerous as the drops of dew,
Which silently distilled at night,
Are brought to view by morning light;
A host to charm our raptured sight,
And fill the earth with glory bright.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER TWO.

There are some who tell us that God has nowhere revealed the time of Christ's second coming, or end of the world, and thus destroy the faith of many. They often quote,—"Secret things belong unto the Lord our God," as proof that the things which are revealed do not concern us. But has not the Lord said in the same verse, "But those things which are revealed belong unto us, and to our children forever"? The reason is given—"That we may do all the words of this law."—Deut. 29: 29. Let us not reject that which is given unto us and our children. Let us do all the words of God's law, according to the appointed age. If we turn an unwilling ear to the time of Christ's coming, then we cannot say that all Scripture is profitable to us; for the prophetic periods would only hinder our increase of knowledge, or bewilder us; and Paul must have been mistaken when he said, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief"; for they would be in the same position as those on whom the day of the Lord will come as a thief. 1 Thess. 5: 2. If we cannot know any thing of the signs of the times, given by inspiration, so as to see the day approaching, then the time to assemble "ourselves together . . . and so much the more as" we "see the day approaching," can never come; and so much of inspiration is vain. If we are unable to know when the time "is near, even at the door," we are unable to obey Christ, for he has positively commanded us to "know."—Matt. 24: 33.

If the year of jubilee does not point out the time of the great jubilee, then Paul must have been mistaken in supposing this was a "shadow of good things to come." For without definite time there was no jubilee. If the wise are unable to understand, then the word of God is untrue as we read in Daniel 12: 10. For it is declared there that they "shall understand." If, on the condition that we do not watch, Christ will come as a thief, and we shall not know what hour he will come (Rev. 3: 3), does it not follow that on the condition that if we do watch we shall "know what hour" he will come?

We know now beyond the possibility of a doubt, about the time of Christ's coming, by the rise and fall of the first empire,—the Babylonian; by the passing away of the second,—the Medo Persian; by the passing of the Grecian and the Roman empire; by the appearance of the little horn, or Papal antichrist, as spoken of by the prophet Daniel in his prophecies; by Paul in his epistles, and John in his Revelations; by the rise of the ten kingdoms from the fallen empire of Rome; by the departure from the faith once delivered to the church, or saints; and by the evil times on which we have fallen.

In investigating this subject, we find that Daniel informs us that the wise could not understand the times until the close of the 1290 days of prophetic times; at the expiration of which we are informed by Daniel 12: 10, that "the wise shall understand"; or, as recorded in Eccl. 8: 5, "both time and judgment."

"Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come."—Heb. 10: 37, 38.

As I have just mentioned, a knowledge of "the time of the end" was not to be known until it had been sealed up for a certain period. And when that time should have come, to which it had reference, then a knowledge of it would be made known, or revealed.—Dan. 12: 4–9.—"But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book, even to the time of the end. . . . Go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. . . . Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand."

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A happy new year to the Crisis, and a happy new year to its readers! A happy new year to its editor, and a happy new year to all connected with the office. God bless them, every one, with health and strength, and grace and wisdom to perform their laborious duties well.

O, what a happy new year it will be to us all when changed from mortal to immortal, and the pains and sorrows, [illegible] of the Lord's poor, despised, [illegible] ones are at an end. O blessed hope! It is mine. Is it yours?

This hope's fruition may not come this year, but it will soon,—very soon—1866 may see (?) the "happy" year when the [illegible] their Lord, and rejoice in [illegible] songs and alleluias, and [illegible]. O, I long to be there, and [illegible] to the end, that I may be one of the number who shall praise [illegible] ior." Come, Lord Jesus [illegible]

INVOCATION.

Hear us, O gracious God!
Aid to the needy send,
And to the tempted, fainting soul,
Thy saving strength extend.

For perils thicken now,
Dread conflicts loom in view,
The seven-fold heated furnace, Lord,
O save, thou Strong and True!

A standard raise thou up
'Gainst the o'erflowing flood,
And in our direst need us save,
The purchase of thy blood.

Now thy past wondrous works
With joy remember we,
And trust our all sufficient good
Unto the end thou'lt be.

Then when on Egypt's bands
The judgment vial pours,
Merited wrath, and deep and dread,
A fearful darkness lowers;

Within thy "hiding place"
Secure, we look on high,
And Joy unfurls her trembling wing,
The Day-Star gilds our sky!

WATCHMAN, TELL US OF THE NIGHT!

Inasmuch as many have spoken and written much concerning the second coming of Christ, yet it seems that every one differs in some particular with all the rest, as to the time and manner of his coming.

Then we may well ask of the watchman, what the signs of promise are, according to the evangelists. Christ has declared that he will come again. Then what does Christ mean when he emphatically declares that he will come again? Must we not understand him to mean, that he would come a second time into this world? Not with the same design or purpose he was then here; but that he would come to reign with his people as king of all the earth.

Then it is very evident that Christ had taught his disciples of what was to take place in the future; and spared no pains to inculcate this truth into their minds. They must not expect him to set up a temporal kingdom here on earth at that time; but they could look forward with pleasing anticipation to a time yet far in the future, when he would come again, and then do what they so much then desired and expected him to do; and when they referred him to the greatness of the temple, he told them that there should not one stone remain upon another but should be thrown down. Then remembering what he had formerly told them, they asked him, privately, when these things should take place and what the signs would be of his coming; upon which the Redeemer of mankind revealed to those chosen disciples what was to take place before that great event should come to pass; which we can read in the 24th and 25th chapters of Matt., 13th of Mark and 21st of Luke.

Then in order that we may rightly understand these things, we must have some knowledge of the history of the world since the time these words were spoken; so that we may know whether any part or all of those signs have been fulfilled. History then informs us that some of them have been literally fulfilled. The death, resurrection from the dead, and the ascension of Christ was all literally fulfilled, as foretold by himself and the prophets before him; then the martyrdom of the apostles with many other disciples, and in due time the great city, Jerusalem, was destroyed, just as predicted by Christ, and that once proud and self-righteous people, yes, that people who were once God's peculiar people were now scattered to the ends of the earth, without a home or any place of refuge. This took place some seventy years after the birth of Christ, or between thirty-five and forty years after this destruction was foretold.

Then from this period until about A. D. 533, the Jews still enjoyed some privileges amongst civilized nations; but about that time it was decreed that they must become christians, or be banished or put to death; and under this decree they were driven from one place to another, and many thousands put to death just because they were Jews. But they still retained their identity as a people until perhaps in the beginning of the year of A. D. 1780, when they were again received into some nations as citizens. This must have been the time of abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel, chapter 9, v. 27.

"Then immediately after those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light." According to history and even eye-witnesses now living, these were accomplished on the 19th day of May, 1780. "And the stars shall fall from heaven." This also was fulfilled on the 13th day of November, 1833. "Then there shall be wars and rumors of wars, famines and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places," with many other signs which we have historical accounts that those prophecies have been fulfilled while many now living are eye-witnesses to [illegible] these things. Then we have the best of authority to believe that Christ will make his second advent in person or as literal or natural, as his first advent was, and as much so, as those signs that were to foretell his near approach have been fulfilled.

The question will then be, How are we to be benefitted by his coming? The apostle Paul tells us, that to them that look for him will he appear without sin unto salvation. Also, all scriptures are by inspiration of God, and are profitable, etc. Then it is for the edification of the saints, that these things have been delivered, and since Christ has told us what is to come to pass, we should take the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. Christ says, As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it also be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man. Now if we read the Bible history of the days of Noah, that notwithstanding Noah faithfully warned the people of the destruction of the world by water, they did not hear him, but laughed him to scorn, until the day that God sent the floods upon the earth.

Now this is strong evidence that these things will come to pass. A very large majority of professed christians do not look for Christ or believe that he will come again in person; consequently they laugh to scorn those that do look for him. Some will tell us that he came the second time at the destruction of Jerusalem; but as many of those signs spoken of were not then fulfilled and which have since taken place, while those things foretold immediately connected with the coming of the Son of man had not been yet fulfilled, or, if they had been, historians have been very faithless and false in not recording such remarkable events, while they were very minute in giving correct accounts of many minor events.

"And at midnight there was a cry, behold, the bridegroom cometh." From the best information this midnight cry went forth some forty years ago. Behold the bridegroom cometh! that is, the cry went forth, that Christ the Savior was coming again. It seems that this was lost sight of by the church. This perhaps will require some little explanation, so that all may know how to understand the parable. It seems at the celebration of marriages of people in that day that the marriage took place in the night, or at least the bridegroom's coming was not exactly known to the guests at the bride's house, and that it was customary for some of the female attendants to go some distance from the house of the bride to meet the bridegroom to escort him to the house of the bride. In the parable the number is given as ten, who went out to meet the bridegroom. Now it seems that they had started early to meet him not knowing when he would come; but being sure that they were early enough to meet him, and while they were waiting his arrival, they slumbered and slept. And at midnight the messengers that were sent ahead of the bridegroom to proclaim his coming, went forth and cried, behold the bridegroom cometh, be ready, when he does come, to meet him! Then if this midnight cry was made in 1823, we thus far have had over forty years to trim our lamps and not only so but have also had time to prepare oil in our vessels. But should we act the part of those five foolish virgins, and not have oil in our vessels, we will be denied the privilege of entering into the marriage, notwithstanding we may have started out to meet the bridegroom.

Then, dear brethren and sisters, when such glorious promises are left for us, let us not be weary in well doing; but let us always endeavor to have a full supply of that oil Christ had an allusion to in the above parable. Now we must obtain these blessings by going through great tribulation; yes, we must meet with many trials and difficulties in passing through this world, but we must remember that Christ's kingdom is not of this world, and that if we are his subjects, we cannot go with the world in its vain amusements and gaudy show, with its turmoil and confusion, with its revelry, debauchery, destruction, and crime of every kind. So we must be separated from all that is opposed to the nature, word, and will of God, if we wish to have part in those promises that are recorded in the word of inspiration. And oh! what a happy thought, that God has sent his Son, that through him we can be made priests unto God, and that he will raise us to immortality at his coming, and receive us to himself, where we shall forever be happy. But oh! what a pity, that often having covenanted with God in Christ Jesus to be faithful, we should neglect to do the commandments of the New Testament and consequently lose our hope in Christ, where we will have to be cast out into outer darkness where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth!

Now, dear reader, whoever you may be, be assured of this one thing; the writer of this loves you sincerely, and desires and prays that you may so live, that when death calls you from time, you will have your peace made with God. Think of the shortness of life, the certainty of death, and of the great judgment day, when all mankind will be brought before the Judge of the quick and dead, and while you are thus thinking upon your own state, pray God to remember him who wrote this, in much mercy, that he, too, may be found among the saints in the first resurrection.

May God add his blessing to what has been written according to his word, and pardon whatever otherwise.—Gospel Visitor.

BEAR AND FORBEAR.—If we would have life move on smoothly, we must learn to bear and forbear. We must indulge the friend we love in the little peculiarities of saying and doing things which may be important to him, but of little moment to us. Like children, we must suffer each one to build his play-house in his own way, and not quarrel with him because he does not think our way the best. —Home Thrusts.

THE SAINT'S INHERITANCE; OR, The New Heavens and the New Earth.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

What did the first Methodists believe respecting the New Heavens and the New Earth? How did they view these as related to the final inheritance of the saints? Did they interpret this sentence literally or figuratively? These are proper questions for their successors to investigate, and can only be answered by an appeal to their writings. In making this appeal it may be well to repeat the following statement from "The Ency. Rel. Knowledge, Art. Methodists." "The Standard writers of the Methodists are Wesley, Fletcher, Benson, Clark, and Watson, with many others too numerous to mention." The "others" here referred to may fairly include Charles Wesley, whose hymns are sung in all our churches, Toplady, a Calvinistic Methodist, Dr. Coke, Thomas Taylor, Joseph Sutcliffe, etc., all of whom are among the earliest authors of the Methodistical persuasion. Witness the following extracts, as exhibiting the views of the foregoing writers on the doctrine in question:

Richard Watson stoutly maintained that the future abode of the good will be a "place," hence local and substantial. On the word "Heaven" he writes, "Among the numerous refinements of modern times, that is the most remarkable which goes to deny the locality of heaven. 'It is a state,' say many, 'and not a place.' But if that be the case, the very language of the Scriptures in regard to this point, is calculated to mislead us." He then proceeds to demonstrate that the saints' future abode will be a place, as well as a state, and although he is doubtful if the redeemed and renovated earth is that place, he observes that a Mr. Joseph Hallett has endeavored to prove that they will dwell upon earth, when it shall be restored to its paradisiacal state." Bible and Theological Dictionary, N. Y., edition 1837, pp. 438–9.

Joseph Benson goes further and is more explicit. In his Commentary, quoting from, and evidently endorsing Bishop Hume, he says, "Let the heavens etc., rejoice before the Lord." At the presence and approach of the Lord their Maker. For he cometh to judge the earth—to take to himself that power and authority which belong to him, and to set up his throne and dominion above all nations of the earth. The coming of Christ is two-fold; first he came to sanctify the creature, and he will come to glorify it. If creation be represented as rejoicing at the establishment of the former, how much greater will be the joy at the approach of the latter, seeing that notwithstanding Christ be long since come in the flesh; though he ascended into heaven, and have sent the Spirit from thence, yet the whole creation, as the apostle speaks, (Rom. 8: 22 pasa ktisis,) groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, expecting to be delivered from the bondage of corruption, etc.; yea, we ourselves, also, who have the first fruits of the Spirit, groan within ourselves, waiting for the redemption of the body; when, at the renovation of all things, man, new made, shall return to the days of his youth to begin an immortal spring and be forever young."

"Make a joyful noise," etc. The psalmist beholding in spirit the accomplishment of the promises, the advent of Christ and the glory of his kingdom, thinks it criminal in any creature to be silent; he bids the whole earth break forth into joy, and exult in God her Savior, with every token of gratitude and thankfulness." "Here we have the subject of the general joy—the coming of the Messiah to reform the world, to execute judgment upon the wicked, and to establish a kingdom of righteousness upon the earth. We expect his second advent to restore all things, to judge the world, to condemn his enemies, and to begin his glorious reign. Then shall heaven and earth rejoice and the joy of the redeemed be full." Benson's notes on Ps. 96: 10–13, and 98: 4–9. Many other similar passages might be quoted.

John Fletcher in a "Letter to Wesley, London, Nov. 29, 1775," while arguing in favor of the doctrine of a pre-millennial advent says, "Who does not perceive that Christ will come to give the finishing stroke to the great work begun by the might of his Spirit, to establish his kingdom upon earth, and bring those happy days, etc., when righteousness shall cover the earth as the waters fill the sea. I cannot conceive how so many divines have such an idea of God's wisdom, as to think—contrary to the plain text of his word—that so happy a time will last but a few days; and that this great revelation will no sooner take place, but the earth will be destroyed by fire." He also alludes to "the time of the purification of this globe by dissolution and fire, and exhorts us not to forget to rejoice with Abraham in seeing by faith the glorious day of our Lord, and to hasten by our fervent prayers that glorious kingdom, those happy days when narrow shall be the way of destruction, when saints raised from the dead shall converse with living saints, and the world of spirits be manifested in a great measure to the material world; in a word, when Jesus will be all in all. What a glorious prospect this is. Let us often think of these words of our Lord, "Behold I come quickly." See too, Fletcher's defense of this doctrine in his unpublished "Letters to Dr. Priestly." Works, vols. VII. and VIII., also Arminian Methodist Magazine, 1793, pp. 370.

It is fair to concede however, that the letter to Wesley here alluded to, does not clearly present this new or renewed earth as being the eternal abode of the righteous, as it more especially refers to the personal presence and reign of Christ, therein during the millennium. But does he anywhere teach their post-millennial translation to some far off unseen abode?

Augustus M. Toplady writes: "It is enough for us to know that a day will dawn when a period shall be put to every disorder under which nature at present labors; and that the earth will become just what it was (perhaps considerable better than it was,) before sin destroyed the harmony, and broke the balance of the well-according system. The stupendous accomplishment of this pre-destined restoration is largely and explicitly foretold in Rev. 20, where we read that the apostate angels shall be restrained by the coercive power of God, and confined to their own place for one thousand years. That those of mankind that belong to Christ, and especially such of them as have been, or are yet to be slain for his name's sake, shall reign with him upon the earth during that period. And that the bodies of the reprobate dead shall not be raised until that period is fully expired. The next chapter opens with acquainting us, that prior to the actual commencement of the millennium, a new heaven, i. e., a new body of surrounding air, and a new earth shall be prepared for the residence of Christ and the elect.

"I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away and there was no more sea." Intimating that this terraqueous globe, and its circumambient atmosphere, will be so purified by the preceding general conflagration as to be totally changed in their qualities, and entirely divested of everything noxious, or that can cause disgust and pain. He then proceeds to describe the felicity of this "renewed world," to which he applies those splendid predictions in 2 Pet. 3: 13 and Rev. 21: 5. See His Works, Royal Octavio, London, 1837 pp. 428–29–30 (New Edition.)

Joseph Sutcliffe wrote concerning these things, setting forth views like those of Fletcher and Toplady. This millennial period he calls "the times of restitution of all things," Acts 3: 21; this being the new heavens and earth spoken of in Isa. 65: 17; the first resurrection being literal, and our Lord's second advent personal and visible at the commencement of the millennium. "But his new earth," he says, "must be different from that mentioned by Peter and John;" the only allusion he makes to the heavenly inheritance, leaving his readers to suppose that there would be such a new creation at the close of the millennial reign. Vide Introduction to Christianity, N. Y., Ed. 1817. Sec. XII., pp. 163, etc.

The views on this doctrine of the inheritance of the earth set forth by Charles Wesley are only obtained from his "Short Hymns on Select Passages of the Holy Scriptures." 2 Vols., London, 1794. But these, though constituting a series of commentaries in rhyme, are amply sufficient to exhibit the author's doctrines. Read the following detached verses and lines:

Hymn 1050 on Isa. 65: 17.

"Come, Divine effectual power,
Fallen nature to restore,
Wait we for thy presence here,
Long to see thy throne appear;
Bid the new creation rise,
Bring us back our Paradise.

Now our universe create,
Fair, beyond its first estate,
When thine eye with pleasure view'd,
When thy lips pronounced it good,
Ruin'd now by sin and curst,
Speak it fairer than at first."

Hymn 1172, on Dan. 2: 44.

"God of heaven appear below,
And let thy kingdom come;
All these worldly powers o'erthrow,
And scatter and consume!
Let the last on earth take place,
Never, never to decline,
Founded in perpetual grace—
The Monarchy divine.

Lord, as taught by thee we pray
That sin and death may end;
In the great millennial day
With all thy saints descend;
Now displayed with glorious power
Let that final empire rise,
Stand when time shall be no more,
Eternal in the skies.

. . . On Malachi 4: 6, hymn 1328, our witness is very emphatic, thus:

"Yes, we know our Lord will come,
Smite the Antichrist of Rome,
All his plagues and judgments pour,
Earth accurst with fire devour!
But the curse shall soon remove,
And the incarnate God of love,
Sitting on his throne shall show
EARTH RENEWED IS HEAVEN BELOW."

The doctrine of John Wesley is in perfect agreement with that of his poet brother, as all know who have read his "Sermon LXIX—The New Creation," on Rev. 21: 5. It is worthy of note that this eminent man interprets the sentence "new earth" as referring to a literal and substantial world where there shall be light, vegetation, pleasing healthful breezes, water clear and limpid, pure from all unpleasing or unhealthful mixtures, rising here and there in crystal fountains to refresh and adorn the earth, rivers gently gliding along for the use of both man and beast, gently rising hills, flowers, green fields, all sorts of beasts whose ferocity is now forever forgotten; the wolf dwelling with the lamb, (which words he says may be literally as well as figuratively understood.) The (ktisis) creatures in Rom. 8: 19, 20, 21, he refers to the brute creation and inanimate nature, both of which share in the curse and shall also partake of this glad renovation and redemption, "for all the earth," he says, "shall be a more beautiful paradise than Adam ever saw." Mr. Wesley is also careful to affirm that this beatific paradise will come to pass, not in the present state of things, but when this world is no more; that it is to be accomplished when the inhabitants of our earth will be equal to angels, i. e., at the resurrection of the just, Luke 20: 35, 36; and that this newly created world which he seems to people with redeemed men, will not appear till subsequent to the final conflagration. Sermons, N. Y. Ed. 1836, Vol. 2 pp. 82–87.

We here observe, too, that many of his Hymns as also his Notes on the New Testament, abundantly teach the same doctrine respecting the saints inheritance.

Thomas Taylor, who unlike Fletcher, Toplady, Benson, Sutcliffe, and the Wesleys, held to the doctrine of a post-millennial second advent, yet teaches in Sermon XV. on the joys of Heaven, as follows—"The topography, or place of this glorious bliss will, very probably, be this earth, after the grand conflagration; for it does not appear to me that the fire will annihilate, but refine, so that there may be a new heavens and a new earth, according to the Divine promise, wherein righteousness shall dwell forevermore. 2 Pet. 3: 13; Isa. 65: 17; Isa. 66: 23. And this seems to quadrate with what the apostle John beheld in that transporting view of the heavenly state, 'And I saw a new heaven and a new earth,' etc., Rev. 21: 1. That is, the whole frame and order of things were entirely changed, so that it bore no resemblance of its former state. The antediluvian earth is supposed to have had no sea in its surface, but that the disruption thereof was at the deluge, and is assigned as one cause of the destroying flood, which deformed the face of the earth and left it in its present ruinous state. But the purging fire having done its office, a beautiful frame will arise, a meet habitation for the spirits of just men made perfect, and to which they will repair after the resurrection. . . . And that the place will be within our solar system, and probably where the earth now is, appears to me from what follows—'And I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.' Rev. 21: 2. The term city, may either mean the glorious inhabitants, or the heavenly vehicle, which Jehovah hath ordained for their eternal residence; in both senses the apostle's words will hold good. For when the new earth is restored, the divine apparatus so largely described by the apostle, may be fixed upon it; so that all may be in the form of a glorious city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God, and both the city and its inhabitants may be said to be like a bride adorned for her husband. It will then be emphatically said, 'Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people and God himself shall be with them;' with them, visibly, sensibly, and eternally, and avouch himself in very express terms to be their God and their all. Who can adequately explain those blessed and comfortable words? Here is the ever blessed God restoring all things! Here is full redemption, so that the wreck and ruin occasioned by the defection of the angels remains no longer a dreary waste, but a habitation restored for the true God, and a residence for blessed souls. 'The repairer of breaches, restores all things, and harmony, order, and sweet concord shall forever dwell." Sermons on the Millennium etc., and on what appears to follow that happy era. Hull, Eng. 1789, pp. 341–342.

The learned Dr. Adam Clarke on 2 Pet. 3: 11–13 thus comments:—"All these things shall be dissolved. They will all be separated, all decomposed; but none of them destroyed. As they are the original matter out of which God formed the terraqueous globe, consequently they may enter again into the composition of a new system; and therefore the apostle says, verse 13, We look for a new heaven and a new earth, the others being decomposed and a new system is to be formed out of their materials. There is a wonderful philosophic propriety in the words of the apostle in describing this most awful event."

Verse 13. "We, according to his promise, look," etc. The promise to which it is supposed the apostle alludes is found in Isa. 65: 17; 66: 22. 'For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth,' etc. Now although these may be interpreted of the glory of the gospel dispensation, yet if St. Peter refers to them they must have a more extended meaning. It does appear from these promises, what the apostle says here, and what is said in Rev. 21: 6, that the present earth, though destined to be burned up will not be destroyed, but be renewed and refined, purged from all moral and natural imperfections, and made the endless abode of blessed spirits. But this state is certainly to be expected after the day of judgment; for in this the apostle is very express who says the conflagration and renovation are to take place at the judgment of the great day, see verses 7, 8, 10, 12. That such an event may take place is very possible, and from the terms used by St. Peter is very probable. And indeed, it is more reasonable and philosophic to conclude that the earth shall be refined and restored than finally destroyed." Vide. Com.

From the foregoing quotations and references, it will be observed that while a number of these early and standard Methodist writers were millennarians, and appear disposed to limit the Scripture predictions of a new earth to the millenary period, yet they all regard this fulfillment as literally to be accomplished hereafter, and the most eminent of them, viz., John Wesley and Adam Clarke, with others, obviously carry the predictions into the eternal state, and hold this glorious new made world to be the eternal residence of the redeemed. Indeed, they appear so generally unanimous, that may we not affirm the view to have been, not a mere private opinion, but almost an article of faith? Such were the doctrines of the fathers and founders of Methodism on the immortal inheritance and home of the saints. Is it well for their successors to attempt innovations on these early, and well-established views? If heaven, as Watson claims, will be a place, as that place must be somewhere in the vast universe of God, why not with Taylor, Wesley and Clarke, agree in believing that place to be our fallen planet restored to more than the beauty and glory of its Edenic state? And why cannot modern Methodists settle down in this view of their noble founders and so present a oneness of doctrine in regard to this important and sublime subject.

Such a view of the saints' abode was held by all the first christian writers and fathers of the church, viz., Justin Martyr, Ireneus, Origen, the fathers of the Council of Nice, Eusebius, Basil, the two Cyrils of Jerusalem and Alexandria, the two Gregories, Chrysostom, Zacharias of Mitylene, and later by Damascen, Œcumenius, Euthymius and others of the Greek writers; while Tertullian, Lactantius, Hilary, Ambrose, Augustus, and Jerome of the Latin writers, all set their hands and seals to this doctrine, that after the conflagration the world will be renewed, restored and inhabited. So testifies Dr. Burnett in his "Theory of the earth," 1697, Book IV. chap. 3. And the learned Grabe, editor of the Septuagint, who says Dr. Duffield "had carefully examined and collected the fathers generally," decisively testifies that "All primitive orthodox christians expected, according to the words of the apostle and the promises of the prophets, a new heavens and a new earth at the second coming of the Messiah to restore the happiness which flourished before the fall of Adam." Duffield on Proph. pp. 264. Grabe's Spicilegium Patrum, lib. 2. pp. 230.

To the first christians and early Methodists we may also add the names of Luther, Calvin, Knox, Melancthon, Bullinger, Bradford, Cranmer, Dr. T. Goodwin, Baxter, Bunyan, Stephen Charnock, Poole, Milton, Andrew Fuller, William Jay, Sir Isaac and Bishop Newton, Dr. Gill, Doddridge, A. Pope, Bishop Heber, Dr. Watts, Pollock, Cowper, Bossuet and Drs. Increase and Cotton Mather; while the doctrine is fortified by the high names of Dr. Griffin, Dr. Urwick, Dr. Hengstenberg, Dr. Geo. Campbell, Dr. Knapp, Dr. Carlyle, Dr. Tholuck, Dr. J. P. Smith, Dr. Hitchcock, Dr. Chalmers, Dr. Dick, Fairbairn, Irving, Spurgeon, Cumming, and a multitude of others both in Europe and America. Surely the view is no novelty. Let us embrace it and go back to PRIMITIVE METHODISM.—Advent Herald.

MEETINGS FOR HOLINESS; OR, The Higher Christian Life.

"'Tis not high power that makes a place divine,
Nor that the men from gods derive their line;
But sacred thoughts in holy bosoms stored,
Make people noble, and the place adored."

These social gatherings for spiritual elevation, for rising higher and higher, shining brighter and brighter unto the perfect day, are held in various places both in New York City and in Brooklyn, with increasing interest and edification. No meetings for worship are attended with more direct and special indications of Divine acceptance. The atmosphere is heavenly, life-giving, soul-kindling. Most of these social interviews for the higher life in holiness are on the christian union principle.

"To sect or party the large soul
Disdains to be confined,
The good he loves, of every name,
And prays for all mankind."

No questions are asked whether you are a Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Quaker, Jew or Gentile—all are one in Christ Jesus. Any one has perfect liberty to rise, speak, request prayers, relate the dealings of God with himself, drop a word of exposition, exhortation, consolation; pour out his soul in prayer and praise, give God glory, if so be special reference is had to brevity, definiteness, and condensation. No one has a right to engross the time which properly belongs to another.

These meetings are not for debate, controversy, or speechifying—but for HOLINESS. Every one that enters these consecrated halls, is expected to conform strictly to the objects and purport of the meeting. Such is the nature, exercise, and spirit of these social gatherings, we feel assured that even the skeptic, the subtle caviler, disputer, or objector, will be constrained on most occasions to exclaim, "The finger of God is in it."

If ever sectarianism is fully banished from this earth, it must be through the spirit of Bible holiness, the love of God shed abroad in the soul. All our denunciations against this giant evil will avail very little, comparatively, until God's spirit scatters it to the four winds! In these blessed interviews we hear very few allusions to sects, party views, or denominationalisms. The Bible, the blessed Bible is the text book, and we rejoice at this noble liberality and earnest adherence to christian union and fellowship—"There is one body, and one spirit, even as you are called with one hope of your calling." "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we are bond or free; and have all been made to drink into one Spirit."

The good influence of these meetings has gone out, not only in this city, but in other cities and states in the Union. The voice has sounded across the Atlantic, on, and on! Every attempt to stop this current of purity and love, to crush out this blessed doctrine of holiness, and put down those who have stood at the helm, has proved futile. The opposition and persecution in every instance have recoiled upon the opposer and caviller. "In the net they hid, is their own foot taken." As soon attempt to strike out the sun, the glorious orb of day! As soon attempt to dethrone the Almighty, as the doctrine of holiness. We regret to say, the most determined, bitter, and virulent opposition to these meetings and the cause advocated here, has not arisen from the world, but from those professing godliness, in high stations.

Friends, the gates of hell can not prevail against this doctrine of the Bible—the more it is opposed, the more it will prevail, like fire in the bones. It is dear to God as the apple of his eye. We need it, you need it—the church needs this holy baptism, this tongue of fire; ministers need it, the officers of the church, elders, deacons, class leaders, every member; the church can never rise and shine without it "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, terrible as an army with banners." The church can never prevail without it—chain Satan to the bottomless pit.

Intemperance, Sabbath desecration, infidelity, licentiousness, oppression, and every evil, can never be put down without more of the spirit of holiness, the breathings of the apostolical, the tongue of fire—the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Holiness, individual and general, in the church of every name, is what is wanting, power with God. Let holiness prevail, the cause of God prevails—sinners bow the knee, millennial glory dawns.

No more will converts then be few,
But numerous as the drops of dew,
Which silently distilled at night,
Are brought to view by morning light;
A host to charm our raptured sight,
And fill the earth with glory bright.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER TWO.

There are some who tell us that God has nowhere revealed the time of Christ's second coming, or end of the world, and thus destroy the faith of many. They often quote,—"Secret things belong unto the Lord our God," as proof that the things which are revealed do not concern us. But has not the Lord said in the same verse, "But those things which are revealed belong unto us, and to our children forever"? The reason is given—"That we may do all the words of this law."—Deut. 29: 29. Let us not reject that which is given unto us and our children. Let us do all the words of God's law, according to the appointed age. If we turn an unwilling ear to the time of Christ's coming, then we cannot say that all Scripture is profitable to us; for the prophetic periods would only hinder our increase of knowledge, or bewilder us; and Paul must have been mistaken when he said, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief"; for they would be in the same position as those on whom the day of the Lord will come as a thief. 1 Thess. 5: 2. If we cannot know any thing of the signs of the times, given by inspiration, so as to see the day approaching, then the time to assemble "ourselves together . . . and so much the more as" we "see the day approaching," can never come; and so much of inspiration is vain. If we are unable to know when the time "is near, even at the door," we are unable to obey Christ, for he has positively commanded us to "know."—Matt. 24: 33.

If the year of jubilee does not point out the time of the great jubilee, then Paul must have been mistaken in supposing this was a "shadow of good things to come." For without definite time there was no jubilee. If the wise are unable to understand, then the word of God is untrue as we read in Daniel 12: 10. For it is declared there that they "shall understand." If, on the condition that we do not watch, Christ will come as a thief, and we shall not know what hour he will come (Rev. 3: 3), does it not follow that on the condition that if we do watch we shall "know what hour" he will come?

We know now beyond the possibility of a doubt, about the time of Christ's coming, by the rise and fall of the first empire,—the Babylonian; by the passing away of the second,—the Medo Persian; by the passing of the Grecian and the Roman empire; by the appearance of the little horn, or Papal antichrist, as spoken of by the prophet Daniel in his prophecies; by Paul in his epistles, and John in his Revelations; by the rise of the ten kingdoms from the fallen empire of Rome; by the departure from the faith once delivered to the church, or saints; and by the evil times on which we have fallen.

In investigating this subject, we find that Daniel informs us that the wise could not understand the times until the close of the 1290 days of prophetic times; at the expiration of which we are informed by Daniel 12: 10, that "the wise shall understand"; or, as recorded in Eccl. 8: 5, "both time and judgment."

"Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come."—Heb. 10: 37, 38.

As I have just mentioned, a knowledge of "the time of the end" was not to be known until it had been sealed up for a certain period. And when that time should have come, to which it had reference, then a knowledge of it would be made known, or revealed.—Dan. 12: 4–9,—"But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book, even to the time of the end. . . . Go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. . . . Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand."

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A happy new year to the Crisis, and a happy new year to its readers! A happy new year to its editor, and a happy new year to all connected with the office. God bless them, every one, with health and strength, and grace and wisdom to perform their laborious duties well.

O, what a happy new year it will be to us all when changed from mortal to immortal, and the pains and sorrows, cares and trials of the Lord's poor, despised, and burdened ones are at an end. O blessed hope! It is mine. Is it yours?

This hope's fruition may not come this year, but it will soon,—very soon.—1868 may be the "happy" year when the saints shall meet their Lord, and rejoice in his salvation with songs and allelujahs, and shoutings of victory. O, I long to be there, and feel like enduring to the end, that I may be one of the number who shall praise forever the name of my Savior. Come, Lord Jesus! come quickly.

SYMPATHY.

"Our nature is social. We cannot enjoy ourselves alone. We seek for others to partake with us. The full soul finds at once relief and strength in sympathy."

Our joys are incomplete, and our sorrows almost insupportable, unless we have some one to sympathise with us. It is true that there have been those who have voluntarily exiled themselves from society; who have shunned their fellow men, and have sighed for a lodge "in some vast wilderness"; where, amid nature's unbroken solitude, they might commune with their own hearts. But this does not prove that man is not a social being. Both the recluse and unsocial bigot have mistaken the nature of the human mind, and the true end of existence. They are morally diseased. The exercise of the social faculties makes us warm-hearted, frank and active. Mark the bearing of those who dwell in the midst of domestic peace, and mingle in society, and compare it with those who are cold and recluse; and tell me which are the most happy and heavenly. As food is related to hunger, and light to the vision, so is society adapted to the social faculties of man.

What a void and craving is experienced by those who are cut off from their fellow men! Persons who are placed in remote and solitary stations, on the confines of civilization, become dull of intellect, unsocial and unhappy. The time is coming, as we believe, when sympathy shall carry its predominant sway over the whole earth, and love and truth embrace each other throughout endless ages.

Again, we are in the course of the changing events of time often called upon by the stern decree of fortune to pass through the fiery ordeal of blighted hopes, wounded hearts, and departed joys, This is a world of change. To-day we may be in the enjoyment of health and strength; to-morrow wan disease may be playing upon our heartstrings, and the strong nerves unstrung, and death ensue. But if in these times of trouble we have friends who can "weep with them that weep," to pour the oil of sympathy into our bleeding bosoms; how much does it lessen our pain, blunt the keen sorrows of woe, and lighten our heavy hearts. To-day the gentle gale of prosperity may waft upon its pinions happiness, content and peace; to-morrow adversity's whirlwind sweeps its chilling blasts along the plain of life, blighting with its frosty breath the buds of hop,e and the gems of happiness. How intolerable would be our misfortunes, were it not that a wise Providence has bound to our hearts, by the silken bands of sympathy, those who feel with us and for us.

We often read and hear of feats and deeds, said to do honor to human nature. The warrior is lauded for his display of heroism, when, by his heroic daring, many a wife is made a widow, and many a child an orphan; but who can doubt that the tears of sympathy which mourn these ills do more honor to humanity than the spirit which inflicts them? Let the heroes in war boast of the extent of their victories, and the numbers of their slain; they add not to the glory of man. But sympathy—Samaritan kindness, which binds and heals the wounded, relieves the oppressed, and comforts the sorrowful, adds a brighter gem to the crown of humanity than the conqueror's triumph,—yea, as far beyond as the joys of heaven are from the pleasures of this sinful earth.

Dear brethren, in view of these things, let us improve every talent God has given us, and pray that he may give us more sympathy, more energy, more love and more heart-feeling, to fit us for his kingdom, and finally save us with the blood-washed throng, to praise his name for ever and ever. A FIELD UNOCCUPIED.

BRO. GRANT:—I received the tracts yesterday, and papers to-day; have commenced distributing and talking to the people. There are many Germans here, and German tracts also are needed. I am alone here in the Advent faith, as far as I can learn. I am unable to hear of any real believers in the doctrine, either here, or any where near. I also am almost a total stranger here, with not first rate health, and scarcely any of this world's goods; but my trust is in the Lord, to whom I shall look for both temporal and spiritual supblies, in these days of "perilous times." I wish to occupy my time now in distributing tracts, and admonishing, and exhorting; and if any feel prompted to send me tracts, etc., let them do so, and may the Lord reward them.

P. S.—Any preaching Bro., who will come and unite with me in faithfully occupying the field here, extending to adjoining towns, and share with me in my humble fare in common interest, let them drop me a line. Direct to S. L. Manley, Easton, Penn.

AN INCIDENT ON THE CARS.

A correspondent of the Chicago Journal, who has been traveling in the Southern States, relates the following:

Years of talk about the wickedness of slavery, will not stir the sluggish blood, as a single incident occurring in a moment. On the cars the other day we noticed a beautiful woman, one of the finest forms, and sweetest lady-like countenance we have seen for many a day, attracted our attention. On the seat back of her was a gentlemanly looking man, whose features the lady's very much resembled. Before the cars started, another well-dressed gentleman came in, and recognizing the first, took a seat by the side of him.

"Is that a slave?" asked the second gentleman, pointing to the lady in front.

"Yes."

We were astonished, for the lady had deep blue eyes, straight, beautifulhair, and a clear blooming complexion.

"Yours?"

"Yes."

"For sale?"

"She is."

"What do you ask?"

"Twelve hundred."

The trader—for so I deemed him—walked out in front of the woman, examined her hands, tried her arms and joints, and then, as if examining a beef, with both hands examining carefully her mouth, figure, etc. In the meantime asking her a series of questions such as we hope never again to hear to one of her sex.

"I'll take her, and pay the money when the train reaches ——."

That blue-eyed, flaxen-haired chattel goes to New Orleans, and to a fate worse than death. Such is the "divine institution!" Were Northern haters of slavery responsible for the bleaching of that chattel?

BRO. HIMES.—We had the pleasure of a call from Bro. Himes last week. He is looking well, feeling well, and pressing fot the kingdom.

"NONE UNDERSTOOD IT."

At the close of the eighth chapter of Daniel, the prophet says:—"I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it." As shown in a former article, (see Crisis Nov. 22,) the symbols of the vision,—the ram and the rough goat,—were explained to Daniel as representing the kingdoms of Media, and Persia, and Grecia. When the latter kingdom should be broken up, another was to arise, whose "power" should "be mighty," and he should "destroy the mighty and the holy people," and should "stand up against the Prince of princes." From this and other prophecies, we learn that the Roman kingdom was to follow the Grecian, and be a persecutor of "the holy people."

According to Daniel 8: 13, 14, we learn that the whole length of the vision, from the time the ram was seen "pushing westward, and northward, and southward," to the end of the fourth, or Roman monarchy, was to be 2300 days. Among other events to transpire in this period of time, "the sanctuary" was "to be trodden under foot."

It appears evident from Daniel's prayer, in Dan. 9: 3–21, that he did not understand the application of the events mentioned in the vision, especially concerning the sanctuary. He says in chap. 9: 2, that he did understand "by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem." He also knew that Mt. Zion, including the promised land, was called "the sanctuary"; and it appears from his prayer that he supposed "the vision" was to be completed immediately, or as soon as the "seventy years" of "the desolations of Jerusalem" were accomplished; and yet he could see that the different kingdoms, mentioned in the vision, had not arisen and passed away; and for this reason, he could not understand the vision. But his prayer shows that his mind did not run beyond the "seventy years" of desolation, then about closing up, for the accomplishment of all the events in the vision; the last of which was the end of the period during which "the sanctuary and the host" [church] was "to be trodden under foot." He says in verse 17th of the same chapter, "Now, therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, and cause thy face to shine upon the sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake." And while he was thus "speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, . . . touched me . . . and said, O Daniel, I am now come to give thee skill and understanding; . . . therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision." As much as to say, Daniel, you are mistaken in supposing "the sanctuary" mentioned in "the vision" is now about to "be cleansed," and the vision of 2300 days come to an end; for if you will "consider the vision" you will see it shall yet "be for many days." The Medo-Persian kingdom has but just commenced, and the Grecian can not arise till after the Persian has done its work, and then the next kingdom will arise that will "stand up against the Prince of princes," and then that kingdom will tread "both the sanctuary and the host under foot." He then explains the matter to Daniel, by saying, "Seventy weeks are determined [cut off] upon thy people, and upon thy holy city." This declaration of the angel made the mistake of Daniel at once apparent. Instead of the end of the vision being at hand, when the sanctuary should be cleansed; "seventy weeks," or 490 days of the 2300, should be given to Daniel's people, and then the "king of fierce countenance . . . shall stand up, and . . . shall destroy the mighty and the holy people"; or, tread down "both the sanctuary and the host." Jesus says, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." As Jerusalem is yet trodden down, it follows that the Gentile times are not yet ended; consequently the 2300 days are not yet completed.

After Gabriel's second visit to Daniel, and the instruction given, he could understand relative to the length of the vision, that seventy weeks of years were cut off from the 2300, for the Jews and their "holy city, to finish (margin, restrain) the transgression"; and then, when the seventy weeks should end, "the transgression" would be no longer restrained, or held back. Then commences the work of the "king of fierce countenance," A. D. 65; and in the course of the seven years' war from that time, this king caused "the sacrifice and oblation to cease, and . . . the overspreading of abominations" made "it desolate"; in which condition Jerusalem is to remain "even until the consummation"; and then the desolator, or the power whose seat is on "the seven hills" at Rome, is to drink the cup, filled "to her double." It is evident the last mentioned event is at hand; hence, we are near the termination of the 2300 days. Are we ready to welcome our long-absent Lord? Are our hearts pure?

THE ECLIPSE.

In our article on the "ten eclipses," in the Crisis of Dec. 13th, when speaking of the one which happened at the time Xerxes was about leaving Sardis, we quoted the account of it as given in Beloe's translations, which, according to Bro. C. F. Hudson's article, in the Crisis of Dec. 6th, is not as good a rendering as Cary's, which reads as follows:—"But as it [the army] was on the point of setting out, the sun, quitting his seat in the heavens, disappeared, though there were no clouds, and the air was perfectly serene, and night ensued in the place of day."

Beloe's translation reads as follow's:—"At the moment of their departure, the sun, which before gave its full light, in a bright unclouded atmosphere, withdrew its beams, and the darkest night succeeded."

Bro. Hudson assures us that "Mr. Cary's translation is literal and accurate," and that the word darkest which occurs in Mr. Beloe's translation is not warranted by the original.

It is thought that the omission of the word darkest before the word "night" would allow us to conclude that the eclipse was not total as claimed by Bro. Thorman and others, and hence that Dr. Zech's calculation of an annular eclipse, which occurred Feb. 16th, B. C. 477, may be the right one, although it was not the same year as mentioned by the historian.

In an annular eclipse, the outside of the sun is seen as a luminous ring around the moon, because the latter body is too far from the earth to cause a total eclipse of the sun.

In case the eclipse, of which Herodotus speaks, had been a partial or annular one, we think the historian, as translated by Mr. Cary, would not be justified in saying,—"the sun, quitting his seat in the heavens, DISAPPEARED, . . . and NIGHT ensued in the place of day."

The sun does not disappear in an annular eclipse, but the luminous ring seen around the moon affords considerable sun light; but a total eclipse would be properly described as above, if we omit the word darkest, which improperly occurs in Beloe's translation, as shown by Bro. Hudson. For it is not true that even a total eclipse of the sun causes the "DARK EST NIGHT."

INQUIRIES BY C. W. OSGOOD.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been reading Bro. Thurman's Chronology with great satisfaction, until I discovered in his table, on page 236, that he dates the beginning of the sojourning of the Hebrews (Ex. 12: 40) with the year after Abraham went to Canaan; and as this sojourning could not have commenced until Jacob with his sons went down to Egypt, Gen. 47: 4, at which time he "said unto Pharaoh, (Gen. 47: 9), The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years"; and Gen. 25: 26 declares that "Isaac was threescore years old when" Jacob was born; and we learn from Gen. 21: 5, that "Abraham was an hundred years old when his son Isaac was born unto him"; and Gen. 12: 4 teaches us that "Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran" and came into Canaan, making him twenty-five years in the land, when Isaac his son was born.

That this is correct, there is not much doubt; for Gen. 16: 3 declares that "Abram had dwelt ten years in the land" when he took Hagar to be his wife; and the 16th verse of the same chapter tells us that "Abram was fourscore and six years old when Hagar bore Ishmael to Abram." Now the twenty-five years Abram was in the land before Isaac was born, and the threescore years from the birth of Isaac to the birth of Jacob, added to the age of Jacob when he went down into Egypt, makes two hundred and fifteen years, between the time Bro. Thurman fills for the commencement of the four hundred and thirty years, and the time when it should properly begin.

Think not that I write this with any desire to destroy the argument Bro. Thurman presents, or the confidence of any of those who may have fully endorsed it as being correct; but that I might know the truth; and if in the dark in regard to this, that some of the good servants of the Lord, who seem to be fully able to rightly divide the word of truth, may set me right, by leading my mind out of darkness into light. For we profess to be the children of the day, and not of the night. I love the coming of the Lord, and long for the time to come when the christian's hope shall be consummated by the coming of the Lord, and our being made like him, and living and reigning with him in the new earth.

Yours truly, CHARLES W. OSGOOD.

We are glad Bro. Osgood has mentioned the apparent discrepancy in Bro. Thurman's chronology, because some others may get into the same difficulty. We hope to be able to show a harmony between Bro. T. and the Bible on this point, for Bro. T. is in harmony with other chronologers on this subject.

It should be observed the text does not say that Israel sojourned in Egypt 430 years; but the end of the 430 years' sojourn was when they went out of Egypt, as led by Moses. The question is now, where did this period begin? According to a statement of Paul, we should conclude that the 430 years began when the promise was made to Abraham, at the time he was called from Mesopotamia, and was led as a pilgrim to the land of promise. Let us hear Paul speak:—"And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."—Gal. 3: 17.

Here we have the same period of years ending at the giving of the law on Mt. Sinai, the same year the children of Israel left Egypt, and beginning with the covenant made to Abraham, and recorded in Gen. 15: 18, as follows: "In the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, unto thy seed have I given this land." We have now found the two ends of the period of 430 years,—beginning with the call of Abraham, and ending with the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage.

As shown by Bro. Osgood, it was 215 years from the call of Abram to the time that Jacob went into Egypt; and Josephus says the children of Israel were 215 years in Egypt from the time Jacob moved there. The following is his language:—"They [Israel] left Egypt in the month Xanthicus [Nisan,] on the 15th day of the lunar month; 430 years after our forefather Abraham came into Canaan, but 215 years only after Jacob removed into Egypt."—Josephus B. 2, C. 15, S. 2.

We have now found that the sojourning began with the call of Abraham to the land of Canaan, and ended when the children of Israel left Egypt to return again. One half of this sojourn was in Canaan, and the other half in Egypt. The Septuagint reads:—"And the sojourning of the children of Israel, while they sojourned in the land of Egypt, and the land of Canaan, was 430 years."

The Samaratan reads as follows:—"Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, and of their fathers, which they sojourned in the land of Canaan, and in the land of Egypt, was 430 years. Dr. Clarke informs us that the Alexandrian copy of the Septuagint has the same reading as the Samaratan.

Thus it appears very clearly established that Bro. Thurman is correct, and in harmony with the best authority, when he begins the 430 years at the time "Abraham . . . was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance."

FROM BRO. WILLIAM KIRBY.

When we were returning from the Wisconsin campmeeting, last autumn, on our way from Detroit, Mich., to Toronto, C. W., we had the good fortune to be seated with a minister from Troy, Kansas, who was a real christian. We had a very pleasant conversation about the reasons of our hope. Our views were new to him, but he treated the subject with much candor. We parted in hope of meeting in the kingdom. We trust we shall be pardoned for giving a portion of his private letter, just received, to our readers, that they may become interested in this true man of God. We hope to hear from him again. He writes as follows:—

"DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Since my return from Canada, I have been receiving the 'World's Crisis,' which I suppose to have been sent by you; and by way of christian encouragement, I will say that the 'Crisis' is one of the best religious papers I have been favored with reading. I truly admire the pure christian, self-denying tone it breathes through its pages; also the candor and minuteness with which it tries and tests modern christendom by the law and the testimony. I would say, go on setting forth the moral dignity and sublimity of the law of God, as revealed to man by the example and precepts of Jesus Christ and his apostles."

After referring to our views on the state of the dead and the punishment of the wicked, which he does not yet see as we do, he writes as follows:—

"As to the second coming of Christ, and his reign upon the earth, in all its bearings in Scripture, probably I am one with you; and only differ as to lack of confidence in any specified time, yet believe that the signs of the times indicate the day is fast approaching. But there has been so much speculation and disappointment as to set times, that it has a tendency to excite my cautiousness as to this point. As to myself, my motto is to live so as to be always ready, that whenever our Lord shall come, at midnight, or at daybreak, I may be found with my lamp trimmed and burning, and so have on the wedding garment, and be ready to enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb. I strive to offer my all a living sacrifice to God daily, yea, momentarily, which is my reasonable service.

Dear Bro., I often call to mind, with much interest, our short and incidental interview on the railroad from Detroit to Toronto; and the pleasant night's conversation we passed, and the oneness of spirit and true christian affinity that pervaded our minds, as we talked over the moral dignity and self-denying truths of our holy religion. I also remember with profit your able exposition of Spiritualism. It was truly light to my mind, which I have to confess had previously been bewildered and dark on that subject.

I very much admired your views on Vegetarianism, and their practical bearing. I thought you sound and philosophic, and they left a weight upon my mind, that, at least, may result in my own good, if nothing more. In all this labor of love, dear Bro., I truly bid you God speed; and if circumstances should never favor us, so as to be able to renew our christian friendship in this stage of the world, I hope we shall so live our religion, that we shall have an abundant entrance administered to us, when the meek shall inherit the earth, and there enjoy an exalted friendship, that will be lasting as God himself.

Yours in Christ, WILLIAM KIRBY.

ORDERS WATING.—We are at present out of the following works, but hope to have a fresh supply soon. We have a large number of orders on hand, which we shall fill just as soon as the books are received:—"Christian Lyre," "Chloe Lankton," "Pauline Theology," "Social Hymns," "Celestial Rail-Road." We shall not be able to fill any more orders for "200 Stories for Children."

BRO. BREWER'S WORKS AGAIN.

I would say in addition to what Bro. Ladd has said in the Crisis of Dec. 13th, that no doubt there are hundreds that have never yet read the books Bro. Brewer has published, especially in this State, and others west of this. Brn. and Srs., you cannot judge of the value of those books, until you have read them. They embody a library of themselves, and facts, too, that ought to be understood generally by our brethren and sisters. Besides, these books ought not to be read and then thrown aside; they will bear re-reading; and it requires a thorough studying of them to acquire the condensed knowledge contained in them. Let every Bro. and Sr. that can, send to Bro. Brewer, at Ashburnham Depot, Mass., $1.25, as advertised in the Crisis from week to week, and obtain an entire set of these books, and then get them bound. They will make you a book worth having,—one just adapted to the library of one that is looking for the soon coming of Jesus, and one of which you need not be ashamed; one for which I would not take $25, if another copy could not be obtained. Then, Bro. and Sr., send on your orders to Bro. Brewer, and gladden the hearts of those good old pilgrims, whose hairs have grown gray in digging out facts from the rubbish of history to benefit you and me. Let us not lose our portion of the "meat in due season." C. B. TURNER.

VOICES FROM THE POOR.

FROM A SISTER, OLD AND HOMELESS.

I have taken the World's Crisis from the beginning, and have paid when I could, but I am now sixty-four years old; my health is poor, and I have no home that I can call my own, and don't expect any till Jesus comes. I am thankful for the paper, and wish I could pay for it. If I ever can, I will. I should be glad to have it continued, but I know it is hard times. If you cannot send it, I shall not think hard. How I wish I had money enough to pay all up. I thank you for the tracts you sent me last spring. Whenever I write to my friends I put in one, and have kept them going from one to another. From your sister, hoping to have a home with all the saints, when Jesus comes. N. J. P.

——, N. H.

FROM A POOR BOY.

I don't feel as though I could afford to take the paper any longer, for I am poor, and am not earning very large wages. I am but a boy of fifteen years, and am here in B. all alone. My mother lives twenty or thirty miles from here. She is a poor widow, and works in a cotton mill. She does not expect to have work much longer; so I shall have to support myself, and it will take every cent I can earn. I should like to have you continue sending it, and put my name on your poor list; and if I ever have the money to spare I will send it to you, for I don't know how to do without the Crisis. May God bless you, and help you to control it aright; and, at last, save you when he comes. Pray for me; and when I bow at the throne of grace, I will not forget you. CHARLES.

THE BANK OF THE LORD'S POOR.

RESPONSES FROM SHAREHOLDERS.

A subscriber writes from New Britain, Ct.: "I think you have taken a very wise course in regard to the poor list, and am much pleased with what has been done. The thing is working well. I have thought for a long time something ought to be done to relieve the office of its burden in supplying so many with the paper free. When I read the Voices from the Poor from week to week, I feel that I should like to send the paper to them all myself, and I am willing to do my part. "But how do you know that all who receive the paper free are worthy?" I do not; but I am satisfied there are enough who are worthy, if only one in five, to pay us all good interest on the money invested.

Let each church or society look after their own poor. This is the true way of doing the business, and this it is our duty to do. And in doing this we ascertain who the worthy poor are.

But there are many, here and there, scattered and alone, who are deprived of the privileges which most of us enjoy, of meeting together from time to time and of hearing preaching. These are the ones I feel the most for. I often think, How should I get along if I had no one to talk with that could sympathize with me in my faith? I hope these things will not be forgotten by any of us. If we give to the poor we lend to the Lord; and I am not afraid to trust him, for he has always been better to me than all my fears, and a thousand times better than I deserve. I have no fears of doing too much for him, if I do all that I possibly can; and I find there is plenty to be done in these days if any one has a disposition to do. Enclosed are $3.00." O. S.

A Sister writes from Marysville, Ohio:—"Please find within 50 cents for the Bank of the Lord's Poor. It is not much, but it is all I have to send you. I worked at millenery to get it for this purpose; but as there was no more work to do, I could not earn more." M. L. S.

A New Year's Present.

A correspondent, who desires to do good with his Lord's money, sends us a $10.00 greenback, with the following:—

"I send you $5.00, to gladden the hearts of two more of the Lord's poor, by making them a New Year's present of the Crisis, to be sent to them as long as the $5.00 will pay.

"I send you also $5.00, to go into the Tract Fund, hoping it may be the means of preaching the truth to many, and of saving at least one soul from death."

The gift will not go unrewarded. Two hearts, at least, will be cheered and comforted; and many, we trust, enlightened and saved. A hundred more such New Year's gifts might be made at this time by the kind and benevolent, and bring blessings upon the heads of both giver and receiver. *

BEGGING.

"Whew! what a begging affair your paper is! Why, here is an invitation to invest in what they call the 'Bank of the Lord's Poor'; here is money to scatter tracts with; and here, again, it is begging for an old preacher whose wife sits by the fire singing psalms; and it is all beg, BEG. Why, I would not harbor such a begging institution in my house." So saying, the lady gave the Crisis a contemptuous toss to the floor.

"Friend," said I, gathering up my loved paper, "should not the Lord have some of the treasures of earth? or must the devil have all? From whence come our good things of this life? from God, or Satan? One might suppose that Satan was the giver of every good gift, by the way his followers pour their tithes into his store-house; and they give cheerfully. Who ever heard of having to beg people to spend their time, strength and money for a ball, or a fair, or any of those inventions of Satan? But if a little money is wanted to spread the gospel to save lost men, what a hue and cry of 'begging.' Why is this? Why, because men are pleasers of self and Satan, rather than of God; and, as true, faithful servants, they bring all their tithes into the store-house of their master, the devil; thus the cause of Christ must suffer, if not begged for."

But brethren and sisters, is this right? Shall the servants of sin be more faithful to their master than the servants of the "Most High"? God forbid! Let us ponder on these things.

God loveth the cheerful giver. Then let us give cheerfully, as the Lord has prospered us. Let us show as much zeal in our blessed Master's cause, as do the followers of sin and Satan. Let us buy tracts and scatter them. Let every one of us, who is able, remit the money for the Crisis for some one who loves it, but is too poor to pay for it. And let us begin now; make the Lord's poor a new year's present of the Crisis for one year. We shall not feel it, except the better for having done it; for a good deed always brings its reward with it.

We read in an old, unpopular book, these words:—"Provide things honest in the sight of all men." Now is it honest to take the Lord's money to buy a fashionable bonnet with? I don't think it is, so I will wear my old one. I had rather have a crown of life, than all the bonnets and feathers, flowers and fashions this world can give. Then let us give up those things of vanity, and give the Lord his due; thus we shall show to the world whose servants we are.

Those who wish good books to read these long winter evenings,—don't forget that call of Bro. Ladd in behalf of that dear aged Bro. who has books for sale. I have some of his works, and, the Lord willing, will have more soon, and let Sr. Brewer sing on. God bless her. I hope to hear her sing again in this world; but if not, I expect to in the new city. Yes, let us make their aged hearts rejoice while "toiling here."

Say, brethren and sisters, will we not "provide things honest in the sight of all men"? not merely among ourselves, but before all men? We are to show to the world whose servants we are, by letting our light shine; and light shines plainest through good works. Let us commence the year 1865 by bringing all the tithes into the storehouse of our God; that we may receive the blessing promised. Your Sister, looking for redemption,

Plympton, Mass. FANNIE S. BRADFORD.

THE ITALIAN MISSION.

LA TOUR PELICE, VIA. TURIN, ITALIE, }
DEC. 1ST, 1864. }

Dear Bro. Grant, and all Brn. and Srs. in Jesus Christ:—It is with deep gratitude from the depths of my heart, that I acknowledge the receipt of your most welcome letter, of Oct. 13th, enclosing the Bill of Exchange on U. Trellweger & Co., Paris, for 321 and 17-100 francs that came to hand Nov. 14th. This donation of the dear Brn. and Srs. of my adopted country has relieved us of all embarrassments, and we return our heartfelt thanks to God, and the kind donors, that the mission is now free from debts, our honor saved, and the confidence of the people in our veracity established. It seems a great sacrifice of the Lord's money $149.38, for 321 and 17-100 francs, and I am much pained that such a sacrifice was necessary; but, dear Brn. and Srs., you have done this for the Lord, that the cause of his coming kingdom may be promulgated; and I have firm confidence that your sacrifice is acceptable to God, and that you will not lose your reward. I have heard my aged countryman, the late prince Adam Czartoryski say to his emissaries, when he appointed them, and sent them into different parts of Europe to propagate the Polish cause: "Spare not money, when the good of our cause makes it necessary to use it; no matter how great the expense may be; if we gain our country, we shall be rich enough." God forbid, that "the children of this world" should use more wisdom and prudence in their generation, than we, who have such a holy cause to sustain. Still, as we are obliged to use all the economy possible, I will say, that we have learned that there will be less loss here on the U. S. Bonds, than on Bills of exchange; therefore, if the brethren and sisters are so kind, as to remember us again with their christian offerings, until our mission is established, it will be much better to send the Bonds. In such case however, the letter enclosing it must be registered.

The Lord has been very merciful to us during the past month. We have enjoyed good health, and many rich blessings, for which we would render praise to his great name. I have preached eighteen times during the month, to congregations steadily increasing in interest, as well as in numbers. Sunday evening lectures especially are crowded with attentive hearers. Many of the best citizens of this valley give their cordial influence to the Second Advent Mission, and express themselves convinced of the important and solemn truths we preach. But while the Spirit of God is at work among the dear "Vaudois" people, Satan is busy also stirring up his agents to do all in their power to injure us. I regret that the truth compels me to say that these enemies are ministers, and some prominent members of the Vaudois church. They are of late much stirred up in regard to establishing Sunday evening lectures, which were unheard of in these valleys until I commenced my labors here. They have visited, from house to house among those who are in the habit of attending our lectures, and endeavored to induce them to leave us and attend services which they will establish. But the people answer that they are satisfied with the preaching of the "American Missionary."

To this time, no one knows how to pronounce my name,—Chakofsky—I am called by every one "The American Missionary," do not desire a change. Last Sunday, the minister of St. Jean gave in his resignation, which was accepted; but eighteen voted in favor of retaining him in a church of five hundred members. The majority of the church wish me to preach in the "Temple," as they call their large house of worship. But I wish to do nothing to enrage unnecessarily the "Consistory;" and as we have a comfortable place for the public worship of God, on the farm of dear Bro. Oliver, I prefer to continue to labor peacefully and independently, as I have done, and I expect that God will take care of his own work, and sustain me, if I am faithful to the grace given me. I leave all in the hands of him, who in the appointed time will make manifest every man's work. 1 Cor. 3: 13.

I have prepared a new chronological chart for my people, which, Providence permitting, I intend to publish in French, and Italian as soon as possible, and will then send you a copy. It made a good impression on my congregation, when I presented them with the evidence that we are very near the end of the 6000 years of probationary time.

I have established a little station in Turin, which city seems to me to be an important field of labor. I spent two days there last week and preached once, and was listened to with much interest for three hours. Just at present, there is much excitement in regard to moving the throne to Florence, so that it is not an auspicious time for opening a series of public lectures, in such a place. Wisdom and caution are necessary. While in Turin, I made the acquaintance of an Ex-Catholic priest who has recently preached in the market place some gospel and some politics. Mr. Don Ambrosio seemed a very good man, intelligent and enthusiastic. May the Lord help him to come to the truth.

Brethren, continue to pray for this Mission, that I may be able to do much good here in the name of Jesus.

Yours in the hope of the gospel,
M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

THE TIME QUESTION.—NO. 7.

PTOLEMY'S CANON DEFECTIVE.

Ptolemy's canon has long been the basis of defective chronology, and chronology based upon it has produced the confusion which has existed upon the time question. If the starting point of any measurement is wrong, there must necessarily be a corresponding error in the termination. For instance,—if a prophetic measurement is said to begin with a specific event, which event we find in the first year of the reign of a particular king, and if Ptolemy incorrectly locates the reign of that king, as surely as we begin our measurement with Ptolemy's date, so positively we have a wrong starting point and a wrong termination to our measurement; as in 1843, etc. This inclines us to examine the matter.

What is Ptolemyls canon? To make the matter as plain to the illiterate as to the learned, we remark that Ptolemy was an Egyptian Astronomer of the second century of the Christian era, who collected a catalogue of kings who had reigned during the space of about 800 years prior to his day, specifying the number of years each king had reigned. This is called Ptolemy's canon, and has been handed down to posterity as an almost sacred record, becoming the basis of received chronology; it being taken for granted, without thorough examination, that it must be correct. Hence, by general consent, for successive centuries, this canon has been blindly received as the correct standard, and adopted as the chief corner stone of that part of chronology which affects the beginning and ending of the prophetic periods. It is obvious to all that if the canon is found defective, chronology based upon it must be incorrect; and all prophetic measurements started from an incorrect chronological stand-point must consequently ultimate in a failure. With regard to this matter we remark:

1. Ptolemy's canon contains much that is correct, according to history.

2. Upon careful examination, it is found that in several instances, where Ptolemy correctly gives the length of the reign of certain kings, that he reckons from the wrong epoch,—beginning his reckoning with the beginning of a king's reign who reigned several years contemporary with his father, as an associate, thus counting the full reign of the father and son, while they reigned jointly for years,—thus counting too much time, by counting the same time twice; whereas only that part of a king's reign which succeeded the reign of a predecessor and associate should be counted, to get the true measurement of time. Ptolemy in this way makes too much time from Cyrus to the Christian Era; thus those who have followed him have been unable to make Daniel's sixty-nine weeks of years, or 483 years, reach from the "commandment" under Cyrus, to the birth of Christ; while a correct computation of the reign of kings from Cyrus to Christ is precisely 483 years, as seen in our "Bible Chronology Made Plain"—thus agreeing with Gabriel's statement to Daniel, but not agreeing with Ptolemy. This fact alone is enough to prove the canon defective.

3. History so plainly locates special eclipses in the reign of certain kings, that by astronomical computations it has been unmistakably demonstrated that Ptolemy's canon is incorrect. To illustrate the principle of detecting this species of error by astronomy, take the following case: It is claimed that Rome's foundation was laid B. C. 753. But history plainly asserts that the foundation of Rome was laid on April 20th, and also, that there was a total eclipse of the sun on that day; but astronomy proves that in the year B. C. 753, on the 20th of April, there was no eclipse of any kind, either "total" or partial; consequently B. C. 753 was not the year of the foundation of Rome. By applying this principle, Ptolemy is frequently found in error,—locating the reign of this or that king, in whose reign history specifies certain remarkable eclipses, just when those eclipses did not come. (On this point read Thurman's Astronomical Chronology.)

4. That the fault is not in the historical record of eclipses, but in Ptolemy's canon, is evident from the fact that the historical, record is in perfect harmony with true chronology (as shown by Thurman,) while it clashes with the canon. From the foregoing remarks all may see that there must be a defect in Ptolemy's canon, and therefore it cannot be received as correct in all points; consequently chronology predicated upon it must be defective. From these conclusions the following remarks are due:

1. Those who insist that the 2300 days ended in 1844, should remember that Ptolemy's defective canon was the foundation of their chronology, and consequently their conclusions are certainly incorrect.

2. Whether the "sanctuary" to be cleansed at the end of this measurement, is above, or below, the time for its cleansing is yet future, as all can see by the true count of time from Cyrus to Christ, as given in "Bible Chronology Made Plain."

3. Those who have been trying to harmonize the prophetic periods with some new starting point connected with this exploded canon, should desist from this species of speculation, and search for the truth in a new channel.

4. While clinging to Ptolemy's canon it is useless to think of finding a harmonious end of the "seven times" and other prophetic measurements reaching to the same event. The "seven times" of Israel's dispersion cannot be commenced later than the scattering of the ten tribes, which event the canon crowds so far into the past, that it requires the termination of this measurement long years ago, with nothing to mark its termination. So much for those who have feared to deviate from Ptolemy's canon, and are consequently walking in prophetic darkness W. SHELDON.

FIRE AND BRIMSTONE.

LUKE 17: 29, 30.—"But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."

These verses are presented for the consideration of those who affirm that the future punishment of the wicked will be "the agony of a guilty conscience." If such persons can prove that God rained a shower of guilty consciences upon the cities of the plain, then their favorite theory will be sustained. But, if they believe that the Lord rained literal fire and brimstone upon them, "and destroyed them all," then their theory falls to the ground; for Christ says, "Even THUS shall it be, in the day when the Son of man is revealed."

TESTIMONY OF PAUL. 2 Thess. 1: 6–10. "Is it a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, REST, with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with EVERLASTING DESTRUCTION, from the presence (at the appearing) of the Lord, etc."

INFORMATION WANTED.

Any one who who can give me information respecting the present whereabouts of Mr. Lewis H. Sterlin, will confer a great favor by writing a line to me at Hopkinton, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y. Said Sterlin married a sister of mine for his first wife, whom he buried in Weybridge, Vt., where he resided about fifteen years ago. He married again, and soon after removed to Canada, and has not been heard from since by any of the relatives of his first wife. Any one in Canada, or elsewhere, who can give any information respecting where he now is, or where any of his first wife's children are, will confer a great favor by writing as requested above. ALMON HALL.

THURMAN'S CHRONOLOGY.

We suppose those who have not read Bro. Thurman's Chronology would like to know what those think of it who have read it carefully. Bro. and Sr. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt., writes:—"We are examing Thurman's Chronology. It looks straight and conclusive—blessed be God. 'The King is coming soon.'"

Bro. Walter Nichols, No. Searsport, Me., writes:—"I have read Thurman. It appears plain and easy, although he uses up some of our old positions."

We sent one of Bro. Thurman's Chronologies, by Bro. Hudson, to Wm. A. Hall, at the U. S. Naval Observatory, at Washington, for the purpose of having him calculate the eclipses and test the astronomical observations of Bro. S. Mr. Hall writes that he has not the time and means at hand to comply with our request. In speaking of the work of Bro. T. he says:—"From a glance at the book, it appears that he has given a great deal of labor to the work."

RELIGION IN THE UNITED STATES.

It is worthy of remark that those christians who look for the promised Millennium before the coming of Christ to effect it, base their hopes, with great uniformity, upon what has been achieved in this direction by this country, and upon what it is destined to achieve. Such are fond of speaking of this as a "christian country," and of its "christian civilization." We beg to suggest a few thoughts for their consideration.

1. The number of professing christians of all evangelical denominations, in this country, is proportionately less now than a few years ago. Said a worthy minister, not long since, to the writer: "This country is relapsing into heathenism." The remark was made after a careful comparison of the census tables of 1860 with those of the previous decade. It was discovered that the number of evangelical christians is relatively diminishing. The increase of the church is considerably behind that of the population.

Does this look like the gradual subjugation of even this country to Christ? And where else is the record more favorable, or the promise more hopeful?

2. It cannot be maintained that the standard of piety is higher now than formerly. On the other hand, since the war began, there is mournful evidence of desolation and decay. And proofs are being sadly multiplied of a diminution of respect among high and low for the church, and those that minister at her altars.

3. The view in question, lamentably and inexcusably, overlooks the true relation between Christ and the world. "He that is not for me is against me," is the standard by which all that professes to belong to Christ must be tried. And is this nation "for Christ," either in its councils, its policy, its principles of action, or its avowed aims?

What would be thought, for example, of a member of Congress bringing his Bible into the hall of Representatives, and insisting upon discussing every proposed measure in the light of God's word? How unworthy and absurd to call that a christian state in which the vast majority do not even confess the name of Christ, much less practise his commands,—in which the name and authority of the Lord Jesus is not recognized in the fundamental law; where an appeal to the word of God in the national councils would be regarded as out of place; where Judaism and Mahomedanism and Spiritualism are tolerated equally with the religion of Christ.—Prophetic Times.

Correspondence.

From Sr. C. Daggett.

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS:—We are living in a very solemn time. We stand upon the verge of the "time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation." All things tend to that grand convulsion, the great day of God Almighty. Evil is going forth from nation to nation, and the whirlwind of God's fury is rising up from the earth. The voice of God has been heard proclaiming war, and the mighty men are all awake for it, and are fast closing up their work of slaughter. The wicked are being given to the sword. Our time demands earnestness, activity, and zeal, while the war of the great day rolls in upon mankind. What manner of persons ought we to be? Shall we cling to our idols, while the true God is so soon to come? Shall we heap up treasures to perish in the day of wrath? Shall we seek our happiness in this poor world, and yield to all our earthly desires, and live in condemnation and darkness, in a state of mind and condition that we are not fit for the world or heaven?—like salt that has lost its savor? Or, will we try by the help of God, to be wise and take heed unto ourselves, "put on the whole armor of God, that" we "may be able to stand" in this "evil day," "praying always with all prayer and supplication for all saints," "proving what is acceptable unto the Lord;" "that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ . . . may give unto" us "the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him;" that—"the eyes of our understanding may be enlightened, that" we "may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints; and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe," "and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that" we "might be filled with all the fulness of God;" so that we "can comprehend with all saints, what is the breadth and length and depth, and height" of "perfect love;" and have Christ dwell in us and his word abide in us, so we can ask what we will, and can have it, because, it will be according to his will.

O yes, dear brethren and sisters, it is high time we were all awake, and walking in the light, for God's people are the light of the world; and if they are in darkness, they cannot be of any use to themselves, or any one else. O let us see to it, that we are in the right place, where we can see and know the time in which we are living. Remember the Jews were lost because they did not know "the time of their visitation." O let us be wise, and escape for our life. Your sister,

CATHARINE DAGGETT.

Brewer, Maine.

From Bro. F. Treat.

BRO. GRANT:—It has been about one year since I was brought to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, and I can say that I have no desire to go back to the world, but on the contrary, I love the way, and the service of my blessed Master better and better. I find it is a cross-bearing way to be sure; but the Master has said except ye bear the cross ye "cannot be my disciple." Now as I wish to be a disciple of Jesus, I must be willing to bear reproach for him; and indeed I have some to bear, and I find that the most of the reproach comes from professed christians; for when I try to let my light shine, I meet a great deal of opposition from the popular members. I have been held up to public ridicule. Bless the Lord for the truth. I thank the Lord that I am so far out on his word, as to be clear from those who have turned away their ears from the truth, and are turned unto fables. May the Lord have mercy on them, and open their eyes to the truth. How good the Lord has been to me, in giving me a disposition to be good and serve him. I am determined to press on, and be faithful to the end, that I may receive a crown of life which fadeth not away.

"I feel that we are coming into "perilous times." We can see around us all the characteristics of "the last days." It seems to me that God's people will have their faith sorely tried before the Master comes. O I want to be crucified to the world, and entirely consecrated to the service of God. I want to be entirely clear from all the entanglements of the world.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us be faithful. Let us gird on the whole armor, and fight valiantly for king Jesus on the new earth. "Beloved brethren, be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; forasmuch as ye know your labor is not in vain in the Lord." Your unworthy brother in Christ, EZRA F. TREAT.

Searsport, Me.

From Bro. N. F. Nason.

"Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."

BRO. GRANT:—The above scripture, and a three dollar bill, was all that was in a letter that I received from an unknown friend through the P. O., and I wish to acknowledge the receipt. Yes, dear friend, my Father knows that a poor old preacher has need of something to live on, and it requires money to get it. He will soon say, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me"; "enter in to the joy of thy Lord." Amen.

My unknown friend, the money will do me good; and you have my sincere thanks. God preserve you and I blameless, and save us in his kingdom, is my prayer. N. F NASON.

Palmyra, Me.

☞ Never go back—never. What you attempt to do, do with your strength. Determination is omnipotent. If the prospect be somewhat darkened, put the fire of resolution to your soul, and kindle a flame that nothing but death can extinguish.

Obituaries.

E. WETHERELL.

Died in North Bennington, Vt., Dec. 18th, Sr. E. Wetherell, aged forty-four years.

Our sister was converted under the labors of Bro. Wm. I. Blanchard, last spring, and since that time has been noted for her consistent walk with the church. She is greatly missed from our number, and also from the neighborhood in which she lived. She has left two children and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss; but they sorrow not as those without hope.

"How long shall death the tyrant reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

Sermon by Wm. I. BLANCHARD, who spoke words of comfort from 1 Thess. 14. Also J. K. Bellows was with us, and spoke words of comfort to the mourning friends.

Sleep on, dear mother, sleep,
While we are left alone to weep;
Jesus is near to keep,
Until we meet no more to weep.

S. W. WORTHINGTON.

L. V. HOUGHTALING.

Died in Shelburne Falls, Mass., Aug. 18th, 1864, Lulie Veloria, only child of William P. and Lucy L. Houghtaling, aged two years, two months, and twenty-five days.

The light has gone out from our happy home,
All joy from our hearts is now fled;
We hear her footsteps no more in the room,
For sweet little Lulie is dead.

The light summer winds that late kissed her brow,
And played 'mid her soft rosy hair;
Sadly mourn over her resting place now,
And wail 'mong the wild flowers there.

Like bright beams of sunlight she tarried awhile;
Like flowers that bloom to decay;
She gladdened our home with her heavenly smile,
And gently then faded away.

RUTH M. FIELDS.

Died of consumption, in Brewer, Me., Dec. 12th, 1864, Sr. Ruth M. Fields, wife of George Fields, and daughter W. M. T. and D. S. Hansford, aged twenty-three years and six months.

She was kind, lovely, and affectionate, beloved by all that knew her. While visiting her during the last six weeks of her life, I found her happy and cheerful, rejoicing in her Savior, confiding and leaning upon his breast, where she found quiet rest amidst her sufferings, which were great. While there we could praise the Lord for dying grace.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

Sermon by Elder J. N. Loughborough.

CATHERINE DAGGETT.

E. J. and L. FAIRBROTHER.

Died in China, Me., Oct. 10th, 1864, of diphtheria, E. J. Fairbrother, aged sixteen years and seven months; also Lafayette, Oct. 25th, aged ten months, Sons of William and Mary Fairbrother.

Thus death takes from our embrace our loved ones, but earth's night of mourning is almost over. Jesus will soon come and bring the family of the redeemed to a land where disease and death shall never come. May the mourning friends be prepared to meet that day of everlasting joy to the church. Funerals by the writer.

JOHN R. HALL.

JULIETTE A. WALDRON.

Died at Frankfort Mills, Maine, Dec. 14th, '64, Juliette A. Waldron, only child of James and Julia A. Waldron, aged four years, four months and fourteen days.

She was a bright, active little girl, the object of her parents fondest affections, and a favorite among the children. This dear one "shall come again from the land of the enemy." The day is just at hand, when the dead will arise, and the parents shall see that same loved form, clad with immortal beauty, and those same eyes beaming in loving brightness. May the God of all consolation sustain them in this hour of grief. Words of comfort were spoken on the occasion from Jer. 31: 15–17.

God hath spoken, thy child shall come
From the enemy's land, from the silent tomb;
We shall see her again on the other shore,
Where death and weeping can come no more.

F. A. BAKER.

MRS. WHITAKER.

Mrs. Asa Whitaker fell asleep in death, Saturday, Dec. 17th, 1864, aged thirty-nine years.

Words of comfort were spoken to the afflicted friends by J. Wilmoth.

Newfane, Vt.

Married.

In Hartford, Dec. 8th, 1861, by Eld. E. M. Haggett, BRO. JOSEPH TABIN, of Livermore, and MRS. ABIGAIL PARSONS of Hartford.

In Holden, Mass., Dec. 25th, by Eld. H. K. Flagg, Bro. DANIEL A. ELLINWOOD and Sr. ELMIRA TWITCHELL, both of Athol, Mass.

At Rocky Brook, R. I., Nov. 13th, 1864, by Elder I. M. Church, Mr. RUFUS L. ELWELL, of Bridgeport, Ct., and Miss MARY ANN ECCLESTONE, of Rocky Brook, R. I.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool, Dec. 17th, Queenstown 18th.

The news is unimportant.

Another Ministerial crisis has occurred in Spain.

At a large open air meeting of operatives at Manchester, resolutions were adopted strongly opposing recognition of the slaveholding confederacy.

Parliament meets on the first of February.

The Italian capital will be transferred next May.

The breach between the Papal government and the Prussian minister at Rome was widening.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Dec. 28. The Savannah Republican of the 21st says: By the fortunes of war we to-day pass under the authority of the Federal military authorities. The evacuation has left the city gates open and Sherman with his army, will no doubt to-day take possession. We desire to counsel obedience and all proper respect on the part of our citizens and to express belief that our property and persons will be respected by our military ruler.

The fear that Gen. Sherman will repeat the Atlanta expulsion order we think is without foundation. Then he could not supply food for both his army and the citizens. In our case food can abundantly be supplied for the army and citizens. It behooves all to keep within their houses until Gen. Sherman can organize a Provost system. Let our conduct be such as to win the admiration of a magnanimous foe and give no ground for complaint or harsh treatment on the part of him who will for an indefinite period hold possession of our city.

New York, Dec. 28. The Times' Washington dispatch says the general impression in Mexico is that Maximillian's rule cannot stand more than six months. He has got aside the church party, which was the means of his entering Mexico. His principal trouble is want of money and credit.

New York, Dec. 28. The World's Washington dispatch says the Richmond Whig of the 26th states that Stoneman's command had captured Saltville, South-western Virginia. The valuable salt works which supply nearly the whole Confederacy were situated there, and they have been defended with great persistency by the rebels ever since the commencement of the war.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 30. Major Gen. Stoneman, who arrived in this city last night from his great raid in East Tennessee and southwest Virginia, furnishes the following account of the expedition:—

The loss to the rebels by the raid is immense. All the railroad bridges from New river to the Tennesse line were destroyed. Thirteen railroad trains, with locomotives, and several trains and extra cars without engines were captured and destroyed. Depots of supplies in southwestern Virginia, depots, foundries, mills, factories, storehouses, wagon and ambulance trains and turnpike bridges were destroyed. In addition, we captured 2500 rounds of artillery ammunition, 20,000 packsaddles, a large amount of harness and a great quantity of small arms, 2000 horses and 1000 mules. Among the captures are two rebel editors and four secession printing presses. The latter were sent to Parson Brownlow as a Christmas gift. The greatest loss to the rebels was the destruction of the salt and lead works, both of which were rendered useless.

Our losses were very small, not exceeding 2000 (?200) killed, wounded and missing. We captured 24 officers, and 845 men.

East Tennessee is now free from any body of rebels. Gen. Stoneham had possession of the rebel telegraph line and held it for eighteen hours, during which time he discovered all their plans and movements.

Washington, Jan. 1. Rebel deserters recently reported that the authorities at Richmond were discussing and maturing a movement which would astonish the world. This effect would doubtless be produced if the following from the Alexandria (Va.) Journal is worthy of credit in connection with this subject, viz., "We learn from persons who seem to have been informed in regard to the secrets of the secession leaders, that a plan is seriously discussed by the rebel authorities for the sudden massing of all their available forces in Virginia, in the event of their affairs becoming desperate, and marching into the Northern States, with the determination to conquer or die in the attempt."

New York, Dec. 29. The Colorado Journal contains an account of a great fight with the Cheyennie Indians on the Plains, Nov. 29.

The Indians numbered 1000. The chiefs Black Kettle, White Antelope and Little Robe were killed, together with some 500 other Indians. Our loss was 9 killed, and 38 wounded.

Our troops were commanded by Col. Cherrington, and they marched 300 miles in ten days, 100 of which was through snow two feet deep.

THE RECAPTURED RAIDERS IN MONTREAL.—The examination of Lieut. Young, and his recaptured associates in murder and robbery, according to a special dispatch from Montreal to the St. Albans Messenger, commenced before Judge Monk, on the 27th. The United States, the Crown and raiders were fully represented by counsel, the same as in the previous trial. The Court-room was crowded at an early hour; there were present the Mayor, many leading citizens, and lady rebel sympathizers of Montreal. George N. Sanders was also present. The prisoners are not so jubilant as heretofore. The trial will proceed with more dispatch than previously. Judge Coursol kept his private room.—Boston Journal.

ITEMS.

☞ Two thousand six hundred and eighty-seven miles of railway are completed in India, and as many more are authorized by government. Almost all the roads now in course of construction either are, or before they are completed will be, connected with the cotton fields of that country.

☞ The suppression of the rebellion in China is not altogether favorable, so far as concerns the propagation of evangelical truth. From testimony lately received, it appears that the people are returning with new zeal to their own idolatry, which had received such heavy blows at the hands of the insurgents. Idolatrous temples are being rebuilt, and idol services resumed.

☞ The Fenian panic continues in Canada, many towns being in constant alarm, while rumors of assassinations, conspiracies, ect. are rife. Churches are used for drill-rooms, and in some places the inhabitants are gathered for safety under a single roof, strongly guarded.

☞ In Paris alone, there are at this moment, no less than sixty thousand men who have no other religion or creed than that of Spiritualism. There the belief is as thoroughly organized a system as any sect of the christian religion.

☞ It is stated, as a new discovery, that wonderful effects may be obtained by watering fruit trees and vegetables with a solution of sulphate of iron. Under this system beans will grow to nearly double the size, and will acquire a much more savory taste. The pear seems to be particularly well adapted to this treatment. Old nails thrown into water and left to rust there, will impart to it all the necessary qualities forcing vegetation as described.

☞ The contributions to the Peter Pence Fund at Rome produce less and less. At the commencement the produce was about 4000 Roman crowns a month; it afterward fell to 2000, and goes on decreasing. November only gave 700, including offerings from Tuscany.

☞ There are now in the world about 7,000,000 Jews. About half that number are in Europe. Russia alone comprises 1,200,000. It is remarkable that in England, France and Belgium, where the Jewish race is completely emancipated, the number is diminishing, while it is increasing elsewhere.

☞ There are upwards of thirty generals in the United States army who profess the Roman Catholic faith, among whom are Generals Meade, Rosecrans, Sickles, Sheridan and Keyes.

The Emperor of China, instead of paying the doctor as we do when we are unwell, the instant that he is taken ill stops the pay of his physicians, and does not renew it until he is quite well again.

☞ The Great Exhibition building of 1862, in Hyde Park, London, is in process of demolition. Charges of powder, fired by an electric machine, are used to destroy it.

☞ Official reports from France state that the wheat crop has been a total failure this year.

☞ In England they manufacture eighty miles of Atlantic telegraph cable every week.

☞ Egypt will raise about $100,000,000 worth of cotton this year.

☞ The colliers' strike in Straffordshire, Eng. is assuming a grave character. A number are dead.

☞ Mr. Haviland, an English surgeon, states that death most frequently occurs with sick persons between the hours of eight and twelve in the morning.

☞ Since the year 1852 no less than £9,000,000 sterling have been spent on the enlargement and decoration of Paris.

☞ Some few days since a suit was terminated in Hungary, which had engaged the courts in that country for one hundred and eighty years.

☞ A man named Niles lately walked, in London, four miles in twenty minutes and one second—a feat unprecedented in all previous walking matches.

☞ Much sensation is caused in San Francisco by the opening of Pagan temples in that city by the Chinese for the worship of their gods.

☞ The number of physicians in the United States is 22,543; of lawyers, 37,193; of clergymen, 33,629.

☞ A St. Louis paper says there are not less than 200,000 persons in Missouri who are little better than paupers.

Discussion.

The following Question is to be discussed between John Stevenson, of Toronto, C. W., and William C. Thurman, of Buchanan, Mich:—

IS PTOLOMY'S CANON CORRECT?

Mr. Stevenson affirms; Mr. Thurman denies.

The discussion is to be held in Kast's Hall, 104 Hanover Street, Boston, on Tuesday, Jan. 24th, 1865, and the following days. Sessions to be held from 10 o'clock, A. M., to 12 M., and from 2 to 4 o'clock P. M., and the time spent in half hour speeches, or otherwise, as the speakers may mutually agree. The evenings to be occupied in discussion, or in other services, as may seem best.

Elder Joshua V. Himes is to be the Chairman. The speeches are to be faithfully reported by a competent phonographer, subject to revision before being put to press. Additions or other alterations to be made by either party only with the consent of the other. Dates may be supplied in the published report which were not mentioned in the debate.

The discussion to be published, if practicable, with a lithographic or other copy of a section of Mr. Stevenson's Chronological Chart, embracing the points in dispute, to be furnished by Bro. S. And if Mr. Thurman shall desire a similar illustration of his argument, he is to have the like privilege.

AN IMPORTANT DISCUSSION.

The arrangements for the above discussion are such as to promise a rare treat to the students of history and chronology. The brethren who are to discuss are masters of the position they occupy and will not fail to bring out the strength of the argument on either side. There is no subject that involves more interest to the church at the present time, than a knowledge of the times and seasons now closing. It is acknowledged by all that we stand on the threshold of the new world. Let us all awake out of sleep.—ED.

A Discussion.

A discussion of the following questions will commence at Morse's Mills, Corinna, Me., Feb. 14th, at one o'clock, and continue several days.

1. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man has a spiritual, thinking soul, that will exist between death and the resurrection.

Affirmative, E. B. FLETCHER.
Negative, N. F. NASON.

2. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that after the resurrection God will destroy the wicked in the sense of making them as though they had not been.

Affirmative, N. F. NASON.
Negative, E. B. FLETCHER.

If the weather is stormy, the discussion will be adjourned one week.

Meetings in Dansville, N. Y.

Elder Edwin Burnham will commence laboring with the church of God in Dansville, N. Y., on the second Sunday in January, 1865, if the Lord will, to continue for a length of time, according to the will of God. The object of the meetings will be to convict sinners of the truth that they may be converted, whether in the professed church or out of it. Brethren from abroad are cordially invited to visit us during these meetings, who will make it their sole purpose in visiting us to help on in this work. We believe in prayer; therefore, brethren, pray for us. F. BURR.

Easterly Maine Conference.

Our Easterly Maine Conference appointed at Frankfort Mills, will commence Thursday evening, January 12th, 1865, at six o'clock. I am requested to say that there are warm hearts and comfortable homes for all that will come to worship with us. Strangers may call on Wm. York, J. Woodman, J. Rogers, Rufus West, and F. A. Baker. Dear brethren, keep in mind the resolve of the North Searsport conference of last August,—and come to the meeting purposely to worship the Lord of hosts.

M. YOUNG, Clerk.

Conference.

The brethren at Bryant's Pond, Woodstock, Me., have arranged to hold a conference in the Universalist Chapel, commencing on the evening of Jan. 12th, and continue over Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Eld. W. H. Mitchell and the writer have engaged to be there to preach the word. J. A. LIBBY.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held on the 13th of Jan., at Floyed, Floyed Co., Iowa.

PETER S. W. DEYO, Clerk.

Notice.

Eld. J. V. Himes will begin a protracted meeting at Sandy Hill, N. Y., with my congregation, January 5th, 1865, and continuing about two weeks.

O. R. FASSETT.

Notice.

I. C. Wellcome & Co., now have a good assortment of English Bibles, books, tracts, and hymn books for sale, at the regular prices. As the new hymn book is not to be published at present, we have contracted with Bro. Himes for the "Christian Lyre," so that we can supply those who want them in Maine at wholesale and retail. Prices according to the quantities wanted. Sent by mail or express. Address I. C. WELCOME & Co., Yarmouth, Me.

Agency for Maine.

Having been solicited to take the agency for Maine of Bro. Himes' "New Chart of Daniel and John," I would say to any and all in Maine who wish it, I am prepared to furnish it at the regular retail price, $5.00, and to preachers (or others who wish them to sell) at a liberal discount. Address orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Bro. C. P. Dow—We should be pleased to visit Stanbridge, as proposed, and hold a series of meetings, but cannot now say when. Ask the Lord to direct as shall seem good in his sight.

T. B. Tamblyn—They cannot be had immediately. Will send you fifteen more as soon as they are printed.

R D Butler—It will cost $1.46.

W. H. Hacking—Would recommend "Geognosy," by D. N. Lord, Editor of Theol. Jour., New York. The price, by mail, we think will not be over $1.40;—perhaps less. Can get it for you.

A Annis—Have paid to No. 489, Feb. 14th.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 483. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid.

If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you owe.

For every week of indebtedness before No. 468, charge (at the old rate) four cents; and, for every week of indebtedness since No. 468, charge (at the new rate) five cents,—and you have the amount due the office. (This, however, will give a trifle more than the amount due. To make it exact, deduct four cents for every dollar due before No. 468, and five cents for every dollar due since No. 468.)

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT IS THIS WORLD?

BY J. CHAPMAN.

What is this world, we oft inquire,
  A question asked in every age,
Expressive of the soul's desire,
  A theme of thought for saint or sage.

This world, alas! is Eden blighted,
  Now anguish reigns where pleasure dwelt;
Earth's brightest flowers all are faded,
  Through nature wide the curse is felt.

This world, so brief is man's beginning,
  Where mortals make their future doom;
To ruin led in ways of sinning,
  While all are rushing to the tomb.

This world in love to us was given,
  Perverted oft from lawful use;
This finite good, this boon of heaven,
  A curse becomes by its abuse.

This world is but a phantom fleeting,
  A bark upon the restless tide,
Where careless throngs are swiftly passing,
  Like vapors on the mountain side.

This world is all a splendid bubble,
  Still floating down the stream of time;
Its vast domain a scene of trouble,
  Its records stained with every crime.

This world is one great field of slaughter,
  Where brothers take each other's life,
Where many live by other's torture,
  A world of cruelty and strife.

This world we find our place of trial,
  Where all may win a world of bliss;
In wisdom's path of self-denial,
  That world is gained by conquering this.

This world of sin, of death and sadness,
  This world accursed, with tears bedewed,
Where satan rules with subtle madness,
  In God's own time shall be renewed.

This world shall be Messiah's conquest,
  And glory crown fair Zion's hill;
The promised place of Israel's rest,
  Then peace and joy the world shall fill.

Praise Father, Son, and Holy Spirit,
  Messiah's reign is hast'ning fast,
The purchase of his gracious merit,
  His kingdom shall forever last.

A LETTER FOR YOU.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—I have been thinking of writing to you for some time; and as I now have an opportunity, I thankfully improve it. Permit me to thank you kindly for all your kindness to me,—and in behalf of all who have received favors of you, I also thank you. And remember, all you have done,—even to one of the least of the little flock, you have done to the CHIEF SHEPHERD himself, and he will abundantly reward you.

I have an object in view in writing to you at this time; and I boldly, and confidently, though with deep reverence, implore help from GOD that I may not fail in that object. The subject of my letter is, the ONE altogether lovely, the chiefest among ten thousand. Do you know him? O, pray earnestly that you may know more of him. Do you love him? Pray that you may love him a thousand-fold more. You have heard of the wonderful love of David and Jonathan. Please look at 1 Samuel 18: 1, and 2 Sam. 1: 26, and you will have a view of such friendship as is seldom found. What language could be stronger to express love! "The soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and he loved him as his own soul." And after the death of Jonathan, David says, "thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women." What had David done for Jonathan, in comparison with what JESUS has done for you? It is said that David was of a beautiful countenance, and lovely to look upon; but JESUS is the ONE altogether lovely. David had faults; but the FRIEND of whom I write has no faults. O, think of HIM! O may the HOLY SPIRIT reveal his beauty and loveliness to us, as it is not revealed to the world.

My dear friend, do you say, "O that it were with me as in months past, when the candle of the LORD shined upon my head?" Have you laid in the cold and cruel grave your dearest earthly idol,—and is your grief too deep for words to express? Ah! the grave has also closed over my darling; my first-born son, on whom I trusted to lean as upon a staff in my declining years; and my heart bleeds afresh, and tears dim my eyes while I write. The dear boy is gone! O, the pangs of separation! Then I had one dear child left, a little girl, lovely and beautiful, and she was then my only child. I felt that I could not give her up. I felt that if she was taken away, I, too, should sink with sorrow into the grave. And, thanks be to GOD, she was spared. For nearly two years after my son died, she grew in loveliness and beauty; and as I think of her now, with her sparkling eyes, her rosy cheeks, and all her winning ways, O how beautiful! It seems like a vision of the night, which is gone in the morning. She was struck down suddenly, without warning, in the full glow of health and beauty. Now I must pause. There is a sanctuary of sorrow over which the veil must be drawn. It cannot be told,—it can only be felt. You too, my friend, have had sorrows, and I only tell you of mine, to show you how deeply I sympathize in all your trials.

But JESUS is infinitely nearer to you than any other ever can be. He can more fully understand all the peculiar trials, all the unspeakable sorrows of your heart. Again, permit me to ask you, while your heart is warm with emotion, do you love JESUS? His love to you is wonderful; he left the glory of heaven above, and came down to taste of all your sorrows, all your cares—and to bear what no other being could do—your sins! It may be, my friend, that you have grown cold in your love; it may be that you have wandered away from the fold of the GOOD SHEPHERD, and you feel that your feet are stumbling upon the dark mountains, and in agony you cry, "O, that I knew where I might find HIM; I would come even to his seat." If this is your case, I write to you to call you back; and as the prodigal son was welcomed to his father's house and his father's heart, so shall you be welcomed to the heart of your heavenly Father, your best and greatest FRIEND.

I must speak once more of the loveliness of CHRIST. Not in the words of man's wisdom, but in the words of the HOLY GHOST. He is the true vine; and do you feel that you are one of the branches? He is the life and the light; the only source of life and light and joy. Is his glory revealed to you? Have you that light, and life that comes only through faith in HIM? I trust you once had a glimpse of his glory, when you gave your heart to him, and promised solemnly to live with a single eye to the glory of GOD. Now he is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. His goodness and loveliness, beauty and glory are infinitely greater than all you ever conceived. And HE will soon come to call all his friends to leave this world of sin and snares, and pit-falls and death; and we who are alive will be caught up to be with the LORD. Do you rejoice at the thought of seeing the KING in his beauty? How has your heart leaped for joy to see the face of some dear friend, though that friend had done infinitely less for you than the FRIEND of whom I write. I tell you plainly, JESUS is coming! Do you believe it? Do you say "he will not come in my time?" Then your time must be very short indeed. Very plainly were all the signs foretold, and very clearly and fully have they been fulfilled. "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." Now they have not only begun to come to pass, but the sun has been darkened, the stars have fallen, and all the signs which precede his coming have been fulfilled. Yes, your best and truest FRIEND is coming "in your day."

My dear friend, search the Scriptures daily, and see if these things be so. Do not be afraid of what the world will say of you,—come out and be ready to meet the LORD.

PURE RELIGION.

"Pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father, is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."—JAS. 1: 27.

Says Dr. Clarke, "Works of charity and mercy are the proper fruits of religion. . . . True religion does not merely give something for the relief of the distressed, but it visits them; it takes the oversight of them; it takes them under its care; . . . it goes to their houses, and speaks to their hearts. It relieves their wants, sympathizes with them in their distresses, instructs in divine things, and recommends them to God. This is the religion of Christ. The religion that does not prove itself by works of charity and mercy, is not of God. Reader, what religion hast thou? Has thine ever led thee to cellars, garrets, cottages, and houses, to find out the distressed?"

This godly man practised what he taught. In him the poor found a friend. He taught his children to deny themselves, and to divide their morsel with the still more suffering poor around them. How little of this religion do we see at the present day. How little self-denial for the cause of God, and the wants of his children. We gather around our well-filled tables, sit in our comfortable homes, with all our needs supplied, and often neglect to search out the suffering Chloe's and Lydia's, and hundreds of others, who need as good food and warm clothing as ourselves; but who from the hand of affliction are placed in a condition where they can only "gather little.". Let us who have the power to gather much be wise, and lend it to the Lord, that our treasure may be found above.

When the cry of the fatherless child is heard
  From his poor and lonely dwelling,
Let thy heart by his wailing complaint be stirred
  By his voice of sorrow telling.
Go and bind up the woes of the widow's breast,
  Burst the clouds that gather round her;
Go and show her that when she had hoped it least,
  Hath mercy's angel found her.

When she sits by the side of her fading coals,
  And her babes are round her quaking,
Let her share in the bounty that o'er thee rolls,
  And soothe thou her bosom's aching.
O, prepare thou a balm for the orphan's grief,
  Go and cheer them in their sadness;
For the hungry and naked provide relief,
  For the weeping songs of gladness.

This pure religion keeps us "unspotted from the world." The natural heart seeks the applause of the world, and follows its fashion and customs; but the follower of Jesus must come out of the world and be separate; must tread the humble path he trod. Let us be careful and not use the unrighteous mammon to decorate ourselves and dwellings; or spend our time foolishly and idly, while Jesus is cold, hungry, naked, sick, and in prison, lest he say to us "Ye visited me not."

WRESTING HISTORY.

The apostle Peter tells us that in his day there were some who wrested the Scriptures, or "rack" them, as some render it; which signifies torture, to force out a false testimony, or confession. Probably, there is much such work done in these days, by which the Bible is made to speak many things which are not in it.

History shares the same fate in the hands of those who must have historical testimony to sustain their positions. I am fully apprised of this by a recent re-examination of a little book, published some years ago over the initials of N. J. A., entitled "The Sabbath;" and also by reading a more recent work by the same author, entitled "History of the Sabbath."

By a few examples taken from the above named works, candid readers can possibly judge of the merits of a cause which requires such torturing of history to make it speak for that cause. On the first page of "The Sabbath," and the 204th page of the "History of the Sabbath," the learned Dr. Neander, an eminent church historian, is so presented as to appear to unobserving readers to discredit the christian observance of the first day of the week, and also of the Lord's Supper. The Doctor's language is quoted thus:—

"The festival of Sunday, like all other festivals, was always only a human ordinance, and it was far from the intention of the apostles to establish a divine command in this respect. Far from them, and from the apostolic church, to transfer the laws of Sabbath to Sunday." "Perhaps at the end of the second century, a false application of this kind began to take place; for men appear by that time to have considered laboring on Sunday as a sin."—Church History, p. 168.

What does the Doctor mean? Those who read N. J. A., and the language with which he has clothed the above extract, are led to think the Doctor asserts that the christian observance of Sunday was only of human origin, and which the apostles and early church did not observe. Does the Doctor teach this? Never. He says, "The FESTIVAL of Sunday was always only a human ordinance." Note this. Well, then he means that the ordinance of the Lord's Supper "was always only a human ordinance," does he? If the festival of which the Doctor speaks is the Lord's Supper, then he means this and nothing else. But will any enlightened christian believe it to be so? No, verily. The eminent Dr. Neander neither says, nor intends to be read as saying, that the observance of Sunday, or of the Lord's Supper, "was always only a human ordinance." He neither asserts the human or divine origin of Sunday observance. But he does assert that "the festival of Sunday was always only a human ordinance."

This festival was a Catholic corruption of Christ's institution of the Supper, and by this corruption, Sunday became a day of feasting, and gaming, and ceremonies, instead of a day of worship and rest. Also, in this time of corruption, the laws which had governed the Jewish Sabbath were applied to the first day, and labor on that day considered sin; which "was far from the intention of the apostles and apostolic church to transfer."

Thus this distinguished historian—Dr. Neander—is made to testify against Mosheim, another equally distinguished historian, whose testimony is so clearly stated that it could not be made to speak otherwise, for thus he says: "All christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week, on which the triumphant Savior arose from the dead, for the solemn celebration of public worship. This pious custom, which was derived from the example of the church of Jerusalem, was founded upon the express appointment of the apostles, who consecrated that day to the same sacred purpose, and was observed universally throughout all the christian churches, as appears from the united testimonies of the most credible writers."

N. J. A. quotes the above from Mosheim first, and then adds, "Let us read what Neander, the most distinguished of church historians, says of this apostolic authority for Sunday observance." He then quotes from Neander what I have above transcribed, and tries to make it appear that Mosheim and Neander make opposite statements; then by a misapplication of Neander's words, seeks to make it appear that he clearly contradicts Mosheim; then argues on such a basis to make it appear that Neander is most correct. We affirm our belief that there is no contradiction between Mosheim and Neander, and that both are correct, when allowed to speak themselves. Mosheim states the truth, that the apostles, and then the church, unanimously set apart the first day of the week for the solemn celebration of public worship. He does not speak of their calling it "Sabbath," establishing a "festival," nor "transferring the laws of Sabbath" to it. Neander disputes nothing which Mosheim asserts, but alludes to the "festivals" of Sunday, and "the transfer of the laws of the Sabbath," as items which had been added, not intended by the apostles, nor by the apostolic church. Yet N. J. A. says, "But so directly do they contradict each other, that it is a question of curious interest to determine which of them states the truth."

We say both state the truth, and we think the careful reader of history will not fail to see an agreement. When we read works like the "History of the Sabbath," we are reminded of Paul's remark in 2 Cor. 3: 15, "But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the vail is upon their heart." Let us all read and practice the next verse; "Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord, the vail shall be taken away."

LET US WORK.

Time is short. The Judge is soon to come, and the kingdoms of this world are soon to become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. The books will soon be opened, and the destiny of man will then be sealed. Dear reader, in view of that day which is just before us, let us put forth every effort for the salvation of our fellow men. My heart has been made to rejoice in hearing the truth preached by one of God's servants, who has felt it a duty for some time past to enter upon this all important work, but declined, feeling that there were others more competent for the work. But we trust that the Lord has called Bro. Ferris, as one who will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, whether men will hear or forbear.

Believing time to be short, and that what is done must be done quickly, Bro. Ferris and myself felt impressed that it was our duty to go north about thirty miles from Fort Edward, to gather up some brethren and sisters of like precious faith, who were scattered among the hills of Lake George. So we, like Abraham, went out not knowing whither we went. After about four hours ride, we found ourselves gazing at an old church, that, by all appearance, had been forsaken. After ascertaining that the chapel was not refused to any who might desire it for public worship, here, we thought would be a good place to commence our work for the Lord. Not having but two hours to circulate an appointment that evening, our congregation was small,—numbering about thirty, to whom Bro. James Ferris spoke from 1 Thess. 5: 21, "Prove all things, hold fast to that which is good." The next evening our congregation numbered about fifty, and on Saturday evening, Bro. Ferris spoke to a congregation of over one hundred, showing the inheritance of the saints to be on earth. The Lord was with Bro. Ferris in all his preaching, and in the demonstration of the word. Some spoke for Jesus, others said they would be good, and others asked for information, among whom was a Methodist clergyman, to whom Bro. Ferris replied satisfactorily. We gave God the glory, and took courage. We felt like working for Jesus. O that the good Lord would send more such men into the field, who are not afraid to preach the whole truth.

Dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, let us work while the day lasts, for soon the night cometh, when no man can work. Pray for our friends in Bolton.

A RESPONSE.

A response to the inquiry, "How goes the Battle?" by our aged sister of mercy, on the old battle field, at Prospect, Ct.

DEAR SISTER:—It is a long time since with me the opinions of men have been swallowed up in this,—what saith the word of the Lord? not, what saith the Brn. The question, "Does truth triumph?" I would answer for this branch of the army, in this State. Well, I would say that on Sunday, Sept. 13th, our camp was all astir, as though something was expected to be done. In the afternoon, we came into battle with this weapon of war: "What is truth?"

On Monday, our leaders under higher command came in from New York and Western Mass., and so we had a general engagement that night, and conquered. We were reinforced from various parts, during the next three days. Most came with uniform on, and sword in hand, for we had no swamp angel of fanaticism to send Greek fire among our combatants, nor shells to burst with empty words. Our men fought valiantly, and in harmony with the command from headquarters, and with each other. Praise the Lord. As the battle progressed, it became deeply impressed on the mind of those with whom we were engaged, that our little army would come off triumphant; for the stout-hearted sinner wept and trembled.

Friday, the elements began to rage. Not many out to contend with; therefore we went into tent, to economise our supplies, to see if we were able to go through the war; and we found that, although the war had been progressing eighteen hundred years, yet the supplies were fresh; and we felt, by the grace of God, we were "well able." Some of the old veterans were with us, and came in battle array; not at all discouraged, although they had thought the war would close long ago, and they would have received their bounty,—eternal life,—ere this.

Truth triumphs. The seed has been sown in hearts which never before listened to such burning truth, and it has found a lodgment "on good ground." We take no weapon but the broad sword of the Spirit; and thrusts made with the old gospel blade, by the Spirit, cannot fail to bring its victim low. And while we do not see an outside show of excitement, we do see the truth taking a deep root in the hearts of some; and as from "the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," so we hear some saying, "Our heart and hand are with you."

The battle goes well, thank God. Sister, the banner is unfurled, and written on all sides,—"Thy kingdom come."

PATHWAY TO GLORY.

I.—REPENTANCE.

Repentance is to leave
  The sins we loved before,
And show that we in earnest grieve,
  By doing so no more.

II.—FAITH.

Faith is the marriage knot that ties
  The soul to Christ forever;
It is the hand that grasps the prize,
  And says, "I'll yield it never."

III.—COURAGE.

Without a holy fortitude,
  No duty will be done;
True courage every one must have,
  Who would to glory run.

IV.—KNOWLEDGE.

If Christ we know, and nothing else,
  'Twill bring us unto bliss;
If all things else, and know not Christ,
  Of heaven we will miss.

V.—TEMPERANCE.

A temperance man is one who has
  His passions in control;
Who eats and drinks, and works and lives
  To have a healthy soul.

VI.—PATIENCE.

Unnumbered trials will befall
  The pilgrim on life's way,
Hence grace to calmly bear them all,
  Is needed every day.

VII.—GODLINESS.

Not like the wealthy, wise and great,
  Should we desire to be,
Unless inscribed upon their lips
  'Likeness to God" we see.

VIII.—BROTHERLY KINDNESS.

To love as brethren, and be kind
  In thought, and word, and ways;
Nature, we know, is not inclined,
  It is the work of grace.

IX.—CHARITY.

Our God is love; and all his saints
  His image bear below;
The heart with love to God inspired,
  With love to man will glow.

"EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT."

GEN. 19: 24-26.—"Then the Lord rained upon Sodom, and upon Gomorrah, brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven; and he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground. But his (Lot's) wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt."

The command to Lot and his family was, "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee," etc. (See 17th verse.) It appears that Lot's wife disobeyed God's command, and turned back again. Luke 17: 31, 32 refers to it. In speaking of "the day when the Son of man is revealed," Christ says, "In that day, he which is upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away; and he that is in the field, let him likewise not turn back. Remember Lot's wife." For looking, or turning back, SHE was punished, by being turned into "A PILLAR OF SALT." All must admit that this was the punishment for her transgression, though as "a pillar of salt" she knew nothing. Then if she remained so eternally, that would be an "everlasting punishment."

Let all the wicked be turned into "ashes." That would be a punishment, though they did not exist as persons. Let them remain in that condition eternally; that would be an "everlasting punishment." Query. Who can prove that either would not be?

THE IMPORTANCE OF WATCHING.

How often is it the case with the professed christian, that he realizes the importance of watching against sin and temptation, and the many evils that surround him on every hand; also the many alluring charms which attract the attention of the individual, drawing his mind away from those things which tend for his eternal interest, and his soul's salvation. By the neglect of watching, and guarding against the devices of satan, he tries to win our affection, and gain our admiration, making all things look beautiful and serene.

The great object of Satan is to lay traps, that he may catch us in his snares by his fascinating smiles and bewitching ways. Nothing pleases him so well, as when he can draw us into his channel by overpowering us by his overwhelming influences, which he exerts around us. He is coming in his craftiness. He can play his part well. He can perform wonders,—work miracles through his agencies, who are under his control.

Then shall we suffer the evil one to take possession of our souls by giving away to his influence which he exerts so powerfully around us? Shall we suffer him to have place in our thoughts, or desires? Shall we give vent to feelings of envy or strife? Shall we speak evil of our christian brother or sister in the Lord? Shall we endeavor to injure them in any way? Shall we suffer ourselves to bring reproach upon the cause of Christ, thus wounding Jesus in the house of his friends? Or, shall we endeavor to resist all these evils, and endeavor to keep ourselves aloof from those things which bring us into captivity to Satan?

Let us watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation; lest we be led astray by the enemy of all righteousness, who walketh about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. Let us be continually upon our watch, praying much, that we may be able to quench the fiery darts of the enemy; trusting in the all-sufficiency of God's sustaining grace, which alone will enable us to conquer sin and temptation in all its forms. "There hath no temptation taken you, but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it. 1 Cor. 10: 13.

O let us be diligent, watching with all prayer and perseverance, with the saints, keeping ourselves in the love of Christ, who has washed us in his blood, forgiven us our sins, and promised to give us eternal life, on condition we are willing to comply with the requirements laid down in the gospel plan of salvation, crucifying the old man, with his deeds, putting on Christ, which makes us a new creature." Also bringing ourselves into subjection to the will of our heavenly Father, having our will swallowed up in the will of God, working out our salvation with fear and trembling, by the patience of hope and the labor of love. O let us not become weary in well doing; for if we faint not, we shall reap life eternal. The promises of God stand sure. He will not let us fail, if we trust in him. We shall always find him a present help in time of need to comfort and sustain. He will never grow weary, though we request often. He will give us grace to conquer, and keep us to the end. O what a blessed thought. O how consoling to a weary worn traveler, seeking for a home beyond this world of sorrow and commotion, of sin and wickedness.

How heart-cheering are the promises of God, the promises in these times of earth's sorrow, which he has left for our consolation, to cheer us amid life's trying scenes. Our cup of grief runs over, but there we'll share unmingled bliss, on Canaan's happy shore. Glory to God we'll soon be there to shout deliverance through our king. We are nearing the port. Jesus will soon come to take us home to dwell with him forever. O let us be there to share in those glories in reserve for the good and the blest, is my sincere prayer. Your sister in Christ, waiting for deliverance.

RUSSIAN CATECHISM.

The following, from an English work entitled, "Poland and the Interests and Duties of Western Civilization," will give one some idea of the character of the Russian government.—ED.

Question. How is the authority of the Emperor to be considered in reference to the spirit of christianity?

Answer. As proceeding from God.

Q. How is this substantiated by the nature of things?

A. It is by the will of God that men live in society; hence, the various relations which constitute society, which for its more complete security is divided into parts called nations, the government of which is entrusted to a prince, king, or emperor, or, in other words, to a supreme ruler. We see, then, that as man exists in conformity to the will of God, society emanates from the same Divine will: and more especially the supreme power and authority of our lord and master the Czar.

Q. What duties does religion teach us, the humble subjects of his Majesty the Emperor of Russia, to practice towards him?

A. Worship, obedience fidelity, the payment of taxes, service, love and prayer; the whole being comprehended in the words, worship and fidelity.

Q. Wherein does this worship consist, and how should it be manifested?

A. By the most unqualified reverence in words, gestures, demeanor, thoughts and actions.

Q. What kind of obedience do we owe him?

A. An entire, passive, and unbounded obedience in every point of view.

Q. In what consists the fidelity we owe to the Emperor?

A. In executing his commands most rigorously without examination, in performing the duties he requires from us, and in doing everything willingly without murmuring.

Q. Is it obligatory on us to pay taxes to our gracious sovereign the Emperor?

A. It is incumbent on us to pay every tax in compliance with his supreme commands, both as to the amount and when due.

Q. Is the service of his Majesty the Emperor obligatory on us?

A. Absolutely so. We should, if required, sacrifice ourselves in compliance with his will, both in a civil and military capacity, and in whatever manner he deems expedient.

Q. What principles are in opposition to these duties?

A. Irreverence, disobedience, infidelity, malevolence, treason, mutiny, and revolt.

Q. How are irreverence and infidelity to the Emperor to be considered in reference to God?

A. As the most heinous sin—the most frightful criminality.

Q. What examples confirm the doctrine?

A. The example of Jesus Christ himself, who lived and died in allegiance to the Emperor of Rome; and respectfully submitted to the judgment which condemned him to death. We have, moreover, the example of the apostles, who both loved and respected the Emperors; they suffered meekly in dungeons in comformity to the imperial will, and did not revolt like malefactors and traitors. We must, therefore, in imitation of these examples, suffer and be silent.

Q. At what period did the custom originate of praying to the Almighty for the prosperity of the sovereign?

A. The custom of publicly praying for the emperors is co-eval with the introduction of christianity; which custom is to us the most valuable legacy and splendid gift we have received from past ages. Such is the doctrine of the church, confirmed by practice, as the worship and fidelity due to the Omnipotent Emperor of Russia, the Minister Vicegerent of God.—Ex.

DESPOTISM OF A BAD HABIT.

O, the tyranny of a bad habit! Coleridge, one of the subtlest intellects and finest poets of his time, battled for twenty years before he could emancipate himself from his tyrant, opium. He went into voluntary imprisonment. He hired a man to watch him day and night, and keep him by force from tasting the pernicious drug. He formed resolution after resolution. Yet, during all the best years of his life, he wasted his substance and his health, neglected his family, and lived degraded and accursed, because he had not resolution to abstain. He would lay plans to cheat the very man whom he paid to keep the drug from him, and bribe the jailer to whom he had voluntarily surrendered himself.

Terrible, terrible is the despotism of a bad habit. The case of Coleridge is an extreme one, of course. But there are many, whose eyes these lines will meet, who are as truly the slaves of a perverted appetite as he. Their despot may be opium, tobacco, drink or worse; but they are so completely under the dominion of their master, that nothing short of a moral war of independence, which should task all their own strength, and all they could borrow from others, would suffice to deliver them.

SAVE YOUR COBWEBS.—We just called at a neighbor's where a lad cut his thumb. The wound bled profusely. While we were in the act of tying it up, a bit of cobweb was brought, with the request that it be put on. The application was no more than effected before the blood stopped. We never saw a prompter action. We then learned that the application was in common use, and always efficacious. Save the webs.

TO MY YOUNG FRIENDS.

Beloved, I wish to address a few words to you in the name of my Master. My heavenly Father saw fit to permit severe afflictions to come upon me in early years; and those very afflictions have become dear unto me, because of what I learned in enduring them. Thus realizing that it has been good for me to be afflicted, that I might learn the sweet lessons of love and trust—that fear of God that is the beginning of wisdom; feeling that the sacrifice has not been too great for the good that has been wrought out for me; I feel like taking my young friends who are out of Christ by the hand, and, in the true spirit of a warm christian friendship, entreating you to come and learn with me of my heavenly Teacher. And I feel more like entreating you, because of the peculiar times in which we live. This has been called truly "a fast age," and the current of sin and pleasures, that drown men's souls in perdition, has all the accelerated speed acquired by rolling down the steep of time six thousand years, and now bears all who trust themselves to its delusions on, ON, with a wild rapidity that is most appalling to contemplate.

Now in seeking to call the attention of individuals to their danger in refusing to listen to the voice of heavenly wisdom, it sometimes occurs that we are charged with a spirit of pride, with exalting ourselves as being better than they. My dear friends, how I wish I could unmask and present this error to you in its true light. The true christian ever feels most sensibly and keenly his natural defects and sinfulness, and seeks ever, by uniting his own energy to that strength proffered by Him who is stronger than man, to overcome and have rooted out and destroyed all of sin from his heart; and it is because he feels thus sensible of his own fallen and consequently lost condition, that he seeks to aid in rescuing those who are involved in the same fall and exposed to a like destruction.

"But," say some of you, "I am not so bad; I do nothing intentionally wrong; I am better than many professed christians; indeed, it is difficult finding many who live up to their profession." O lukewarm, half-hearted christianity! hang thy head and blush for very shame at this oft-repeated and too true assertion. Dearly beloved, let us not be cast down and destroyed because of these stumbling blocks in our way; inasmuch also as these characters are living testimonies of the truth of the Scriptures; divine wisdom having foreseen and portrayed these very characters for our benefit and warning.

But let us look for a moment at this idea of your own goodness. Looking at ourselves, we find we are mortal, we feel it in the pains and sicknesses to which we are subjected; and when man's "breath goeth forth," life is extinct; he becomes "as though he had not been," so far as consciousness is concerned, for "his thoughts perish." He is dead, and as an offensive thing is now hidden away out of sight. But through the mercy of God, it has been made our privilege to secure a return of life to that now inanimate and unthinking clay; a life, dear reader, unending in its duration, and in all that constitutes complete happiness, beyond the possibility of a return of death or any evil. Now by the sin of our first parent—Adam, we become subject to death; but by the righteousness of the second Adam—Christ, we may have life. By refusing to accept of life by obedience to his requirements, rendering to him the service of our present brief, imperfect life; by refusing to do this, I say, we sin against ourselves in the greatest degree possible, and against God by robbing him of his right in us, being our Creator; we also transgress his law, he having commanded us to "come and live," and to transgress law is sin; thus find yourselves fairly hedged in by sin.

Says one, "I acknowledge I have sinned, am a sinner; but will God indeed deal so hardly with me as to punish me with 'everlasting destruction'?" My friend, it is not God, but your own self, that is your hard master. He hath done all things on his part, and left you to choose or refuse mercy. Surely if we deem eternal life unworthy our effort to secure, we render ourselves most unworthy of it. Says another, "I am inclined to think, as God is merciful, that we get our punishment for sin in this life, and shall come out right at last." Beloved, be not deceived, the WAGES of sin is DEATH." If our sins are canceled by our believing and obeying the gospel, we shall receive the GIFT of God—eternal life; otherwise, our sin remaining, the wages—death—will also remain. Let us remember this, and Universalism, like the phantasma, will vanish forever from our sight.

Our time is brief. Yet a little in the future, and I hear that voice in tones of thrilling, harmonious sweetness, sounding down from the high heavens, "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Mark,—"a covenant . . . by sacrifice." What is that sacrifice? O man of the world, it is a sacrifice of that gold, that will consume thy flesh by and by like fire, for that tried gold that shall gain thee a rich inheritance that shall remain for ever in the better world. Child of ambition, a sacrifice of the laurel, hard earned, and fading on thy brow, for a crown of pure gold and regal honors in the kingdom of God. Lovers of pleasure, it is a sacrifice of that that is fleeting, unsatisfying, vain, for that that is satisfying, abiding and glorious, now and for ever,—a sacrifice of the friendship of this world for peace with God, intercourse with and friendship of the Holiest, with no vail between, in the better world; and with angels mighty in power, and all the good and pure and lovely now waiting the resurrection voice of earth's soon coming King. A sacrifice of this world for a "hundred fold" here, and a world to come, which the powers of infinite wisdom and love have engaged to fit up and perfect in beauty and glory. Who would not be there? Who would not wish to exchange sin for purity; sorrow, grief and woe, for joy, unending happiness; corruption for incorruption; weakness for power; sickness for health; ignorance for wisdom; death for life?

Kind reader, what think you of the man who with his own rash hand takes his precious life? What think you of the self-murderer? Yet what are you and I doing to-day if we have not made a covenant with God by sacrifice? Committing SUICIDE FOR ETERNITY! O my God, how my soul recoils in sickened horror at the thought! SUICIDE FOR ETERNITY! Is it not enough? What more need be said? Come, then, to the heavenly Chart; come with tears of repentance for the past, prayers for guidance for the future; believe the gospel, obey it. Time is fleeting, fast passing. This moment is thine; the next we know not. The Judge is at the door. Confess Christ by baptism and a holy life; be vigilant, faithful, and it shall be well with thee now and for ever.

ANNIE'S PAPER.

"Annie, my little lady, would you not like to read this paper? It is filled with accounts of the latest battles of the war. I think you will be interested in reading them," said a gentleman, as he arose from his seat on the piazza, in front of one of our large New England hotels.

"I would rather not take your paper," replied Annie, very modestly. "I have a paper that I have just taken from the office, that I had much rather read than yours." (Annie holding the paper in her hand.)

"Well," said the gentleman, as he walked up to Annie, who was already upon the steps of the hotel, "My paper is a daily, and contains many choice items of war news. Pray, what kind of a paper is yours?"

"My paper has something better than war news in it; it is filled with the Holy Ghost."

The gentleman looked at Annie for a moment with a look of surprise, then said,

"Will the little lady be so kind as to let me look at her paper awhile?"

"Oh," said Annie, "I would, if I knew that you would not make fun of it. For I would rather people would make fun of me, than of my good paper."

The gentleman assured Annie that he had no intentions of making fun either of her or her paper; he only wanted to read a paper in these times that was "filled with the Holy Ghost."

Said Annie, "I will let you take it, if my mother is willing. She is waiting for me to carry it to her room."

Annie quickly went to her mother's room, and asked permission to lend her paper—the World's Crisis—to Mr. T., one of the gentlemen boarders of that house for a few hours.

"Yes, my dear," said her mother, "only ask Mr. T— to return to you the paper when he has read it all he wishes to."

As Annie closed the door of her mother's room, she very lightly descended the staircase, and her footsteps could be distinctly heard tripping through the hall. Presently Annie stood beside Mr. T— on the piazza. Said Annie, "I have come to bring you our paper. Mother says please return it when you have read it what you wish to"; then politely courtesying, she retraced her steps to her mother's room once more.

The next morning, Mr. T— met Annie in the hall, very cordially bidding her good morning, and told her that he had read her good paper all through, and he would agree with her in believing her paper to be better than his political paper that he asked her to read the day before.

Said Mr. T—, "Why, Annie, what made you think that I should make fun of your religious paper? Did you think me bad enough for that? No, never; I like the paper well; think I shall subscribe for it."

"Sir, I did not know that you would make fun of it; but I was only afraid that you would; that is all," meekly replied Annie.

Annie and her parents have been constant readers of the Crisis for about five years past, and are still readers of that good paper; for it comes weekly to their fireside. Although so young, Annie has given her heart to the Savior. I had the privilege of seeing her rise up in a large congregation, and of hearing her tell what the Lord had done for her. Dear little girl, thought I, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." I afterwards saw her buried with Christ in baptism. Her countenance seemed angelic on that occasion. She loves the people of God, the Sabbath School, the social meeting, the Young Pilgrim, and the Crisis.

I think I have already given you an example how well Annie loved what she believed to be good, and how firmly she refused that she thought to be wrong. Imagine to yourself a young girl, just entered her teens, standing upon the steps of a large hotel, pleading for the reputation of her paper in the presence of strangers. How many, think you, of the lady readers of the Crisis would have had the moral courage that Annie had? I suppose that Annie's bright eyes will discover these few lines in the Crisis. Well, Annie, when you told me about it, I did not promise not to tell of it.

"MY SAVIOR LIVES."

I love to hear that voice of old,
Which over Patmos' rocky shore
Thus sweetly spoke: "I live! behold
I am alive forevermore!"

"My Savior lives." No mortal ears
Can listen to more joyous strains:
High above yonder rolling spheres
My God and yet my Brother reigns.

"My Savior lives." He intercedes
Still as the Lamb, the Crucified.
"Father, I WILL;" 'tis thus he pleads;
Ne'er was the boon he asked denied.

"My Savior lives," and still his heart
Responsive beats upon the throne
To every pang from which I smart;
He makes my tears and woes his own.

"My Savior lives." If thus so near,
Ne'er at his will shall I repine;
His presence dries each falling tear,
Proclaims all needful discipline.

"My Savior lives," and soon again
He'll come to take his pilgrims home,
To feel no longer aching pain,
And from himself no more to roam.

"My Savior lives" to see his face
My endless happiness will be;
Lord, independent of all place,
Where'er thou art is heaven to me.

ON THE RAISING OF THE DEAD.

The resurrection of the dead, in any condition, was denied by some in the church of Corinth. In his first letter to the church, Paul set himself to correct that error, and in doing so set out by reminding them that, "among the first things" he had taught them was the fact of Christ's resurrection; "For," says he, "I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the scriptures; and that he rose again the third day, and that (afterwards) he was seen" of many of his disciples. He then asks, "If Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?" and then proceeds to show that the denial of the resurrection of the dead involves the denial of the resurrection of Christ, and the consequent futility of the preaching of the apostles, and the faith of the disciples. Says Paul, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised. . . . . . But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." Here the expressions "rose from the dead," "resurrection of the dead," "risen," "raised up," "dead rise," "risen from the dead," whether used of Christ or of the dead who are Christ's, are all equivalent terms expressive of an operation of a determinate character. This operation, moreover, is predicted only of "dead" persons, and not of persons who have once been dead, but who, previous to becoming the subjects of this operation, are caused in some way to leave their sleeping condition, and become again possessed of life. In other words, the operation expressed by the term "resurrection from the dead," is not a change effected upon a living being, who had been formerly deprived of life, but is an actual making alive of persons absolutely dead. Indeed, this is Paul's mode of expressing it in verse 22, above quoted, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." This is exactly parallel to verse 21,—"Since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead." So that to raise from the dead is substantially to "make alive" a person who is devoid of life. This is the nature of that operation termed by the apostle "the resurrection of the dead," viewed simply in itself as a divine act, apart from the question of quality of body, and keeping only in view the identity of the person so raised from the dead. This question of quality of body does not necessarily affect either the nature of the operation or the identity of the person raised, and, although passed over just now, shall receive due attention by and by.

Continuing his argument, the apostle asks (verse 32,) "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not? Observe, it is still the dead of whom "rising" continues to be predicted by the apostle. He then introduces an objector, putting the twofold question,—"How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?"

Seeing that the questions are framed according to the phraseology used throughout by Paul, namely, the raising of the dead, I conclude that the force of the question is derived from its assumed absurdity in the view of the questioner. That is, he assumes its ... And so also as used by the two disci- unanswerableness, and thinks to foil the apostle by asserting the absurdity of supposing that dead men can be raised up.

Paul, in meeting the question, employs an illustration from the growing of grain, but meanwhile I wish to notice his succeeding statements regarding the raising of the dead—the main topic of his arguments. His dictum then is, "it is raised a spiritual body."

Now the question is—does Paul suddenly use the term "raised" here in a new sense in the course of his argument? Or have we been mistaken in concluding that the sense in which he employs it from verse 4 to 35, is that of making alive the dead. Let us see.

Paul declares (verse 15) "we have testified of God that he raised up Christ." Was this raising an act effected at once, or a process requiring a length of time for its being completely effected?

Jesus said to the Jews, "I lay down my life for the sheep. . . . . I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." When the two disciples met the Lord on the way to Emmaus they said, "certain women also of our company made us astonished who were early at the sepulchre; and when they found not the body, they came saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels who said that he was alive." Now what the angels actually said was—why seek ye the living (margin, "him that liveth") among the dead? He is not here, but is risen, remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee, saying, The Son of man must be delivered unto the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again. Here the rising from the dead, and the fact of being "alive," or otherwise "him that liveth," are identical in meaning in the mouth of the angels, for when they "returned to Jerusalem and found the eleven gathered together, they said to them,—The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon." This is confirmative of the words of Paul already quoted—"in Christ shall all be made alive," which he uses as parallel with "by man came also the resurrection of the dead." (See also Acts xxv. 19; Rom. iv. 17, quickeneth the dead.)

But when was Jesus "raised from the dead," or "made alive?" Him God raised up the third day," Acts x. 40. "He rose the third day according to the scriptures," 1 Cor. 15 : 4. This was in accordance with his own prediction,—"From that time forth began Jesus to show unto his disciples how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be raised again the third day." Matt. 16 : 21. These and many other testimonies to the same effect, that might be quoted, clearly demonstrate that the term "raised," as applied to the resurrection of Jesus, has no reference to a long continued process, but to an act which was consummated not only on the day on which he left the tomb, but "very early in the morning" of that day, "when it was yet dark." For it was then that the women were at the sepulchre, and were told by the angels, "He is not here, but is risen; remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee." See Matt. 16 : 21, above quoted.

Now, Paul, in his reasoning with the Corinthians, starts from the raising of Christ, and argues from it the raising of those "that are Christ's at his coming." Where, then, is the warrant for understanding the term "raised" in any other sense in the case of the disciple than that in which the apostle uses it regarding the Master? It may suit the exigencies of a theory to trifle with the words of the Spirit, but Paul wrote this epistle, "not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth," and what are we that we should dare to foist a sense upon them, repudiated alike by the facts of the case and the whole reasoning of the apostle?

But even at the close of his argument, Paul adheres to the signification of the term "raised," when he is speaking of the change to be effected on those who are alive at the period of the resurrection. He says, "For the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." Here the dead and the living are subjects of different operations—the dead "raised incorruptible," and the living "changed." Nothing could more clearly show the relation of the term "raised" to dead, as opposed to living beings, especially when the term "changed" is used to express the operation requisite to place the living saints in the same bodily condition with the dead who are "raised incorruptible."

So much for the term "raised." What of the term "sown?" In reply to the question, "How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?" the apostle says, "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." That is, it is very foolish to deem the raising of dead men an absurd or impossible thing, when we know that there is not a living plant in existence but what has grown from a seed which first had to die. To push the figure beyond its obvious use is just as bad as to build the notion of disembodied human spirits on the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. All the apostles had to do was to expose the absurdity of the question, which the figure from plant-life most conclusively does. Hence its force is—if a living plant grows, according to divine law, from a dead seed, why may not a living man be produced by the power of God from a dead body? The one thing is as far from being unreasonable as the other. And as the sowing of seed is virtually its death, the use of the act of sowing to represent the death-state in the case of man is at once natural and easy. Whereas, on the other hand, to make the apostle, in applying the figure, use the term sown in a sense which the figure itself does not supply, is at once unnatural and forced. For to put the meaning, "springs to light," into the figure, destroys its very existence as a figure, and turns it into nonsense. Thus, that which springs to light is not quickened except it die—that is, it dies after springing to light, and previous to being quickened. But assuming this to be the sense in which the apostle uses the word "sown," it necessitates an application of the figure which would make the apostle teach that living men leave the tomb, afterwards die, and then are raised spiritual bodies.

In applying the figure, the apostle says, "So also is the resurrection of the dead." Here he states his object to be the illustration of the resurrection, or raising, of the dead, in relation to the second question, "with what body do they come?" Now the point of this question, as put by the Corinthian objector, must relate to the coming from the death-state. The difficulty was not about subsequent coming with the Lord—it was about the raising of the dead. And the apostle's answer must be held to be in exact accordance with the Corinthian denial of the resurrection. And hence the sowing and raising can only have relation to the two conditions of body—the natural and the spiritual—which respectively characterize the saints now, and on quitting the tomb.

I have only space to say, that unwarrantable inferences from other passages can have no force in explaining away the plain words of the apostle in this; for the simple reason that he is here professedly dealing with the subject, whereas it is only alluded to incidentally in other places.—Gospel Banner.

BIBLE TIME.

"God . . . commandeth all men everywhere to repent; because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness," etc.—ACTS 17.

1st. "He hath appointed a day"—set or established, caused to stand, or fixed—"a time" for his judgment. The word for "appointed" is most emphatic and determined.

2d. There is a measure of duration in prophecy that is called "the appointed time," at which "the end" (shall be) Dan. 8 : 13–19—2300 days—that the events of prophecy already accomplished swell to 2300 days.

3d. The date given by Gabriel in his second appearing to the prophet (Dan. 9), requires that the 2300 years should end about our time.

4th. The illustration of the outline of events and subordinate periods, that fill up this 2300 years, has been given by Bro. John Stevenson in his unexampled diagram. It is a wonderful work.

5th. The diagram presents the two lines of kings that ruled over Israel and Judah, with unparalleled precision, from Solomon to the captivity.

The arch that spans the time from Jeroboam to Isaiah, with other intermediate and yet determinate intervals, seems demonstrative of the precise accuracy of the diagram. This is sustained by the wonderful harmony with which the years of Jeremiah, Josiah, Zedekiah, Nebuchadnezzar, and the seventy years of the captivity in Babylon are presented,—each event and every date in its exact place; and all "according to the Scripture." It seems solid and certain, as so much mason work in a wall of given dimensions and well determined material. No one can question, I presume, this part of the diagram, save, as it may be done, "ignorantly in unbelief."

6th. This foundation once laid in the firm word of God, and its agreeing history, embracing the inspired measures of time by the cycles of sabbaths, sabbatic years, and jubilees, seems to set the mind aright, so as to go on down the subordinate series of agencies and events, that reach through the ages intervening, to our time.

7th. The only question, I think, that has been raised hitherto, relates to the special arrangement and adjustment of the periods to the time of the Savior's crucifixion, and the consequent end in 1866. But now Bro. Thurman's work brings forward other considerations, based on (real or presumed) corrections in the canon of Ptolemy. On this point brethren are requested to notice a few facts.

First. There must be two eclipses—may be seven, and, on an average, there are four every year.—Ferguson's Astronomy.

Second. This fact demands discrimination in any attempt to determine a date by the aid of an eclipse. If the precise time and conditions of the eclipse be not given in the history, then all astronomical computations based on them are altogether invalid and useless in argument.

Third. Bro. Stevenson has made a diagram of Bro. Thurman's adjustment of dates and events, in which his dates are shown to vary from three to forty-eight years! Bro. Thurman coincides with Bro. Stevenson and Ptolemy to within three years, and again vibrates away to forty-eight years! Thus the dates of a main eclipse varies.

Fourth. As no one has a standard in himself by which to determine the truth in the premises, let all suspend their opinion till Bro. T. and S. shall adjust their facts into one harmonious view. There are, I think, stronger and better proofs known to these two brethren than to all others interested in the subject. Let them compare and adjust dates, for the church's sake and Christ's sake. Bro. Hastings has written wisely as to several points in this grand subject, and given, so far, my mind.

The two works combine to bring the time for the anti-typical jubilee very nigh—one in 1866, the other in 1868,—a difference of only two years. Bro. Stevenson's new chart far transcends the former one. It fills the mind with admiration, and is both argument and illustration so combined as to instruct and edify. It is this that interests, and attaches me, more than the special arrangement which points out the end in 1866. But the facts are there furnished to his hand, and the skilful use he makes of them shows a masterly mind and a brave heart, that shrinks not from the conclusion, which is so overwhelming that very few dare to entertain it at all. In short, Bro. Stevenson, as one of us, has done far too much and too well to be superseded by whatever agency that has done far less, in far less time, and in a far more circumscribed sphere. Can a hasty acceptance of any theory which cannot have been attested by any proper examination or evidence, be a proof either of wisdom or of piety? "Be not hasty," saith the Lord. J. B. COOK.

CHRISTIAN UNION;
Or, First Pure, then Peaceable.

"The wolf shall also dwell with the Lamb."—ISA. 11 : 6.

"Rejoice, rejoice, the promised time is coming,
Rejoice, rejoice, the Prince of Peace shall reign;
And lambs shall with the leopard play,
For naught shall harm in Zion's way."

"We are for peace." What kind, friend? that which "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy"? "And it came to pass when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts are so many?"—2 Kings 9 : 22. What foundation for gospel, peace, or christian union, the peace of God which passeth all understanding, so long as sin lieth at the door, or is cherished in the bosom? You advocate christian union. Very well: blessed union!

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

The union of all true christians is a Bible doctrine, which Jesus Christ prayed for, suffered for, died for, now intercedes for. "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe thou hast sent me. Sectarianism, or the building up of sects, undoubtedly is the work of Satan, a stumbling block to the world?

"Is it for sect or creed to fight,
To call our zeal the rule of right,
When what we wish is, at the best,
To see our church excel the rest?"

Beloved, what is your platform for christian union? the principles of action on which you build? The Bible? Is the word of the living God your standard, the rule of your faith and practice? "a lamp unto your feet, and a light unto your path"? Do you take the holy prophets and apostles for ensamples,—Jesus Christ as the chief corner stone? In the formation of your Christian Union Society, and its progressive movements, do you shrink from publishing the whole counsel of God? from declaring boldly against all sin, every sin, popular or unpopular, in high places and in low; sins of omission and commission, of thought, word, or deed; individual sins, family sins, or national?

For example, is the sin of slavery excluded or touched very slightly,—the traffic in the bodies and souls of men,—for fear of offending some member of your society? Also the sin of worldly conformity in dress, equipage, the pride of aristocracy, the making God's house a house of merchandize?

How in regard to a corrupt press, the sending forth a pernicious, ungodly literature, that is now flooding the land in the form of novels, romances, comicals, and fashion plates? Are the lips to be closed or muzzled here? How in raising for benevolent objects through a gambling process, a lottery business, or the uniting the church and the world, Christ and Belial, in fancy fairs, soirees, tea, strawberry, and donation parties, etc.? Is silence profound to be the watchword, touching these and kindred satanic influences?

How in regard to secret, oath-bound societies, the uniting the church with unbelievers—wicked, ungodly men? "What concord hath Christ with Belial?" "What communion hath light with darkness?" "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord."—2 Cor. 6 : 14–17.

Again, must the wine bibbers, the tobacco chewers, smokers, and snuffers, be let alone, and those who traffic in liquid death and distil damnation?

Furthermore, Sabbath desecration is now a very popular sin in the church, both with ministers and people; must this curse of all curses be hushed into silence to promote the peace of this Union, or for fear of giving offence to some Sabbath-breaking minister, deacon, or lay member?

Finally, what sin is there in this day of perpetual backsliding, if exposed or held up to public view, that would not give umbrage to some hypocritical, worldly-minded, ungodly professor? If the discussion of one sin is prohibited, for the sake of peace, why not prohibit the discussion of any sin, for the same reason? Is this the christian union you advocate,—the peace you contend for? Well applies the interrogation of Jehu,—"What peace, so long as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel are so many?" "Glory not, and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work."—James 3 : 14–16.

"Art thou faithful? then oppose
Sin and wrong with all thy might,
Care not how the tempest blows,
Only care to do the right."

"Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword." Matt. 10 : 34.

Let us glance at this subject still more minutely, look at it, turn it over, view it on every side. Can two walk together except they are agreed? One is a stickler for human creeds and confessions of faith, and holds on to them with a dying grasp, and would as soon part with his Bible as his creed. Another repudiates them as mischief-makers, uncalled for, stones of stumbling and rocks of offence, roots of bitterness, the head and front of offending; with a firm belief that no permanent gospel union can exist until these missiles of the pit are exterminated, banished forever; and the Bible received as the creed, the man of our counsel, the rule of faith, practice, and church discipline—the all in all. "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish aught from it; that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God, which I command you."—Deut. 4 : 2. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—2 Tim. 3 : 15–17. "Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee."—Prov. 30 : 6.

One interprets the sacred Scriptures by one system of philosophy, and another by another system. One is "Old School," the other "New School." One is Armenian, the other Calvinistic. One looks upon the doctrine of predestination as sound theology; the other views it unsound, as the doctrine of devils, issuing from the bottomless pit. One contends that sprinkling, or pouring, is the true mode of baptism; another that immersion is the only valid, or scriptural mode.

One believes in "holiness to the Lord,"—entire sanctification in the life; the other considers the doctrine of perfect love erroneous, or fanatical, and that sin is mixed with all we think, say and do, even with our most holy duties, and that death is the sanctifier.

One believes that growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus is leaving off sin gradually, sinning little less to-day, and little less tomorrow, and so on, till we leave the world. The other contends there is no apology for sin; that the whole import, or tenor of the Bible is, "Cease to do evil, and learn to do well," now, henceforth, and forever; that growing in grace is obedience to all God's commandments, rising higher and higher, shining brighter and brighter, in all that is true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report, even to the perfect day, and for ever. All the commands and precepts of the Holy One are for the immediate renouncement of all sin, and that no one can be said to be growing in grace who, for one moment, is living in a state of disobedience to any known command of God.

One sips the wine cup, or brandy bottle, smokes, chews or snuffs the vile "weed"; while the other looks upon these as agents of Satan, that "bite like a serpent, and sting like an adder," and that "whosoever is deceived by them is not wise."

One looks upon the institution of slavery as in accordance with the Bible, or as a Bible institution, as a missionary enterprise. Therefore the slaveholder, the man-stealer, and his apologizer, are welcomed to the communion table, and the sacred desk, in full fellowship! The other, with the Bible in his hand, says, "Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; that useth his neighbor's service without wages, and giveth him not for his work."—Jer. 22 : 13. "Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard."—Prov. 21 : 13. "And he that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death."—Ex. 21 : 16.

"What, preach and kidnap men!
Give thanks, and rob thine own afflicted poor—
Talk of Christ's glorious LIBERTY, and then
Bolt hard the captive's door!"

One winks at the violation of holy time, owns stock in Sabbath-breaking establishments, takes his seat in the car and steamboat, visits the barber's shop and post-office, traffics in milk and other articles of food on the Lord's day. The other looks upon these as trampling on a positive precept, the letting out of waters, the stepping-stone to every species of iniquity. "Ye shall keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord." Lev. 26 : 2. "Keep the Sabbath day to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee."—Deut. 5 : 12. See Isa. 58 : 13, Neh. 13 : 15–17.

One loads his centre table with light, popular readings,—Shakspeare, Byron, Scott, Harper, Godey, Peterson, and other such publications; the other contends that these are literary serpents, sugar-coated poisons, the artful devices of Satan to destroy the relish for the Bible and all solid, virtuous reading, to the ruin of souls innumerable!

One resorts to fancy fairs, soirees, tea, strawberry, and donation parties, oyster suppers, picnics, etc., to sustain benevolent institutions; while the other views these as a departure from gospel purity and simplicity,—a worldly policy,—uniting the church with the world, Christ with Belial!

"The church and world amalgamate,
A union worse than with the State,
Though motives are the same,
The love of pleasure and of gold,
On some professors have such hold,
They oft forget their name."

Is it a marvel that all attempts at christian union hitherto have failed? How can it be otherwise than a failure, so long as the people (like the mongrel Samaritans) "fear the Lord and serve their own gods"? See 2 Kings 17 : 32–34.

"Religion's gems can ne'er adorn
The flimsy robe by pleasure worn;
Its feeble texture soon would tear,
And give those jewels to the air.
Thrice happy they who seek the abode
Of peace and pleasure in their God!
Who spurn the world, its joys despise,
And grasp at bliss beyond the skies."

Christian union, to be christian union exclusively, permanently, and forever, must be Godward, unreservedly, heart, soul, life; founded on gospel, built up on gospel, continued on gospel; rooted and grounded,—a return to primitive discipleship, the apostolical, pentecostal, the tongue of fire! "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit."—1 Cor. 12 : 13. "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."—Eph. 4 : 4–6. "So we being many are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another."—Rom. 12 : 5. "Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye when the Lord shall bring again Zion."—Isa. 52 : 8. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

"Lo, what an entertaining sight
Are brethren who agree;
Brethren whose cheerful hearts unite
In bands of piety."

This blessed union did exist on pentecostal day, when the disciples were "with one accord in one place," and the Holy Spirit was poured out, "and there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." And so long as they "continued steadfast in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship," just so long, and no longer, continued this heavenly union, and the breaking of "bread from house to house," and "they did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart; praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."—Acts 2 : 46, 47. So it was, so it will be. Beloved, go ye and do likewise.

"Let party names no more
The christian world o'erspread;
Gentile and Jew, and bond and free,
Are one in Christ their head."

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Home Thrusts.

NOTE. The Bible is particularly plain and pointed in relation to the subject mentioned in our heading. But we are convinced that but few realize its importance, and the sad effects of disregarding the instruction of our blessed Master on this point.

Although it stands forth in bold relief in almost every chapter of the New Testament, and was made a prominent theme in the discourses of our Savior, still the arch enemy of man has succeeded in splitting the professed church of Christ into almost a thousand fragments, each claiming to be right, and to be sustained by the Bible; while each says, practically, to the other, "I have no need of thee."

Witness the strife for power, and the selfish efforts to gain the ascendancy in the honors of the world, in obtaining numbers and influence in advance of their church neighbor; and we think nothing can be plainer, than that christian union exists only in name, except in a few isolated cases.

We are repeatedly taught in the New Testament that the church is the body of Christ, and that we are members in particular. Judging from the spirit manifested in the present existing churches, would any one suppose they were but parts or members of the same body, and that the body of Christ?

Christian union is a subject of great importance, and one that demands special attention at the present time, because much discord exists, and the responsibility of it must fall somewhere; and let us not forget that if we are the cause of its commencement or continuation, we are abominable in the sight of the Lord so long as we help to produce such a result.

There can be no genuine prosperity where there is not christian union. If our course has tended to perpetuate petty party interests by defending and upholding Satan's sectarian walls, let us repent, that we may be forgiven, and from this time "provoke one another to love." D. F. N.

For the World's Crisis.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER THREE.

The book of Daniel contains the times, that were to be sealed up to "the time of the end"; and when "the time of the end" should have come, then they were to be unsealed by the Spirit of God. When the time comes for it to be unsealed, then the wise will know the will and purpose of God to man; as the contents of a letter are known after the seal is broken. Hence we find our giant intellects impressed that some great event is at hand.

Says Kossuth:—"'Tis the hour when the trumpet of the resurrection shall sound; the drawing near of the judgment * * * pointed out by the finger of God in the book of providence, which is made to be a revelation to mankind." The New York Herald, Hon. Rufus Choate, and Sabbath Recorder, all say that "everything is maturing for the great battle of Armageddon." It will be observed that the very terms made use of by the learned, are the very same terms which inspiration applies to this time. Thus giving internal evidence that the time may be known; because the prophetic declarations enter largely into the expectations of those who believe in an imminent crisis at hand. I believe that definite time will be known in its appointed time, as Noah knew when the flood was coming; as Lot knew when he was to fly to the mountains.

I would say in the words of Thurman, in his "Sealed book of Daniel opened," p. 212: "We must, therefore, go back to that dispensation in which the Father spoke to man, before he sent his Son into the world (Heb. 1 : 2), and see if indeed he has made known the day and hour; for though it was not for the disciples at that time to know 'the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power,' 'ye shall receive power' to understand, 'after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you' (Acts 1 : 8); for, 'ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief.' (1 Thess. 5 : 4. Mark the expression,—not 'year,' but 'day.' By reference to the law as given at Mount Sinai in Arabia, when the Father spoke to Moses, we find; 'Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound; on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land' (Lev. 25 : 9), which we are taught was 'a figure for the time then present,' a shadow of good things to come.' In the shadow, the trumpet did on the same day 'sound throughout all the land'; hence if the type properly represent the antitype, 'the great trumpet' must sound throughout all the earth on the tenth of the seventh month. And if at one time this world's great jubilee will be proclaimed throughout all the land, the trump must not begin to sound until the tenth of the seventh month shall have enveloped the whole earth, which will be at the time of the going down of the sun at Jerusalem, on Saturday evening. As the Jews began their day 'at evening when the sun did set,' this hour is at the end of the Jewish Sabbath, and commences with the beginning of 'the Lord's day.' The Lord's day following the seventh day of the week, it was called the eighth day; and Barnabas, who was a companion and fellow preacher with Paul, says 'the eighth day, that is, the beginning of the other world. For which cause we observe the eighth day with gladness in which Jesus rose from the dead.' (Barnabas 13 : 9.)

At A. D. 533, ... the 1335 days commenced, about the end of the tenth of the seventh month, on the eve of St. Cyprian, 'which—in A. D. 533 fell on the tenth of the Jewish seventh month.' . . . 'If to' this 'we add 1335 years, we will have the tenth of the seventh month, A. D. 1868 for the time at which Daniel will stand in his lot, in the year of jubilee.' 'At A. D. 533, we remarked that the 1335 days commenced about the end of the tenth of the seventh month, on the eve of St. Cyprian. As 'the churches were already adorned and illuminated for the festival,' the hour seems to have been at about sunset; hence, the 1335 days end at the same hour at which the tenth of the seventh month will have encircled the whole earth, or at which it will in all parts of the world be the tenth of the seventh month. The Lord 'hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world'; and if he 'will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets' (Amos 3 : 7), his people will 'see the day approaching.'"

It is often said that the prophecies cannot be understood; that we need not trouble ourselves about them; that there is enough revealed for us to do our duty to God, and nothing else concerns us. But is there any thing in Revelation that is not revealed? If so, it cannot be a revelation; nor can that be prophecy, which does not foretell future events. Who can say there is any thing revealed in the word of God that is unnecessary for our growth in grace, or progress in sanctification? If there is any thing revealed that is useless, why is it revealed at all? God would never have revealed any thing to man, or the church, without some important end in view. The Bible does not mark out certain portions of its contents to be studied in preference to others; but to be studied as one harmonious whole. Neither does it indicate that any other part of the word must be set aside, as of no value or of less value. The New Testament is a chart of the church from the sufferings of Christ to the glory that should follow. The Bible, as a whole, is a chart from paradise lost to paradise regained.

THE NEW JERUSALEM.

"Here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come."

Of Abraham it is written that "he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, . . . for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God"; and John describes one which he saw "coming down from God out of heaven,"—"a holy city," most beautifully "adorned with every kind of precious stone,"—a city of sunshine and gems, most lovely, the happy home of the redeemed.

Let us consider the description given of its garniture of "precious stones." "And the foundations of the wall of the city were adorned with every kind of precious stones; the first foundation-stone was jasper, the second sapphire, the third chalcedony, the fourth emerald."—Rev. 21 : 19.

Prof. Stuart says: "The word adorned may raise a doubt here, whether the writer means to say that, into the various courses of the foundation, ornamental precious stones were here and there inserted. But taking the whole description together, I do not apprehend this to have been his meaning. JASPER, as we have seen above, is usually a stone of green transparent color, with red veins. But there are many varieties. SAPPHIRE is of a beautiful azure or sky-blue color, almost as transparent and glittering as a diamond. CHALCEDONY seems to be a species of the agate, or more probably the onyx. The onyx of the ancients was probably of a blueish white, and semi-pellucid. The EMERALD was of a vivid green, and next to the ruby in hardness."

"The fifth SARDONYX, the sixth SARDIUS, the seventh CHRYSOLITE, the eighth BERYL, the ninth TOPAZ, the tenth CHRYSOPRASUS, the eleventh JACINTH, the twelvth AMETHYST." Rev. 21 : 20. SARDONYX is a mixture of Chalcedony (blueish white), and Cornelian, which last is of a flesh color. SARDIUS is probably the Cornelian; sometimes, however, the red is quite vivid. CHRYSOLITE, as its name imports, is of a yellow or gold color, and is pellucid. From this was probably taken the conception of the pellucid gold, which constitutes the material of the city. BERYL is of a sea-green color. The TOPAZ of the present day seems to be reckoned as yellow, but that of the ancients appears to have been pale green (Plin. 38, 8. Bellerman, Urim and Thummim, p. 37). CHRYSOPRASUS is of a pale yellow and greenish color, like a scallion; sometimes it is classed at the present day under topaz. JACINTH is of a deep red or violet color. AMETHYST is a gem of great hardness and brilliancy, of a violet color, and usually found in India.

In looking over these various classes, we find the first four, or base, to be of a green or blueish cast; the fifth and sixth, of a red or scarlet; the seventh, yellow; the eighth, ninth, and tenth, of different shades of the lighter green; the eleventh and twelfth of a scarlet or splendid red. There is classifiation, therefore, in this arrangement; a mixture not dissimilar to the arrangement in the rainbow, with the exception that it is more complex—(Stuart). And may we not add, more beautiful! C. P. DOW.

HOW TO BE CHEERFUL.—A cheerful life must be a busy one. And a busy life cannot well be otherwise than cheerful. Frogs do not croak in running water. And active minds are seldom troubled with gloomy forebodings. They come up only from the stagnant depths of a spirit unstirred by generous impulses or the blessed necessities of honest toil.

☞ There are flowers that are repulsive at first sight, but when closely examined they unfold a world of beauty—and so with men. We should never judge a man from first sight, for he may have good qualities which will develop themselves on acquaintance.

"BE STILL AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD."—Ps. 46: 10.

We are living in perilous times, and if ever there was a time for sober thought and caution, it is now. That we are living in "the time of the end," there can be doubt; and if so, many will be running to and fro, and knowledge will increase. Many minds, of different construction, will be employed in searching out the prophetic times and seasons; hence there will naturally be a diversity of opinions on those "times and seasons." It is christian to confide with the fullest confidence in all God has said, believing he meant as he said, and said as he meant. Thus we may speak of the future as though it was accomplished, as did the prophets. See Isa. 9: 6. So we may speak of the promises yet unfulfilled; but when we speak of the time of their fulfillment, it is best to speak with caution. Our conclusion, as to when the times end, depends upon the history of things recorded by men not inspired; and the best of men have failed in reference to the finishing up of time. Others may fail also.

I have a book before me on my table, written just after the French Revolution, wherein the writer brought all the times to terminate in this present year. His starting points look reasonable. A few days will prove it true or false.

We are evidently nearing the closing up of all things. I am glad that men are searching into these things; but I am afraid the common class will be thrown into confusion by the course pursued by the different writers upon the subject,—one affirming, the other overthrowing what the other states as facts; each giving apparently good authority for their statements. When the common reader reads these diverse statements, what can he do? He has no library to see for himself. If he knows the writers, the mind will be made up by the opinion previously formed of the ability and character of the different advocates. There are some that will take the statements of others as positive as the promise made to Abraham, and denounce others as backsliders, and slow to believe what God hath spoken, and turn them over with the company of foolish virgins, etc.; thus a division be made in the church, and perhaps a talk of starting another paper. This has been; it may be so again. God forbid. Let past experience teach us to put full confidence in God, but follow men no further than they are led by the letter and Spirit of Jesus. No man's salvation depends on knowing more than God has revealed.

Yet the Savior has given a rule by which the humble christian can know when He is near even at the door; and one evidence that we are in a state of salvation is, that we desire and endeavor to find out the signs and evidences of his coming. Therefore, let us all put ourselves in a position to get all the light we can, and not be led away with error, or fanaticism, or get a censorious spirit. God has his own work in hand, and he will be exalted in the earth.

Would it not be well to have a meeting, or conference, where those who are studying the prophetic times may get together, and talk over their different views, and see if they cannot sift the chaff from the wheat, so they can give the trumpet a certain sound, that the people can prepare themselves for the battle? The day of the Lord is upon us. Let us take heed to our ways, and the sure word of prophecy, lest we be found unprepared when the Lord comes. "Be still and know" that the Lord is God. MY NEW YEAR'S WISH FOR 1865.

"Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow."—ISA. 1: 18.

As the earth is now mantled with the pure and white snow, even so may my whole being be made pure and white in the blood that "cleanseth us from all sin"; and "not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing," may this purification be "when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and HE SHALL SEND JESUS CHRIST . . . whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—Acts 3: 19, 20.

O the blessedness there is in the thought of being made pure beyond the power of contamination in thought, word, or deed. The very hope of it fills my soul with felicity. What is a religion worth that does not purify from sin? It is this purity, this cleansing of the conscience, that I love. It is this cleansing power from all sin that exalts the "Lamb of God,"—this taking away the sin of the world; this sense of guilt removed; this oneness with Christ by the renewing of the Holy Ghost; this being made "partakers of the divine nature"; this becoming "sons of God"; made "like him," purified "even as he is pure";—this is what I want for the coming year; yea, for my coming life,—to be made pure and "white," even as "snow"; to be stereotyped even in countenance as an heir of God, a joint heir with Jesus Christ; that every earthly jar may not throw me out of place, but that I may be calm in countenance, as well as fixed in purpose, to serve God during the whole year, if spared. "My grace is is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness," comes sweetly to my encouragement. "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me" to correct all that can be corrected, and to give me patience to bear with the remainder as "a thorn in the flesh."

We have asked great things, as a family, through the "power of Christ," and the unction from the Holy Spirit, on this the last morning of the old year; and we are expecting great things, not only for ourselves individually, and as a family, but also for the "church of God" for the coming year. We cried to God that the mists might be dispelled that separate God's elect, "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ; that we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men, . . . but speaking the truth in love, may we grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ; from whom the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."—Eph. 4: 13–16.

Eighteen-sixty-five may be the first year of the trio that is to bring our Lord!!

Jan. 1st, 1865. A last and long farewell to 1864. Glad are we to number it in the past. Better is the end of a year now to us, than its beginning. A hearty welcome to 1865. O, my brethren and sisters, close in, and fill up the broken ranks. Let us feel each other's sympathies and support. The enemy is doing a terrible work among us; close in, and hold up the colors, beat back the powers of darkness, that are fast closing in around us. We are nearing our last great conflict. Close in. Esteem each other more precious than gold; yea, even more than gold; yea, even more than the golden wedge of Ophir.

LIVE BETTER THIS YEAR.

Dear reader, let us live better this year than ever before. We are drawing near the end of our pilgrimage,—near the hour when we may expect to see the Son of man coming to raise the dead and set up his everlasting kingdom. How overwhelming the thought! So near the time when we shall behold the one who was crucified for us, that we might have everlasting life. The evidence is continually thickening to prove that earth's night of sorrow will soon end, and the weary pilgrims will be gathered home to rest with all the holy ones. Shall we not, in view of these things, live nearer to the Lord than ever? It is time for the bride to be getting ready for "the marriage of the Lamb." We have no time to lose. Let us separate ourselves from the spirit and manners of the world; remembering that "the friendship of the world is enmity with God"; and that "whosoever . . . will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God." Let our motto be,—"All for Jesus." If we act on this principle, ours will be "a happy new year." Shall it be so? Let us not halt "between two opinions," but decide at once to be real christians.

WESTBORO.

Our new year's meeting in Westboro, Mass. was excellent. The Spirit of the Lord was with us in power, causing a very deep, heart-searching work among those who are preparing to meet the Savior at his coming. As the result, great peace and joy filled the minds of those who ventured all upon Jesus. It was a delightful season of refreshing in heavenly things. Many saw that there was no way to enjoy religion, and have a clear witness of their acceptance with the Lord, only to consecrate all to him for ever; which they resolved to do, and found a most hearty welcome into the Savior's embrace. After doing this, they had a feast indeed.

Some requested prayers, and resolved to be among the redeemed. Things looked very encouraging. In the evening about forty remembered Jesus at the communion. Many could say, it was good to be there. Our new year began with much profit and pleasure. Praise the Lord.

"BANK OF THE LORD'S POOR."

It is truly heart-cheering to see the noble efforts that are being made for "the Lord's poor" children, that they may have the continued pleasure of reading "our paper." We presume there is no class that prizes the paper more highly than the poor saints who are unable to pay for it. We cannot bear the thought of having one of them cut off from our list; and we trust we shall not be obliged to do so; certainly we shall not, if our Brn. and Srs. continue, as they have done, to take stock in the "bank."

Who else will take shares? It is a profitable and safe investment. "He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord." Worldly men like to lend their money to the rich because they feel sure of having it back again; yet these rich men often become poor, and the lender loses his money; not so with the Lord; he is able to repay all we lend to him. He does not need the money for himself, but his poor children need it; hence, if we give it to them, he considers it as lent to him; and be assured he will not forget our kind deeds to the needy. We hope all who are able, will take stock in the "bank of the Lord's poor."

A DONATION.

We acknowledge with pleasure the receipt of $50.00 from Bro. JASON KENDALL, of South Woodstock, Vt., as a donation to the Society to aid in publishing and disseminating the good news of the coming kingdom, and other gospel truths. It is appropriated equally to the Tract and Poor Fund. God bless the liberal giver, and raise him again from his bed of sickness to health, and strength, and years of usefulness.

CORRECTION.—The letter published in the Crisis of Dec. 27th, supposed to be from Bro. E. Smith, was from Sr. Anna E. Smith, missionary to the colored people, in New York. Her address is 128 East 27th street, New York City.

DR. ZECH'S ECLIPSE, B. C. 477.

It will be recollected that in the Crisis of Dec. 13, we requested Bro. Thurman to apply his tables and see if they made an eclipse in B. C. 477, in harmony with the one presented by Dr. Zech. As shown by Bro. C. F. Hudson, Dr. Zech's and Thurman's tables corresponded in nine eclipses, but the tenth, taken by Dr. Zech, was not used by Bro. Thurman in his chronology; hence we thought this would be a fine chance to test his tables still further; for in case they made the tenth eclipse in harmony with Dr. Zech's tables, it would prove they used the same; therefore Dr. Zech's must show the same errors in Ptolemy's canon as are indicated by Bro. Thurman's, which makes Bro. T's position doubly strong. It will be recollected that Dr. Zech dated all his eclipses, B. C., one year later than Bro. Thurman.

Bro. Thurman has calculated the eclipse in question, and writes as follows:—

In regard to the difference between Dr. Zech's method of computing time, and my own, it is simply this: he has used years complete, while I, in order that all might understand, have used years current, as used by all astronomers and writers on chronology that wish other people to know what they mean. For example: By turning to Ezra 1: 1, it will be seen that the first of Cyrus, according to the chronology given in the margin of all our Bibles, was B. C. 536. But Dr. Zech would call that year 535. Hence, without some explanation, we would all conclude that he had reduced the time by one year.

It will now be apparent to all, that what Dr. Zech calls B. C. 477, we call B. C. 478.

In answer to Bro. Grant's query, we may here mention that Dr. Z. has made a mistake of only one day: for by calculation I learn that there was an eclipse of ten digits at Sardis, Feb. 17, B. C. 478. If C. F. H. should say that he has no confidence in my tables, I will remark that Ferguson's tables eclipse but 9 2–3 digits. But on p. 42 of "The Sealed Book Opened," we have mentioned that nothing short of a total eclipse can answer to the description of Herodotus. C. F. H. attempts to waive this objection by making it appear that I followed Beloe, where he says, "the darkest night succeeded;" and then informs us that "Herodotus used no such adjective." But if Bro. Grant and others will turn to p. 42, and to year B. C. 457, of the "Sealed Book Opened," it will be seen that my whole argument in favor of a total eclipse was drawn from Mr. Cary's translation, which C. F. H. says "is literal and accurate." While I only gave Mr. Beloe's translation a passing notice, without either note or comment. . . .

We will give Mr. Cary's translation, putting in small capitals that which C. F. H. omitted. It reads thus:

"But as it (Xerxes' army) was on the point of setting out, the sun QUITTING HIS SEAT IN THE HEAVENS DISAPPEARED, THOUGH THERE WERE NO CLOUDS AND THE AIR WAS PERFECTLY SERENE, and night ensued in the place of day." Book vii, Sec. 37. . . .

Every man can at once see that nothing short of a total eclipse can answer to the description given by Herodotus. . . .

Let us consider C. F. H.'s reason for believing that the eclipse of Feb. 17, B. C. 478, or, as he would call it, 477, was the one alluded to by Herodotus. He says, "The eclipse offered by Dr. Zech, as the true one, appeared at the right place and season." He quotes from Herodotus these words: "The army having wintered at Sardis, and being fully prepared, set out at the beginning of the spring." Now it will be borne in mind that if these words, as C. F. H. remarks, "leave no question" as to "the season in which the eclipse was seen," then his own method of reasoning has proven that the eclipse of B. C. 478 is not the one alluded to by Herodotus, for that occurred Feb. 17, O. S., which was Feb. 12, according to our time. But spring did not commence till the sun entered Aries—March 20 or 21, which is one month and eight or nine days after the eclipse of B. C. 478.

As Sardis is in latitude 38 1–2 deg. north, we can hardly suppose that Xerxes left Sardis before the first of April. Indeed the coldest and most disagreeable part of the winter in that climate is about the first of February. About this time too are the worst roads. Hence one of the mose unfavorable times of the year for an army to travel is in this month, which alone will show that the eclipse of B. C. 478 is not the one alluded to by Herodotus.

If C. F. H. can admit that the eclipse occurred while the army was lying in winter quarters, the only objection that can be raised against the eclipse of Dec. 16, B. C. 457, is removed; for that was total at Sardis. But the eclipse of B. C. 478 (or 477 according to Dr. Z.) was total neither at Sardis, or any other place on earth.

But if even on the very day of the opening of spring, this eclipse had been total at Sardis, we could not yet admit it to be the one alluded to by Herodotus, without, at least, four times contradicting his express words; for he three times mentions that the Greeks were celebrating the Olympic games when Xerxes invaded Greece, and that there was another eclipse of the sun at Athens in the spring of the second year of the war. But B. C. 478 was the third year of those games, and there was no eclipse of the sun at Athens in B. C. 477, or 476, as C. F. H. would call it. This then proves to absolute certainty that this was not the time when Xerxes invaded Greece.

C. F. H., in his criticism on my reason for supposing that the eclipse occurred when Xerxes "was on the point of setting out" from Celænæ, says that the "error of Beloe's translation excuses the opinion of Mr. T. that Pythius lived at Celænæ."

Rollin remarks that this "Pythius a Lydian, had his residence in this city," that is, in "Celænæ, a city of Phrygia."

If, as C. F. H. conjectures, Pythius lived much nearer Sardis than Celænæ, why did he go about 100 miles to the latter place to entertain the army of Xerxes? Why did he not wait till the army came to, or at least, nearer his own residence? Herodotus says nothing about Pythius going to meet Xerxes. His express words are that he "being in waiting, entertained the whole army of the king, and Xerxes himself." We do not go from home to "entertain" people; this is done at home. The only reason that C. F. H. gives for supposing that Pythius lived "much nearer to Sardis than Celænæ," is that he is three times called "the Lydian." We have in this country a people that have 300 times been called the French; but will C. F. H. be willing to admit that this proves that they live in France?

Though Rollin says nothing about the eclipse of the sun, he understanding that the things were done at Celænæ, here brings in that portion of the history relating to the petition of Pythius, and the unfortunate fate of his eldest son, which happened after the eclipse occurred. So I am found in good company in supposing that the eclipse passed over Xerxes' army at Celænæ. And when we call to mind that Herodotus gathered his information from the many clashing reports that were afloat, we can easily account for a mistake on the part of the historian. We will give a case in point as an example: Mr. Webb informed me that on a clear night the moon was shining so bright he concluded to start on a journey. But [illegible]ing into the house to get his supper, when he came out, to his great surprise, the moon had disappeared, and it was quite dark.

Now I well remember that when this eclipse of the moon occurred, he was just on the point of starting on a journey, but the place where he was, or the season of the year, I am unable to call to mind. And so with Herodotus, or those who gave him his information; it was remembered that an eclipse of the sun occurred when Xerxes army was just "on the point of starting" out of camp; but whether in the spring or fall, Celænæ or Sardis, they may have forgotten. And the eclipse of B. C. 457 began to be visible ten or fifteen minutes after eight in the morning; the very hour at which we would suppose that the army would commence its march, thus proving that this eclipse is the one mentioned by Herodotus. But the eclipse which C. F. H. has selected, in what he calls B. C. 477, occurred after two o'clock in the afternoon,—the time at which an army would more likely be camping for the night, than setting out for a day's march.

Having noticed how easily Herodotus might have been mistaken as to the time the eclipse occurred, let us call to mind how impossible it is that there can be any mistake as to the year of the Olympic games. Had Herodotus merely mentioned that the time Xerxes invaded Greece was in the fourth year of the games, we might enquire for his authority, or ask if he might not have been mistaken in this; but when without a word as to the year he only informs us as to that in which the Greeks were employed, that is, "they were celebrating the Olympic games," we would either brand him with a wilful falsehood, or admit that Xerxes invaded Greece in the fourth year of those games. But since Herodotus "gave a particular reading of his work to the city of Athens,"—to those Greeks who knew the truth of the matter, we discover that it was not in his power to give us an untruth as to the matter. This settles the point at issue, proving as clearly as we can prove anything in history, that Xerxes invaded Greece in the fourth year of the Olympic games. And having examined every fourth year of every Olympiad, from B. C. 754 to 431, we have proved, we may say, to absolute certainty, that Xerxes invaded Greece B. C. 456; for there is no other date at which the two eclipses recorded by Herodotus can be found. Therefore our Heavenly Father's children may rejoice to know that our Bible chronology is indeed placed upon a foundation which cannot be shaken by the assaults of man.

But since C. F. H., following Dr. Zech, has thus abandoned Ptolemy's canon, we would like to see how he will arrange his new chronology. We shall not be surprised if his system is somewhat confused, for in an article in the Crisis of Dec. 13, forsaking Dr. Z. to follow Thucydides, he appears to place the time Xerxes invaded Greece B. C. 483 instead of 477, as in his former article.

WILLIAM C. THURMAN.

WHAT OTHERS THINK OF US.

We clipped the following from a Boston paper. We shall let the reader make his own comments:—

"THE SECOND ADVENT IMPOSITION.—Mr. Editor:—The greatest imposition in the religious line that I know of, is the Second Advent humbug, as carried on by one Elder Miles Grant, in preaching, and in his paper called 'The World's Crisis.' He is a coadjutor of Elder Himes in the same notable business, but I understand that Himes, getting preached out or 'played out' in this city, had to pull up stakes and go West to find hearers. Since he left, Grant carries on the concern. He is not a fool, but he certainly acts like one, for he keeps saying, 'time is short,' and Jesus is expected quickly. This has been his tune for a number of years, and I call it humbug—not an intention, perhaps, to get a living out of the credulity of simple-minded people, but so much resembling it as to be hard to tell the difference. When I look at Grant, and think what he has been for years, I am not sorry that I am no longer a christian—at least not one of his crazy stamp. I see by his paper that he is anxious to sell his books, for he says he is 'satisfied that time is short'! but I shrewdly suspect it is the Elder that is 'short,' and he takes this ingenious method to replenish his waning funds. He likewise says, that the failure of the harvest in Hungary is one of the 'signs' which in 'the last days' were to precede the second coming of 'our Savior'! Sage Elder! I wonder if the squirrels that run about the walks on the Boston Common are not also a 'sign' of the 'second coming?' Say, Mr. Editor, do you think that the Elder is compos mentis!" C.

["It is a hard question to answer, for while almost every man is sane on some things, he is a wild lunatic on others. Hence, though the Elder may not be, and probably is not, crazy universally, yet on the question of the Second Advent his head is turned, and his brains are in a fog. The New Testament makes Jesus plainly say, that his coming to judgment was to take place in that existing generation, or eighteen hundred years ago, and consequently to maintain that it is to happen now or any time in the future is a clear case of NON compos mentis.—ED.]"

TWO RESURRECTIONS.

"BRO. GRANT:—Will you please inform me what is the meaning of Rev. 20th chap., concerning the two resurrections, and the destiny of the wicked?" E. A. TUTTLE.

We understand the Scriptures to teach plainly in this chapter, and other portions of the Bible, that the righteous will be raised at the coming of Christ, "but the rest of the dead" will not live "again until" a "thousand years" afterwards. Then the wicked dead will be raised, judged, and executed; or, as expressed in the Scriptures, die "the second death," from which they are never raised, hence their punishment will be eternal.

THE BOSTON ALMANAC for 1865 contains the usual amount of valuable information, with a complete business directory, map of the city, blank pages for memoranda, etc., etc., and is an excellent little guide to strangers visiting the city, and a very convenient pocket companion to the citizen.

THE LADY'S ALMANAC is a neat little book for the ladies, embracing in one—almanac, memorandum book, and a choice and appropriate selection of literary gems, in prose and verse, with a number of valuable receipts. A very acceptable gift to a sister or friend.

Price of each by mail, post-paid, 50 cents. George Coolidge, 3 Milk St., Boston, publisher.

THE CHRISTIAN LYRE.—Another edition is now in press, and will be out in a few days. The price hereafter will be as follows: Plain, 80 cents; by mail, 85 cents; one-fourth off per dozen. Gilt, $1.25; by mail, $1.30.

BRO. G. W. RICE, Wardeva, Fayette Co., Iowa, invites preaching brethren to come and preach in his neighborhood. He lives two miles west of Wardeva, and nine miles south-east of West Union.

FROM A TRACT DISTRIBUTOR.

BRO. GRANT:—With a thankful heart, I acknowledge the reception of two packages of tracts; and now I wish to tell you how they are received by the people here. I called at the office, as usual, for my mail. When I had received it, one gentleman to whom I had given a tract, came along to see what I had got. I asked him if he liked the one that I had given him previously? He said he did, and would like some more. I told him to help himself to such as he would like. He picked out four or five, and said that would do for that time. Another came to look at them. He was not satisfied, until he got one of a sort. The third came and did likewise. When he had made his selection, he saw that the second one had three more than he had. So he began to pick out from his, as some of my varieties were gone. He saw the one named "Three Worlds," and stood there and read it, and was very much pleased with it.

The fourth picked out six. The fifth was as greedy as the others, and wanted one of a sort. The fourth told him not to take so many, for he would not read them all, and he had better leave some for some one else. He looked up at him and answered him in this way:—"You see, if I don't tell you what is in every one of them; for twelve o'clock will find me reading them."

This man I had talked with, and found that he was not satisfied about the state of the dead. I told him my views, he thought they looked reasonable, and said that he wanted light on the subject. Then came our village school teacher and took several. I will not mention any more, for I think that this will show you that they were well received. They were mostly Baptist folks, and of the first families of the place. Some of the Methodists have taken some of them. I would like to give away tracts all my life time in this way. I told them to let some one else have them to read, when they had read them all they wanted to. They said they would do so.

Now, Brother, this looks encouraging. I do wish that some one, that is in the work, would come this way, and hold some meetings. The people here are Methodists and Baptists. I do think that some would embrace the truth, if they should hear it; but all they know about "Advent" doctrine is what they heard in '43, and as that was a failure, they made up their minds that the advent move must all be a failure. I have long felt bad because I could not do more for the cause of Christ. "But where there is a will, there is a way." I can distribute tracts, and will be glad to do so. If others give their money, I can give a little time, and help to scatter the little messengers of truth and love. Your sister, waiting for Jesus.

VOICES FROM THE POOR.

FROM "ONE DOLLAR A WEEK."

A Sister in Middlesex County writes:—"I have received your paper some three or four years. I like it much, and would gladly pay for it if I could; but I am not able to earn more than one dollar a week, which is small wages for the present prices of the necessaries of life. I am very grateful for your kindness in sending it to me so long, and do not feel that it is right for me to receive it so any longer." CAROLINE.

FROM A FREE-WILL BAPTIST MINISTER.

"I have had the Crisis for nearly two years free. I am poor, and do not feel able to pay for it. If you see fit to continue to send it as a present, I should be glad to have it." G.

Nova Scotia Free List.

It is proposed that the churches and brethren, in each town and county, do what they can to supply their own poor with the Crisis for the coming year. Will the brethren in the following places take the matter in hand, and see what they can do?

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

A sister who has sent us ten subscribers before, writes:—"For the $— enclosed please send the Crisis to S. P——, as a New Year's Gift. He has not been a subscriber, but at the expiration of the time, you will hear again from him or me."

We are sending out a number of such presents, for brethren who have money to do good with, and we are ready to send as many more as brethren may desire. It is not too late. Any time in the month will do. Have you a friend who would be glad to receive it? Send it to him. It will do him good, and you too.

From a Lover of Peace Principles.

Editor World's Crisis:—Dear Sir,—If your paper preaches the gospel of peace and of the coming kingdom near at hand, you may please mail me a No. for approval. I have taken the —— —— for more than twenty years, and have gathered much instruction from it; but it has seemed to me, for a year or so past, that it has been preaching the gospel of war, and a career of prosperity to our country. I don't believe it, and I have just written an order for its discontinuance to my address. Now I want an Advent paper, and propose to become a subscriber to the Crisis, but not if it advocates war, or a good time coming before the return of the rightful Sovereign.

A NEW EFFORT.

A WORD TO OUR VOLUNTEER AGENTS, AND TO ALL.

The World's Crisis, in the past two years, has nearly doubled its subscription list. From 3700, it has, in that time, run up to 7000. This has been mainly your work, and shows how much may be accomplished by special appeals and special efforts.

Why should it not be DOUBLED AGAIN in the NEXT two years? You can do it. And there is nothing to hinder. All it needs is EFFORT—CONTINUED effort, and the Lord's blessing. Let every one put his shoulder to the wheel, and it WILL be done. See what you have done in one year, and from that judge what you CAN do in the year to come. We called for 1000 new subscribers, and you gave us 2000. You can certainly do that again; and you can DOUBLE it, if you will TRY. Will you? There is every reason why you should. The times are ominous. The day of probation is drawing to a close. The Judge is at the door. He has a work for YOU to do, and it must be done quickly, or never. His command to you, and me, and all, is—"Let your light shine!" Let it shine, then, in every way possible; not only through the spoken word, but also through the written page.

Is the Crisis "light" to you? Are the special truths which it promulgates to the world—the coming of the Lord near at hand, and its kindred truths—what you believe and love? Is its special work—the preparation of a people to meet him with joy when he comes—your work? If so, every reader and every new subscriber you secure for the Crisis, is so much done for your Master in the work of "letting your light shine."

There are thousands who already, in full or in part, believe the doctrines we advocate, who take no periodical devoted to their promulgation. And there are many thousands more, who are interested in them, and more than half convinced, and only need more light. These are all waiting for you to call upon them, and talk with them. Will you do it? They will need but little persuasion to subscribe for your paper. Will you ask them? There are thousands more, many of them your acquaintances, friends, or kindred, who would be glad to read, but are too poor to pay. That spare dollar, or two, of yours, or that spare five, which you will not miss, will bless both them and you, and return to your pocket again with interest upon interest. Will you try it?

Come, brother, sister, minister, layman,—all, let us mark out a large work for us to do the year to come—for the Lord. Four thousand new subscribers! Is that too much? You can do it, if you WILL. How many will YOU get towards it, reader? The 2000 last year were the work of some five hundred friends of the Crisis,—volunteer agents. Let us have five thousand this year—zealous, energetic workers, and see how much shall be done when the year closes. Will YOU be ONE of the 5000? W. B. H.

NEWS BY LETTERS.

BRO. GRANT:—To cheer and encourage brethren who, for lack of strong faith, are too prone to repine and despond, and to relax in efforts to spread truth, because comparatively so little effects are seen, I will renew my former practice of giving in our paper some encouraging letters and "Macedonian calls."

The following is an extract of one lately received from Putnam Co., Ia.:—

"BRO. BLAIN:—Thanks be to God who has seen fit to preserve and keep some of his servants on earth, that, amidst the darkness of the nineteenth century his people, though few, may learn the pure truth of his written word. I received the Crisis you sent me, with which I am well pleased; and your book, 'Death not Life'; but the other two you speak of have not come. Such kindness shall not go unrewarded. Enclosed find $2.00, out of which take pay for the books, and cause the Crisis to be sent six months. You ask to what denomination I belong? I was a Baptist till the church adopted articles containing the doctrine of endless misery; to which I objected, and was badly persecuted, till I took a letter. I have lived alone four years; and strange as it may appear, I was not able to learn by all the popular books, papers and preachers, that there were churches in the United States holding the views I do, till I had the opportunity of reading your book, obtained of an old man, who holds forth the same views. He was a Baptist, but was rejected for his views. Besides him, I know of no one who holds the doctrine of destruction. Yet there is a manifest discontent with the old doctrine of future punishment.

This is a rich region, and has a reading people; and cannot some way be opened by which they can have truthful books to read? I am a poor man," etc.

I sent him eighty cents in assorted tracts. For fifteen years I have been supplying a multitude of such calls from my own means, till they are exhausted.

Another late letter from a minister and pastor in my own county, says:—

"In reply to your line of inquiry, I beg leave to say, that I have never publicly intimated any adhesion to the doctrine of annihilation, and, of course, Mr. —— was therefore mistaken in his statement. However, I am ready to read with attention on the subject, and am perusing with interest your pamphlet.

It is true the idea of eternal consciousness in misery is to me overwhelming, and sometimes almost insupportable; and I am not so inflexibly convinced of its scripturalness as not to desire all possible illumination on a theme of such stupendous importance. The truth incorruptible is the thing wanted; and if annihilation is taught by the Bible, and endless suffering an error of men, it is well worth knowing. I have repeatedly declared my faith in the near advent of Christ. I am truly yours."

Here again, I trust, a little donation of our works, and sending of our papers, will not be in vain.

I will add a specimen of calls, and the state of feeling in the great West:—

"DEAR BRO. BLAIN:—I hear you purpose coming west this season, and if you come within fifty miles of this place, please inform me in time to come and hear the words of life from a real dispenser of truth. I would come to Amboy, but cannot for lack of money; and for the same reason cannot find it in my heart to ever ask you to come to this place. I know of no one here, besides myself, who believes that immortality is only to be had 'by patient continuance in well doing'; and that at Christ's appearing. And furthermore, I never heard a sermon preached on these themes. I take the Crisis and Bible Examiner, otherwise I hear nothing on these topics except error. And oh, how I would like to hear some one talk on these and kindred subjects. There is a large field here, but poor worldly inducements for laborers. Pray for me, and if you come near, do let me know.

E. D. SMITH, Iowa City."

Buffalo. J. BLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

A WORD OR TWO.

Mr. Thurman regards his astronomical argument, especially his alleged refutation of Ptolemy's canon, as his strong-hold. I have purposely reserved my examination of this for two reasons: 1, I am not an astronomer, and therefore in no position to make a scientific examination of Mr. T.'s main argument. I could only form an opinion about it by some indirect method. Hence, 2, I have preferred to begin by examining the general accuracy of his facts and reasonings. For certain reasons, among which is the debate pending between Mr. T. and Mr. Stevenson, I defer other criticisms for the present. I hope to come at the astronomical argument in due time.

To some points which I have made Mr. T. replies in the Voice of the West. Those who read both sides can usually judge between us, from the articles themselves. But in the Voice of Dec. 27 Mr. T. cites Rollin as affirming that Pythius had his residence in Celænæ, whereas I insisted that he was three times called a Lydian, and stated that Beloe had mistaken the meaning of a certain Greek word, when he made him a resident of Celænæ. Not every reader has Rollin at hand, or could judge on this point if he had. I find that the passage in which this statement is made is a paraphrase of the same chapter of Herodotus in which Mr. Beloe makes his mistranslation, to which chapter Rollin refers at the end. To all appearance Rollin has made the same mistake with Beloe. Cary's translation, and the Lexicons, must answer them both.

The word in question, hypokathemai, is rendered in the older Latin translations by resideo. Thus Valla, Wesseling, and Jungermann. This word denotes remaining behind, resting, and also residing. The French translation of Larcher, the countryman of Rollin, gives demeurer, which means, first, to reside; then, to stay or remain. But the later translators and the best editors treat the word with more exactness. Schweighaeuser renders it expectans consederat, i. e., had tarried waiting for (Xerxes). He also gives the following note, found in Wesseling: "Pliny says, Pythius the Bithynian; but not well; for he was a Lydian domo, away from home, or, when at home." Stein notes the Greek word, adding, "to wait for the king." He refers to the same word in Herodotus viii. 40, where it can not mean to reside, but is well rendered by Cary, waiting to receive. Creuzer and Baehr paraphrase by "subsidens et exspectans," settling down and waiting, and refer to viii. 40. The word is not the usual term for residence, and is not often used. In the large edition of Stephanus's Thesaurus half a dozen instances of its use are given, and in the present passage it is paraphrased, "tarrying in the city, and there waiting for Xerxes, whom he was about to entertain."

I am interested in the pending debate, not as a partizan of either '66 or '68, nor as a timeist at all. But I think Mr. Stevenson's eighteen years of self-denying labor upon his chart and his chronological facts entitle him to a hearing, which is fairly offered by the questions respecting Mr. Thurman's book.

C. F. H.

P. S. I have just happened upon the following note, by the authors of the Ancient Universal History, Lond. 1747, cited by Jarvis, Discourses, p. 56. "It is an eyesore to see them [Pul and Tiglath Pileser] so disjoined as they are in Rollin, from whose judgment, as he is conversant in the labors and improvements of the later writer, we might have hoped better things; but as we have hitherto been cautious of passing any censure upon him, we shall for the future avoid the same, as he is a gentleman who does not so professedly write to instruct the mind as to the reality and consistence of facts, as to form it to virtue and a good life." That is, he is more strictly a moralist than an investigator.

For the World's Crisis.

A NOTE FROM MY DIARY.

By divine permission, we left "the city of many things," to visit and preach to the church in Portland, Me., the word of life, Dec. 18th; and, in connection with this arrangement, we were invited to stop at Biddeford and help push the battle there. So after a very pleasant ride over the Boston and Maine R. R., of which Mr. Wm. Merritt is the Supt., during which we employed ourself, for the most part of the time, in reading Mr. Hinton's history of baptism, published by the American Baptist Society; a very copious work on that subject, and from which very many valuable extracts might be taken, which would be of benefit to the Bible student;—we arrived at B., and after alighting from Naham's last-day chariots, we wended our way to the hall in which the meeting was held, and found Bro. W. H. Mitchell, of Kennebunk Port, declaring to them the word of truth, commencing a protracted effort. We remained, and preached to them the next evening, and also on our return from Portland the Monday evening following.

This church, though small, is an active, growing one. Several accessions have been made to their numbers of late, which encourages their hearts to endure. They are favored with the labors of Bro. Mitchell occasionally, who is a faithful minister of Christ.

Lord's day, Dec. 18th, we spent very pleasantly with the church in P., and found them prospering in the Lord. Their meetings are interesting, spiritual and heavenly. God is blessing them in bringing sinners from nature's darkness into the light of the gospel of his Son.

And indeed when a church will keep in view the great mission of the Master,—the salvation of sinners,—God will bless their efforts, and bring souls to the knowledge of the truth. The Brn. in P. have a mind to work in this direction, and we believe such is the mind of Christ. This church finds that there are matters of more importance than harping on abstract questions, and other matters that do not belong to christians. They wish it distinctly understood that they are not "hobbyists," as has been reported. Two young men resolved to serve the Lord while we were there, and we expect others have made up their minds to do so since.

The Lord help us all to be up, and at work.

Your Bro. in hope, A. W. SIBLEY.

East Boston.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J W. Taylor.

BRO. GRANT:—About seven weeks ago, Bro. Shipman and myself left home, in Pennsylvania, and started for this place, for the purpose of visiting the churches in this part of the country. In three weeks, Bro. Shipman preached twenty-eight sermons, and then was taken sick of fever, and has been unable to leave the house since. My health is very poor, but better than it was two or three months ago.

I have given several discourses, however, in this section of country. About a week ago, I was requested to speak on the immortality of the soul, in a house where we had had, already, a couple of very interesting meetings; and the notice was given out a day or two beforehand, that I was going to speak on that subject, to give a chance for the opposite side to have their defenders ready if they chose; but all the arguments they could produce was a padlock.

We found the little church at Dresserville rather scattered and pealed, but then, there are some of God's elect there. I don't wish to call names, but there are some as worthy members of the Lord's body in that place as this evil world affords. If any brother should be traveling through that way, he will find a pilgrim home at Bro. Dennis Miller's, as well as other places, which I have not time to mention here.

If Bro. Shipman is able to go, I think we shall start for home in a couple of weeks. We have, in nearly every place we have been, had a good interest manifested, and one or two have started for the kingdom.

O, may the time soon come when the saints of God shall be gathered home, to enjoy the pleasures of Eden restored, and bask in the smiles of God's pleasure forevermore. Your brother in Christ, J. W. TAYLOR.

Summerbell, N. Y.

From Bro. J. K. Bellows.

BRO. GRANT:—I am now at home, taking a little rest, after an absence of four months, trying to cheer the way-worn pilgrims on their journey. I visited a number of places, found some divisions through difficulties and want of an entire consecration to God. The saints were quickened, backsliders alarmed, and sinners brought to a sense of their condition, and resolved to be on the Lord's side. May the Lord bless them, and bring them to the kingdom.

There is an ear to hear on the events of prophecy, as they are being fulfilled in the increasing wars and wickedness on the earth.

At Vernon, Vt., I found a good company anxious to hear on these subjects. I preached a number of times on the signs, and left a deep interest and a determination to be more for God. I visited several other places in Vermont, and found a deep interest in the great truths of the coming kingdom. At North Bennington, I found a few who had just embraced the present truth, and are striving for the coming kingdom. One of their number has fallen in the field, at her post. I visited her, and found her resigned to the will of God, with a hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

At Hoosick, N. Y., I met a cold reception, through false reports, and I felt very bad, and wished myself at home; but prejudice gave way to truth, and the good Lord gave me favor in the sight of the people. We had a good time. The prophetic signs took deep hold on the church and people, and I left, feeling determined to press the battle to the gate of the enemy.

I stopped at Albany over Sunday, had a good time, and arrived home Dec. 26th and found all well. Praise the Lord.

And now, brethren, live near the Lord, practice the truths of his word; watch and pray that you enter not into temptation. And may the God of all grace keep you, and bring us to his kingdom. Yours in hope, J. K. BELLOWS.

364 Broome St., N. Y.

From Bro. C. F. Sweet.

BRO. GRANT:—For the last month, I have been filling my appointments (as published in the Crisis) in Jefferson and Lewis Co's., N. Y. The weather has been very changeable, rough and severe, as much so, I think, as ever I experienced in a single month before. As a matter of course, my audiences were reduced; but notwithstanding all the embarrassments we had to encounter, I think good was done in the name of the Lord. Judging from the liberal manner that our friends in the counties above named supplied my temporal wants, I concluded that theirs was not a love manifested by fair words and pleasant speeches, but "IN DEED and IN TRUTH." At South Butler and Scipio, our friends have done nobly; and I take this means of tendering them my sincere thanks, that they have thus remembered the wants of my dependent family, while buffeting the storms of life, deprived of the associations of a husband and father. May God reward them according to their deeds of benevolence and christian affection. C. F. SWEET.

From Sr. S. Bradbury.

BRO. GRANT:—It was said by our Savior, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." If we can not go one way, we can another. Our Savior remembers the widow's mite. If we give to Christ, it will be accepted, as it was with the widow. So I will enclose —— for tracts, to be sent to some destitute region, where the gospel is not preached.

I have felt very much interested in the advent doctrine since I attended the camp meeting at Alton Bay. It seemed that Jesus was there in their midst. Where Jesus is, there I love to be. Those meetings I have remembered with interest; and not being satisfied with them, I have taken your paper, which has caused me to feel more interested. I have lent them to others. They go to four different families besides my own, and are read with interest.

From Bro. J. C. Rice.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord is with us, approbating our joy in the evidence of his speedy return personally. I bless the Lord for light through Bro. Thurman, whether he is entirely right or not; for truly his work contains a fund of information, and it is well that we give heed to the sure word of prophecy, and believe that God can raise a person, to bring out things both new and old; and open the mysterious seals that have so long defied the power of mortal agencies; and make the unholy sceptic a devoted learner of his truths, a promulgator of what to him was detestable, and an humble follower of our Master; all, all for his own honor and glory. Br. Hastings very truly remarked, if these calculations are not perfect, we have other reasons for believing that the Lord is near, and it is high time to make a more honest preparation for him, by complying with his requirements. Your Bro. in Christ, devotedly, Hillsbury, N. S. JOS. C. RICE.

BRO. EDSON W. OSBORN, North Bennington, Vt., writes:—"The church is prospering here. There is quite a waking up, and sinners are being converted. Two more started for the kingdom last night, and the prospects are for more still. Praise the good Lord."

Obituaries.

B. F. BLAISDELL.

Died in East Rochester, N. H., Nov. 16th, 1864, Benjamin Frank Blaisdell, son of Joseph and Eliza Blaisdell, aged nineteen years.

One year ago, Frank sought and found the Lord, as we humbly trust, and have every reason to believe; not only by his testimony in meeting, in proclaiming the love of God, and exhorting his young associates to seek Jesus for their friend; but by his daily walk and conversation. Often, when he would go to spend an evening with his friends, he would converse with them of Jesus, and pray with them. His whole object seemed to be to do the Lord's will.

He went one evening to attend a meeting in the neighborhood, but was disappointed in finding none, and was (undesignedly on his part) induced to spend the evening in social amusement, which caused the warm love for Jesus to wane, and the light that was in him to grow dark. Thus he lived a few weeks, hardly knowing at what he stumbled. In his darkness, he was led to enlist in the 19th Mass. Reg., on the first of April. But after realizing what he had done in wandering from his first love, and disobeying his parents, he repented before the Lord, and cried to God for mercy and forgiveness, which he believed was granted for Jesus' sake; and from that time he prayed daily, not only for his comrades that went with him, but that God would keep him in his love and deliver him.

On the 21st day of May, he was wounded by a ball passing under the shoulder, and coming out through his neck. Thus he lay in that condition without assistance, twenty-four hours. While in that situation, he prayed, and got the evidence that he should return alive to see his friends. On the 27th of June, his father brought him home to die. He lingered five months. His suffering was extreme; but his patience was remarkable. He was quite anxious to live to serve the Lord. A. B. S.

SARAH BLANCHARD.

Died in Adams, Mass., Dec. 19th, 1864, of typhoid fever, Sister Sarah Blanchard, daughter of Eld. Isaac and Lydia Blanchard, aged eighteen years and six months.

Sarah experienced religion when very young, was baptized in 1860, and gave good evidence of her acceptance with Christ. She was the darling of the family, always casting sunshine at home and abroad; of a lovely and even disposition. It was a severe blow to the family, but they bear the stroke like christians. They believe Sarah will awake soon. We endeavored to comfort them from Rev. 1: 18. GEO. A. OTIS.

WILLIAM BARTLETT.

Died at Northwood Narrows, N. H., Nov. 24th, of consumption, William Bartlett, aged seventy-eight years and six months.

Our aged Bro. professed religion in the year 1831, and united with the Congregational church in Northwood; but when he heard the sound of the coming of Christ, in '43, he loved and embraced the doctrine; and it ever seemed a theme upon which he loved to dwell. He calmly fell asleep in Jesus in hope of eternal life at the sounding of the trump of God. The writer endeavored to speak words of comfort to the mourning friends, on the funeral occasion, founded on 2. Tim. 4: 6, 7, 8. S. S. MOONEY.

PHILIP BARTLETT.

Died in Northwood, N. H., July 28th, 1864, Philip Partlett, aged eighty-six years, eight months.

This aged pilgrim professed religion more than fifty years since, and United with the Baptist church in Northwood. He loved the Advent doctrine and its kindred truths, and died in the triumps of faith believing he should live again at the resurrection of the just. S. S. MOONEY.

D. P. HILL.

Died in Auburn, N. Y., Dec. 27, 1864, of consumption, David P. Hill, aged thirty years, five months and twenty-two days.

The subject of this notice died in hopes of a part in the first resurrection. The strong arm of the Lord supported him through heart-rending trials, and a long-continued sickness. He leaves a wife and child to mourn him here, but we hope to meet an unbroken family in the kingdom of God. ABBY A. HILL.

C. A. WALDEN.

Died in Oakland, Franklin County, Iowa, Nov. 21st, 1864, Clarence Augustine, second son of Oscar M. and Sarah A. Walden.

We mourn, but not as those without hope.

"But why in anguish weep?
Hope beams upon my view,—
'Tis but a winter's sleep;
My flowers shall spring anew,
Each darling flower in earth that sleeps,
O'er which fond memory hangs and weeps."

SARAH A. WALDEN.

GEO. POLAND.

Killed at Cold Harbor, Va., June 3d, 1864, George, oldest son of Moses and Huldah Poland, aged twenty-five years.

This is a great affliction to the family. May God's grace be richly manifest to sustain them. Sermon by the writer. E. M. HAGGET.

G. T. MAHAN.

Died in Hartford, May 11th, 1864, George T. and Nancy J. Mahan, aged three years.

O hail the glad morning, when Jesus shall reign,
No more of our loved ones by death will be slain;
He'll wake all his saints who sleep in the tomb,
And make them immortal, forever to bloom.

E. M. HAGGETT.

EDWARD NELSON.

Died in Washington, D. C., Oct. 7th, 1864, Edward Nelson, of Great Falls, N. H., aged thirty-seven years.

He died happy, saying, "all is well." E. N.

DECREASE OF THE INDIANS.—The Indians dwelling within the United States are fast disappearing from among men. In 1850 there were 400,000; in 1855, 350,000, and the census of 1860 shows only 295,400. This is a decrease of 50,000 every five years. The proportion of decrease is steadily augmented as the path of empire takes its way westward. How many years will elapse, at this rate, before the Indian savage will exist only in the history of Schoolcraft, the prose fiction of Cooper, and the poetry of Longfellow? The civilized Indian flourishes better than the wild one, for here in the State of New York (the last census says) we have 3785 aborigines, whereas in Colorado only 6000 were left in 1860.

The principal Indian populations are distributed as follows: West of Arkansas, 65,680; New Mexico territory, 55,100; Dakotah territory, 39,664; Washington territory, 31,000; Utah territory, 20,000; Minnesota, 17,900; California, 13,540; Kansas, 8189; Michigan, 7777; Nevada territory, 7550; Oregon, 7000.

ITALY.

The King has issued a decree, ordering, as a measure of public utility, the occupation of the convents, seminaries, and other establishments in Florence necessary for the service of the State.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Jan. 4. The Richmond Sentinel contains a very important editorial, believed to be from the pen of Jeff. Davis. Secretary Seward is reported to have sent it to all the foreign ministers, as showing the complete exhaustion of the rebellion, and consequently the rebels are no longer entitled to consideration as belligerents.

It says: "Our late reverses have done much toward preparing our people for extreme sacrifices if subjugated. The question is simply whether we shall give for our own use, or whether the Yankees shall take for theirs? It would be more glorious to devote our means to success than lose them as spoils to the enemy. Our situation, stripped of our property, but masters of our government, would be infinitely better than if despoiled by the enemy and wearing his bonds.

Subjugation is a horror that embraces all other horrors. Troublesome times are upon us. Great exigencies surround us. We need all our strength and wisdom. Let there be a conference of our wise men. Let there be a calm investigation of our wants. Then let all obstacles to the employment of all our resources be removed.

So long as we have a man or a dollar let the call for them be honored. It would be adding disgrace to our misery if we were overcome without exhausting every resource of defense. If the Government determines that it needs our lands, houses, negroes, horses, money, or ourselves, it must have them.

If Providence condemns us to a master, let it not be a Yankee. Of all people on earth we have most reason to loath and dread them. Any terms with any other would be preferable to subjugation by them. If statesmanship cannot save us it can palliate our misery by saving us from the Yankee. Our people would infinitely prefer a favorable alliance with European nations."

The Richmond Enquirer after commenting upon the above, says "If it be necessary to convince the world that we are fighting for self-government of the whites that we should liberate the negroes, and if that liberation should secure our recognition and the guaranty of England and France to our independence, we believe the people of these States would not hesitate to make the sacrifice. The consequences of Emancipation would fall upon the negro, The act would be one of necessity not of choice, taken against our judgment and convictions, but to save us from the horrors of a prolonged war, and the disgrace, ruin and destruction involved in the success of our enemy."

The Richmond Sentinel closes thus: "If France and England will enter into a treaty with these Confederate States, recognizing our nationality upon the abolition of slavery in all the States rather than continue the war, we should be prepared to urge the measure upon our readers. We believe such a proposition would be favorably received and acted upon by those nations, and it ought to be made to them."

The Richmond Examiner of the 2d, in reply to the Sentinel, opposes an appeal to the protection of France and England in the present weakness of the South, and intimates that the article in the Sentinel, recommending such policy, emanated from Jefferson Davis and from a panicky mind. It says if alternatives were presented to them of being subjects of these foreign powers, or of returning to the United States, they would choose the former.

The Savannah Republican of the 29th contains the proceedings of a public meeting called by the Mayor and a large number of influential citizens to take into consideration matters relating to the present and future welfare of the city. Resolutions were adopted:

First. That we accept the position of the surrender of the city, and in the language of the President of the United States seek to have peace by laying down our arms and submitting to the national authority under the constitution, leaving all questions, which remain, to be adjusted by the peaceful means of legislation, conference and votes.

Second. That laying aside all differences and burying bygones, we will use our best endeavors to bring back the prosperity and commerce we once enjoyed.

Third. We do not put ourselves in the position of a conquered city, asking terms of a conquerer, but claim the immunities and privileges contained in the proclamation and message of the President of the United States, and all legislation in Congress in reference to a people situated as we are.

Fourth. That we ask the Governor to call a convention of the people, to say whether they wish the war continued.

Fifth. That it is the unanimous desire of all present that Gen. Geary be continued as military commander of the post, and that for his urbanity and kindness he is entitled to our thanks.

New York, Jan. 7. The Herald's Shenandoah's correspondence says there are rumors circulating here (which are not proper for publication) that the rebels are engaged in some very mysterious movements.

The Times' special Washington dispatch says it is rumored that Gen. Sherman has communicated to the President that the Georgia State authorities have applied to come back into the Union, and that Secretary Stanton's visit to Savannah is doubtless in connection with this subject.

The World's Washington dispatch says it is rumored that Lee has been placed in command of all the rebel armies, and that he immediately determined to put Beauregard in command of the defenses of Richmond, intending himself to proceed to South Carolina to concentrate the rebel forces in that quarter for the purpose of confronting Sherman in his proposed movement Northward. Sherman's movements are considered by Lee as more important than any Grant can possibly make upon Richmond in four months.

THE PASSPORT SYSTEM.—The people of Detroit complain badly of the inconvenience caused by the passport system established on the Canadian border, and the Mayor has requested the Board of Trade to co-operate in measures for securing its abrogation. A deputation of citizens has been sent to Canada to request the authorities to adopt measures to restore cordiality, security and unobstructed intercourse along the border.

It is said to cost six dollars to procure passports, and that there are many poor people—including women and children—at Suspension Bridge and Fort Erie who can neither pay the sum demanded for passports, nor can they return to the places from whence they came. The American Consul on the Canadian side is reported as demanding six dollars in gold for each passport, thus discarding greenbacks. He exacted his fees of the men who patrol Suspension Bridge and take care of that structure, and of the railroad men. Even a newsboy—who has sold newspapers at both ends of the bridge—was caught in Canada, and made to pay six dollars in gold.—Boston Journal.

HOW TO SEND LETTERS TO THE SOUTH.—Newspaper conductors are frequently troubled with inquiries as to how correspondence with states in rebellion can be conducted by flag of truce. Now, although these regulations have been frequently published, those interested either do not see them or forget them, and newspaper people having many things of much more importance to keep in remembrance, forget them also. Hence, for the information of all concerned, we publish the following rules promulgated by Major General Butler, expressing the hope that every one that is, or expects to be interested in the matter, will preserve them for reference so as to relieve the newspapers from the too frequent inquiries upon this subject:

1. No letter must exceed one page of a letter sheet, and must relate purely to domestic matters.
2. All letters (including those to prisoners,) must be sent with five cents postage inclosed, if to go to Richmond, and ten cents if beyond.
3. Every letter must be signed with the writer's name in full, and post office address.
4. All letters must be inclosed to the Commanding General of the Department of Virginia and North Carolina, Fortress Monroe, indorsed (via flag of truce.)
5. No money will be forwarded, except to prisoners of war.
6. All letters sent to Fortress Monroe without a strict compliance with these rules will be transmitted to the dead letter office.—Ex.

WAR STATISTICS.—From October 17th till December 15th, our armies captured 204 rebel cannon and 28,800 prisoners. In addition to these prisoners the rebels have lost fully eight thousand men in killed alone, including some twenty generals. Our troops have also destroyed 285 miles of railroad in rebel territory, cotton to the value of $40,000,000, nearly $2,000,000 of other supplies, and these, it is estimated, do not represent more than a fifth of the rebel loss. In the article of shipping, our captures have been of immense value during the time above specified.—Boston Journal.

Slavery to be given up to secure European Aid.

The following is extracted from a leading article in the Richmond Enquirer of the 15th inst:—

"Whenever we are reduced so low that we cannot maintain the contest, then we can secure liberty and nationality by the sacrifice of slavery. But until we are prepared to make this sacrifice, it is no use to look to Europe for help either by recognition or intervention. All the military authorities, those who command the armies and those entrusted with the administration of the conscript bureau, are prepared to say that the population of the country will maintain a force in the field that shall bear to that of the enemy the proportion that the armies of the two nations have borne to each other in 1863; then no necessity exists for either arming the negroes or appealing to Europe for protection.

But if those authorities shall answer differently, then we submit that a crisis is upon us that demands the alternative of subjugation with slaves or independence by arming the negroes. There is every prospect for four years more of war, and as long as we rest on the defensive, the enemy can carry on the war without the risk of defeat. If they know that we never follow up our repulses, but must always remain on the defensive, they know that though they may not be able to defeat our armies, yet we will never defeat theirs, and the war is merely a question of exhaustion.

Shall we prolong the war for the sake of the negroes? Shall we sacrifice our children to preserve our slaves? Shall we exhaust our country, destroy our noble defenders and endanger every institution rather than test an experiment that may give us the means of recruiting our armies, of assuming the offensive and of conquering a speedy peace? Neither rhetoric nor argument nor authority can determine whether the negroes will make for us a faithful soldier. Experiment must test and decide this question. Gen. Lee asks that this experiment be made. But we hate, detest and despise the enemy far more than we love or admire slavery, and if our liberties cannot be gained but by the sacrifice of slavery, we are prepared to make that sacrifice and to urge that sacrifice upon our countrymen.

We would not return into the Union if every slave could be returned to his master, and every guarantee that human ingenuity could devise were received for the protection of the institution. We prefer liberty with free society, to re-union upon the securest basis of slavery. Such we believe to be the sentiment of Virginia. But we know that a great many doubts beset this question of arming the negroes, and yet the experiment ought to be tested, and the fact ascertained whether the negroes will make soldiers."

A COLD BATH.—Dr. M. G. Smith, this year, as we have described in the past, continues bathing in the river and the open sea at day break. On Friday morning he plunged from Huse's wharf, making no account of the low state of the mercury or the floating ice, more than a wild duck. Occasionally he goes to the beach, running a half dozen miles to the back side of Plum Island, and at times even to the Ipswich river, ten miles away, to get up a perspiration, when he dashes into the surf, and coming out, sometimes with the thermometer at and below zero, he runs all the way home. This is an exercise and experience that but few persons would desire, but he is as perfect a specimen of physical health as can be found in the State.—Newburyport Herald.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.
2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, publishers may continue to send them until all sums due are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have paid what is due, and order their papers discontinued.
4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
5. The law declares that any person to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it stopped. His duty in such a case is, not to take the paper from the office, and to notify the publisher that he does not wish it

Discussion.

The following Question is to be discussed between John Stevenson, of Toronto, C. W., and William C. Thurman, of Buchanan, Mich:—

IS PTOLOMY'S CANON CORRECT?

Mr. Stevenson affirms; Mr. Thurman denies.

The discussion is to be held in Kast's Hall, 104 Hanover Street, Boston, on Tuesday, Jan. 24th, 1865, and the following days. Sessions to be held from 10 o'clock, A. M., to 12 M., and from 2 to 4 o'clock P. M., and the time spent in half hour speeches, or otherwise, as the speakers may mutually agree. The evenings to be occupied in discussion, or in other services, as may seem best.

Elder Joshua V. Himes is to be the Chairman. The speeches are to be faithfully reported by a competent phonographer, subject to revision before being put to press. Additions or other alterations to be made by either party only with the consent of the other. Dates may be supplied in the published report which were not mentioned in the debate.

The discussion to be published, if practicable, with a lithographic or other copy of a section of Mr. Stevenson's Chronological Chart, embracing the points in dispute, to be furnished by Bro. S. And if Mr. Thurman shall desire a similar illustration of his argument, he is to have the like privilege.

J. V. HIMES, MILES GRANT, C. F. HUDSON, } Committee of Arrangements.

A Discussion.

A discussion of the following questions will commence at Morse's Mills, Corinna, Me., Feb. 14th, at one o'clock, and continue several days.

1. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man has a spiritual, thinking soul, that will exist between death and the resurrection.

Affirmative, E. B. FLETCHER.
Negative, N. F. NASON.

2. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that after the resurrection God will destroy the wicked in the sense of making them as though they had not been.

Affirmative, N. F. NASON,
Negative, E. B. FLETCHER.

If the weather is stormy, the discussion will be adjourned one week.

Advent Christian Conference at No. Ohio.

Providence permitting, there will be a general conference meeting of all who are looking for "the kingdom that shall have no end," at Norwalk, Ohio, commencing Wednesday evening, Feb. 1st, 1865. The church of this place extend a general invitation to all of like precious faith to come and worship the Lord with us. We desire to see all the churches of the Northern and Central Ohio represented, as matters of vital importance to the cause of truth will come up for consideration. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield will be with us, and minister in word and doctrine. Let all come, and come praying for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and hold themselves ready to work for God. Brethren from the conferences east and west of us have a special invitation to come to this feast of the Lord.

J. D. KNAPP, President.
P. B. HOYT, Secretary.

To Bro. C. P. Dow.

If Bro. C. P. Dow can come to Whitefield N. H. the last of this month, or the first of next, will he let me know soon? I have had no answer to my last two letters to him. J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Notice.

The Second Advent meetings in Bristol, Ct., will be held in Barnes Hall for this present year, instead of Gridley's, as formerly. HENRY L. BRADLEY.

Conference.

The brethren at Bryant's Pond, Woodstock, Me., have arranged to hold a conference in the Universalist Chapel, commencing on the evening of Jan. 12th, and continue over Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Eld. W. H. Mitchell and the writer have engaged to be there to preach the word. J. A. LIBBY.

Quarterly Meeting.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held on the 13th of Jan., at Floyed, Floyed Co., Iowa.

PETER S. W. DEYO, Clerk.

Notice.

I. C. Wellcome & Co., now have a good assortment of English Bibles, books, tracts, and hymn books for sale, at the regular prices. As the new hymn book is not to be published at present, we have contracted with Bro. Himes for the "Christian Lyre," so that we can supply those who want them in Maine at wholesale and retail. Prices according to the quantities wanted. Sent by mail or express. Address I. C. WELCOME & Co., Yarmouth, Me.

Agency for Maine.

Having been solicited to take the agency for Maine of Bro. Himes' "New Chart of Daniel and John," I would say to any and all in Maine who wish it, I am prepared to furnish it at the regular retail price, $5.00, and to preachers (or others who wish them to sell) at a liberal discount. Address orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

For the World's Crisis.

VICTORY AHEAD.

AIR.—"The Faithful Sentinel."

Beyond earth's temptations and trials and conflicts,
Beyond the dark cloud that encircle us here,
We'll meet in the kingdom with Jesus our Savior,
His glorious presence forever to share.

Though dark is the way, and the perils are thickening,
Yet trusting in Jesus, securely we stand;
For he is our leader, he'll never forsake us,
But bring us off conquerors safely to land.

We'll gird on our armor, all ready for battle,
The foe is before us, his numbers are strong;
He's rallying his hordes to the last final combat,
The fight will be fearful, but 'twill not be long.

"The sword of the Spirit," our weapon in warfare,
We'll wield when the enemy comes on by storm;
"The hope of salvation" our helmet in battle,
Will surely protect us from danger and harm.

We'll obey all the orders of Jesus our leader,
We'll stand by the banner that's stained with his blood;
The victory we'll gain, all our foes will be vanquished,
Triumphant we'll enter the city of God.

Rome, Me. W. H. BLAISDELL.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

Were you ever poor? I thought not, or you would be more considerate and just to the poor. I wish you had been poor for a single day—only one day; hungry, and without food, or money to buy it; without a place to lay your head, or in debt for the wretched place you last laid it; without work and unable to get it, hunting for it from shop to shop, up and down the endless stairs, till your feet were swollen, and burning, and blistered; afraid to tell your trouble and need, lest you might lose favor and friends. One day of such poverty would be enough for you—but you need one. "I overdraw?" No. The colors are none too deep for women's poverty, as I have seen it. But the worst poverty is not to be compared nor named with the sin to which it tempts.

Do you see that block of old, dark, dingy buildings? I never pass it without faintness and sickening of spirit, for I know too well what is behind those dirty, cobwebbed windows. And those attics—my eye lingers there for the pale, sad faces. The city is full of such old, shell-like, skeleton blocks, and up in their dismal attics you will always find the saddest specimens of womanhood that live.

Up in that second attic, right in the window seat, to get the most light upon her work, and a little view of life in the street below, there sat for months together, a young and pretty girl, stitching at heavy tailor-work all day. Early in the morning, before the sun rose, when nothing else was seen astir but the city pigeons and the market men, she was at her toil, and no one ever saw her pause from it but for her hasty meals, and short sleep, and hurried visits to the shops where she obtained work and food. When she glanced into the street, she was drawing through her thread, and the quick glance could not hinder. Her head throbbed at times, as if it would burst; sharp pains smote through her breast, and then came a sinking sense of feebleness, worse than pain, but she sewed on just the same. She was too poor to yield to sickness. She had to work while her hand could move, to pay for her food and shelter.

She was a lone thing; went out and came in alone; sat alone always in her sky-window, and if she ever saw any friends, it was when she went out; no one came to see her. The pain in her head grew worse, until it was almost maddening, and she laid down her needle and clasped her hands to her temples, and her eyes rested with interest on the cheerful windows across the street. The sun shone into those windows through beautiful draperies of embroidered lace, and lay soft and mellow on the rich satin and velvet of furniture and carpet. Then a sweet voice rose and swelled till it met her ear. Once she could sing like that—not now. She could only raise the saddest note now, and that brought tears to spoil her work. It was a gay song she heard, and she saw gay young girls come to the windows, and they were not pale like her, held no hand to the throbbing head, but moved lightly and buoyantly, as if borne up by pleasure. Yet the poor sewing girl shrinks, and shivers, and covers her eyes, for "their house inclines unto death, and their paths unto the dead. None that go unto them return again, neither take they hold no the paths of life." She takes up her needle and plies it briskly again.

But her look has not been unnoticed. The Jezebel who rules in that house of sin, has long been watching her. She smiles; she gloats: the woman-demon! That such monsters live! and in woman shape, too!—in shape like our blessed mothers,—like her whom the Christ called "mother," in his tender love! But they do so live, and in our very midst, and their victims—they are many. Shall I tell you of all the snares that Jezebel, that woman-demon, laid for the poor, overtasked, half-starved, sickening sewing girl? You can guess them. She did with hellish purpose what you or some other woman should have done with holiest. "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." She showed her kindness with a studied delicacy that could not fail to please, and won her gratitude. She gave her work, and full and honest pay, and so lured her within her influence.

That attic window is empty now. The young girl is gone. She sews no longer; nor is hungry and lonely more. The roses bloom on her cheeks, and her laugh is gay, and her step is light and sylph-like as she floats in syren dance to syren music. But, alas! poor thing! alas! Oh, that she were the honest, half-starved sewing-girl still! "Roses on her cheeks!" Why, they are false roses. Never more living bloom for her! A "gay laugh" and a hollow one, that would move a loving heart to tears. They who are like her, laugh such gay, hollow laughs to keep themselves from tears, but tears are less sad than their laughter.

Her step is not always "sylph-like;" it grows slower and feebler each day, and a new and terrible pain is gnawing at her breast; and her temples throb wildly with wretchedness. If it were only with weariness and exhaustion, as once! She clasps them more tightly than before, in her white, jewelled hands; the old pain seems like a lost pleasure by this. "Never hungry nor lonely now," but what a price she has paid for food! One that tempts starvation even. And company—what company! that of lost women like herself—wretches, all—and some of them grown fiends, maddened and maddening spirits. Lovers smile on her; they court, and flatter, and fill her ear with delighting praises. "Lovers?" Oh, that one, only one true, honest heart could love her! They who smile on her, despise and insult her; they debase her even lower than before, then turn from her in scorn and loathing. Who can respect or love her? Ah, she knows too well that no one cares for her. She no longer cares for herself. Her day is short, and still she would shorten it. Only five years for such as she! "Only?" Why, how can she live a year! The agony of the present deadens her to all fear of the unending agony of another life. Hell! is there a worse hell? Five years, the allotted life of the abandoned? And men call it short! Short! Then what is long? And who is responsible for this terrible loss of life and happiness? Are not you, who refuse such as her their pay, full, righteous, living pay, their due, their right; not the least they will take, nor quarter, nor half-pay, but what they earn, what God would give them if he settled between you, and what he will yet require at your hands at the final reckoning, on the great day of accounts? Had you sewed from dawn till midnight, day after day, for the paltry hire you give, you would know it was not half enough; you would feel you were wicked in keeping the poor sewers so poor as you keep them. Had it been your young daughter that grew faint, and sick, and despairing in that wretched attic, would you sit at your ease while hard men and hard women, too, compel other daughters to the same dark, sad life—a life which seems to the young like a breathing death, only for the weariness and pain, death giving us thoughts of rest? And, oh, if you had seen her tempted through her poverty—over-tempted and lost—could you rest while other daughters followed to her wretched fate, driven on as she was driven, tempted as she was tempted? Could you?

And must you suffer before you can feel for those who suffer? Must you be brought to want to make you mindful of others' wants? Will you not learn to be just until you have been crushed by injustice? Will you not learn to do right till you have felt the iron heel of wrong? Must it be your own cry of anguish that wakes you to the piercing cry for food, and warmth, and sleep, the fearful demand for justice, going up to the ear of the Lord God of justice and compassion?—Watchman and Reflector.

For the World's Crisis.

TREE OF LIFE AND TREE OF DEATH.

"And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat, but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it." "And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever."—GEN. 2 : 16 ; 3 : 22.

It appears from the foregoing, that God had so constituted the tree of life, that its nature was to impart life; for God asserts that if man put forth his hand and ate thereof, he, as a consequence, should live forever. This shows that man was not created having eternal life secured to him; but that the tree of life would so secure eternal life, even in a sinful state. Is not the inference fair, then, to suppose that the tree of death, or forbidden fruit, had also its consequences from its nature? that is, that it was a slow poison, which by its nature produced death; which death commenced in the day he ate thereof. For we are dying creatures from the beginning of our days—full of disease and death; as Paul says, 2 Cor. 6 : 9, "As dying, and behold we live." Or, we are dying all the time we live, and fully die at last.

Now God saw that it was not good that man should eat of the tree of life in his sinful state; therefore he set a guard round about it, that man should approach it only by permission. But God is no respecter of persons, that candidates for such permission should vary. That tree of life was taken away, that it might not give eternal life to sinners in a state of sin. But Christ was given, that eternal life might still be had by all who repent of sin. Adam was the son of God, Luke 3 : 38, before the fall; but by the fall, he and his posterity were cast out,—the title forfeited. "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." Then through belief in him, we may all be reinstated as the sons of God. He is then the tree of life, and the only fountain of life. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Now why should any refuse to come to Christ for life; asserting that man is immortal; and that they have no need? "For the wages of sin is death"; and we have all sinned. "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT CAN I DO FOR CHRIST?

This is the cry of every lover of Jesus, or ought to be. He should have the pre-eminence in all things. We should do those things that we know will please him. Let us consider what we should do. We are to do all things to his glory, because we are not our own. We have been bought with a price, even his precious blood. We are to reckon ourselves dead to the world, and alive to him, and walk as he walked, who went about doing good. We must have a willing mind, and then do what he has commanded. We are to abhor that which is evil in ourselves, and seek to be gentle, pitiful, loving, doing to our neighbor as we would be done by, and then our hearts will vibrate in harmony with heaven; then we shall want sinners to serve the Savior.

Dear Jesus, thou hadst a heart that felt for poor sinners, and eyes that wept for them. O Lord forgive my little love for thee, and give me a heart that can feel another's woe, and "weep with those that weep," and rejoice with those that rejoice; a tender heart that will feel the near approach of sin, a sensitive heart that shall take an alarm at the slightest temptation of the enemy of all righteousness.

We can please him by giving a kind word or a smile to one of his dear ones. It is all appreciated by him, for inasmuch as we do it to one of his little ones, we do it unto him. Let us not forget to love our enemies, and never render evil for evil to any man. When they curse, we must bless. What a heavenly frame of mind we enjoy, when we keep the narrow way and do his will. Then he smiles upon us, and causes joy and peace to abound. O how I long to see him. If we love and obey him here, in due time we shall be with him. Your sister, striving for the kingdom.

ITALY, NAPOLEON, AND THE POPE.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from Turin under date of Nov. 16th, says:

"In the eighth century Charlemagne built up the temporal power of the Papacy by the aid which he gave Adrian against Didier, king of the Lombards, and by restoring to that kingdom its ancient name of Italy. In this, the nineteenth century, the modern Charlemagne (Napoleon) gives the death blow to the sovereignty of the Popes by a measure which promises to restore to Italy the unity which she has lost. Of the manner in which so remarkable an event has been brought about, the official documents will by this time have informed you."

The above named paper makes the following comment: "The convention lately concluded between Napoleon and Victor Immanuel may be said to be the 'beginning of the end' of that hierarchial despotiom which, under the sovereignty of the Popes, has exercised for ages such an enslaveng influence upon Italy. From the moment that document received the signatures of the high contracting parties, the temporal power of the Papacy received its death blow. There was some reason to fear, as indeed was the case at first, that the true purport of the treaty would be misunderstood and its objects defeated through the hatred of (to) Napoleon, which has hitherto marked the conduct of Mazzini and his followers. All apprehension on this score has, as will be seen from the interesting letter which we publish from Turin, vanished. The good sense of the Italian people has recognized the wisdom of a measure which, though it delays for a short time the realization of their hopes in regard to Rome, places that city not the less surely within their grasp, while at the same time it avoids the perils of a struggle which would have ranged on the side of the Pope the whole Catholic feeling of Europe. Our correspondent gives just credit to the French Emperor for the origination of the treaty, and appositely remarks that this work of 'the modern Charlemagne' scarcely surpassed in its important bearings on the interests of humanity by that of his great predecessor, by whom the temporal sovereignty of the Pontiffs was built up. The full force of the statement has as yet to be appreciated. It is now upwards of a thousand years since Charlemagne accomplished the pious work which at once edified the world and strengthened the Papacy against external assaults."

In the foregoing we are led to notice how shrewd historians, without any reference to God's word, can see a marked period in the past of about a thousand years of Papal supremacy, commencing with Charlemagne and ending forever with Napoleon the Third. This end of Papacy, which even the worldly-wise so clearly perceive commenced with the French Revolution and rise of the Napoleon dynasty, then was ' the beginning of the end" of Papacy; now comes the end.

Besides, the facts reflect some light. We can see how the policy of Napoleon since 1859 has been, and still continues to be, the unification of Italy; for the role is in his hands, not Victor Immanuel's. The patent also is his; "Go to the ballot box and choose your own rulers;" which was equivalent to saying, show your hatred to the Pope by annexing yourselves to Victor Immanuel. Thus the policy of Napoleon has been spoiling Papacy of its temporal power, yet all the while carrying (the whore—see Rev. 17 : 3), protecting and sustaining by his armies; at the same time the kingdoms of Italy show their hatred of her—"eating her flesh" and ready to "burn her with fire." See verse 19. Now this convention between Napoleon and Victor Immanuel provides for the withdrawal of the French troops from Rome; which, judging from the past and the temper of the Italian people, will complete the overthrow of Papacy and the fulfillment of Rev. 17 : 16, 17. So it would appear that the vision given the Seer from heaven near eighteen hundred years ago is passing before our eyes as an unveiled reality, and likely to be played out in 1866, for that is the limits of the convention.

We do not say this will bring the end of the dispensation, as many are predicting; but the end of Papacy; which gives room for the manifestation of a worse than it, under whose banner the kings of the earth and their armies will range themselves (see Rev. 17 : 12–14, and Rev. 19 : 19), to oppose our Lord and King.

Events are on the march. The scene of an awful drama will soon commence in Italy, and from thence remove and finish in the Holy Land. Strange and ominous things brood over the land of prophecy,—those countries lying upon Mediterranean on the North, West and East,—there quite safely may we expect the chief of the prophetic word fulfilled.—Selected.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

The following warning words are from the Chicago Journal, a careful, reliable paper, in no wise given to sensational articles. It tells a few plain facts, which anybody can see who will carefully consider the present condition of the country. But here is the trouble. As it was of old, so now—"My people will not consider," and so they rush blindly to ruin. Railroad speed in every thing is the order of the day; and the man who engages in business has got to put a double watch over himself, or he will soon become engrossed in worldly affairs, and leave religion, the prayer meeting, the Sabbath school, and attendance upon the ordinances of God's house to those who have the time to spend. Take care, brethren! The thorns which choke the word never grew so rank as now. Take care, lest that day come upon you unawares, and find you engrossed in the cares of this life.

"THE MANIA FOR SPECULATION.

There is one sign of the times that oppresses the heart of every wise and pure patriot. It is the speculation mania. It has taken hold of our people with unprecedented tenacity and unexampled prevalence. It holds on to them like a scar in the flesh, or a hereditary disease. It converts mild men into wild men; gentle men into gross men; civilized men into savages. It abolishes composure and gravity, and puts into their places a furious extravagance both of conduct and imagination, and enthrones the god GREED on the market stall, the store-counter and the wharf.

Speculation is the love of money in its rabidest expression. It is the love of money ripened into a madness for money. It requires no prophet's seer sight to foresee and to foretell the consequences of this wild, fierce, furious and insane itching of the palms of the hands of our people after that, the mere love of which, according to the Scriptures, is the root of all evil. Why, it would be an argument for atheism if this thing went on perpetually without the abrupt arrestment of it in frightful disaster. As for us, we cannot look upon this spectacle of enormous and abnormal avarice, cupidity, and lust for money, without coming to the melancholy conclusion that this war will have to reach this quarter of the country in some frightful shape or other before it accomplishes its errand of reformatory chastisement, which is declared by our moralists to be its errand to the whole nation. Warnings are uttered by preacher and by press to no purpose, and nothing but a universal and unexampled financial crash will bring our people to their right mind, and that may grind out of them the all-devouring greed for gain, which can be gotten out of them by no other means. Such is our fear."

THEOLOGICAL.

O, what a place Theologians tell,
Is that where the sinner hereafter shall dwell;
The fires are blazing,
And awful flames raising,
Pelting and melting,
And curling and whirling,
Ascending unending,
And flickering and bickering,
And smoking and choking,
And fuming consuming,
And wavering and quavering,
And snapping and cracking,
And whisking and twisting,
Creeping and sweeping,
High o'er all leaping,
And awfully roaring,
In cataracts pouring.
Such is the place, Theologians tell,
As that where the sinner hereafter shall dwell;
Where millions of souls shall eternally lie,
Tortured and burning, but never to die!
But moaning and groaning,
And tumbling and grumbling,
And crying and frying,
And hissing and twisting,
And hauling and sprawling,
And hideously bawling,
Raving and swearing,
And glaring and tearing,
And ramping and stamping,
And yearning and turning,
In agony burning,
While ages on ages are rolling away,
And saints are rejoicing in endless day;
And such is the place, Theologians tell,
As that where the sinner hereafter shall dwell.

Vermontville, Mich. LEWIS BUSH.

WHAT IS WANTED.

We want in you a christianity that is christian across counters, over dinner-tables, behind the neighbor's back, as in his face. We want in you a christianity that we can find in the temperance of the meal, in moderation of dress, in respect for authority, in amiability at home, in veracity and simplicity in mixed society. Rowland Hill used to say he would give very little for the religion of a man whose very dog and cat were not the better for his religion. We want fewer gossiping, slandering, gluttonous, peevish, conceited, bigoted christians.

To make them effectual, all our public religious measures, institutions, benevolent agencies, missions, need to be managed on a high-toned, scrupulous, and unquestionable scale of honor, without evasion, or partisanship, or overmuch of the serpent's cunning. The hand that gives away the Bible must be unspotted from the world. The money that sends the missionary to the heathen must be honestly earned. In short, both the two arms of the church—justice and mercy—must be stretched out, working for man, strengthening the brethren, or else your faith is vain, and ye are yet in your sins.—F. D. Huntington, D. D.

NEVER GET ANGRY.

It does no good. Some sins have a seeming compensation or apology, a present gratification of some sort; but anger has none. A man feels no better for it. It is really a torment; and when the storm of passion has cleared away, it leaves him to see that he has been a fool; and he has made himself a fool in the eyes of others, too. Who thinks well of an ill-natured man, who has to be approached in the most guarded and cautious way? Who wishes him for a neighbor, or a partner in business? He keeps all about him in the same state of mind as if they were living next to a hornet's nest or a rabid animal. As to prosperity in business, one gets along no better for getting angry. What if business is perplexing, and everything "goes by contraries," will a fit of passion make the winds more propitious, the grounds more productive, the markets more favorable? Will a bad temper draw customers, pay notes, and make creditors better natured? An angry man adds nothing to the welfare of society. Since, then, anger is useless, needless, disgraceful, without the least apology, and found only "in the bosom of fools," why should it be indulged in at all?

EASTERN MARRIAGE CUSTOM.

Formerly it was the universal custom in the East to provide at marriages a wedding garment for every guest who was invited to the wedding. These garments were very costly, but as the expense was defrayed by those who made the wedding, no invited guest had the right to plead poverty, or any other excuse why he might not wear one.

A few years ago, at the royal marriage of Sultan Mahmoud, every guest invited to the wedding had a wedding garment presented to him, made expressly for him by the order of the Sultan. Had any guest presumed to appear before him unclad, he would have considered his sovereign power insulted, and his kindness despised.

Hence Jesus made use of the facts in connection with this custom, to illustrate the alarming truth that any who should present themselves at the Marriage of the Lamb, unclothed in the robe of His righteousness, would be considered as despisers of his authority and love.

"MY WIFE IS THE CAUSE OF IT."

In is now more than forty years ago that Mr. L—— called at the house of Dr. B—— one very cold morning, on his way to H——. "Sir," said the doctor, "the weather is very frosty; will you not take something to drink before you start?" In that early day, ardent spirits were deemed indispensable to warmth in winter. When commencing a journey, and at every stopping-place along the road, the traveler used intoxicating drinks to keep him warm.

"No," said Mr. L——, "I never touch any thing of the kind, and I will tell you the reason: my wife is the cause of it. I had been in the habit of meeting some of our neighbors every evening, for the purpose of playing cards. We assembled at each others' shops, and liquors were introduced. After a while we met not so much for the purpose of playing as drinking, and I used to return home late in the evening, more or less intoxicated. My wife always met me at the door affectionately, and when I chided her for sitting up so late for me, she kindly replied, 'I prefer doing so, for I cannot sleep when you are out.'

This always troubled me, and I wished in my heart that she would only begin to scold me, for then I could have retorted and relieved my conscience. But she always met me with the same gentle and loving spirit.

Things passed on thus for some time, when at last I resolved that I would, by remaining very late and returning home much intoxicated, provoke her displeasure so much as to cause her to lecture me; when I meant to answer her with severity, and thus by creating another issue between us, unburden my bosom of its present trouble.

I returned in such a plight about four o'clock in the morning. She met me at the door with 'Come in, husband; I have just been making a warm fire for you, because I knew you would be cold. Take off your boots and warm your feet, and here is a cup of warm coffee.'

Doctor, that was too much. I could not endure it any longer, and I resolved that moment that I would never touch another drop while I lived; and I never will."

He never did. He lived and died practising total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks, in a village which intemperance has ravaged as much as any other in this state.

That man was my father, and that woman my mother. The facts above related I received from the doctor himself, on a visit to my native village, not long since.

May we not safely assert, that were there more wives like my blessed mother, there would be fewer confirmed drunkards? My father was a man of generous impulses and social instincts, just the man to be led into habits of inebriation, and just the man also to feel the impression such gentleness was calculated to make.

Let those wives who witness with agony the commencement of any evil habits in their husbands, be encouraged to try what patient, persevering love can do. Let their motto be, "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness."

BREAKING OXEN.—When you first put a yoke on your two year old steers, coax them with an apple or an ear of soft corn, then they will hold up their heads and be glad to follow you. No whip will be needed at the first yoking. Let the yoke and the soft corn be associated in their minds, and they will never be shy of the yoke; but if you make use of force, they will hold down their heads to keep them from the blows. After you have taught them to follow you around in the yoke, and that it will not injure them to carry it, you can hitch them on before the older oxen, and make them take the lead. The driver should go beside them occasionally, with a switch stick or a light and short whip, but he will not have any need to beat them, except in extreme cases.

RIGHT AND WRONG.—Some congregations strengthen their minister, others weaken him; some speak of his good qualities, express interest in his sermons, and confidence in his integrity; others criticize whatever he says or does, magnify his faults, and report his frailties. Now who takes the wiser course? Who acts the most christian-like? Who serves the interest of the church best? Brethren sometimes forget that whatever injures a minister, injures the church; every blow struck against a pastor falls upon his people.

LITTLE KINDNESSES.—Small acts of kindness, how pleasant and desirable do they make life! Every dark object is made light by them, and every tear of sorrow is brushed away. When the heart is sad, and despondency sits at the entrance of the soul, a trifling kindness drives away despair, and makes the path cheerful and pleasant.

Receipt for making a person useful.—Do every thing in its proper time; keep every thing in its proper use; put every thing in its proper place.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

HYGIENE.—NO. 2.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

Having in my last number considered one very prolific cause of disease, I shall now consider its kindred cause of disease—improper drinks and drinks improperly taken. As with food, so with drinks, there are some which, if taken in a state of health, prove injurious to the vital forces; and others intended to promote health, but if taken improperly, prove also a cause of disease.

ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS

have done a vast amount of good, and an untold amount of mischief. Alcohol is a valuable article, as a therapeutic agent, but beyond this, it should seldom or never be used. It is composed of hydrogen, carbon and oxygen, in the proportion of about fourteen, fifty-two and thirty-four parts to the hundred. Ardent spirit is composed of alcohol and water, in nearly equal proportions. Alcohol acts locally as an irritant poison. It causes heat, pain, redness, and inflammation, with a condensation of the part to which it is applied. Its effects are chemical; it coagulates liquid albumen or fibrin, and thereby increases the firmness and density of the tissues to which it is applied, while the irritation and inflammation which it causes arises in part from the resistance, or reaction, of the vital powers to the chemical action of the poison. In addition to its chemical action upon the albumen and fibrin, its highly pungent and local excitant properties are sufficient to produce irritation and inflammation of the part to which it is applied.

When taken into the stomach, its first effects are observed by a frequency and fulness of the pulse, a flushed face, and animated countenance, cerebral excitement, an increased acuteness of ideas, and a joyous state of feeling generally. The individual soon becomes loquacious, and often very indiscreet in his language. If more liquor is taken, the intellectual faculties become impaired, the powers of volition are disturbed, and the stage commonly known as intoxication is established. In this state, the individual becomes delirious and loses the power to control the action of the voluntary muscles. Increased vascular excitement, with frequent nausea and vomiting, are usual concomitants of this stage, which is usually followed by a strong disposition to sleep, which is accompanied by copious perspiration. Headache, thirst, disgust for food, and lassitude, are some of the symptoms manifested upon the recovery from sleep. Where large quantities are taken at a time, coma, or true apoplexy comes on. The face is livid or pale, the respiration stertorous, and the mouth frothy. The pulse is full, slow, or laborious, in some cases barely felt at the wrist. Occasionally convulsions ensue. In some cases, true apoplexy supervenes, with an extravasation of blood into the brain. Dr. Ogston states that, in one instance, he found about four ounces of fluid in the ventricles of the brain possessing all the physical properties of alcohol.

I was called last winter to see a young man, who was stopping in our place, and who they supposed to be dying. Several young men had gathered for a social party. Nothing appeared wrong with this man, until he fell on the floor senseless. Upon inquiry, I found that he had taken nearly a quart of gin in the space of an hour. On examination, I found him in a profound coma. I could detect no pulse at the wrist; heart beating slowly and laboriously, there being also intermissions of several seconds between each half dozen beats; the mouth open and frothy; a deep, death-like rattle in the throat; the eyes presented the appearance of a dead man's eyes. It was upward of two hours, with the most vigorous exertions, that I could bring him to a state of consciousness.

The moral degradation which it causes is often truly deplorable; while the morbid effects resulting from its use are very numerous; among which may be named delirium tremens, insanity, disease of the liver, such as a tuberculated state of that organ, fatty degeneration, torpor, cancerous condition, enlargement, jaundice, visceral obstruction; also impaired appetite, dyspepsia, chronic irritation or inflammation of the stomach, and even cancer and thickening of its walls.

The continued use of this article exerts as baneful an influence over the mind. It impairs the memory, dethrones reason, destroys the morals, kills the social feelings, and effectually blunts all the higher and noble qualities of man's nature.

In certain pathological conditions of the system, the use of brandy or whiskey, unadulterated, is of decided advantage. But the difficulty of obtaining a pure article renders it almost hazardous to prescribe it at all. It is next thing to impossible to find either of the above articles which has not been adulterated with strychnine, sulphuric acid, logwood, etc.

What is true of alcoholic liquors, is true, to a great extent, of beer, ale, cider, soda and mineral waters. Were I to choose between any of the long catalogue in the market, I should take pure rye whiskey as the least injurious.

I come now to speak of other articles in common use. I allude to

TEA AND COFFEE.

While there can be no definite rules laid down with regard to their use, yet there are certain temperaments or conditions of the body in which these articles seem to produce no marked injury. But as these conditions are seldom found, and as I cannot point out to the non-medical reader, the exact peculiarity of condition, or idiosyncrasy, I will say, as a general rule, do not use them.

Tea at first exalts the nervous powers, producing an exhilarating feeling, but is followed by a corresponding depression of spirits. Hence, to the nervous temperament it is injurious,—more so than coffee.

Coffee is decidedly more objectionable. When taken in its natural state,—and in large quantities, it is a rank poison. It deadens nervous sensibility, and renders the stomach and liver torpid. It is liable to produce headache, constipation and indigestion. One great objection to the use of either tea or coffee is, they are taken hot and in large quantities, which is very injurious. Hot drinks relax the muscular coat of the stomach, and thus retard digestion.

The great type of drinks is

PURE SPRING WATER.

Water is universally present in all the tissues and fluids of the body. It is abundant in the blood and secretions, where its presence is indispensable in order to give them the fluidity which is necessary to the performance of their functions. But however essential water is to the economy, if not properly taken, it may prove a cause of disease. Water when taken very cold, and in large quantities, when the system is in a state of excitement, proves decidedly destructive to health, and may prove suddenly fatal. But a few days ago, I noticed by the Cleveland Herald, a dancer, whose professional name was Millie Francis, fell dead upon the stage from the effects of a glass of ice-water, taken just before she appeared to dance. She had left the stage from a successful dance, and being called upon to repeat it, took the fatal draught, which ended her life in full view of the audience.

Ice-water is injurious, and should never be used. In warm weather, when the system is excessively heated, persons should be careful not to take too great an amount of water at a time, and avoid taking very cold water.

I will notice, in this place, another great cause of disease. And while I consider it after having considered the use of alcoholic drink, yet I candidly believe that it has been the cause of as great an amount of disease and suffering as the use of intoxicating drinks. I refer to the use of tobacco. Without attempting to array statistics relative to the amount used in the United States in one year, I will proceed directly to give its physiological effects.

Tobacco is an acro-narcotic poison. In large doses, it produces extreme nausea and vomiting, purging, great prostration, and other symptoms of its acro-narcotic qualities; such as languor, muscular relaxation, trembling of the limbs, faintness, great anxiety, impaired vision, confused intellect, pulse small and feeble, respiration laborious, cold and clammy state of the surface; and, in extreme cases convulsions, alarming and even fatal prostration. The habitual use of tobacco produces a long train of diseases, such as hysteria, insanity, dyspepsia, fits, palpitation of the heart, and various impurities of the blood. Its action is chiefly upon the nervous system, and prostrates it to an alarming extent.

The habit of chewing and smoking, now so common throughout the world, is one of the most filthy and loathsome of any to which the perverted taste of man can become habituated. These vices so much relished by some are equally obnoxious to others; and if we say nothing of the long list of diseases which they produce; there is still enough to call for reformation; and every physician and philanthropist should raise his voice against their progress and existence. These evil habits beget others. One vice, or species of intemperance, is almost invariably associated with others; and those who are so loud in their protestations against the use of ardent spirits, should give some attention, at least, to this twin evil of the rum bottle.

CANCER.

BRO. GRANT:—Seeing a communication in the Crisis about a poor sister suffering with cancer of the eye, it may benefit her to use the fig poultice. I have used it successfully. I have treated cancers with various remedies, and have seen others treat them, but I never saw a cancer of the eye cured until 1861. In the fall of 1860, a woman about thirty-six years of age applied to me, on account of a very distressing headache, for which I treated her some weeks, when I discovered the left eye was very sensitive, and somewhat diseased. By careful examination, I found unmistakable evidence of cancer. I reported the case to physicians, and their judgment coincided with mine. Her pain was almost too great for endurance. She thought she must go crazy. I gave Arsenicum and Conium Maculatum, 1st trituation alternate, and applied the figs, boiling two Turkey figs in a pint of new milk, split one and put it on the eye, hot as could be borne, renewed at bedtime, early in the morning, and at noon she washed with a little of the milk and drank two or three times a day as much of the milk as her stomach would bear. She was relieved from the first. The cancer discharged, affected the eye badly, but healed in about three months, the eye safe and sound. The cure seemed incredible. Patience and perseverance are requisite for a cure. May the Lord bless and make this useful.

Very affectionately yours,

CONFESSION OF A TOBACCO CHEWER.

I commenced the filthy habit of chewing tobacco in my youthful days, and for many years was a faithful slave to the bed-bug killing stuff. Two years ago, I abolished slavery, cleaned out the old tobacco house, swept and garnished it, and I do not think I could get seven abominations more filthy to put there. The habit never put one cent in my pocket, but took out dollars. The habit never enlarged my heart to run in the ways of God's commandments; it never moved me to faithfulness in the service of God.

I thank the Lord I am a free man,—free in Christ Jesus,—and I hope never to defile the temple of God with the nasty weed again. I never felt the approbation of God, not in one instance, in the use of tobacco. It is a useless, needless, unnecessary habit, therefore sinful. One says it is not so bad a practice as some. Very true; but little foxes spoil the vine. Sin is a transgression of the law, little or great. Money cannot win me back again. I drink no tea nor coffee, and have not for fifty years, except in case of sickness. My constitution has no use for it. It is injurious to the human system. But, says one, "I cannot do without it." If you would go to God with your infirmities, I guess you would do as well. Jesus took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses.

I am a reader of the World's Crisis. I admire its principle. I think it advocates the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

TORMENTED WITH KINDNESS.

This may seem to be a contradiction of terms, but preachers will understand what this means, especially that class that like the old-fashioned religion and manners and food. They want but little seeming respect paid to them, for it torments them, although you mean it for kindness. They don't want the best room to sit in, or bed to sleep in; it is generally damp and lightly clad, and your kindness torments them with a cold for weeks. They don't want you to tell all you know, or ask them to tell all they know, by following them from room to room, when they are trying to get alone to collect their thoughts.

Some are so kind, they will make conversation to keep up the minister's spirits, when it is only a torment to them. They don't want a great outlay when invited to dinner, and wait one or two hours, after old-fashioned times, for eating dinner; and then pass everything two or three times, urging them to take, and eat. Your kindness proves a torment. Get what you have got, thank God for that, and let them get or tell what they want. I am tired of visits, modes, and forms and flatteries paid to fellow worms.

HIRAM MUNGER.

REMEDY FOR DIPHTHERIA.

"We have just received a recipe for the cure of diphtheria, from a physician who says that of nineteen hundred cases in which it has been used, not a single patient has been lost. The treatment consists in thoroughly swabbing the back of the mouth and throat with a wash made thus:—Table salt, two drachms; black pepper, golden seal, nitrate of potash, alum, one drachm each. Mix and pulverize; put into a tea cup half full of water, stir well, and then fill up with good vinegar. Use every half hour, one, two, and four hours, as recovery progresses. The patient may swallow a little each time. Apply one ounce each of spirits turpentine, sweet oil, and aqua ammonia, mixed, every hour to the whole of the throat, and to the breast bone every four hours, keeping flannel on the part."

VICTORY AHEAD.

AIR.—"The Faithful Sentinel."

Beyond earth's temptations and trials and conflicts,
Beyond the dark cloud that encircle us here,
We'll meet in the kingdom with Jesus our Savior,
His glorious presence forever to share.

Though dark is the way, and the perils are thickening,
Yet trusting in Jesus, securely we stand;
For he is our leader, he'll never forsake us,
But bring us off conquerors safely to land.

We'll gird on our armor, all ready for battle,
The foe is before us, his numbers are strong;
He's rallying his hordes to the last final combat,
The fight will be fearful, but 'twill not be long.

"The sword of the Spirit," our weapon in warfare,
We'll wield when the enemy comes on by storm;
"The hope of salvation" our helmet in battle,
Will surely protect us from danger and harm.

We'll obey all the orders of Jesus our leader,
We'll stand by the banner that's stained with his blood;
The victory we'll gain, all our foes will be vanquished,
Triumphant we'll enter the city of God.

Rome, Me. W. H. BLAISDELL.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

Were you ever poor? I thought not, or you would be more considerate and just to the poor. I wish you had been poor for a single day—only one day; hungry, and without food, or money to buy it; without a place to lay your head, or in debt for the wretched place you last laid it; without work and unable to get it, hunting for it from shop to shop, up and down the endless stairs, till your feet were swollen, and burning, and blistered; afraid to tell your trouble and need, lest you might lose favor and friends. One day of such poverty would be enough for you—but you need one. "I overdraw?" No. The colors are none too deep for women's poverty, as I have seen it. But the worst poverty is not to be compared nor named with the sin to which it tempts.

Do you see that block of old, dark, dingy buildings? I never pass it without faintness and sickening of spirit, for I know too well what is behind those dirty, cobwebbed windows. And those attics—my eye lingers there for the pale, sad faces. The city is full of such old, shell-like, skeleton blocks, and up in their dismal attics you will always find the saddest specimens of womanhood that live.

Up in that second attic, right in the window seat, to get the most light upon her work, and a little view of life in the street below, there sat for months together, a young and pretty girl, stitching at heavy tailor-work all day. Early in the morning, before the sun rose, when nothing else was seen astir but the city pigeons and the market men, she was at her toil, and no one ever saw her pause from it but for her hasty meals, and short sleep, and hurried visits to the shops where she obtained work and food. When she glanced into the street, she was drawing through her thread, and the quick glance could not hinder. Her head throbbed at times, as if it would burst; sharp pains smote through her breast, and then came a sinking sense of feebleness, worse than pain, but she sewed on just the same. She was too poor to yield to sickness. She had to work while her hand could move, to pay for her food and shelter.

She was a lone thing; went out and came in alone; sat alone always in her sky-window, and if she ever saw any friends, it was when she went out; no one came to see her. The pain in her head grew worse, until it was almost maddening, and she laid down her needle and clasped her hands to her temples, and her eyes rested with interest on the cheerful windows across the street. The sun shone into those windows through beautiful draperies of embroidered lace, and lay soft and mellow on the rich satin and velvet of furniture and carpet. Then a sweet voice rose and swelled till it met her ear. Once she could sing like that—not now. She could only raise the saddest note now, and that brought tears to spoil her work. It was a gay song she heard, and she saw gay young girls come to the windows, and they were not pale like her, held no hand to the throbbing head, but moved lightly and buoyantly, as if borne up by pleasure. Yet the poor sewing girl shrinks, and shivers, and covers her eyes, for "their house inclines unto death, and their paths unto the dead. None that go unto them return again, neither take they hold no the paths of life." She takes up her needle and plies it briskly again.

But her look has not been unnoticed. The Jezebel who rules in that house of sin, has long been watching her. She smiles; she gloats: the woman-demon! That such monsters live! and in woman shape, too!—in shape like our blessed mothers,—like her whom the Christ called "mother," in his tender love! But they do so live, and in our very midst, and their victims—they are many. Shall I tell you of all the snares that Jezebel, that woman-demon, laid for the poor, overtasked, half-starved, sickening sewing girl? You can guess them. She did with hellish purpose what you or some other woman should have done with holiest. "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." She showed her kindness with a studied delicacy that could not fail to please, and won her gratitude. She gave her work, and full and honest pay, and so lured her within her influence.

That attic window is empty now. The young girl is gone. She sews no longer; nor is hungry and lonely more. The roses bloom on her cheeks, and her laugh is gay, and her step is light and sylph-like as she floats in syren dance to syren music. But, alas! poor thing! alas! Oh, that she were the honest, half-starved sewing-girl still! "Roses on her cheeks!" Why, they are false roses. Never more living bloom for her! A "gay laugh" and a hollow one, that would move a loving heart to tears. They who are like her, laugh such gay, hollow laughs to keep themselves from tears, but tears are less sad than their laughter.

Her step is not always "sylph-like;" it grows slower and feebler each day, and a new and terrible pain is gnawing at her breast; and her temples throb wildly with wretchedness. If it were only with weariness and exhaustion, as once! She clasps them more tightly than before, in her white, jewelled hands; the old pain seems like a lost pleasure by this. "Never hungry nor lonely now," but what a price she has paid for food! One that tempts starvation even. And company—what company! that of lost women like herself—wretches, all—and some of them grown fiends, maddened and maddening spirits. Lovers smile on her; they court, and flatter, and fill her ear with delighting praises. "Lovers?" Oh, that one, only one true, honest heart could love her! They who smile on her, despise and insult her; they debase her even lower than before, then turn from her in scorn and loathing. Who can respect or love her? Ah, she knows too well that no one cares for her. She no longer cares for herself. Her day is short, and still she would shorten it. Only five years for such as she! "Only?" Why, how can she live a year! The agony of the present deadens her to all fear of the unending agony of another life. Hell! is there a worse hell? Five years, the allotted life of the abandoned? And men call it short! Short! Then what is long? And who is responsible for this terrible loss of life and happiness? Are not you, who refuse such as her their pay, full, righteous, living pay, their due, their right; not the least they will take, nor quarter, nor half-pay, but what they earn, what God would give them if he settled between you, and what he will yet require at your hands at the final reckoning, on the great day of accounts? Had you sewed from dawn till midnight, day after day, for the paltry hire you give, you would know it was not half enough; you would feel you were wicked in keeping the poor sewers so poor as you keep them. Had it been your young daughter that grew faint, and sick, and despairing in that wretched attic, would you sit at your ease while hard men and hard women, too, compel other daughters to the same dark, sad life—a life which seems to the young like a breathing death, only for the weariness and pain, death giving us thoughts of rest? And, oh, if you had seen her tempted through her poverty—over-tempted and lost—could you rest while other daughters followed to her wretched fate, driven on as she was driven, tempted as she was tempted? Could you?

And must you suffer before you can feel for those who suffer? Must you be brought to want to make you mindful of others' wants? Will you not learn to be just until you have been crushed by injustice? Will you not learn to do right till you have felt the iron heel of wrong? Must it be your own cry of anguish that wakes you to the piercing cry for food, and warmth, and sleep, the fearful demand for justice, going up to the ear of the Lord God of justice and compassion?—Watchman and Reflector.

TREE OF LIFE AND TREE OF DEATH.

"And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat, but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil; thou shalt not eat of it." "And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever."—GEN. 2: 16; 3: 22.

It appears from the foregoing, that God had so constituted the tree of life, that its nature was to impart life; for God asserts that if man put forth his hand and ate thereof, he, as a consequence, should live forever. This shows that man was not created having eternal life secured to him; but that the tree of life would so secure eternal life, even in a sinful state. Is not the inference fair, then, to suppose that the tree of death, or forbidden fruit, had also its consequences from its nature? that is, that it was a slow poison, which by its nature produced death; which death commenced in the day he ate thereof. For we are dying creatures from the beginning of our days—full of disease and death; as Paul says, 2 Cor. 6: 9, "As dying, and behold we live." Or, we are dying all the time we live, and fully die at last.

Now God saw that it was not good that man should eat of the tree of life in his sinful state; therefore he set a guard round about it, that man should approach it only by permission. But God is no respecter of persons, that candidates for such permission should vary. That tree of life was taken away, that it might not give eternal life to sinners in a state of sin. But Christ was given, that eternal life might still be had by all who repent of sin. Adam was the son of God, Luke 3: 38, before the fall; but by the fall, he and his posterity were cast out,—the title forfeited. "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." Then through belief in him, we may all be reinstated as the sons of God. He is then the tree of life, and the only fountain of life. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Now why should any refuse to come to Christ for life; asserting that man is immortal; and that they have no need? "For the wages of sin is death"; and we have all sinned. "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

WHAT CAN I DO FOR CHRIST?

This is the cry of every lover of Jesus, or ought to be. He should have the pre-eminence in all things. We should do those things that we know will please him. Let us consider what we should do. We are to do all things to his glory, because we are not our own. We have been bought with a price, even his precious blood. We are to reckon ourselves dead to the world, and alive to him, and walk as he walked, who went about doing good. We must have a willing mind, and then do what he has commanded. We are to abhor that which is evil in ourselves, and seek to be gentle, pitiful, loving, doing to our neighbor as we would be done by, and then our hearts will vibrate in harmony with heaven; then we shall want sinners to serve the Savior.

Dear Jesus, thou hadst a heart that felt for poor sinners, and eyes that wept for them. O Lord forgive my little love for thee, and give me a heart that can feel another's woe, and "weep with those that weep," and rejoice with those that rejoice; a tender heart that will feel the near approach of sin, a sensitive heart that shall take an alarm at the slightest temptation of the enemy of all righteousness.

We can please him by giving a kind word or a smile to one of his dear ones. It is all appreciated by him, for inasmuch as we do it to one of his little ones, we do it unto him. Let us not forget to love our enemies, and never render evil for evil to any man. When they curse, we must bless. What a heavenly frame of mind we enjoy, when we keep the narrow way and do his will. Then he smiles upon us, and causes joy and peace to abound. O how I long to see him. If we love and obey him here, in due time we shall be with him. Your sister, striving for the kingdom.

ITALY, NAPOLEON, AND THE POPE.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from Turin under date of Nov. 16th, says:

"In the eighth century Charlemagne built up the temporal power of the Papacy by the aid which he gave Adrian against Didier, king of the Lombards, and by restoring to that kingdom its ancient name of Italy. In this, the nineteenth century, the modern Charlemagne (Napoleon) gives the death blow to the sovereignty of the Popes by a measure which promises to restore to Italy the unity which she has lost. Of the manner in which so remarkable an event has been brought about, the official documents will by this time have informed you."

The above named paper makes the following comment: "The convention lately concluded between Napoleon and Victor Immanuel may be said to be the 'beginning of the end' of that hierarchial despotiom which, under the sovereignty of the Popes, has exercised for ages such an enslaveng influence upon Italy. From the moment that document received the signatures of the high contracting parties, the temporal power of the Papacy received its death blow. There was some reason to fear, as indeed was the case at first, that the true purport of the treaty would be misunderstood and its objects defeated through the hatred of (to) Napoleon, which has hitherto marked the conduct of Mazzini and his followers. All apprehension on this score has, as will be seen from the interesting letter which we publish from Turin, vanished. The good sense of the Italian people has recognized the wisdom of a measure which, though it delays for a short time the realization of their hopes in regard to Rome, places that city not the less surely within their grasp, while at the same time it avoids the perils of a struggle which would have ranged on the side of the Pope the whole Catholic feeling of Europe. Our correspondent gives just credit to the French Emperor for the origination of the treaty, and appositely remarks that this work of 'the modern Charlemagne' scarcely surpassed in its important bearings on the interests of humanity by that of his great predecessor, by whom the temporal sovereignty of the Pontiffs was built up. The full force of the statement has as yet to be appreciated. It is now upwards of a thousand years since Charlemagne accomplished the pious work which at once edified the world and strengthened the Papacy against external assaults."

In the foregoing we are led to notice how shrewd historians, without any reference to God's word, can see a marked period in the past of about a thousand years of Papal supremacy, commencing with Charlemagne and ending forever with Napoleon the Third. This end of Papacy, which even the worldly-wise so clearly perceive commenced with the French Revolution and rise of the Napoleon dynasty, then was "the beginning of the end" of Papacy; now comes the end.

Besides, the facts reflect some light. We can see how the policy of Napoleon since 1859 has been, and still continues to be, the unification of Italy; for the role is in his hands, not Victor Immanuel's. The patent also is his: "Go to the ballot box and choose your own rulers:" which was equivalent to saying, show your hatred to the Pope by annexing yourselves to Victor Immanuel. Thus the policy of Napoleon has been spoiling Papacy of its temporal power, yet all the while carrying (the whore—see Rev. 17: 3), protecting and sustaining by his armies; at the same time the kingdoms of Italy show their hatred of her—"eating her flesh" and ready to "burn her with fire." See verse 19. Now this convention between Napoleon and Victor Immanuel provides for the withdrawal of the French troops from Rome; which, judging from the past and the temper of the Italian people, will complete the overthrow of Papacy and the fulfillment of Rev. 17: 16, 17. So it would appear that the vision given the Seer from heaven near eighteen hundred years ago is passing before our eyes as an unveiled reality, and likely to be played out in 1866, for that is the limits of the convention.

We do not say this will bring the end of the dispensation, as many are predicting; but the end of Papacy; which gives room for the manifestation of a worse than it, under whose banner the kings of the earth and their armies will range themselves (see Rev. 17: 12–14, and Rev. 19: 19), to oppose our Lord and King.

Events are on the march. The scene of an awful drama will soon commence in Italy, and from thence remove and finish in the Holy Land. Strange and ominous things brood over the land of prophecy,—those countries lying upon Mediterranean on the North, West and East,—there quite safely may we expect the chief of the prophetic word fulfilled.—Selected.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

The following warning words are from the Chicago Journal, a careful, reliable paper, in no wise given to sensational articles. It tells a few plain facts, which anybody can see who will carefully consider the present condition of the country. But here is the trouble. As it was of old, so now—"My people will not consider," and so they rush blindly to ruin. Railroad speed in every thing is the order of the day; and the man who engages in business has got to put a double watch over himself, or he will soon become engrossed in worldly affairs, and leave religion, the prayer meeting, the Sabbath school, and attendance upon the ordinances of God's house to those who have the time to spend. Take care, brethren! The thorns which choke the word never grew so rank as now. Take care, lest that day come upon you unawares, and find you engrossed in the cares of this life.

"THE MANIA FOR SPECULATION.

There is one sign of the times that oppresses the heart of every wise and pure patriot. It is the speculation mania. It has taken hold of our people with unprecedented tenacity and unexampled prevalence. It holds on to them like a scar in the flesh, or a hereditary disease. It converts mild men into wild men; gentle men into gross men; civilized men into savages. It abolishes composure and gravity, and puts into their places a furious extravagance both of conduct and imagination, and enthrones the god GREED on the market stall, the store-counter and the wharf.

Speculation is the love of money in its rabidest expression. It is the love of money ripened into a madness for money. It requires no prophet's seer sight to foresee and to foretell the consequences of this wild, fierce, furious and insane itching of the palms of the hands of our people after that, the mere love of which, according to the Scriptures, is the root of all evil. Why, it would be an argument for atheism if this thing went on perpetually without the abrupt arrestment of it in frightful disaster. As for us, we cannot look upon this spectacle of enormous and abnormal avarice, cupidity, and lust for money, without coming to the melancholy conclusion that this war will have to reach this quarter of the country in some frightful shape or other before it accomplishes its errand of reformatory chastisement, which is declared by our moralists to be its errand to the whole nation. Warnings are uttered by preacher and by press to no purpose, and nothing but a universal and unexampled financial crash will bring our people to their right mind, and that may grind out of them the all-devouring greed for gain, which can be gotten out of them by no other means. Such is our fear."

THEOLOGICAL.

O, what a place Theologians tell,
Is that where the sinner hereafter shall dwell:
The fires are blazing,
And awful flames raising,
Pelting and melting,
And curling and whirling,
Ascending unending,
And flickering and bickering,
And smoking and choking,
And fuming consuming,
And wavering and quavering,
And snapping and cracking,
And whisking and twisting,
Creeping and sweeping,
High o'er all leaping,
And awfully roaring,
In cataracts pouring.
Such is the place, Theologians tell,
As that where the sinner hereafter shall dwell;
Where millions of souls shall eternally lie,
Tortured and burning, but never to die!
But moaning and groaning,
And tumbling and grumbling,
And crying and frying,
And hissing and twisting,
And hauling and sprawling,
And hideously bawling,
Raving and swearing,
And glaring and tearing,
And ramping and stamping,
And yearning and turning,
In agony burning,
While ages on ages are rolling away,
And saints are rejoicing in endless day;
And such is the place, Theologians tell,
As that where the sinner hereafter shall dwell.

Vermontville, Mich. LEWIS BUSH.

WHAT IS WANTED.

We want in you a christianity that is christian across counters, over dinner-tables, behind the neighbor's back, as in his face. We want in you a christianity that we can find in the temperance of the meal, in moderation of dress, in respect for authority, in amiability at home, in veracity and simplicity in mixed society. Rowland Hill used to say he would give very little for the religion of a man whose very dog and cat were not the better for his religion. We want fewer gossiping, slandering, gluttonous, peevish, conceited, bigoted christians.

To make them effectual, all our public religious measures, institutions, benevolent agencies, missions, need to be managed on a high-toned, scrupulous, and unquestionable scale of honor, without evasion, or partisanship, or overmuch of the serpent's cunning. The hand that gives away the Bible must be unspotted from the world. The money that sends the missionary to the heathen must be honestly earned. In short, both the two arms of the church—justice and mercy—must be stretched out, working for man, strengthening the brethren, or else your faith is vain, and ye are yet in your sins.—F. D. Huntington, D. D.

NEVER GET ANGRY.

It does no good. Some sins have a seeming compensation or apology, a present gratification of some sort; but anger has none. A man feels no better for it. It is really a torment; and when the storm of passion has cleared away, it leaves him to see that he has been a fool; and he has made himself a fool in the eyes of others, too. Who thinks well of an ill-natured man, who has to be approached in the most guarded and cautious way? Who wishes him for a neighbor, or a partner in business? He keeps all about him in the same state of mind as if they were living next to a hornet's nest or a rabid animal. As to prosperity in business, one gets along no better for getting angry. What if business is perplexing, and everything "goes by contraries," will a fit of passion make the winds more propitious, the grounds more productive, the markets more favorable? Will a bad temper draw customers, pay notes, and make creditors better natured? An angry man adds nothing to the welfare of society. Since, then, anger is useless, needless, disgraceful, without the least apology, and found only "in the bosom of fools," why should it be indulged in at all?

EASTERN MARRIAGE CUSTOM.

Formerly it was the universal custom in the East to provide at marriages a wedding garment for every guest who was invited to the wedding. These garments were very costly, but as the expense was defrayed by those who made the wedding, no invited guest had the right to plead poverty, or any other excuse why he might not wear one.

A few years ago, at the royal marriage of Sultan Mahmoud, every guest invited to the wedding had a wedding garment presented to him, made expressly for him by the order of the Sultan. Had any guest presumed to appear before him unclad, he would have considered his sovereign power insulted, and his kindness despised.

Hence Jesus made use of the facts in connection with this custom, to illustrate the alarming truth that any who should present themselves at the Marriage of the Lamb, unclothed in the robe of His righteousness, would be considered as despisers of his authority and love.

"MY WIFE IS THE CAUSE OF IT."

In is now more than forty years ago that Mr. L—— called at the house of Dr. B—— one very cold morning, on his way to H——. "Sir," said the doctor, "the weather is very frosty; will you not take something to drink before you start?" In that early day, ardent spirits were deemed indispensable to warmth in winter. When commencing a journey, and at every stopping-place along the road, the traveler used intoxicating drinks to keep him warm.

"No," said Mr. L——, "I never touch any thing of the kind, and I will tell you the reason: my wife is the cause of it. I had been in the habit of meeting some of our neighbors every evening, for the purpose of playing cards. We assembled at each others' shops, and liquors were introduced. After a while we met not so much for the purpose of playing as drinking, and I used to return home late in the evening, more or less intoxicated. My wife always met me at the door affectionately, and when I chided her for sitting up so late for me, she kindly replied, 'I prefer doing so, for I cannot sleep when you are out.'

This always troubled me, and I wished in my heart that she would only begin to scold me, for then I could have retorted and relieved my conscience. But she always met me with the same gentle and loving spirit.

Things passed on thus for some time, when at last I resolved that I would, by remaining very late and returning home much intoxicated, provoke her displeasure so much as to cause her to lecture me; when I meant to answer her with severity, and thus by creating another issue between us, unburden my bosom of its present trouble.

I returned in such a plight about four o'clock in the morning. She met me at the door with 'Come in, husband; I have just been making a warm fire for you, because I knew you would be cold. Take off your boots and warm your feet, and here is a cup of warm coffee.'

Doctor, that was too much. I could not endure it any longer, and I resolved that moment that I would never touch another drop while I lived; and I never will."

He never did. He lived and died practising total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks, in a village which intemperance has ravaged as much as any other in this state.

That man was my father, and that woman my mother. The facts above related I received from the doctor himself, on a visit to my native village, not long since.

May we not safely assert, that were there more wives like my blessed mother, there would be fewer confirmed drunkards? My father was a man of generous impulses and social instincts, just the man to be led into habits of inebriation, and just the man also to feel the impression such gentleness was calculated to make.

Let those wives who witness with agony the commencement of any evil habits in their husbands, be encouraged to try what patient, persevering love can do. Let their motto be, "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness."

BREAKING OXEN.—When you first put a yoke on your two year old steers, coax them with an apple or an ear of soft corn, then they will hold up their heads and be glad to follow you. No whip will be needed at the first yoking. Let the yoke and the soft corn be associated in their minds, and they will never be shy of the yoke; but if you make use of force, they will hold down their heads to keep them from the blows. After you have taught them to follow you around in the yoke, and that it will not injure them to carry it, you can hitch them on before the older oxen, and make them take the lead. The driver should go beside them occasionally, with a switch stick or a light and short whip, but he will not have any need to beat them, except in extreme cases.

RIGHT AND WRONG.—Some congregations strengthen their minister, others weaken him; some speak of his good qualities, express interest in his sermons, and confidence in his integrity; others criticize whatever he says or does, magnify his faults, and report his frailties. Now who takes the wiser course? Who acts the most christian-like? Who serves the interest of the church best? Brethren sometimes forget that whatever injures a minister, injures the church; every blow struck against a pastor falls upon his people.

LITTLE KINDNESSES.—Small acts of kindness, how pleasant and desirable do they make life! Every dark object is made light by them, and every tear of sorrow is brushed away. When the heart is sad, and despondency sits at the entrance of the soul, a trifling kindness drives away despair, and makes the path cheerful and pleasant.

Receipt for making a person useful.—Do every thing in its proper time; keep every thing in its proper use; put every thing in its proper place.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

HYGIENE.—NO. 2.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

Having in my last number considered one very prolific cause of disease, I shall now consider its kindred cause of disease—improper drinks and drinks improperly taken. As with food, so with drinks, there are some which, if taken in a state of health, prove injurious to the vital forces; and others intended to promote health, but if taken improperly, prove also a cause of disease.

have done a vast amount of good, and an untold amount of mischief. Alcohol is a valuable article, as a therapeutic agent, but beyond this, it should seldom or never be used. It is composed of hydrogen, carbon and oxygen, in the proportion of about fourteen, fifty-two and thirty-four parts to the hundred. Ardent spirit is composed of alcohol and water, in nearly equal proportions. Alcohol acts locally as an irritant poison. It causes heat, pain, redness, and inflammation, with a condensation of the part to which it is applied. Its effects are chemical; it coagulates liquid albumen or fibrin, and thereby increases the firmness and density of the tissues to which it is applied, while the irritation and inflammation which it causes arises in part from the resistance, or reaction, of the vital powers to the chemical action of the poison. In addition to its chemical action upon the albumen and fibrin, its highly pungent and local excitant properties are sufficient to produce irritation and inflammation of the part to which it is applied.

When taken into the stomach, its first effects are observed by a frequency and fulness of the pulse, a flushed face, and animated countenance, cerebral excitement, an increased acuteness of ideas, and a joyous state of feeling generally. The individual soon becomes loquacious, and often very indiscreet in his language. If more liquor is taken, the intellectual faculties become impaired, the powers of volition are disturbed, and the stage commonly known as intoxication is established. In this state, the individual becomes delirious and loses the power to control the action of the voluntary muscles. Increased vascular excitement, with frequent nausea and vomiting, are usual concomitants of this stage, which is usually followed by a strong disposition to sleep, which is accompanied by copious perspiration. Headache, thirst, disgust for food, and lassitude, are some of the symptoms manifested upon the recovery from sleep. Where large quantities are taken at a time, coma, or true apoplexy comes on. The face is livid or pale, the respiration stertorous, and the mouth frothy. The pulse is full, slow, or laborious, in some cases barely felt at the wrist. Occasionally convulsions ensue. In some cases, true apoplexy supervenes, with an extravasation of blood into the brain. Dr. Ogston states that, in one instance, he found about four ounces of fluid in the ventricles of the brain possessing all the physical properties of alcohol.

I was called last winter to see a young man, who was stopping in our place, and who they supposed to be dying. Several young men had gathered for a social party. Nothing appeared wrong with this man, until he fell on the floor senseless. Upon inquiry, I found that he had taken nearly a quart of gin in the space of an hour. On examination, I found him in a profound coma. I could detect no pulse at the wrist; heart beating slowly and laboriously, there being also intermissions of several seconds between each half dozen beats; the mouth open and frothy; a deep, death-like rattle in the throat; the eyes presented the appearance of a dead man's eyes. It was upward of two hours, with the most vigorous exertions, that I could bring him to a state of consciousness.

The moral degradation which it causes is often truly deplorable; while the morbid effects resulting from its use are very numerous; among which may be named delirium tremens, insanity, disease of the liver, such as a tuberculated state of that organ, fatty degeneration, torpor, cancerous condition, enlargement, jaundice, visceral obstruction; also impaired appetite, dyspepsia, chronic irritation or inflammation of the stomach, and even cancer and thickening of its walls.

The continued use of this article exerts as baneful an influence over the mind. It impairs the memory, dethrones reason, destroys the morals, kills the social feelings, and effectually blunts all the higher and noble qualities of man's nature.

In certain pathological conditions of the system, the use of brandy or whiskey, unadulterated, is of decided advantage. But the difficulty of obtaining a pure article renders it almost hazardous to prescribe it at all. It is next thing to impossible to find either of the above articles which has not been adulterated with strychnine, sulphuric acid, logwood, etc.

What is true of alcoholic liquors, is true, to a great extent, of beer, ale, cider, soda and mineral waters. Were I to choose between any of the long catalogue in the market, I should take pure rye whiskey as the least injurious.

I come now to speak of other articles in common use. I allude to

TEA AND COFFEE.

While there can be no definite rules laid down with regard to their use, yet there are certain temperaments or conditions of the body in which these articles seem to produce no marked injury. But as these conditions are seldom found, and as I cannot point out to the non-medical reader, the exact peculiarity of condition, or idiosyncrasy, I will say, as a general rule, do not use them.

Tea at first exalts the nervous powers, producing an exhilarating feeling, but is followed by a corresponding depression of spirits. Hence, to the nervous temperament it is injurious,—more so than coffee.

Coffee is decidedly more objectionable. When taken in its natural state,—and in large quantities, it is a rank poison. It deadens nervous sensibility, and renders the stomach and liver torpid. It is liable to produce headache, constipation and indigestion. One great objection to the use of either tea or coffee is, they are taken hot and in large quantities, which is very injurious. Hot drinks relax the muscular coat of the stomach, and thus retard digestion.

The great type of drinks is

PURE SPRING WATER.

Water is universally present in all the tissues and fluids of the body. It is abundant in the blood and secretions, where its presence is indispensable in order to give them the fluidity which is necessary to the performance of their functions. But however essential water is to the economy, if not properly taken, it may prove a cause of disease. Water when taken very cold, and in large quantities, when the system is in a state of excitement, proves decidedly destructive to health, and may prove suddenly fatal. But a few days ago, I noticed by the Cleveland Herald, a dancer, whose professional name was Millie Francis, fell dead upon the stage from the effects of a glass of ice-water, taken just before she appeared to dance. She had left the stage from a successful dance, and being called upon to repeat it, took the fatal draught, which ended her life in full view of the audience.

Ice-water is injurious, and should never be used. In warm weather, when the system is excessively heated, persons should be careful not to take too great an amount of water at a time, and avoid taking very cold water.

I will notice, in this place, another great cause of disease. And while I consider it after having considered the use of alcoholic drink, yet I candidly believe that it has been the cause of as great an amount of disease and suffering as the use of intoxicating drinks. I refer to the use of tobacco. Without attempting to array statistics relative to the amount used in the United States in one year, I will proceed directly to give its physiological effects.

Tobacco is an acro-narcotic poison. In large doses, it produces extreme nausea and vomiting, purging, great prostration, and other symptoms of its acro-narcotic qualities; such as languor, muscular relaxation, trembling of the limbs, faintness, great anxiety, impaired vision, confused intellect, pulse small and feeble, respiration laborious, cold and clammy state of the surface; and, in extreme cases convulsions, alarming and even fatal prostration. The habitual use of tobacco produces a long train of diseases, such as hysteria, insanity, dyspepsia, fits, palpitation of the heart, and various impurities of the blood. Its action is chiefly upon the nervous system, and prostrates it to an alarming extent.

The habit of chewing and smoking, now so common throughout the world, is one of the most filthy and loathsome of any to which the perverted taste of man can become habituated. These vices so much relished by some are equally obnoxious to others; and if we say nothing of the long list of diseases which they produce; there is still enough to call for reformation; and every physician and philanthropist should raise his voice against their progress and existence. These evil habits beget others. One vice, or species of intemperance, is almost invariably associated with others; and those who are so loud in their protestations against the use of ardent spirits, should give some attention, at least, to this twin evil of the rum bottle.

CANCER.

BRO. GRANT:—Seeing a communication in the Crisis about a poor sister suffering with cancer of the eye, it may benefit her to use the fig poultice. I have used it successfully. I have treated cancers with various remedies, and have seen others treat them, but I never saw a cancer of the eye cured until 1861. In the fall of 1860, a woman about thirty-six years of age applied to me, on account of a very distressing headache, for which I treated her some weeks, when I discovered the left eye was very sensitive, and somewhat diseased. By careful examination, I found unmistakable evidence of cancer. I reported the case to physicians, and their judgment coincided with mine. Her pain was almost too great for endurance. She thought she must go crazy. I gave Arsenicum and Conium Maculatum, 1st trituation alternate, and applied the figs, boiling two Turkey figs in a pint of new milk, split one and put it on the eye, hot as could be borne, renewed at bedtime, early in the morning, and at noon she washed with a little of the milk and drank two or three times a day as much of the milk as her stomach would bear. She was relieved from the first. The cancer discharged, affected the eye badly, but healed in about three months, the eye safe and sound. The cure seemed incredible. Patience and perseverance are requisite for a cure. May the Lord bless and make this useful.

Very affectionately yours,

CONFESSION OF A TOBACCO CHEWER.

I commenced the filthy habit of chewing tobacco in my youthful days, and for many years was a faithful slave to the bed-bug killing stuff. Two years ago, I abolished slavery, cleaned out the old tobacco house, swept and garnished it, and I do not think I could get seven abominations more filthy to put there. The habit never put one cent in my pocket, but took out dollars. The habit never enlarged my heart to run in the ways of God's commandments; it never moved me to faithfulness in the service of God.

I thank the Lord I am a free man,—free in Christ Jesus,—and I hope never to defile the temple of God with the nasty weed again. I never felt the approbation of God, not in one instance, in the use of tobacco. It is a useless, needless, unnecessary habit, therefore sinful. One says it is not so bad a practice as some. Very true; but little foxes spoil the vine. Sin is a transgression of the law, little or great. Money cannot win me back again. I drink no tea nor coffee, and have not for fifty years, except in case of sickness. My constitution has no use for it. It is injurious to the human system. But, says one, "I cannot do without it." If you would go to God with your infirmities, I guess you would do as well. Jesus took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses.

I am a reader of the World's Crisis. I admire its principle. I think it advocates the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

TORMENTED WITH KINDNESS.

This may seem to be a contradiction of terms, but preachers will understand what this means, especially that class that like the old-fashioned religion and manners and food. They want but little seeming respect paid to them, for it torments them, although you mean it for kindness. They don't want the best room to sit in, or bed to sleep in; it is generally damp and lightly clad, and your kindness torments them with a cold for weeks. They don't want you to tell all you know, or ask them to tell all they know, by following them from room to room, when they are trying to get alone to collect their thoughts.

Some are so kind, they will make conversation to keep up the minister's spirits, when it is only a torment to them. They don't want a great outlay when invited to dinner, and wait one or two hours, after old-fashioned times, for eating dinner; and then pass everything two or three times, urging them to take, and eat. Your kindness proves a torment. Get what you have got, thank God for that, and let them get or tell what they want. I am tired of visits, modes, and forms and flatteries paid to fellow worms.

REMEDY FOR DIPHTHERIA.

"We have just received a recipe for the cure of diphtheria, from a physician who says that of nineteen hundred cases in which it has been used, not a single patient has been lost. The treatment consists in thoroughly swabbing the back of the mouth and throat with a wash made thus:—Table salt, two drachms; black pepper, golden seal, nitrate of potash, alum, one drachm each. Mix and pulverize; put into a tea cup half full of water, stir well, and then fill up with good vinegar. Use every half hour, one, two, and four hours, as recovery progresses. The patient may swallow a little each time. Apply one ounce each of spirits turpentine, sweet oil, and aqua ammonia, mixed, every hour to the whole of the throat, and to the breast bone every four hours, keeping flannel on the part."

SEE HOW THESE CHRISTIANS LOVE ONE ANOTHER.

Yes, "angel-minded they would love,"
And brighter bands for them are wove
Than silken, golden ties; than earthly hopes can name;
Each heart awakened up to ble s,
"Breathes forth a purer tenderness,
A true, a heavenly frame."

"'Tis love indeed, yet not such love
As wandering hearts are wont to prove"
In this illusive world; the dreamy hopes of youth,
They love through "sorrow; and in trial,
They teach each other self-denial,
And pledge their mutual truth."

"Each bears the cross, and every day
Together learn to watch and pray;"
Each other's burdens bear "in the high trust of heaven,"
And from the mount of holy faith
View calm life's route—the stream of death,
In love to heaven given.

They give themselves to Christ away,
They wait the Restitution day.

THE GREAT LATTER-DAY FABLE.

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."—2 TIM. 4: 3-4.

A fable is falsehood under the semblance of truth. In the Scripture sense, it is error substituted for truth, and taught in the name of the Lord, as his revealed word and will. In no other form can falsehood be so intensely wicked, inexcusable and ruinous in its effects. Why this labored groaning and travailing "in pain together until now" of this "whole creation"? It is but the result of teaching a lie for the truth by "the father of lies." Thus were our first parents deceived, dethroned, and disinherited, and ruin entailed on their posterity for long and weary ages.

From the prophetic stand-point, occupied by the apostle, he clearly saw in the distant future that "the last days" would be marked with error, abounding wickedness, and fearful apostasy. As a matter of course, turning "away their ears from the truth," they would be "turned unto fables." But has any such thing actually come to pass, or is it still in the future? The honest inquirer after truth must be satisfied that what was then prospective has now become historic, and is being transacted before our eyes in the form of fables, yet strenuously demanding to be regarded as vastly and vitally important truth, worthy of consideration.

Mormonism is as it were a thing of but yesterday, and is doubtless in some sense one of the wonders of our age—a most marked development of our times. It has deluded and seduced its thousands in all parts of the civilized world, and moved them as the wind moves the waves of the sea. Still they come from the four winds by thousands, to a fabulous promised land, and a spurious latter-day saint-ship. Here, then, we have in verity a gigantic latter-day fable, most clearly answering to the apostolic prediction.

Another recent development, if possible still more remarkable in its character, is Spiritism; or, more properly, "Demonism"; the modern revival of ancient witchcraft, punishable by death, under the Mosaic law. This Satanic delusion has, in less than twenty years, spread from family to family, from village to village, from city to city, and from nation to nation, like a fearful contagion, wafted on the wings of the wind, till many thousands have become its victims. Among these are many who once professed to be experimental christians; many of the rich and great of this world, even those who sit on earthly thrones, are "giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils."—1 Tim 4: 1. The Satanic origin of this strange movement is clearly indicated "by its fruits" and its high and blasphemous pretensions. As a party, it disclaims all party, and proposes an entire reconstruction of society, civil, social, and religious, thus most wonderfully fulfilling prophecy, "saying, let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us." Thus they propose to disenthrall the race, usher in the golden age of millennial glory, build up and establish the everlasting kingdom of God in this world. They propose to do all this, it is true, somewhat as do our modern churches; that is, by the mighty march of mind, the onward movement and potency of the arts and sciences, as connected with a high state of refinement and civilization. They now boastingly claim to be numbered by millions, and are represented in national councils by "mediums" (familiar spirits), male and female, from all parts of the land. Indeed, it would seem that by their "lying wonders," after the manner of Satan, they are to overrun, if not rule our world, before their real character is estimated. Who can fail to see in all this still another startling latter-day fable, answering in all its development to the foreshadowing of prophecy? Though Satan, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, has doubtless accomplished wonders of moral ruin by these modern delusions, and will doubtless accomplish much more, his efforts are by no means confined to these. He has other delusions adapted to other conditions, and different casts of mind.

There is still another fable to be noticed, which, for the sake of distinction, deserves to be called the great latter-day fable. This development of error and its effects may be regarded as the great strategic movement of the "father" of lies. It contemplates a most deliberate and extended influence for evil. In this, especially, Satan approaches us under the guise of "an angel of light," with a theory, though all his own, yet, a theory more grave and pious in its character, better adapted to a higher moral order of mind, after the type of his course with Eve in paradise, proposing great good where ruin is intended. Moreover, this fable claims to be sustained by overwhelming Scripture testimony, and therefore as orthodox in the estimation of many pious people; hence, the more dangerous in its object and work of ruin. In brief, it is the theory of this world's evangelization, or conversion to Christ, by the instrumentality of sinful, mortal man, and thus becoming the spiritual kingdom of God. It had its origin in the corruptions of Popery, and is a part and parcel of the rubbish of the dark ages,—a mere Papal invention, handed down from the Romish church. It claimed that the Pope was king, and the church universal was his kingdom; hence, the persecution and massacre of heretics, who dare rebel against this universal king, Christ's vicegerent on earth. Protestants have, of course, modified this church-kingdom notion to their liking. They protest against the Pope as king, also the extermination of heretics; yet hold on to the main features of the theory. That is, that this world is to be converted, and all nations and governments are to be subjected to the church, which is finally to absorb and rule this world with undisputed sway, and that thus it will be Christ's kingdom and reign in his personal absence; that is, before his appearing, and in the personal absence of all his saints who have died in the Lord, from righteous Abel to that time. Yes, a reign of Christ before the first resurrection, and of course before "the last enemy," which is death, shall be destroyed. This theory so absurd, and yet so pleasing to the carnal mind, was revised by Daniel Whitby, a learned English divine, and author of more than forty works, who died 1720. This theory, as thus revised, is known among theological works as "the Whitbyan theory." His style was fascinating, and he gave to his theory all the embellishments of a highly attractive romance; yet claimed for it the divine sanction. His views thus matured, and adorned by the verbiage of a master mind, have insidiously worked their way into nearly all our standard theological works, and diffused themselves through every form of church literature, and have thus become exceedingly popular with those who have neither time nor disposition to search the Holy Scriptures daily, to see if these things are so.

Thus, unwittingly, by slow and almost imperceptible degrees, has the church drifted away from "the faith which was once delivered to the saints"; and, instead thereof, is now giving heed to fables, and the commandments of men, after the ruinous example of the fallen Jewish church. Thus has the deceiver, apparently without scarcely an effort, entrenched himself in his stronghold of error, which, all things considered, may probably be regarded as his master-piece. So deceptive is it, that a hasty glance at this delusion reveals nothing very objectionable or alarming. Verily the serpent lies here concealed under his drapery of gold. It would take volumes to fully and faithfully state the danger and ruin designed and brought about by this device of the destroyer.

First. The sacred Scriptures do not teach that this world will be converted to experimental godliness, the kingdom and reign of Christ, with all his saints, before his second appearing and the first resurrection. 1 Cor. 15: 23. Hence, to teach it implies a gross perversion of the word of God. The prophets, Christ, and the apostles, are positively silent in reference to this world's subjugation by grace, and conversion to Christ. All the religious teachers in this world may safely be challenged to adduce proof, from either the Old or New Testament Scriptures, of a solitary promise of any such event under the present gospel dispensation. The notion conflicts with the whole tenor of divine revelation, and is built wholly on conjecture, assumption, and inference, without a single positive "thus saith the Lord." It is therefore not worthy of the least confidence, and should be exposed, condemned and avoided by every lover of God's word.

Second. Another great danger of this system in order to make out the theory of this world's conversion, with some plausible semblance of truthfulness, is a most unwarrantable and dangerous license is taken with the Scriptures, to torture them, if possible, into subservience to a beloved theory. All correct, just, and safe rules of Bible exposition are outraged. Very many modern teachers seem to overlook the vastly important fact, that it is a most horrible thing to attempt the perversion of the oracles of God, under any pretense whatever. Too many set themselves about this fearful work with the utmost self-complacency, as if it was their right so to do. Of such it is said, "deceiving and being deceived." Aided by the glosses of learned authors, they garble the Scriptures, and turn them into a sense such as their fancy or prejudice might dictate,—a sense which God never designed.

To illustrate. These modern teachers of the figurative and mystical assume that the thirty-fifth and sixtieth chapters of the prophet Isaiah, with all similar Scriptures, are to be understood in a figurative sense, and not as they read. Thus a door for world-wide conjecture and speculation is thrown open which, if indulged in, leads directly to semi-infidelity, and a want of confidence in the revealed word. This class of teachers stoutly deny that those Scriptures have any reference to that new economy and order of things to be revealed and ushered in at the return of our absent Lord and King. They wholly fail to see their harmony and beauty, as referring to that personal coming and literal kingdom and reign of Christ, as the son and heir on David's throne, according to the Davidic covenant, so often stated in the prophetic promises. By a strange obtuseness, they seem wholly to misapprehend the import of the prayer taught by our adorable Lord,—"Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven";—that is, done on earth both perfectly and universally. They would not have all this really so, but wrest this glorious object of our hope from us, by lowering it down to something less scriptural, something incomprehensible and vague.

How apparent and alarming is this method of taking away from the word of God. There is not a damnable heresy extant, which may not be sustained and promulgated, Bible in hand, if we may thus pervert its true meaning. How true, "while men slept"—yes, "watchmen,"—an "enemy came and sowed tares." But who is this "enemy"? Christ answers, "The enemy that soweth them is the devil"; but that those who claim to be shepherds to the flock of Christ should not assist him.

Third. Another dangerous tendency of the false teaching, that this world is to be evangelized by human instrumentality, is that it flatters human pride, and misleads christians in reference to their proper work assigned them by the great Chief Shepherd. It is, indeed, a fact, or a fable, that the gospel commission authorized those to whom it was given, to convert the world and set up the everlasting kingdom of Christ on this earth. To set this question for ever at rest, let us read that commission again: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," and the whole world shall be converted, and thus become the kingdom of Christ. Not so. What a most fearful thing it is thus to add to or diminish from the word of God, to accommodate our notions. But the word as it is: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." In strict harmony with this are all other gospel promises. When this harmony is disturbed by reckless meddlers, all is confusion, and the cause of infidelity is directly subserved. It is certainly high time that the object and intention of the gospel were fully understood, at least by those who claim to be sent of God to preach it. The legitimate work of the gospel is to take out of the Gentile nations a people for the Lord. Acts 15: 14. These are children of Abraham and heirs of the inheritance, or kingdom, "according to the promise." Nothing more or less. Not satisfied with this, puny mortal man would arrogate to himself the prerogatives and work of God himself, and ostentatiously talk of building up the everlasting kingdom of the King of kings; a work which God has commanded neither men nor angels to do.

That is a significant expression, embracing a fact of great importance, that the stone of Daniel 2: 45, symbolizing the everlasting kingdom of God our Savior, was "cut out of the mountain without hands," closely harmonizing with the fact stated in reference to the kingdom itself,—"shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed? and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Mark, all this is done without hands; that is, without human agency, and done by the God of heaven. Christ will set up his own kingdom without hands, in his own time. It will be a work all his own, as much as was the creation of the first earth and paradise. This is clearly shadowed forth in the wonderful manifestations of his marvelous power when on earth, in the days of his humiliation. It would seem all might see the point of delusion that the deceiver has imposed upon us. Some great work is to be accomplished then and there; while present duty now and here—is neglected. There is mighty planning, and great outlays for the conversion of heathen, far away; while our popular churches, thus engaged, neglect the heathen thronging our streets at home, without even furnishing them with a sitting in our splendid houses of worship; so that it is not now a general fact as when Christ preached, "the poor have the gospel preached unto them." In the light of these facts, how evidently is this a Satanic strategy and latter-day fable.

Fourth. Still another evil of the notion of this world's conversion by men and money is, it obscures the true object of the believer's hope, by presenting as a substitute a spurious object, which in the very nature of things can have no vitalizing power, or serve "as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast," neither is this hope lively or a purifying one. Thus the motive power of the church is stolen away by "the father" of lies, and what is the result? Surely, dead formality and lukewarm professors abound, who have the Laodicean type so evidently upon them; "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." Rev. 3: 17. One Scripture among the many will serve to give a distinct view of the glorious object of the christian's hope, as follows:—

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him, purifyeth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John, 3: 2-3. Observe not a hope, but "this hope;" it is distinct from all other hopes, for it purifies its possessor. What is offered as a substitute, by those who would wrest this hope from us? Surely, nothing that will compare with it;—whether it be the world's conversion, the bliss of departed spirits, or a state of happiness, called "heaven," in some far-off port of God's great universe,—a something so vague, indefinite, and etherial in its nature, that the mind has no power to grasp it, or rest its faith and hope upon it. What honest, reflecting mind, can fail to see that this is even now the state of things that is really upon us? Surely, "an enemy hath done this."

Fifth. The last evil here noticed, which this popular delusion has identified with it, is the very embodiment of the scoffer's great latter-day heresy; namely, "My Lord delayeth his coming." How soothing this to a rebellious race, especially those who have a name to live while they are dead; and how well calculated to encourage, harden, and deceive them in their sinful pursuits, and forgetfulness of God. They are assured by the highest church authority, that there is no danger whatever of the coming of Christ in their day, for the world is yet to be converted before that solemn event, which, from all appearances, will take many ages yet to accomplish. This fatal peace-cry is now the popular teaching of the churches through their ministers, and standard authors, and at the same time, it is the world's sweet lullaby, and probably doing more to deceive and ruin mankind, than any other of Satan's devices. Tell the masses that our world is now progressing in the right direction, and will continue so to do till her greatness and glory will be complete, and they will grasp after it with more avidity, and worship at the polluted shrine of their beloved idols with more intense devotion. Tell them truthfully that "the heavens and the earth, which are now, ... are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men;" and they will scoff, be restless; in short, they "will not endure" this "sound doctrine;" but dream and talk of "a good time coming" to this sin-cursed world.

How marvelously descriptive is the language of the apostle, of what has now become history, and is positively before our eyes. "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." How restless and listless a large and popular assembly at once becomes, when the faithful watchman assures them that the signs of the times clearly indicate that the day of the Lord is at hand; the coming and kingdom of Christ is at hand, even at the door. This "sound doctrine" comes in dreadful contact with their worldly policy. It threatens to uproot their false hopes; it at once proposes to crucify their lusts, pride, fashions, and self-seeking. No less truthful and marked is the prophetic description of the course they will pursue for relief thus: "But after their own lusts shall they reap to themselves teachers." No honest person can fail to see how this is now fulfilled to the letter, in the present mode of choosing ministers, to run our popular religious organizations, so as to place and keep them if possible in the ascendancy, as a thing of mere worldly policy, after their own carnal desire; yet all in the name of the Lord. The natural ideal from the language, "heap to themselves teachers," is that of abundance of teachers of their own seeking and choice; a thing all their own, and not in the Divine order of gospel teaching. Their "itching ears" will not endure the whole gospel,—"the truth as it is in Jesus." By such subtle influences has the world and the church been brought to that state so clearly indicated by the significant question of our Lord, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"

In this state of delusive unbelief will "the day of the Lord" break upon this guilty world "as a thief in the night;" as came the flood in the days of Noah; as came the fiery storm in the days of Lot, on the cities of the plain; as comes the lightning flash from a thunder cloud, and "as a snare on the unsuspecting animal shall it come on all" (generally) "them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Such is the import of Scripture teaching throughout the sacred word. How this can be is no longer a mystery. It is already revealed in passing events in the surroundings of the present hour. The fatal spell is already upon the world to be broken only by the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God.

THE SEALED BOOK.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been looking a little over Bro. Thurman's "Sealed Book of Daniel opened;" and although I don't agree with it in every particular, some of it thank God, is meat in due season. And as for my part, I would as soon believe, on the authority of God's word, that there were 483 years "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," to the birth of Christ, as to believe Ptolemy, or any other man.

I should advise every body to read the book, and gather up all the wheat therein. And then when soft words and hard arguments come along, the chaff will all be blown away. Don't think, brethren, that I am going to show you the chaff, it is the wheat that I am after.

Knowledge has increased till the seals have fallen off, not by this man, or that man, but by the power of the Lion of the tribes of Judah. Let us judge not, but keep meek; be jealous of no glory, but give God the praise.

If I am ever again disappointed in definite time, may it through God keep me humble, still searching for evidence of the return of my blessed Master; for I had rather be disappointed ten thousand times before, than once after his return. May we all have the good spirit of Daniel, and be so earnest in supplication and prayer, so full of the love of God, as to fear no disappointment here, if we are so unspeakably happy as to receive no disappointment there, when our Lord comes.

I believe, as heretofore, that the Lord's children will have definite time when he comes. Failures and disappointments will never destroy the argument on definite time. Thank God "the wise shall understand." Let us strive to keep out of darkness and be wise, having understanding, ready and waiting for him.

WHY MUST WE LOVE?

Why must we love, when our cup of bliss
So soon must be o'erthrown?
Why must we love, ere the thrilling kiss
Is cold on our brow? alas, we miss
The wonted smile, the sweet caress,
The love that we deemed our own.

Why must we love, when the warmest vow
Is made but to be forgot?
When fondly we dream of the truth-writ brow,
Too soon in sad disappointment to bow,
For alas! the bright dream has vanished now,
That with wild'ring bliss was fraught.

Why must we love, when so soon must close
The fleeting joys of Time?
When the voice, that in happy music flows,
Will soon be hushed, and the cheek that glows
With the tint of health, like the blushing rose,
Will fade in its summer prime.

Why must we love, when the golden chain
Must be severed link by link?
O! will they be united again?
Ah yes; when the cruel Tyrant's reign
Forever is o'er,—when the cup of pain
And death we cease to drink;

When the glorious King of kings shall come,
Each link of love's riven chain
He'll bind again in that blissful home,
On earth restored to its Eden-bloom,
Where the flowers of life's tree breathe rich perfume,
And the saints in his kingdom reign.

COMMUNION WITH GOD AND HIS CHURCH.

Those who want communion with God in this world, must enjoy it with him in his church, except it be in cases of isolated ones, who are far from their brethren, or so feeble and infirm that they cannot assemble with them in religious worship.

"Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."—Mal. 3: 16, 17. "And let us consider one another, to provoke unto love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."—Heb. 10: 24, 25. "Therefore, comfort yourselves TOGETHER, and edify one another, even as also ye do."—1 Thess. 5: 11.

The maintenance of christian fellowship in church association, and under church organization and discipline, in the midst of fiery trials and schisms, seems to be essential to one's salvation. Those who from various motives, excuses, offences, trials and injuries, break away and go out from christian sympathy and discipline, and the order and ordinances of the Lord's body, which is the church, over which he is the head, and in the midst of which he dwells, place themselves in a condition opposed by the word of God, and the example of holy men of God, and are exposed to temptations which they cannot withstand.

My own observation for nearly twenty-five years, in connection with the Advent body, has been,—that those brethren who have left us as a people, and our Advent churches, and have not returned to our number, have never, in a single instance, bettered their own spiritual condition, or enlarged their field of usefulness; but rather have lost in both. And many have made complete shipwreck of faith. "Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." Acts 27: 31. We must abide in the Ark, where God and his people are, amid the storms and billows of the sea of time, until the voyage is over, when the vessel that conveyed us (the old ship of Zion), will go to pieces near the other shore; when special divine interposition will save us from the wreck.

"They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us; but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us."—1 John 2: 19.

"I hear that there be divisions (schisms) among you; and I partly believe it. For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you."—1 Cor. 11: 18, 19.

Where communion with God in the midst of his people becomes irksome, and finally ceases in this world, it is like the raven in the ark, which, being restless with its confinement, seeks to be released; and, when allowed to take its flight from the window, wanders "to and fro," feeding upon every old carcass that comes within its flight, and is never heard of more. "Because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved; and for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2: 10-12.

Communion with God and his people, in the midst of his church, where "thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and stay of the truth," is like the gentle dove, which, being let go from the ark, finds "no rest for the sole of her foot" until she returns; and being again free to use her liberty, returns again with an "olive leaf" in "her mouth," and there remains until the renewed earth blooms in its Eden glories, and the ransomed of God come with singing unto Zion.

THE "SEVEN TIMES."

Are they prophetic? Or do they represent simply the intensity of Israel's chastisement? In other words, do they signify a seven fold severity of punishment, in four installments of sevenfold intensity, or do they indicate the duration of this chastisement, four times mentioned?

1. What are the ingredients of this chastisement? Ans. "Terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart; and ye shall sow your seed in vain; for your enemies shall eat it, ... and ye shall be slain before your enemies; they that hate you shall reign over you." (Lev. 26: 16, 17.) All this punishment is mentioned before the "seven times" are spoken of. Is it possible to have a temporal punishment seven times more severe than the above? No; for here is "terror," "consumption," "ague," "sorrow of heart," being robbed of their crops after sowing them, being "slain" by their enemies, and being reigned over by those that should "hate" them. Can Moses mean that the Israelites should receive a chastisement seven times more severe than this? No; for it never befel them. And can Moses mean that after this seven fold severity of punishment, that another chastisement should be visited upon them seven times as severe as the preceding sevenfold severity of punishment, that is, forty-nine times as severe as the punishment first mentioned? And does Moses mean that another seven-fold chastisement is to follow this—that is, seven times forty-nine, in point of severity, or 343 times more severe than the punishment first mentioned? And does Moses also mean that a fourth chastisement is to succeed this enormous punishment, seven times more severe than the last great chastisement: that is, seven times 343, or 2401 times more severe than the punishment first mentioned? Who can adopt an exposition that will involve such conspicuous absurdities? Thus all can see that the principle of seven-fold severity of punishment cannot be the true interpretation. History shows that this principle has not been acted upon in the past.

2. Can the "seven times" signify seven distinct installments of this specific chastisement, four times repeated, making twenty-eight such installments in all? No; for history negates this interpretation,—no such distinct and repeated strokes of wrath have been visited upon that people, including in each stroke the elements of the first punishment, namely: "terror," "consumption," slaughter, and dispersion among their enemies. I repeat, neither seven, or four times seven such separate installments of punishment, (including the elements of the punishment first mentioned) have ever become matters of history in the past. This fact forbids such an exposition.

3. As the seven times cannot be understood to signify either seven separate installments of a specific punishment, or a seven-fold severity of a special punishment, without involving both an unreasonable and an untruthful principle, we are compelled to admit that they refer to the duration of a punishment involving their long dispersion,—one long measurement four times mentioned.—Voice of the West.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER FOUR.

We learn that "the wise shall understand." Jesus says in John 8: 31, 32,—"If ye continue in my word, ... ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." The secret purposes of God were revealed to the prophets. Amos 3: 7;—"The Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." For proof we have only to refer to the days of Noah. Gen. 6: 3;—"The Lord said, My Spirit shall not always strive with man, . . . yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years." 5th ver.;—"God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth." 7th ver.;—"And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created, from the face of the earth." 13th ver.;—"And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me, for the earth is filled with violence." By this, we find that God did not destroy the earth by water until he had revealed his secret to Noah, one hundred and twenty years before it came to pass.

It was the same with respect to the cities of the plain. He did not destroy them until he had revealed his secret to Abraham. Gen. 18: 17;—"And the Lord said, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do?" 20th ver.;—"The cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great; . . . their sin is very grievous." Gen. 19: 13;—"We will destroy this place, (Sodom and Gomorrah). . . . The Lord hath sent us to destroy it." That was the warning. Now for the fulfillment. 24th ver.;—"The Lord rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah brimstone and fire." 25th ver.;—"And he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground." Ps. 25: 14;—"The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him." The margin reads, "And his covenant to make them know it." Jno. 15: 15;—"I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." And so of other events. Dan. 2: 28 reads: "There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known . . . what shall be in the latter days."

Peter tells us in his 2nd epistle, 1: 21, that "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." And in his first epistle, 1: 10, he states that they "prophesied of the grace that should come unto" us; and that they did diligently search into the "time" and "manner of time"; and that "the Spirit of Christ" did testify "beforehand, the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow; unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the holy Ghost sent down from heaven."

Paul says, "God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."—1 Cor. 2: 10. In Matt. 11: 25, 26, we read that it seemed good for the Lord of heaven to reveal "them unto babes; for so it seemed good in" his "sight."

Our Savior commands us to "search the Scriptures."—Jno. 4: 39. Like the Bereans, "with all readiness of mind," searching them "daily."—Acts 17: 11. And that he had reference to the prophecies is evident, for he says, they testified of him.—John 5: 39. Peter assures us that we have "a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto" we "do well" to "take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place."—2 Pet. 1: 19. But how can any prophecy be a "sure word," or a light "in a dark place" to those who despise prophecies?

Paul states particularly that we are not to despise prophecies. 1 Thess. 5: 20. What could the church do without the prophecies? Are they not her beacon light, to excite her expectation and happiness before the event? And does not fulfilled prophecy clearly prove and demonstrate the inspiration of the Scriptures?

Allow me to cite one in particular; that in Deut. 28th. This prophecy is selected from a very large number. It presents seventeen particulars, each one being independent. Every one of these has been either fulfilled, or is fulfilling. This prophecy was delivered above three thousand years ago; and at a time when Israel was just about victoriously to take possession of the country and of its enemies; and, consequently, at a time when there was scarcely a shadow of probability that it would ever be fulfilled. Now in order that we may see the measure of evidence which this prophecy alone affords of the inspiration of him who delivered it, let us take such a view of it as mathematicians take of the doctrine of chances, in their calculations on probabilities. Here are seventeen particulars in this chapter. or prophecy. The chances therefore against the occurrence of them all, in any lapse of time, is as the 17th power of 2 to unity; i. e., it is 131,072 to 1, against its ever being fulfilled.

SECTARIANISM.

I learned long ago that it is not with men we are at war, but with doctrines and sentiments. I do not therefore see any reason why we should act like the sons of Ishmael toward each other. A man embraces a false sentiment—what then? Is he therefore a hypocrite, a scoundrel, or a liar? Who of all of us do not hold some sentiments which may be wrong? Shall we therefore all fall on each other with words and acts of cruelty? What little Pope among us will start up and say, "I am right—you are all wrong?" Is not every man entitled to respect, love, kindness, and consideration? Will it reform any man to look at him with a countenance fraught with wrath and thunder, and call him hard names? But the man is in a fatal error—what then? Will it make him see his error and our truth by appearing toward him unkind, vinegar-faced, and cloudy? Will turning him out of doors by treating him with such cold contempt that he can not remain in our company, draw him any nearer to the truth and to Christ? This was not the policy of the Galilean. The enemies of Christ said before him, "Behold he receiveth sinners and eateth with them." Hear the reply of the Son of God to all such charges: "They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

One of the primary laws of reformation, both in doctrine and in practice, is association. Jesus came down from heaven that he might associate with men and reform them. It does not make us sinners to talk with, walk with, eat with, worship with sinners, of necessity. It does not make them saints to let them all see us shun them and treat them with contempt. When will men learn that bigotry, sectarianism, coldness, contempt, stiffness, and reserve, are not attractive elements? When will men learn that they cannot scold, drive, frighten, or repulse human beings into truth? When shall we learn if men are brought into truth at all, it will be done by association, love, plainness, frankness, kindness, and argument?

Select a family of eight or ten members—one of the family embraces a fatal sentiment—fatal to the interests of the whole—what is to be done? When the hour of worship arrives, shall we, with cold contempt, show him he is unwelcome in the worshiping circle? Will that make him love our truth and our spirit more? Shall we refuse to walk with him to the place of true worship on Sunday because he sometimes goes to a place of false worship? Will that make him love true or false worship more? Shall we treat him with haughty and scornful reserve when he wishes to take part in the worship? Will that incline him to go with us? Shall we not rather help him in all he does attempt right? Shall we not say amen when he does say the truth? And when we do say nay, nay, say it like christians, and not like savages. But I know well the sentiments of community on these points. Here is the creed of the sectarian community: "Go with us, or we go against you." "Help build up my church, or I want nothing to do with you." "Be somebody or nobody." This creed is not universal—there are many honorable exceptions to it. May we not hope the exceptions will multiply?

REPORT OF THE MAINE SEC. ADV. MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

Met at Richmond, Me., at 10 o'clock A. M., Tuesday, Jan. 3d, 1865. Meeting opened by prayer. Eld. L. L. Howard was chosen President, and Eld. C. H. Leverton Secretary, for the ensuing year. The report of the last meeting was called for, read, and accepted.

Moved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to prepare business for action of the conference.—Carried. Elders R. R. York, N. G. Read, and Wm. Mitchell, were appointed. The committee reported the following items for action:

First, To see if we, as ministers of this conference, are laboring together in harmony, for the welfare of the church of Christ, and the salvation of our fellow men.

Second, That we devote each afternoon session to the investigation of the Scriptures, on such points of doctrine as it may be thought best by the conference to consider. Report of the committee accepted. The following resolution was then presented:

Resolved, That the presentation of anything as a test of christian fellowship, except christian character, has a tendency to distract the church of God; and prevents us, as ministers of the gospel, from laboring together in harmony.—Adopted. Adjourned till one o'clock P. M.

Tuesday, P. M. Proceeded to consider the following question: "Do the Scriptures teach a resurrection of all men to life?" The discussion of this question consumed the afternoon, and at four o'clock the following resolution was presented:

Resolved, That we understand the Scriptures to teach the resurrection of all men to life.—Adopted. Adjourned till 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Wednesday, 9 o'clock A. M. Received into membership Elders Sandford K. Partridge, Isaac Wight, and Clarkson Goud. Adjourned at half past 12 for thirty minutes.

1 o'clock P. M. Moved, That we form ourselves into a committee of the whole, to investigate the subject of Sabbath keeping.—Carried. Eld. I. Wight was chosen chairman. The following was the question submitted:—"Is the seventh-day Sabbath now binding on the christian church, and to be kept as holy time?" The committee adjourned at 4 o'clock till half past twelve Thursday noon. Conference adjourned till 9 o'clock Thursday A. M.

Thursday, 9 o'clock A. M. Met as per adjournment. Moved, That the committee of the conference be instructed to give to Burleigh S. Emery a certificate, recognizing him as an ordained minister of the Advent body.—Carried.

Moved, That Bro. John Somes be received as a member of this conference.—Carried.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by this conference, to divide this State, or portions of it, into circuits, over which ministers shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to see that their respective fields of labor are looked after to the best of their ability; and that we recommend to the friends of those respective circuits, to do all they can to sustain such ministers in their labors.—Adopted.

Moved, That the committee be appointed by the Chair.—Carried. Names: S. K. Partridge, R. R. York, I. C. Wellcome.

Resolved, That we, the ministers of this conference, raise $200.00, or more, for the purchase of books and tracts, and their distribution in the State of Maine; and that the committee upon circuits be the managing board for the selection and distribution of the same.—Adopted.

Moved, That Bro. Isaac Wight be appointed Treasurer, to have charge of the fund raised for this purpose.—Carried. Adjourned till Friday, 9 o'clock A. M.

The committee of the whole met at half past twelve. Moved, That Bro. Goud discuss the Sabbath question with Bro. Howard.—Carried. Bro. Howard took the affirmative, and Bro. Goud the negative of the question before stated. Each disputant occupied ten minutes. The discussion continued until about 4 o'clock, when, as the disputants were growing weary, it was found necessary to close. And as Bro. Howard was unfortunately called away at this juncture, the discussion could not be resumed on the morrow. The committee of the whole therefore dissolved.

Friday, 9 o'clock A. M. Meeting opened as usual by prayer. The chairman being absent, the meeting was called to order by the Secretary, and Bro. S. K. Partridge was chosen President pro tem. The following resolutions were then presented:—

Resolved, That it is the duty of the ministers of this conference to counsel and advise persons who think they have a call to preach. Adopted.

Resolved, That we, as a conference of ministers, cannot give countenance to the ordination of men for the work of the ministry whom we regard as not called to that work.—Adopted.

Resolved, That we believe that the promulgation of the doctrine of the Seventh-Day Sabbath, as interpreted by the publications emanating from Battle Creek, and the nonrevival of the wicked dead, from elsewhere, are contrary to the teachings of the New Covenant, subversive of the christian faith, and tend to distraction. We therefore exhort all our brethren not to encourage their circulation.—Adopted.

Resolved, That the law of faith by which man is justified, or condemned, in the doctrine of Christ, as brought to view in Rom. 10: 5–11, and John 3: 18; which law is established by the death and resurrection of Christ.—Adopted. Adjourned for thirty minutes. Called to order at half past 12.

Moved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to draft a constitution, to be presented at the next meeting.—Carried. Brn. I. C. Wellcome, Wm. Mitchell, and I. Wight were appointed.

Moved, That Bro. Goud be ordained at some convenient time in the future.—Carried.

Moved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to call the next meeting, and appoint the place.—Carried. Brn. Damman, Wight, and Mitchell were appointed.

Moved, That the Secretary be instructed to prepare a report of this meeting, to be published in the "World's Crisis" and "Advent Herald."—Carried. The committee upon circuits then presented their report.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE UPON CIRCUITS.

Your committee present the following for your consideration, relating to the division of the State into sections; for the more regular and systematic labor and watch-care of the ministry, as indicated in your resolution.

York County.—Brn. Wm. H. Mitchell, B. Emery, A. P. Hyde.

Cumberland and Sagadahoc Co's.—R. R. York, I. C. Wellcome, C. Goud, H. D. Read, H. Mitchell.

Oxford and Androscoggin Co.'s.—J. A. Libbey, True Jordan, E. M. Haggett, Elder Abbott, J. C. Wheeler.

Kennebec, Franklin, and Somerset Co.'s.—H. B. Seavey, D. M. Hanscomb, Isaac Wight, L. L. Howard, N. F. Nason, Elders Meader and Goodrich.

Lincoln, Knox, and East Kennebec Co.'s.—S. K. Partridge, J. B. Hall, J. Carr, J. Somes.

Waldo Co.—F. A. Baker, John Morrill.

Piscataquis and Penobscot Co.'s.—I. Damman, Thos. Smith, N. G. Read.

Washington, Hancock, and Aroostook Co.'s. C. H. Leverton.—Adopted.

Resolved, That we in conference assembled recommend to all our ministers and churches to unite in carrying out this plan, in order to obtain the more regular and frequent labors of the ministry and advancement of the gospel.—Adopted.

Moved, That we adjourn, to meet again at the call of the committee.—Carried.

L. L. HOWARD, President.
C. H. LEVERTON, Secretary.

The Chronological Discussion in Boston.

Some persons have desired that the discussion between Brn. Thurman and Stevenson should be held only in the evening. The committee have this matter under consideration, and if the change is made, it will be announced in the Boston dailies.

THE JUBILEES.

A new interest is awakened in every thing connected with the time of our Lord's return, since the appearance of Bro. Thurman's chronology. This we are glad to see and feel; and if the investigation is conducted with a proper spirit, the effect will be good. Some may be led to go too fast, and become too positive; while many may be inclined to stand back, and be too "slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken." It is wise to avoid extremes; but let us not be afraid to examine carefully all the evidence, and never condemn before we hear. If we should happen to find one unfair or rotten apple under a tree, it would not be best to decide that the tree bore only rotten apples; neither would it be best to eat the poor one. Let that alone, and pick up the good ones. The fact that one pin is loose in a building is not a reason for an attempt to drive out all the other pins and braces. Neither is it wise, because some one may see a want of harmony between two passages of Scripture, to throw the whole Bible away. So if one advances an argument that may appear unsound, in relation to some particular point, it is not best to reject all he may say about other things, before he has had a candid hearing.

Touching the period allotted for the jubilees, there is a difference of opinion. Some maintain they occurred once in forty-nine years; while others hold that they took place once in fifty years. Bro. Thurman, in his chronology, reckons forty-nine years, making the seventieth, and last, as he claims, end in 1868; but should fifty years be taken for a jubilee, instead of forty-nine, it would make some seventy years difference; hence, it is a matter of some importance to decide whether we shall take forty-nine or fifty years for a jubilee, provided we consider the jubilee a type of the great jubilee trump to be sounded at the coming of Christ, when all the saints, who have been taken captive by death, are to be delivered up and receive their possessions. We think it is a clear point, that as certainly as the ancient jubilee was a type, with the same degree of surety may we believe the antitype will be at the appearing of Christ to raise those who sleep in him, preparatory for the return of man to his inheritance, lost by the sin of Adam.

Let us now see if it can be clearly settled whether the jubilee occurred once in forty-nine, or once in fifty years.

In Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible, the learned author says:—

"Several commentators maintain that the jubilee was celebrated in the forty-ninth year, the last year of the seventh week of years. Moses favors this opinion, Lev. 25: 8. 'Thou shalt number seven Sabbaths of years, seven times seven years, and the space of the seven Sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.' They who maintain this, show the inconveniency of celebrating the jubilee in the fiftieth year, immediately after the Sabbatical rest of the forty-ninth year. These two years of rest following one the other might be attended with dangerous consequences in any country, and might produce a famine.

Kitto says, in his "Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature," Vol. 1. p. 160, "many great names . . . favor the shorter period,—namely, forty-nine years."

It is also true that others favor the longer period. Why this difference? We think the whole matter will appear very plain and harmonious after a careful examination, and that what one writer calls the forty-ninth, the other calls the 50th.

Calmet goes on to say:—

"To reconcile the two opinions, whether the jubilee was celebrated in the fiftieth year, (as Moses requires, Lev. 25: 10, and as Philo, Josephus, Eusebius, St. Jerom, St. Austin, St. Gregory the Great, St. Isadore, all the Jews, both Talmudists and Caraites, and a great number of commentators understand it,) or in the forty-ninth year as Moses mentions pretty clearly in Lev. 25: 8, and as several good commentators and chronologists explain it. To reconcile these two opinions, it may be said, I think, that the fiftieth year is set down for the forty-ninth, for the sake only of making a round number; as we say every day, there are thirty days to a month, though rigorously speaking there are sometimes twenty-eight, twenty-nine, or thirty days in a month. Besides, if the jubilee year began after the forty-ninth year, and at the beginning of the fiftieth, it might be called indifferently the forty-ninth or fiftieth year.

If the civil year began at a different time from the ecclesiastical year, will not that solve this difficulty? i. e., the fiftieth year, by one account, might begin before the forty-ninth year, by the other account was fully accomplished. Beside which, I suspect that any part of a year, was customarily reckoned for a whole year among the Jews, as it was, and still is, among some of the eastern nations."

We think we have data before us now, sufficient to bring harmony out of apparent discord.

1. As Calmet says:—"The jubilee year began on the first day of Tisri, (the first of the civil year, and answered our September, O. S.) and about the autumnal equinox."

2. The ecclesiastical year began with the month Nisan in the spring, about the vernal equinox.

3. It is certain, then, that the jubilee year neither begins nor ends with the ecclesiastical year. But the "seven Sabbaths of years," or "forty and nine years," were ecclesiastical, years, beginning and ending in the spring.

4. When the Jews were in Egypt they began the year in autumn. When speaking of the flood, Josephus says, "This calamity happened in the six hundredth year of Noah, . . . in the second month, called by the Macedonians Dius, but by the Hebrews Marchesvan; for so did they order their year in Egypt. But Moses appointed that Nisan, which is the same with Xanthicus, should be the first month of their festivals, because he brought them out of Egypt in that month. So that this month began the year as to all the solemnities they observed to the honor of God, although he preserved the original order of the month as to selling and buying, and other ordinary affairs."—Jose. B. 1, c. 3, s. 3.

5. The Jubilee year related "to selling and buying," hence should begin in the month Tisri, as they reckoned time in Epypt, which was the seventh month of the ecclistical year.

6. As the Jews reckoned by civil years before they did by ecclesiastical, it follows that the civil ended first. For instance; suppose they had been in Egypt forty-eight full years, ending in the autumn before they left; then they would leave Egypt in the forty-ninth civil year, which would not be complete till the next autumn. But when they went out of Egypt in the spring of that forty-ninth civil year, the Lord instructed Moses to begin the ecclesiastical year, from which point they were to reckon "seven Sabbaths of years, and then have a jubilee year. Now we think it is very clear, as Calmet remarks, that the fiftieth civil year might begin before the forty-ninth" ecclesiastical year "was fully completed," and consequently must end in the autumn of the fiftieth ecclesiastical year.

7. From the foregoing, it will be seen that the jubilee year includes four months and twenty days of the forty-ninth, and seven months and ten days of the fiftieth eccliastical years. The seven months and ten days just mentioned, are properly the first part of a new series of forty-nine years.

8. The Jews, as well as other nations, reckoned a part of a year as a whole; hence the part of the fiftieth civil year,—four months and twenty days,—contained in the forty-ninth ecclesiastical year, is called "the fiftieth year," and consequently "the trumpet of the jubilee" sounded in the forty-ninth ecclesiastical year, "on the tenth day of the seventh month."

We think the whole matter will appear plain from the following illustration:—

48*	49*	50*	51*
6	7	8	9

Let the perpendicular bars across the horizontal line represent the ends of the ecclesiascal years; the stars above the line, the ends of the civil years; the figures below the line,—6, 7, 8, 9,—the sabbatical arrangement, and those above,—48, 49, 50, 51,—the jubilee arrangement. In connection with this, there is an important point to be noticed; which is, that every "seventh year," which would be also every forty-ninth year, the Jews were forbidden to sow their fields or prune their vineyards. They were also forbidden to sow or reap during the jubilee year, as may be seen from the following:—

"And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years. Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land. And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubilee unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family. A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed. For it is the jubilee; it shall be holy unto you: ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field. In the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession."—Lev. 25: 8–13.

Again we read in Lev. 25: 20–22; as follows: And if ye shall say, What shall we eat the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase; then I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years. And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store.

By the aid of the foregoing Scripture and the diagram, we think all may be understood.

"The sixth year" yielded "fruit for three years; i. e. fruit not only for the sixth year, but the seventh and eighth. They were to sow the eighth year," in autumn, after the jubilee year was ended, and reap again in the spring of the ninth, a short time after the beginning of the 51st ecclesiastical year.

Now look at the diagram, and suppose the jubilee year does not begin till the 10th day of the seventh month of the fiftieth year; then it would end in the autumn of the fifty-first year. Then they could not sow till the autumn of the ninth year, and reap in the spring of the tenth, or the fifty-second year. In such a case, it would be necessary for the sixth year to yield fruit for four years instead of three. Thus we think it is demonstrated that the jubilees began in the forty-ninth ecclesiastical year, on the tenth day of the seventh month, and that they occurred once in forty-nine years as shown by Usher, Calmet, and many others in harmony with the writings of Moses.

"ANGRY WITH THE WICKED."

In Ps. 7: 11, we read:—"God judgeth the righteous, and God is angry with the wicked every day."

Infidels, and the various classes of skeptics, frequently bring this passage as an objection to the character of our heavenly Father; claiming that he requires us to be patient with one another, while he is not so toward the erring. Of course, every day's observation goes to contradict any such assumption; but we think a careful investigation of this verse will throw light upon the subject.

The VULGATE reads:—"God is a judge, righteous, strong, and patient;—will he be angry every day?"

The SEPTUAGINT:—"God is a righteous judge, and strong, and patient; not inflicting vengeance every day. The ARABIC is the same.

The ÆTHIOPIC:—"God is a just judge, and strong and long-suffering; he will not bring forth tribulation daily."

COVERDALE:—"God is a righteous judge, and God is ever threatening."

The GENEVAN VERSION:—"God judgeth the righteous, and him that contemneth God every day."

The SYRIAC:—"God is the judge of the righteous; he is not angry every day."

Dr. Clarke remarks, "The mass of evidence supports the latter reading." The words with the wicked are not in the original Mss. The idea is that the Lord is not punishing people daily for their iniquities; as we read, "Because sentence against an evil is not executed speedily, therefore the hearts of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."—Eccl. 8: 11. The Lord is very "patient," and "long-suffering" towards those who commit sin, and urges them to repent. Let us all listen to his kind voice.

THE DISCUSSION.

We hope those of our brethren and sisters who are interested in the time question, and cannot attend the discussion of the subject in Boston, next week, will pray earnestly, as did Daniel, that the true light may shine upon this important subject. Let us all go to the Lord for wisdom.

KIND WORDS.

Kind words, like the following, often come to cheer our heart, and make our burdens lighter, and easier to be borne. Thank the Lord for sympathizing friends. Words like the following are "like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Bro. H. F. C., West Sutton, Mass., writes:—

"BRO. GRANT:—I know something of the trials of an Editor's life. I have been behind the scenes, and have had such an opportunity as the multitude can never have. You have my prayers, that you may have the grace that is sufficient for you; and while I am writing, I will say, do just what you please with the manuscript I send you, and I promise you I will not 'raise a storm.' I may be as sensitive as any one, but I hope I am willing, and more than willing, to sacrifice self for the good of the many, and for you also, my Bro."

Who can help admiring the spirit of the foregoing extract? It is a great pleasure to serve such noble souls. Labor becomes delightful when we are sustained and cheered by such true hearts.

SIGNIFICATION OF THE JUBILEE.

When speaking of the meaning of the Hebrew word rendered Jubilee, Dr. Clarke says:—"The most natural derivation is from hobil, to cause to bring back, or recall, because estates, etc., which had been alienated, were then brought back to their primitive owners."

When referring to the signification of the word, Mr. Parkhurst says:—"It is a lively prefiguration of the grand consummation of time, which will be introduced, in like manner, by the trump of God, 1 Cor. 15: 52, when the children and heirs of God shall be delivered from all their forfeitures, and restored to the eternal inheritance allotted to them by their Father."

"CAN'T DO ANY THING."

How often we hear professors of religion, especially females, complaining because they can't do any thing in the vineyard of the Lord. And sad to say, there are some men who think the sisters of Jesus should not do any thing, only to take care of household matters. Let such read the letter, in another column, from Sr. Anna E. Smith, Missionary in New York City, by whose labors one hundred and seventy-six have been converted during the past year. Can those who would keep women from laboring in the Lord's vineyard, say that they have seen as rich fruits from their works? We think all may be benefitted by reading her letter. Would that we had thousands of such Annas.

ONE NIGHT'S WORK.

The following shows a part of one night's work in New York. We say part, because it is not probable that the murders come to light at once.

STABBING AND SHOOTING IN NEW YORK.—New York, Jan. 3d.—Harry Lazrus, a prize fighter, was killed this morning. He was stabbed by Barney Friery in an altercation. Friery escaped.

An officer was shot while defending a woman from ruffians.

A Mr. Burnett was shot while attempting to secure a burglar caught on his premises.

A Mr. Hobelsted was nearly killed by a ruffian on the corner of 26th street and Broadway.

An old man of eighty was severely cut and nearly killed by a gang of ruffians on the corner of 26th street and the 6th Avenue.

A woman named Catherine Smith was shot through the window of her residence in 2d Avenue.

A fireman named James Cornes was shot on the corner of 30th street and 5th Avenue.

Martin O'Connell was shot on the corner of Stanton street and the Bowery.

Bro. John G. Kelly, Chicago, Ill., writes:—"Cannot some of your faith come and preach in this great and wicked city? We have a plenty of orthodox preachers, but we want something like the old-fashioned Methodist preaching, and I think your preachers come the nearest to it of any."

How to Write Appointments.

Our preaching brethren will save us much time and trouble by giving their attention to the following suggestions:—

1. Write your appointments on a separate slip, or sheet, with no other matter in connection with or on the back of it. Appointments, and sometimes a long list of them, are often written on the same sheet with business matter, or with a communication, in such a way that they cannot be separated; in which case we are obliged to copy them all off, before they can go to the compositor,—a labor from which we may be saved by observing the above direction.

2. Write each separate appointment in a line by itself, as we print them,—the town and State first; the house (if any is mentioned), next; and the date last, thus:—

Boston, Mass., (Lowell St. Chapel), Sunday, Jan. 15th
Springfield, Mass., (Barnes' Block), Sunday, Jan. 22d
Hawley, (where Bro. —— may apt.), Sunday, Jan. 29th

In this order we always print them, and in this order they should be always written. Running them all in together, as many do, some in one order, and some in another, all is confusion, and it is often a matter of difficulty to tell which is which.

3. Write every name and date plainly and distinctly; and review it afterwards to see that you have made every word as legible to others as it is to yourself. Appointments are sometimes written in much haste, and so illegibly as to puzzle the ingenuity of both editor and compositor to decypher them, rendering it next to impossible to prevent mistakes. And if, in consequence, mistakes are made, the editor is blamed for what was the fault of the writer.

Please to observe carefully the above directions. You will thus relieve the parties concerned of much perplexity and trouble, and very much oblige yourself and us.

Send Your Appointments Earlier.

If you delay sending them till the last moment, it is often a matter of inconvenience to us, and is liable to be an inconvenience to you; for they are in danger of not reaching us in season, which is frequently the case,—and they sometimes come so many together, on the day of our going to press, that our paper is delayed by it. The better way is to send them the week before, if possible, or early enough to reach us Monday morning; or, at the latest, Tuesday morning. Anything coming after that is too late, as we go to press Tuesday noon.

Postal Money Orders.

By the new Postal Money Order System, remittances can be made to this office with perfect safety, and without any of the risk which sometimes attends the transmission of monies by mail in the usual way. Large sums should be always sent in this way, or by draft.

Directions.—Pay your money to your Postmaster, take his order for the same, and send the order to us. For it, we obtain the money of the Postmaster here. The fees are as follows:—

For $10.00, or less........................10 cents.
For $20.00, or less........................15 cents.
For $30.00, or less........................20 cents.
For sums over $30.00, more than one order may be taken.

Seal Your Letters.

We not unfrequently receive money letters which are very imperfectly sealed and sometimes entirely unsealed by the sender. Subscribers must not expect us to be responsible for monies sent in this way. Seal your letters, and see that they are well sealed. Use envelopes that are well covered with mucilage, wet well with your tongue, and press tightly together by rubbing with your thumb nail. Don't add additional mucilage or paste, as some do, so that the envelope becomes besmeared with it; for you will thus advertise to post-office clerks that the letter contains money, and, if taken out, you will have no one to blame but yourself for telling them where to find it.

Seek out the Poor.

The church in Whitefield, N. H., are setting a noble example of kindness to the poor, in supplying them freely with mental and spiritual food. Determined that none within their bounds shall go hungry for want of the Crisis, if they can prevent it, they seek them out, and then provide for them. They have already, through their pastor, sent us the names of several, with the money, and now they send us another, with the following note:—

"We want to do what we can for the truth, and for the poor, who receive the truth gladly. The poor we have always with us, and as often as we will, we can do them good. I pray the good Lord to bless you in carrying on the good work."

Thanks for the kind prayer. He does. These "God bless yous" of his holy ones, and especially of his chosen poor, are of more value to us than thousands of gold and silver. God bless the church in Whitefield, and their pastor, and may their light never go out. No doubt there are other churches elsewhere who would be glad to receive, in like manner, the thanks and prayers of the poor, and the blessing of the Lord.

Words from the Workers.

Another new subscriber. . . . This is the tenth subscriber which I have obtained in less than three years, and in that time have not been seven miles from home but once. Others, who have a greater range, ought, I think, to double, if not triple, that number. Time is short! What thou doest, do quickly!

West Cheshire, Ct. SARAH MIX.

See from this, gentle reader, how much you may do, in your own circle of influence, by a like persevering effort. Ten in three years is over three a year. Can YOU not do as much as that? Let every one of our present 7000 subscribers get but that number the current year, and thirty thousand homes will be lightened and cheered by the weekly visits of this "Second Advent Messenger," when the year closes, and a hundred thousand minds and hearts brought under its influence. See, then, brethren, how much good you may do, every one, by united, persevering effort. Yes, indeed, time is short, and what we do must be done now, or never. How much will you do?

Two more new subscribers. . . . Am expecting one or two others soon. So we keep the ball rolling, and the truth spreading.

Dansville, N. Y. FRANK BURR.

The voice of a worker. They who, like Bro. B., have "a wider range," can easily double or triple what the sister has done. Seven were sent us last year by Bro. B.; and now that he is harnessed anew for the work, we may look for more. God's true noblemen are they who labor to spread his truth, and gather subjects for his kingdom. W. B. H.

VOICES FROM THE POOR.

FROM THE SICK AND DISABLED.

A brother in Iowa writes:—"I have been laid up all summer with acute rheumatism, and have nothing but my hands to support my family with. Yet trusting Him who doeth all things well, I know that these light afflictions shall work for my good, for I love the Lord. As I am not able to pay you, you will have to stop the paper, unless you can send it free. Yours, waiting for the Lord from heaven." N. J. T.

FROM THE OLD AND POOR.

A brother in New York State writes:—"I am an old man, eighty years of age; and I am poor, and not able to pay you for the good paper which you send me free. There is no advent preaching in this place, and all the comfort I have is in reading the Crisis. I pray the Lord to enable you to let me have it a little longer, if possible." JOSEPH.

THE BANK OF THE LORD'S POOR.

RESPONSES FROM SHAREHOLDERS.

FROM SR. WELLCOME.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel disposed to take a share in the Lord's Bank, and here inclose $1.00 to be sent to some one of the "maimed, halt, or blind," as you may judge most needed. I read with much interest from week to week the letters written by the Lord's poor, his chosen ones, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom. Far better to be the Lord's poor, than the devil's rich, for the poverty of the present time will be very brief, and then will come the "enduring substance," the "incorruptible inheritance," the "unfading crown," the "everlasting kingdom"; while those who have their treasure here, will then be found friendless, homeless, and destitute of every needful thing. Now, while many of God's little ones weep, and sigh, in poverty's vale, without a sufficiency of nourishing food or comfortable raiment, and suffering from physical infirmity, the worldling is filled with earth's rich dainties; their wardrobes abound with changeable suits of apparel; their hoarded, unfashionable garments are moth eaten, instead of being given to cover the nakedness of the shivering form, while their gold and silver is cankering from disuse. Well, let them eat, drink, and be merry; they are seeing their best days; soon, yea, very soon, will come the dark night of weeping and wailing, and gnashing of teeth, when the fires of the last day shall consume their wealth, and kindle upon their pampered self.

In looking over the responses from the donors to the Poor Fund, from week to week, it seems to me that they come almost entirely from the poorer class; those who do not possess a very large portion of earthly substance. I am well aware that it is by this class usually that the institutions of the gospel are sustained. The principle involved in our Savior's language, respecting the widow who cast two mites into the treasury, holds good to-day. The poor cast in more than the rich,—they, of their penury; these, of their abundance. I cannot think it right for my brother and sister to suffer hunger and cold, while I and others have enough and to spare. There are means sufficient among us, if properly distributed, to render every one of the household of faith comfortable. Giving to the necessities of the saints, is not a "non-essential" of the Bible. What does Paul mean in his second epistle to the Corinthians, chapter 9th? I do want to see larger investments in this direction from those who are well able to make them. MARY D. WELLCOME.

FROM A BRO. "RICH" ONLY IN FAITH.

I send 50 cents, to help send the Crisis to the poor. I am poor myself, but I am willing to divide the little I have, that the scattered poor may have the gospel of truth to comfort them. G.

THURMAN'S CHRONOLOGY.

What about it? Several things.

1. The more we look at it, the more strongly we are convinced of its correctness.

2. The criticisms which are made in different quarters only show a lack of thorough research upon the part of different critics, and inspire us with fresh confidence. We naturally think if real objections could be offered, imaginary ones would not be the only ones produced; and if strong ones could be presented, feeble ones would not be made so conspicuous.

3. These objections and criticisms will be fully answered through the Voice of the West in due time. We are glad to see an effort made to overthrow this chronology. It may throw mist before the eyes of some for a time, but truth will shine all the brighter in the end. If valid objections exist we want them.

4. In indorsing Thurman's chronology, I do not wish to be understood as subscribing to all of his expositions. His chronology is one thing, and his expositions another—let this distinction be remembered by all. As far as the chronology is concerned we court examination, deep and thorough. If it can be shaken we wish to have it done. If not, 1868 will bring the Savior. W. SHELDON.

For the World's Crisis.

TEMPERANCE TRACTS.

MR. EDITOR:—Let us leave nothing undone to stem the torrent of intemperance which threatens us. Temperance societies, however useful, are insufficient for the exigency. Temperance lectures, such as the fastidious demand, are expensive and scarce. The popular press and temperance tracts must do more, or we shall go to wreck and ruin. True, we have had tracts, but too often the long, lank, and lean "kine." We need such as are short and sharp; not only readable, but which will be absolutely read, and which, going into the very crevices of sin and crime, will lodge burning truth on the conscience of every distiller, vender, and sot in a village.

Such tracts we have. They are written by godly men of strength and genius. Some of them assail only alcohol, in its manifold forms and abuses, and some assail the twin demons rum and tobacco—all varieties for all tastes. Five dollars will spread a thousand or more over a village. A hundred dollars, the price of one fashionable lecture, will spread them over twenty villages. And we here give notice, that if any person, or persons, "hungering and thirsting" to do good in plucking our fellow men from the fire, wish for our tracts, but are unable to pay for them, they can have them without money and without price.

True, we are not a rich Tract Society. We seldom have five dollars five days in our coffer, but we do what we can, on our "own hook," untrammeled by lordly societies, or captious committees. We depend on the voluntary contributions of a few—a very few—of God's dear children, who like our independent manner of battling popular abominations, and who send us what they please. Though poor, we make many rich. Therefore, gentle reader, be free to call for our tracts; for God, who of old replenished the widows's cruse, will not leave our cause to starve. GEO. TRASK.

Fitchburg, Ms, Temperace Depository, Jan., 1865.

[The tracts of Bro. Trask are just the things to scatter. Send him $5.00, more or less, and get a lot for the benefit of those who need them.—ED.

For the World's Crisis.

SELAH.

In the day and age of the world in which we live, one might almost come to the conclusion that there were but very few that take time to pause and reflect. Perhaps there are but a few persons, if any, but have noticed in the spring, when the snow is melting away, and the sleighing is poor, almost every one is anxious to improve it as long as possible. So it is at the present time; every body seems to be in a hurry. It is emphatically a fast age. Young men seem to press as much into an hour, as formerly into a year. Sinful pleasure they must have,—no reflection.

Dear brethren and sisters, is there not meaning in all this? Is there not something in all this well calculated to cause the individual that reflects to watch, lest there should be such a thing as becoming overcharged, and that day come as a thief? I believe, as I have for more than twenty years, that great day is near, and expect to live to see the King in his beauty, and be like him. Glory to God!

Concord, N. H. WM. WALKER.

Correspondence.

From Bro. G. W. Stetson.

BRO. GRANT:—At the time of my last communication, my purposes and plans were to attend the conference of the "West," at Buchanan, Mich.; but as Robert Burns has truly said, "The best laid plans of men and mice gang aft aglee," and so I found, "Man proposes, but GOD disposes."

According to notice, I left home on Saturday, Nov. 28th, for Berlin, stayed over night with Bro. P. B. Hoyt, and preached in Norwalk, Sunday, A. M., to an attentive audience, from Zech. 6: 13.—"He shall build the temple, and he shall bear the glory." Met Bro. D. C. Jefferson at Bro. P. Alling's, after morning services, who conveyed me to Berlin, where I discoursed in the evening on the "Jewish tabernacle," taking for a foundation, 2 Cor. 5: 1–5, and Heb. 9: 1–5, continuing the subject on Monday evening; when, on account of the roads and weather, we adjourned our meeting to Jan. 3d, 1865, and returned home.

Finding our intended trip to B., Mich., impracticable, I sent notice of a week's meeting to New London Township, Huron Co., Ohio, and proceeded to put things in order at home for an absence therefrom during a winter campaign, in the service of the Lord, preaching "faith, repentance and baptism, for the remission of sins;" life and immortality only through Christ, and the "gospel of the kingdom," with the signs of the times, as the only true and reliable evidence of the soon coming of the Lord and his kingdom.

On Saturday, Dec. 12th, bid friends good bye, and for the first time, cut entirely loose from all moorings on the church, and cast myself entirely upon the "wide ocean of time," the world, and though last, not least, upon God, and my own resources. Began our meetings in N. L. on Sunday, Dec. 13th, under adverse circumstances. Weather cold and boisterous, hearers few, and like the weather, and the wood nearly exhausted; consequently no meeting in the evening. On Monday, fuel supplied and hearers increased, and an interest to hear and learn the truth was manifest. On Tuesday, Sr. Stetson and little son joined me to share in the joy, as also in the filling up of the sufferings of Christ that are left behind. Found a pleasant home with Bro. and Sr. Vermelyia, who labored diligently with us in the good cause. On Thursday saw fruits of the seed sown, in the deep solemnity of the hearers, and the absorbing interest of the subject. On Friday, had the pleasure of receiving very friendly calls from Friend B. and lady, Mrs. S. and others, who were desirous of being instructed in the way of the Lord more perfectly; and in the evening was filled with joy unspeakable to see several in the audience weeping bitterly on account of their sins, as seen in the light of God's goodness, love, mercy and compassion, manifested even to his enemies in the final destruction of the wicked. We closed our meeting, distributed tracts to all who would receive them, and in particular to those who desired to know the way; received the "God bless you," of parting friends, with more than enough to pay our fare to Shiloh, the place of our next appointment. The cause in N. L. has good advocates in Sr. Vermelyia and daughters, who, we trust, will see to it that the "good seed sown" will be well watered with the dew of God's grace; the lambs fed with "meat in due season,"—the true bread that "came down from heaven." May the Lord bless you in Cory Street, N. L., and may peace, grace and truth be multiplied unto you.

On Saturday A. M., took the cars for Shiloh, Richland Co., O., where we arrived at arrived at 12 M.; and here it was, we had the battle of Michael and the Dragon repeated, but the Lord was on the side we advocated, and God's truth triumphed. I promised them the thing should not be done in a corner, and I intend when I vow to pay. So beginning at the alpha, we will pass in order to the omega. I had been in Shiloh once only, before, to preach the word, Sunday, Nov. 22nd, by invitation, to fill the desk of the U. B. house, on which occasion I discoursed from Rom. 6: 23. Dividing the subject, I showed in the forenoon the transgression and the penalty, intending to present "the gift of God, eternal life," in the evening. But no sooner was the morning amen said, than there was a stir in the camp.

An old brother of the M. E. C., suggested to one of the trustees of the U. B. C., that if the house belonged to him, "that man should not preach that doctrine in it again." That was enough. Small as was the flint, and soft as was the steel, and blind as was the blow struck, it was sufficient to explode the magazine. This trustee immediately passed to a second for aid to close the house, because everybody was not pleased with the discourse. Oh love of popularity, what a wreck hast thou made of God's beautiful ark of truth, and how do all her fair lines and elegant proportions lie stranded on the shore, despoiled of all her rich lading by the wrecker's hands. But fortunately, the answer came for help, like the response to Louis Phillippe after the upheaval in Paris, when he proposed to abdicate in favor of his son, "You are too late." The appointment is out; the man was invited; the people will come, and expect preaching. He must have the house to-night, and "it was so." We changed our tactics, sent out a skirmishing force to discover the weakest point in the enemy's intrenchments, and concluded the position was vulnerable and could be carried; if not by storming the fortress, it could by a regular siege, trenching, counter trenching, bombardment, mining, and sapping, and, when the mine exploded, by a direct assault, the position could be won at the point of the bayonet and "the sword of the Spirit." Having already obtained a base, we began our approaches, by casting up an intrenchment of "the right of private judgment and toleration;" next a parallel, in suppression of free speech in the South and the prohibition of carrying the gospel to the slaves, by the northern clergy of the M. E. and U. B. churches. Then dug a "rifle pit," from which the "sharpshooters" securely picked off their gunners, by throwing in upon them the same "grenades," which they had prepared for the suppressionists in the South. We now got some hundred-pound siege guns from the arsenal of God's truth into position, and sent the fifteen-inch shells into their camp with good effect, until 9 P. M., when firing ceased. We then notified them, that four weeks from that day, we should open upon them again. If we could have that desk, we should be thankful for the position; if not, we would try and secure another base of operations; and if we could do no better, we would hire a private room for the purpose, for Christ had said the gospel of the kingdom should be preached in all the world; therefore, it must be preached in Shiloh; and, by the help of the Lord, I was going to preach it there. Thanked them for the use of the house and closed. At the close, from three to half a dozen gentlemen, leading men of the place, came forward, gave me their hand, told me to return and we should have a hearing. They afterwards proved themselves tried friends,—gentlemen, philanthropists, and more upright and just and hospitable than many who make greater pretensions, and louder professions in the same place. These gentlemen, though not endorsing the doctrines I preached, still do honor to themselves in defending the right of free speech, and hold that truth and error should have an open conflict, that truth may openly triumph.

When I returned to S., Dec. 20th, how my heart died within me when every avenue was closed, until Friend B., a warm-hearted Englishman, yet a true American, and lover of freedom, gave myself and family an asylum. May the Lord bless him and his house; all the kind friends in Shiloh who thronged around me in defense of our God-given rights. On leaving, I was requested to return on Thursday evening from Plymouth and speak on the "signs of the times," which was complied with. Notice having widely circulated, the citizens flocked in, but neither meeting-house could be obtained, though both had been repeatedly opened for political meetings.

The citizens finally succeeded in procuring the same school-house which had been granted me to preach in for the preceding week; but it could not begin to hold the crowd; and so a majority had to return home without hearing; their hearts filled with anything but gratitude and love to those who had shut them out of the houses, which their own money had built. How these people stand in their own light and work against their own interests; for, notwithstanding reverends and others went round warning the faithful to keep away and shut their ears, and though one went so far as to say he would church and expel one of his members for coming to hear us, yet they would and did come. The day of lording it over God's heritage is about ended. The people will be free. TRUTH had a victory in Shiloh, much prejudice is removed, the scales have been torn from some eyes, good seed has been sown, which the devil will find difficult to pull up. I had the satisfaction of seeing on the last night of our preaching, more than one M. E., more than one Lutheran, more than one U. B. brother and sister, weeping like children under the power of God's truth.

On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, I went to Cranberry district, in Cap Tp., at the request of Brn. Peter, David and Michael Swangers, of the Disciple church, and by request of Mr. J. Forsythe repeated our lecture on "the signs of the times," and preached on the Jewish tabernacle twice. On Sunday shared the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Messenger,—good old-fashioned Baptists, whose hearts are still warm with the love of Christ's appearing. At Bro. Peter Swangers, formerly members of the Lutheran church, Rev. Selmser, pastor, anybody that loves their God and their Bible more than they love their creed, will find a cheerful pilgrim's home, and a God speed in every good work. Though our time in C. was short, yet we were wonderfully blessed in our labor; and thank God, the U. B. leader and some others, with our good disciple brethren, and old Bro. Messenger, I will guarantee, will testify it was good to be there. My first Lord's day in Cranberry will not soon be forgotten. God grant that I may meet them all in the kingdom. The fields in that vicinity are truly white for the harvest; but the laborers are few. May they be sent forth into the field.

In February, I expect to return to Shiloh, and hope I shall find an opportunity of discussing God's truth before the people, under more favorable circumstances.

From thence, we came by way of Plymouth and Norwalk, on the railroad, to this place, where we began work last night, in the M. E. chapel, and continue, the Lord willing, over next Lord's day. G. W. STETSON.

SR. ANNA SMITH, New York, writes:—

"I would just say to those loved ones I saw at Wilbraham camp-ground, I am still looking for my Savior, and believe that he is very near, even at the door.

I wish to say a word to those dear little children, that had the prayer meetings in Worcester tent, and those that I went out in the woods with to their little meetings. How often I have thought of you, and how often my sister and I have prayed for you, and talked about those precious seasons. I promised to write you through the Crisis; but when I came home, the work of the Lord broke out in my field of labor so wonderfully, that my time was all occupied. I have a very large district to visit, independent of all my meetings. I am out among the poor and needy, down in cellars, up in garrets, in alleys and lanes, to visit the sick and dying. I never in my life saw the Spirit of the Lord strive with sinners as I have the last six months. I hold meetings day and night among these poor outcasts of society, in different parts of my district, and many of the worst of characters have been converted; some that have not been to church for twenty-two years, who have spent their Sundays in drinking rum and fighting. I visited them, and told them the Lord was coming. They looked at me as one that mocked, but still I talked to them. At first they seemed to have no senses. I kept on visiting them, and started meetings in their own rooms. They asked their neighbors to come in. I got them to sign the pledge and save their money, get some clothes, and come out to church. They have done so. They have come to our anxious meetings, asked for pardon, found peace in believing, and went home justified. Now their homes are happy.

There are many cases of interest that I would love to mention, but I cannot now. They would fill a good sized book. I have started three Sabbath schools, and I wish to start a circulating library, and I would like all the Advent reading matter that I can get. If any of the lovers of Jesus and his coming have any book to give me, please send them to my address. These people have been neglected, and now they are converted, I want to give them the truth. I have meetings every day, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and at half past seven in the evening till twelve o'clock. There are from one to five converted every day and evening.

In looking over my book for the past year, I find I have distributed 14,937 tracts, made 3,817 visits, offered 1,294 prayers in families, held 554 meetings, and through those meetings and visits, there have been 176 souls converted, and are able to rise and tell what the Lord has done for them. I have preached 290 sermons, given thirty-three lectures with the charts, and many have received the light of Jesus' soon coming. So you see why I don't answer many letters.

ANNA E. SMITH, No. 128 East 27th Street, New York City."

From Bro. J. V. Himes.

BRO. GRANT:—We are having a good time in Sandy Hill. Five souls have been converted, and others are seeking the Lord. We are having a blessed good work. Bro. and Sr. Mathewson are with us, and in the work. Bro. Fassett is encouraged and cheered. Sr. Fassett is improving in health. Praise the Lord. Yours truly, J. V. HIMES.

Bro. J. M. Jenness writes:—"If any of the Lord's watchmen feel like trying to help along a few that are striving for life, and if possible to save some poor perishing souls; we would invite such an one, when they have an opportunity, to visit us at Alton Corner, N. H. We think they may fare as well as did Paul and Peter, and some others in earlier times. We will not promise them any thing better."

For the World's Crisis.

If any Bro. knows a simple remedy for Polypus, which may be used at home, he would do a great favor by communicating it to MOSES WHITAKER, Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa.

Obituaries.

CHARLEENA. B. JACKMAN.

Died in Woodstock, N. H., Dec. 26th, 1864, of diphtheria, Charleena Bell, only child of Lewis and Lyrena A. Jackman, aged one year, five months and twenty-two days.

Our sweet little child is no more. She now sleeps in the grave, but we shall meet her again. Yes, soon Jesus will come, and his voice will pierce the tomb, and our little one will come forth clothed with immortality. Then death will have no more dominion over us, then the grave will have lost its victory. O, Jesus, hasten the day that speaks our trials ended.

Sermon by Eld. A. B. Russell, who spake words of comfort 2 Kings 6: 5,—"Alas, Master! for it was borrowed." LEWIS JACKMAN.

LIZZIE R. WOODWORTH.

Died in Norridgewock, Sept. 27th, Miss Lizzie R. Woodworth, aged sixteen years.

O, how unwelcome to that dear home was the approach of the "pale horse" and his rider. We implored him to pass on, but he lurks in every flower. The choicest ones we have, he is sure to grasp. But the word of Jevovah has gone forth,—"I will be thy plagues. O grave, I will be thy destruction." Then shall Lizzie come forth from her dusty bed to die no more. G. W. B.

MARTHA J. ROWELL.

Died in Hartland, Me., Oct. 5th, 1864, of typhoid fever, Martha J., wife of David Rowel, aged thirty-seven years.

She made a profession of religion about three years ago, and has lived a consistent christian life since. Being a firm believer in the Lord's soon coming, she rejoiced in hope of the resurrection. Her sickness was cheered by the presence of the Lord. As a wife and mother few ever excelled her. May the God of all grace comfort this deeply afflicted family. CHARLES STRATTON.

SCOTT WARE.

Died at Grand Meadow, Clayton Co., Iowa, Dec. 24th, 1864, of diphtheria, Scott Ware, the only child of Scott E. and Alice Ware, aged two years.

This affliction falls heavily on Sr. Ware, as her husband is absent, having enlisted in the service of his country. Sermon on the occasion by the writer, from Heb. 6: 18. AMBROSE H. EGGLESTON.

POLLY OVIATT.

Died, Nov. 22d, 1864, in Mantua Station, O., Mrs. Polly Oviatt, aged seventy-seven years.

She died praying for Christ to come, and to come soon.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool Dec. 31st, Queenstown Jan. 1st.

Political news unimportant.

The English journals continue to comment on the Canada difficulty, which caused a slight depression in the Canada funds. The papers generally discountenance the idea of the Government being driven into unfriendly relations. The Times shows that the Confederates could desire nothing better.

The London Times of to-day in its resume of affairs of the year, alluding to the present attitude of the North to Canada, says: In the present state of the Northern feeling there is too much reason to apprehend an outrage, which may render rupture inevitable.

Americans neither appreciate the strength of England, nor understand the unanimity with which the war would be prosecuted if forced upon a reluctant government and nation. The first result of war would be the immediate and irrevocable establishment of the Southern independence.

DOMESTIC.

Peace Rumors from Washington.

TERMS OFFERED BY MR. LINCOLN.

New York, Jan. 12. The World's special Washington dispatch says the Democratic politician who has gone on a peace mission, with the approval of the President, is Gen. Singleton of Illinois. He preceded Mr Blair a day or two.

It is said the rebel Congress adopted, in secret session, the resolution to appoint peace commissioners, and they have been selected and sent to Gen. Grant's headquarters. Messrs. Orr of South Carolina, Gilmer of North Carolina and Alexander H. Stephens are of the commission. It is also said that Gen. Grant has telegraphed that Mr. Stephens has solicited a pass through his lines to visit Washington.

It is known that Mr. Blair goes to Richmond with the full knowledge and consent of the President, and is clothed with all the authority requisite to open negotiations with Jeff. Davis, with a view to restore peace, and the rebel authorities will feel assured of this when he shows his credentials. His instructions are embraced in three propositions, viz., 1st, amnesty to all, no matter what they may have been since the war began; 2d, the Constitution as it is, and the Union as it was—the South to return to the Union with all the rights and privileges which it held before any of the States seceded; 3d, the total abolition of slavery. From this point the President will not retract one iota. He does not expect an immediate abolition, but he does that measures will be taken to secure its extinction within a reasonable length of time.

It is stated on what seems good authority that Jeff. Davis is strongly inclined to peace measures, and willing to accept more liberal terms than it was at first supposed he would be. Mr. Lincoln on the other hand, is disposed to be as lenient as possible, but insists that the first public action on the part of the South must be to lay down its arms and acknowledge the supremacy of the Union. There is no desire to humiliate the South; it is to bow down to the Union, not to the North. Under no circumstances will any proposition be acceded to which does not embrace as the first step the laying down of their arms on the part of the South.

As an instance of the temper of the Administration to obtain peace, it is stated that Gen. Butler was removed, not solely for his incompetence and misdemeanors, but also as an evidence that our Government is disposed to treat with the South on liberal terms, and is willing to remove any obstacle that may stand in the way of a perfect understanding with that section.

It is reported that ex-Governor Rives and ex-Governor Orr are on their way to Washington on a peace mission.

The Times' special Washington dispatch says the rebel Peace Commission consists of Vice President Stephens and Judge White of Georgia, Messrs. Boyce and Orr of South Carolina, Leach and Gilmore of North Carolina, Rives of Virginia, and Smith and Singleton of Mississippi.

The same dispatch says it is feared in Washington that there is no hope of passing the constitutional amendment abolishing slavery.

The Herald special says the War Department has information of F. P. Blair's arrival at Richmond.

Another dispatch says A. H. Stephens has applied for a pass through Grant's lines to visit Washington. Also that the rebel Congress has appointed a commissioner to meet Mr. Blair at Grant's quarters.

New York, Jan. 10. The Tribune's Washington dispatch says George D. Prentice, just from Richmond, reports Jeff. Davis' Government had conclusively resolved to free and arm the slaves; that 200,000 of them would soon be equipped and put into the field to fight us.

New York, Jan. 13. The steamer Arago, from Port Royal 9th, brings reports of importance if true. It is said that several counties of Georgia have recently held elections, and declared in favor of a return to the Union by overwhelming majorities. It is also reported that the people are arming to protect themselves from secessionists. Gov. Brown is said to be the principal promoter of these movements, and that he has disbanded the Georgia militia, who have returned to their homes. These rumors are all published in the Savannah Republican Extra of the evening of the 7th inst.

The Portland Advertiser of Jan. 2d, 1865, says: "There has been between three and four thousand earthquakes during the present century; of which 110 took place in Great Britain and Ireland.

The Advertiser of Dec. 28th, 1864, in a leading article says:

"Russia has been moving forward an army of nurses to look after the 'sick man of Turkey.' The affairs of the old continental nations will now give Alexander an opportunity of carrying out the darling project of Catherine. France and England are not prepared to oppose him. Russia is now fully prepared with all the modern improvements of war, and can move a vast army into the field."

The same paper, in an article headed "Singular Phenomenon," quoting from the Newark (N. J.) Advertiser, of Dec. 22d, 1864, says:

"A singular phenomenon appeared in the sky last evening, at about 11 o'clock, resembling in brightness and length of tail, a comet without a nucleus. When first observed, it was supposed to be the reflection of a large fire on the meadows; but from its continuance, and changings, it is supposed to have been a comet; its position was directly north and south. In the centre of the train, and about equi-distant from the end, there seemed to be two distinct divisions. The whole length of the train was apparently about half the great comet of 1858. About half-past 11 o'clock, the nucleus was visible, and the different sections seemed to unite, leaving little doubt respecting its being a true comet. 11.45 o'clock, the position of the comet had changed from due north and south to north-west and south-east, the head pointing north-west. At 12 o'clock it disappeared altogether, and was not again visible during the night."

THE GREAT RUSSIAN TELEGRAPH.—A party of Americans have gone out to San Francisco to superintend the building of the telegraph line to where it is to connect Russia with America by way of Behring's Straits. The wires of this great enterprise will extend from St. Petersburg east about 4000 miles, and probably by this time reach the mouth of the Amoor, on the Pacific. The party on this side are to extend the line along the Pacific coast till it reaches Behring's Straits, across which a submarine cable will be laid, when the connection around the world telegraphically will be complete. In the operations on this side they will be aided by facilities extended to them by the United States. Congress at its last session directed the Secretary of the Navy "to detail for the use of the surveys and soundings along that portion of the Pacific coast, both of America and Asia, where it proposed to establish the telegraph, one steam or sailing vessel in his discretion, to assist in surveys and soundings, laying down submerged cable, and in transporting materials connected therewith." Whether the coast line will be pursued strictly, or a new direction be taken across the continent, as a shorter and more practicable line, through the great natural basins or lakes stretching from Chicago to Behring's Straits, is not yet determined. The fogs along two thousand miles of the Pacific coast are thought to be an objection almost as great as of fifteen hundred miles of submarine cable. Across the continent this objection would not exist.

DEATH OF HON. EDWARD EVERETT.—Edward Everett died at his residence, 32 Summer Street, between four and five o'clock, Sunday morning, Jan. 15th. The fact became known at an early hour and was rapidly and extensively circulated, plunging the whole city in the profoundest grief. Men were scarcely able to credit the report, so recently had Mr. Everett been seen in our midst.—Boston Journal.

☞ Forty-five years ago this autumn 1000 bushels of potatoes were delivered at the State Prison in Concord at ten cents a bushel. Now they are selling for $1,20 cents a bushel.

MISSOURI.—The abolition of slavery in Missouri has been secured so long—that is, for a revolutionary period—that the actual accomplishment of the step will probably excite but little attention. That step was taken by the State Convention with extraordinary unanimity, and the ratification of the people, which is probably necessary, will be but a formal record of the decision already made. This is truly a marvelous change from the time, but a few years since, when Missouri, secure in the fancied perpetuity of slavery within her border, was only intent upon forcing the system, by every method of fraud and force, upon her new neighbor Kansas. That attempt failed, and in the recoil came emancipation to Missouri herself. It will prove a great boon. No State has superior natural resources, both of soil and climate, and, now endowed with the blessings of free labor, she will soon rival the most prosperous of the States of the great West.—Boston Journal.

MIND, MATTER, MONEY, BEAUTY.—Webster's Quarto Dictionary, as now published, is said to have cost more intellectual labor, more money in its "getting up," and to contain more matter, and a larger number of beautiful engravings, than any single volume ever before published for popular use in this or any other country. Bell & Daldy, the new publishers of Bohn's libraries, are to be the London publishers of this magnificent volume.

☞ The costliest Bible ever made in this country was gotten up by the people of Baltimore as a testimonial of the President in honor of his proclamation of emancipation. The cost of the book being nearly six hundred dollars—$580.72. It is a pulpit Bible, bound in violet silk velvet.

☞ The Suez Canal Company are now having built at Ismail, in the centre of the Isthmus, a large Roman Catholic church, which, in pursuance of the wishes of the Empress, will be dedicated to Saint Francois de Sales.

☞ Gen. Tom Thumb, wife, baby, and the diminutive gentlemen's suite, were the guests of Emperor Napoleon at Compeigne on the 8th of December.

☞ No son of any French monarch has succeeded to his father's throne during the past two hundred and twenty years.

☞ The Italian Senate has passed the bill for the transfer of the capital by 134 to 37 votes.

☞ London is supplied with one hundred million gallons of water daily.

☞ The fashionable hotels in New York are asking four dollars a day, with meals "extra."

Discussion.

The following Question is to be discussed between John Stevenson, of Toronto, C. W., and William C. Thurman, of Buchanan, Mich:—

IS PTOLOMY'S CANON CORRECT?

Mr. Stevenson affirms; Mr. Thurman denies.

The discussion is to be held in Kast's Hall, 104 Hanover Street, Boston, on Tuesday, Jan. 24th, 1865, and the following days. Sessions to be held from 10 o'clock, A. M., to 12 M., and from 2 to 4 o'clock P. M., and the time spent in half hour speeches, or otherwise, as the speakers may mutually agree. The evenings to be occupied in discussion, or in other services, as may seem best.

Elder Joshua V. Himes is to be the Chairman. The speeches are to be faithfully reported by a competent phonographer, subject to revision before being put to press. Additions or other alterations to be made by either party only with the consent of the other. Dates may be supplied in the published report which were not mentioned in the debate.

The discussion to be published, if practicable, with a lithographic or other copy of a section of Mr. Stevenson's Chronological Chart, embracing the points in dispute, to be furnished by Bro. S. And if Mr. Thurman shall desire a similar illustration of his argument, he is to have the like privilege.

Notice.

As I believe time is very short, and it behoves us to be up and doing; and as I have found many females that feel God has called them to follow in the vineyard of the Lord, but because of the prejudice of the church in its present cold and backslidden state, they are kept back from following as they feel God has called them to do; and as I believe that we are living in the day when God will pour out his Spirit upon his handmaids, I therefore give this notice to all the women of America, independent of denomination or color, who feel that they have been called of God to preach, exhort, pray, or to write, on the subject of his speedy coming, and a preparation for that coming, to open a correspondence with me in reference to holding a convention of women, in the coming spring, May or June, to be held at a place which will be named after hearing from the different sisters. This convention shall be for the promulgation of all Bible truths; but no hobbies.

Now, sisters, let me hear from you as soon as possible, so that we can make arrangements for the convention. Let this be a missionary movement. Remember Jesus is at the door, and wickedness is abounding, and the love of many is waxing cold. Let us be up and doing, so that he may say to us, "Well done, good and faithful servant, . . . Enter into the joy of thy Lord." Let all, who feel interested in this great work, make it a subject of special prayer at the hour of twelve o'clock, every day, that God may bless the effort that we may put forth to his honor and glory.

All brethren who are favorable to this convention are invited to assist us by advice, by kind words of encouragement, and those that can by publishing this notice.

Sisters are requested to form themselves into small missionary societies in their own village, or neighborhood, meet weekly, and report to me as often as possible.

Advent Christian Conference at No. Ohio.

Providence permitting, there will be a general conference meeting of all who are looking for "the kingdom that shall have no end," at Norwalk, Ohio, commencing Wednesday evening, Feb. 1st, 1865. The church of this place extend a general invitation to all of like precious faith to come and worship the Lord with us. We desire to see all the churches of the Northern and Central Ohio represented, as matters of vital importance to the cause of truth will come up for consideration. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield will be with us, and minister in word and doctrine. Let all come, and come praying for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and hold themselves ready to work for God. Brethren from the conferences east and west of us have a special invitation to come to this feast of the Lord.

J. D. KNAPP, President.
P. B. HOYT, Secretary.

Minnesota Quarterly Conference.

Our winter quarterly conference will be held in the Ramer school-house, Utica, Winona County, Minn., commencing on Friday, the 24th of Feb., at half past six o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following, day and evening. Preaching by different ministering brethren. All who love God and the salvation of sinners, and desire to know and understand the truth, and be prepared for the day of his coming, are invited to attend. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, but exhort one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching." Pray for God's blessing upon the meeting.

In behalf of the church, PHILIP RAMER, Sec.

A Discussion.

A discussion of the following questions will commence at Morse's Mills, Corinna, Me., Feb. 14th, at one o'clock, and continue several days.

1. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man has a spiritual, thinking soul, that will exist between death and the resurrection.

Affirmative, E. B. FLETCHER.
Negative, N. F. NASON.

2. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that after the resurrection God will destroy the wicked in the sense of making them as though they had not been.

Affirmative, N. F. NASON.
Negative, E. B. FLETCHER.

If the weather is stormy, the discussion will be adjourned one week.

Notice.

A series of meetings will be held at Tariffville, Ct., commencing Wednesday evening, Jan. 18th, and continuing over the Sabbath, and as long as thought best; R. Williams and H. K. Flagg cooperating.

Notice.

The Second Advent meetings in Bristol, Ct., will be held in Barnes' Hall for this present year, instead of Gridley's, as formerly.

HENRY L. BRADLEY.

Notice.

At the last session of the Indiana Christian Conference, I was appointed Evangelist for the Southern District of Indiana, which includes that part of the state south of the National Road. Those wishing me to visit them will please write immediately. Address G. W. GREEN, V. D. M., Memphis, Ind.

BOOKS WORTH BUYING, LENDING, READING, AND PRESERVING.

I. THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, a Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

A sad exhibition of the predicted perils of the Last Days; the selfishness, hypocrisy, and crimes of Christendom, as shown in STATISTICAL ACCOUNTS of the slave trade, cotton trade, opium trade, Coolie trade, and the licentiousness, illegitimacy, child murder, bloodshed, and military preparations of this age.

II. THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. [illegible] and prefaced by H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

A history of the doctrine of the reign of Christ on earth, containing the views and testimonies of nearly four hundred of the greatest preachers, reformers, and writers the church has ever known, concerning the establishment of the future glorious Kingdom of God, under the whole heaven.

III. THESSALONICA; OR THE MODEL CHURCH; A Sketch of Primitive Christianity; and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, or the Tokens of Speedy Redemption, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION, by Wm. Ramsey, D.D. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

"Thessalonica," portraying the faith and practice of the early Christians; "Reasons," exhibiting the hope of the Church, the fulfilment of prophecy, the spread of the gospel through Missionaries, Bible and Tract Societies, etc.; and "Spiritualism," unveiling and exposing the monster delusion of Satan in these latter times.

IV. THE GREAT CONTROVERSY BETWEEN GOD AND MAN; its Origin, Progress, and End; with numerous TRACTS on Prophetical and Practical subjects. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

The "Controversy" sketches the History of the World since man's revolt from God, narrates the judgments already inflicted upon the nations of the earth for their iniquities, and those more terrible and exterminating calamities yet to overwhelm the ungodly and prepare the way for the establishment of a divine government upon the earth. The TRACTS are, "The Church not in Darkness," "The Three Worlds," "The Last Days," "Plain Truths," "Ancient Landmarks," "Important Questions," "Olive Leaves," etc. etc.; a valuable and spirited collection.

THE TIME QUESTION.—NO. 8.

THE TIME OF THE END.

What is the time of the end? Not the end itself. Why? Because in "the time of the end" the wise "shall understand" a certain prophetic measurement reaching to the end of a long chain of "wonders," shown to Daniel by an angel, including the resurrection as its terminating link; but in the "time of the end" "none of the wicked shall understand" it. If the "time of the end" is the end itself, they would as really understand as the righteous. But what marks the beginning of the time of end? The angel affirms (Dan. 12: 4,) "Many shall run [or search] to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased,"—a gradual advance; but the ultimatum is (Dan. 12; 10,) "The wise shall understand." When? "In the time of the end." Upon reaching the time of the end, the first thing mentioned is an increase of knowledge, to be succeeded by a full understanding of that which had been previously "sealed," namely: the measurement reaching to the termination of the long chain of wonders ending with the resurrection. The angel gives a measurement reaching to the time of the end: "From the time the daily shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand, two hundred, and ninety days." (Dan. 12: 11.) So much time to what? To the "time of the end" just mentioned, for nothing else is hinted at as marking the end of this measurement;—1290 prophetic days from the inauguration of that Papal Government of "abomination," in A. D. 533, to 1823, the beginning of "the time of the end," in which "many" were to "run to and fro, and knowledge be increased," till the wise should "understand" the time reaching to the deliverance of God's people. William Miller's own statement shows that 1823 was the very year in which he began to search to and fro through the prophecies of Daniel. Wolfe of Asia, Mason of Scotland, Irving of England, and others, joined in searching and proclaiming the end at hand, early in "the time of the end." It is true that the church has passed through one general disappointment, and some of its members have ventured out upon various incorrect computations; but this does not invalidate the angel's statement, "The wise shall understand." That declaration was made with reference to time,—time that was to be "closed up and sealed till the time of the end." Is the statement truthful? It is. Has that time measurement really been sealed in past centuries? It has. Will it ever be understood? "The wise shall understand," even though a score of mistakes might have been made while the seal remained unbroken. All this cry about past mistakes avails nothing, and any believer in God's word should be ashamed to array this against the angel's statement, "The wise shall understand." But, says an unbeliever, we have heard that statement quoted by those who have made mistakes in the past. But has that converted the declaration into a falsehood? Does not the measurement of 1290 years from the time a certain daily hindering power was "taken out of the way," and the Papal "abomination that maketh desolate "SET UP" in its stead, together with the predicted increase of knowledge, and the corresponding signs of the times, clearly indicate that we are far advanced in the "time of the end?" And is it not, therefore, about time for the wise to understand? But what are the wise to understand in the time of the end? The only thing referred to is the time reaching to the end of a long chain of wonders upon the stream of time, containing, as its last link, the resurrection of the dead. This time "the wise shall understand." It is impossible to evade the point. It shows a lack of faith in God's word to attempt it. "But it is an unpopular stand." Can't help that; it is God's plan. "It will bring reproach." Can't help it; it is Jehovah's plan. "What is written? How readest thou?" It is written, and I read it from God's word, "The wise shall understand." Shall I believe it? Will you believe it? If so, we may venture to look at the arguments now being presented despite the continual efforts to dissuade us from so doing, by pointing us to past mistakes.

After Daniel had heard a measurement of 1290 prophetic days given, reaching to the time of the end, the angel proceeds to give another measurement from the setting up of the Papal "abomination that maketh desolate,"—reaching to the time of redemption: "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days. But go thou thy way till the END be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." (Dan. 12: 12, 13.)

This measurement of 1335 prophetic days, beginning with the former measurement in 533, ends in 1868, when Daniel and all the saints shall rise. The difference between 1335 and 1290 is 45, from which we learn that the time of the end is a space of 45 years; and already over 40 years of the time of the end has passed away: consequently, as the "wise shall understand" the time in the "time of the end," it is too late to excuse ourselves from an investigation by pointing to past failures.

Time is in the Bible, and there for the church to understand somewhere in "the time of the end;"—and as it was not understood in the first part of the time of the end, it follows that it must be understood in the latter part—the time in which we are living. Therefore every child of God should feel under obligation to carefully and prayerfully examine the Time Question. If Jesus is really coming in 1868, we ought to be fully awake upon the question. What a great work we have to do in a little space of time! Heaven help us to arouse!

and 1868 is but a step before us. Will we awake? And will we work? Will we carry the torch of prophetic truth all around with us, and thus help to dispel the increasing darkness. Light is shining. Do not reject it or suppress it. Heaven's last dispensational truth is not to be trifled with. Dare we attempt it? Beware! beware!

In the light of fulfilled prophecy, unmistakable signs, and prophetic measurements soon to end, we clearly see our chronological stand-point on the stream of time. Shall we not let the light shine, fearless of skeptics and scoffers? God help us.

PRAY FOR THE SPIRIT;

You who profess to love the Lord, who would be clothed in the righteousness of Christ, who would "be perfect even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," who would be found "without spot and blameless" when the Life-giver appears;—pray for the Spirit—walk in the Spirit. Delude not yourselves with the mistaken idea that this gift, this blessing, is not for you; that it was given only to those who lived in the days of the apostles; for Paul, in writing to the Ephesians, says: "After that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise." Again, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." To his Corinthian brethren he writes, "Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts." Jesus promised to send "the Comforter" to his lonely followers, after he went away. "And behold," he says, "I send the promise of my Father upon you." "The Comforter" is the "Holy Spirit of promise." If believers in the days of Paul were sealed by having this gift poured out upon them, are they not sealed in the same manner now? If you "have not the Spirit of Christ," you are "none of his." Without this Spirit, you can have no part with the redeemed; you will be left to suffer the fearful terrors of that whirlwind of indignation that is to sweep over a wicked world, when the saints are gone. Without it, Jesus will not claim you. "Having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his." This is the seal whereby the children of God are to be known in the day when the elect are to be gathered from the four winds of heaven.

Have you got it, brother? Is the priceless gift yours, dear sister? If you have it not, oh, hasten to your closet and pray. Pray earnestly,—"pray without ceasing." Take no rest night nor day until you woo this heavenly guest to abide with you, for "the great day of the Lord is near, and . . . hasteth greatly!" There is no time to lose. We can count the moments almost that will intervene before our Savior comes.

"But how shall I know that I have the Spirit?" do you ask? By its manifestations; for "the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal; for to one is given, by the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit," etc. Pray for the Spirit. Its fruits are "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance,"—all the christian virtues in one bright chain. "Be filled with the Spirit," is an express command. If you would be "rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom"; if you would be endowed with wisdom from above; if you would understand the word of life; if you would be safe in the day of trouble that is even now coming upon the face of the earth; if you would be ready to meet your King,—pray for the Spirit, walk in the Spirit. Your unworthy Sister in Christ, S. R. CHAPLIN.

ARE THE ENTIRE SCRIPTURES GIVEN BY INSPIRATION OF GOD?

What is implied by the expression, "given by inspiration of God?" What is inspiration? We shall give our own definition, which our readers can accept or not, just as they see fit.

"Inspiration" is that divine illumination by which a writer is infallibly guided in the narration of events and statement of truths, previously known, and in the communication of facts and truths previously unknown and which could not otherwise be known.

It is, in brief, such a divine guidance as secures its subject from error in the communication of religious truth and in the setting forth of other allied truth apart from which this "communication" could not be properly and fully made. The inspired penman writes at the suggestion, with the aid, and under the especial supervision of the Almighty. Inspired language is God's metal cast in human moulds. It is God's thoughts clothed in human idioms and forms of speech. Hence, the idiosyncrasies of the several writers stand out in bold relief. In the words of another, "the sacred writers were God's penman, not his pens."

Inspiration leaves the natural powers of the writer free to act within the sphere of truth.

Suppose now we assume two kinds of inspiration. For want of better terms, let us name them historic and Apocalyptic inspiration; or the inspiration of narration and the inspiration of revelation. The two kinds will differ in this, that the former deals with known and revealed truth, the latter with unknown and unrevealed. They agree in this, that both infuse into the communication the element of infallibility, in the line of the end which the divine mind proposes to itself.

Let us see the workings of historic inspiration. The inspired historian is unerringly guided in his researches, in his selection of facts. As the prompter carefully watches the actor upon the stage, corrects him when he goes wrong, suggests the right word when he hesitates, but allows him to proceed undisturbed when he goes right, so, we think, in a somewhat similar way God operates upon the mind of the sacred writer. He leaves it free to work rightly, but prevents its working wrongly. He however, exercises a constant and careful supervision over the work.

As Bro. Fuller has clearly shown, there is no reason whatever to suppose that any uninspired historian is perfectly accurate and reliable. To suppose this, is to assume that man has attained a perfection in the department of history, which he has reached nowhere else. It is safe to affirm that all profane historians have, in some respects, been unduly swayed by personal motives, by partizan prejudice, by following old authorities too implicitly, or by a desire to magnify their own country. They all have blundered more or less, and, in most cases, these blunders have been pointed out by succeeding writers.

Now we maintain that the sacred historians were supernaturally preserved from these blunders, inaccuracies and biases, that they were guided by the Spirit of truth, that they wrote that which seemed to the Divine mind best adapted to the great end in view. In a word, they produced an impartial, faithful and true history, though designedly, and for wise reasons, the events are not always related in the precise order of their occurence.

Nor does inspiration of this kind preclude, in the least, the fact or the necessity of the historian's making all practicable effort to ascertain the truth for himself. God never does that for man which man himself can do. Thus, in writing Genesis, Moses may have made and probably did make, use of ancient documents and oral traditions. But then he was divinely guided in making a selection from existing materials, in discriminating between the reliable and the unreliable, the true and the false.

So the fact, that Luke, before commencing to write his gospel, "accurately traced out all from the very first," affords no presumption whatever that he was not unerringly guided in this investigation and in his subsequent writing.

Does the fact, that Luke says, "it seemed good to me," prove that it did not ALSO "seem good to the HOLY GHOST (see Acts 15: 28,) that Luke should write his gospel? We think not? Is the expression at all inconsistent with the idea that God moved Luke to make careful and thorough research, to commit to writing the results of his investigation, and that HE guided him and preserved him from error in the execution of his self-imposed yet divinely allotted task? We fail to see that it is. . . .

The sacred poet is unerringly guided in his adventurous flight of song, and when he passes from the realm of the revealed into that of the unrevealed, his daring pinion is still upheld by Almighty power. While he rehearses known truth, in poetic strains, he is guided by historic inspiration; when he arises to the height of prophecy his inspiration partakes of the apocalyptic character. In both cases, he is guided by unerring wisdom.

So of the inspired teacher. He is wisely guided in the statement of doctrines new and old, revealed and unrevealed.

"Apocalyptic Inspiration" discloses to man all that truth which he needs to know and which he could not discover by his own unaided efforts. We suppose the inspiration which guided the apostles and prophets to have been largely apocalyptic.

Such in brief is our view of the subject. Inspiration stamps the Bible with Heaven's broad seal of truth. It gives weight and meaning and authority to the teachings and statements of the Bible, such as no other book possesses. It makes the Bible God's own book.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

POWER OF THE CROSS OF CHRIST.

They were living to themselves: self, with its hopes, and promises, and dreams, still had hold of them; but He began to fulfill their prayers. They had asked for contrition, and he sent them sorrow; they had asked for purity, and he sent them thrilling anguish; they had asked to be meek, and he had broken their hearts; they had asked to be dead to the world, and he slew all their living hopes; they had asked to be made like unto him, and he placed them in the furnace, sitting by "as a refiner of silver," till they should reflect his image; they had asked to lay hold of his cross, and when he reached it to them it lacerated their hands. They had asked they knew not what, nor how; but he had taken them at their word, and granted them all their petitions. They were hardly willing to follow on so far, or to draw so nigh to him. They had upon them an awe and fear, as Jacob at Bethel, or Eliphaz in the night visions, or as the apostles when they thought they had seen a spirit, and knew not that it was Jesus—they could almost pray him to depart from them, or to hide his awfulness. They found it easier to obey than to suffer,—to do than to give up,—to bear the cross than to hang upon it: but they cannot go back, for they have come too near the unseen cross, and its virtues have pierced too deeply within them. He is fulfilling to them his promise, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me:" but now their turn is come at last, and that is all. Before, they had only heard of the mystery, but now they feel it. He has fastened on them his look of love, as he did on Mary and Peter, and they cannot but choose to follow. Little by little, from time to time, by fitting gleams the mystery of his cross shines out upon them. They behold him lifted up,—they gaze on the glory which rays forth from the wounds of his holy passion; and as they gaze, they advance and are changed into his likeness, and his name shines out through them, for he dwells in them. They live alone with him above, in unspeakable fellowship; willing to lack what others own, and to be unlike all, so that they are only like him.

Such are they in all ages who follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. Had they chosen for themselves, or their friends chosen for them, they would have chosen otherwise. They would have been brighter here, but less glorious in his kingdom. They would have had Lot's portion, not Abraham's. If they had halted anywhere,—if he had taken off his hand, and let them stray back,—what would they not have lost? What forfeits in the morning of the resurrection? But he stayed them up, even against themselves. Many a time their foot had well nigh slipped; but he, in mercy, held them up: now, even in this life, they know all he did was done well. It was good for them to suffer here, for they shall reign hereafter,—to bear the cross below, for they shall wear the crown above; and that not their will but his was done on them.

PARAPHRASE.—Psalm 23.

Jesus, Shepherd of my soul,
Thou hast found thy wand'ring sheep;
Long my erring feet did stroll
O'er sin's mountains, dark and steep;
But, when in distress I cried,
Thy kind hand became my guide.

Now to pastures green I'm led,
Near life's quiet stream I lie;
Grief no more shall bow my head,
Jesus doth my wants supply;
In his happy fold restored,
I shall live and praise the Lord.

I'll pursue the righteous path
Which my blessed Leader trod:
Yea, e'en through the shades of death,
Leaning on his staff and rod;
He'll be near me day and night,
Till I reach the land of light.

Foes may my rich table see,
Furnished from a boundless store;
Oil of joy is poured on me,
And my cup is running o'er;
Nor shall these great mercies fail
While I'm in this mortal vale.

In the palace of my King,
With immortal ones, I'll dwell;
Side by side with them I'll sing
Love divine, unsearchable;
I'll proclaim, while ages roll,
Jesus! Shepherd of my soul!

REST FOR THE WEARY.

How is it with you to-day? Is your sky all clear—not a cloud in sight? Then you do not need the consolation we are now to give. It is for this poor, sorrowing one, beset by snares, with no kind friend near to lend a helping hand, and speak words of peace and hope. Your burden is heavy; now obey the command, "Cast thy burden on the LORD." Go to HIM in earnest prayer. You have desires; you long for just what HE is ready and waiting to give. You want peace; O hear him say, "My peace I give unto you." "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." Matthew 11: 28, 29, 30. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

GERMAN CONFERENCE.

The following is part of the report of a German conference, sent us for publication. It may be a matter of interest to our readers to know what some of the Germans are doing to arouse the world to prepare for the coming of Christ.—ED.

REPORT of the proceedings of the first German Synod, at Barmen, (Rhenish Prussia), held on the 21st, 22d, and 23d of September, 1864, convened by the committee of the friends of Jerusalem from Wurttemberg.—(Translated from the "Zeichen der Zeit.")

Under the firm conviction that the advent of our Lord is near at hand, and that our time is of the utmost importance, we have long since felt the necessity of making the "Temple" known beyond the boundaries of Wurttemberg. The "German Temple" has undertaken the task to bring about a forward movement in the German nation; and for this reason we came to the conclusion to call a German synod, at Barmen. Knowing the independent sects, and established church of state, as they now exist in Germany, from the fact that they do not initiate men into the light of prophecy, and are not willing to give their influence for a transformation of life, we did not expect to see any of their delegations take part with this synod; we were therefore not disappointed in their not uniting with us. Even the inhabitants of Barmen, Elberfeld, and surrounding country, did not participate in the meeting to a very great extent; although the different religious societies of the immediate vicinity were represented by delegates. The "Temple" from Wurttemberg was most largely represented, every district having sent their elders and evangelists as delegates. Each meeting was opened with prayer, before entering into the discussion of the leading questions.

On the first day, the following part of the published programme was disposed of:

I. The Sanctuary, and the union of all established churches.

II. The solution of the German question, by the gathering of a people from among the Catholics, Protestants, Jews, and other sects, for the establishment of a sanctuary.

III. The Organization of this people.

The summary of the first point may be stated as follows: a sanctuary reaches all important circumstances of life. The essence of the sanctuary consists in the prosperous development of the spiritual and physical man. The ideal of this development is contained in the prophetical Scriptures. The established church of state and sects do not recognize this development in accordance with the teachings of the prophecy, and have no real sanctuary. The promotion of these ends alone constitutes the real sanctuary. The present church of state, for the most part, acknowledges the great deeds of God in the past, but not in the right way, as she does not accept them according to 1 Cor. 12, as being typical of what should be their own conduct. Thus having a perverted conception of the past, it may not be wondered at that she is not able to exercise a decided influence on the present or future. This is the reason why she cannot believe the future prophecies of God, or the mysteries of God as contained in the prophetical Scriptures. Without this high sanctuary, without the real settlement of all human differences by the same, without the acknowledgment of the duty and mission of man as given in the word of God, we cannot have a union of confessions, inasmuch as mere human agreements about doctrines or enterprises will utterly fail.

Concerning the second point it was maintained that the solution of the German question does not consist in an amended constitution of the German Confederacy (which will never be done at all events), but that it will only be solved by the social advancement of the people, by which means all other questions will also be solved, such as the miseries of crime, of insanity, of suicide, of prostitution, of child murder, the providing for the poor, the improvement of the social condition of the workingmen, the prevention of war, of emigration, etc. The resolution to solve these questions must be the true shibboleth of the christians, and such a people must be gathered from all churches.

The third point was the organization. The spirit of it is, according to the prophets, such as not to call a miser master, nor a fool prince. Isa. 32: 5. An example of a proper organization is given by the advice of Jethro to Moses, Ex. 18: 21;—"Thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens." The perfect organization describes the apostle with the words: "And God hath set some in the church; first, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that, miracles; then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." 1 Cor. 12: 28.

A VIRTUE NEEDED IN AMERICA.

We Americans are the most wasteful and extravagant people in the world. We waste fearfully in food, in clothing, and in extras. We waste on every secular day of the week, and waste a double amount on Sundays. Men waste shamefully, women shockingly; boys and girls, too, are permitted to waste wofully. Wastefulness is one of our worst national vices; for if economy be a virtue, then extravagance must be a vice. The English don't waste half as much as we do; the French not a quarter; and the Germans (while in Germany) don't waste at all.

Hundreds of leading hotels here and throughout the country prepare daily from twenty to fifty different dishes for dinner, and out of these from a half to two-thirds are regularly wasted. Thus not only is food wasted, but also labor at the same time. In ordinary families unwholesome meals of half a dozen dishes are gotten up, where a plain meal would at once be more economical and wholesome. We gorge ourselves with great numbers of articles which are neither nutricious nor delicious, but simply costly. Men buy four hats a year, where one ought to last them four years. They throw away coats and pants when they are but little the worse for wear; and instead of having their shirts mended and their stockings darned, they purchase new ones, and fling away the old. Women wear very expensive articles of dress without wearing them out; and we have heard, are inclined to spend and waste money and material without stint.

The present is a most excellent time for the whole people to begin to learn and practice the virtue of economy. If those men who are striking for higher wages because of the high price of living, would, instead of this, waste less in their homes, their clothing and their "sundries," it would be much better for themselves and for the country. If dealers would live less extravagantly, and waste less, they could sell more cheaply. If rich men would squander less on their tables, their tailors, their wine merchants, their fast horses, big houses and "fancy fixings," they would set a better example, would better enjoy life, enjoy better health, and be more able to help their country. If the fair sex would pay some attention to this matter—and we refer not merely to the wealthy classes, but to those in the common walks of life—they would be thrice blessed themselves and would confer blessings on the bearded sex.

Among the mercantile, mechanic, agricultural and working classes of Germany, the same garment will not only be worn for one season or one year, but for half a life-time or more; and yet they will be no less comfortably clad than our people, who wear out a hundred suits of expensive clothes during their brief existence. In Dachau, the underrock of the women will often be handed down and worn for three generations—which is a fact that might profitably be pondered by the daughters of America. They are no less economical in articles of food on the European continent. A witty Frenchman asks the question why pork is always so dear in Paris, and himself answers the inquiry by saying it is because they can't raise swine in France, for the people themselves consume all the garbage. There is hardly enough truth in this to point the joke; for the fact is, that the nice and economical habits of the French, in matters of diet, prevents the vast accumulations of refuse which are seen in some other countries.

Our habits of waste astonish all foreigners. We waste enough in this country, of food and clothing, in one year, to sustain the whole population for five. The times are hard. The currency is deranged. We know not what lies in the future. The whole country should begin to learn habits of economy. And it is a virtue, which, if it is ever to become national, should at once be begun to be practiced by individuals.—New York Times.

PATIENCE AND PEACE.

Patience and peace go together. You cannot separate them. God has married them for all time. Man's strength is to endure. Whatever man can inflict, I am overcomer if I can bear it all patiently. "What can your religion do for you now?" said a cruel master as he lifted the gory scourge from the bleeding back of a faithful slave. "It teaches me to love you, mass'r," was the victorious reply. And the slave with love was stronger than the master with a scourge. Ah! this patient principle of love is mightier than rage and wrath. One is the billow—wind-lashed, angry, towering and foaming around; the other is the rock—serene in impregnable strength, unmoved in all the fury of the storm.

Peace gives patience, and patience gives peace. Both act and re-act upon each other. If you want peace, be patient. Don't fret. Don't worry. Leave God to order all thy ways. Don't pick green apples from the tree of providence—they'll set your teeth on edge, besides making you sick. Let them get ripe, then they are better.

Be patient. There's nothing but sorrow gained by fretting, but for the patient there is peace—peace like a river. Bear the little trials that surround you on every hand. Don't fret, nor worry, nor scold, nor rage. Be patient. Let the world wag. Let the devil bark. Smile at Satan's rage. There's nothing that makes him so mad as that. Hide in the rock of ages. Then let the storm howl. Have faith in God.

Be patient unto the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. Be patient toward all men, including your husband. Toward all women, your own wife included. Towards all children, not excepting your own. Have patience, and you'll save a good deal of repenting, sighing, confessing and crying. Keep quiet. It will make the house quiet, the neighborhood quiet, the church quiet; and if all would be patient, the world would be much quieter than it is. Try it, my friend. Have patience, and you will have peace—peace like a river, and righteousness like the waves of the sea.

God bless thee, tried, troubled, perplexed pilgrim, and help thee to be patient to the end. So be it. H. L. H.

BAD MEMORY.

"Mary, my love, do you remember the text this morning?"

Mary. "No, pa, I never can remember the text, my memory is so bad."

Mother. "By the way, did you notice Susan Brown?"

Mary. "Oh, yes, what a fright! She had on her last year's bonnet done up, a pea-green silk, a black lace mantilla, brown boots, an imitation of Honiton collar, a lava bracelet, her old ear-rings, and such a fan! oh, my!"

Mother. "Well, my dear, your memory is certainly bad."—Amer. Mess.

A NEW STYLE OF RELIGION.

We want a religion that goes into the family, and keeps the husband from being spiteful when the dinner is late; keeps the wife from being spiteful when the husband tracks the newly washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door mat; amuses the children as well as instructs them; wins as well as governs them; projects the honeymoon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy hours like the eastern fig tree, bearing in its bosom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripened fruit. We want a religion that not only bears on the sinfulness of sin, but on rascality of lying and stealing, a religion that banishes all small measures from the counters, small baskets from the stalls, pebbles from cotton bags, clay from pepper, sand from sugar, chicory from coffee, beer root from vinegar, alum from bread, lard from butter, strychnine from wine, and water from milk cans. The religion that is to advance the world will not put all the big strawberries and peaches on top, and all the bad ones at the bottom. It will not offer more baskets of foreign wines than the vineyards ever produced bottles. The religion that is to sanctify the world pays its debts. It does not consider forty cents returned for one hundred given, according to gospel, though it is according to law. It looks upon a man who has failed in trade, and who continues to live in luxury, as a thief. It looks upon a man who promises to pay, and who fails to pay on demand, with or without interest, as a liar.

PRACTICAL.

A youth of sixteen, who had given his heart to God, was attending school. A vacation ensued, during which a plan was set on foot, after the spirit of the times, to induce the scholars to do their teacher honor by giving him a surprise supper at one of the public halls.

This youth informed his mother of the movement, not to ask permission to take part; but, to request his parents that a letter, showing his, and their joint regard, be sent to the teacher (who is truly worthy), that he might understand the reason of their absence.

This reasonable request was most happily acceded to by his parents, and this youth, on that very night, volunteered to accompany a faithful brother in Christ, in the family, in his mother's stead, who was not able to go, to a "poor widow's," where they were wont to meet for prayer, to make her heart "sing for joy," and to encourage her son, about the same age, who is trying to serve the Lord.

They returned home with cheerful hearts, and happy faces, saying they had enjoyed a good time. Bless the Lord. His mother told him she knew he would have a good time.

How many of the dear youths baptized at Wilbraham are thus cheering the hearts of their praying parents, and honoring their Savior in the midst of this crooked and perverse generation, among whom such shine as lights in the world?

Let me ask your prayers for this dear youth, that he hold out faithful, and meet you all at the end of the race, who started upon that beautiful mountain to serve the Lord.

This is the prayer of one who loves the lambs of the flock. "It is good to bear the yoke in the youth." E. S. WILLARD.

ONE BRICK LAID WRONG.

Not long ago some workmen were engaged in building a large brick tower, which was to be carried up very high. The master builder was very particular in charging the masons to lay every brick with the greatest care, especially in the lower courses or rows, which had to bear the weight of all the rest of the building. However, one of the workmen did not mind what had been told him. In laying a corner, he very carelessly left one of the bricks a little crooked, out of the line, or, as the masons call it, "not plumb." Well, you may say, "It was only one single brick in a great pile of them. What difference does it make if that was not exactly straight?" You will see directly. The work went on. Nobody noticed that there was one brick wrong. But as each new course of bricks was kept in a line with those already laid, the tower was not put up exactly straight, and the higher they built it the more insecure it became. One day, when the tower had been carried up about fifty feet, a tremendous crash was heard. The building had fallen to the ground, burying the workmen in the ruins! All the previous work was lost; the materials were wasted; and worse than this, valuable lives were sacrificed,—and all because one brick had been laid wrong at the start. The workman who carelessly laid that brick wrong, little thought what a dangerous thing he was doing, and what terrible harm would result from his neglect.

My dear young friends, you are now building up your character. In the habits you now form you are laying the foundation of that character. One bad habit, one brick laid wrong now, may ruin your character by-and-by. Remember what you are doing, and see that every brick is kept straight.—The Young Reaper.

DON'T TATTLE.

Children, don't talk about each other. Don't call one of your schoolmates ugly, another stingy, another cross, behind their backs. It is mean. Even if they are ugly, stingy, or cross, it does you no good to repeat it. It makes you love to tell of faults—it makes you uncharitable—your soul grows smaller—your heart loses its generous blood, when you tattle about your friends. Tell all the good you know about them, and carry the sins in your own heart, or else tell them to God, and ask him to pardon them. That will be Christlike. If any body says to you, "O, that Mary Willis did such a naughty thing!" call to mind some virtue that Mary possesses, and hold it up to her praise. For your own sake, learn to make this a habit.

PULL IT UP BY THE ROOTS.

"Father, here is a dock," said Thomas, as he was at work with his father in the garden; "shall I cut it off close to the root?"

"No," replied his father, "that will not do; I have cut it up myself many times, but it grows again stronger than ever. Pull it up by the root, for nothing else will kill it."

Thomas pulled again and again at the dock, but the root was very deep in the ground, and he could not stir it from its place; so he asked his father to come and help him, and his father went and soon pulled it up.

"This dock root, Thomas," said his father, "which is an evil and fast growing weed in a garden, puts me in mind of the evil things that grow so fast in the hearts of children. If a boy is ill-tempered, we must not expect to find in him good humor, cheerfulness, thankfulness, and a desire to make others happy. And a little girl who is idle, we need not expect to be industrious, neat, or cheerful. If a child is undutiful to his parents, and despises the commandments of God, we might as well look for a rose or a tulip in a bed of nettles, as hope to find in his heart those graces and good desires that we love to see growing there.

Every bad habit, every evil passion which troubles you, you should try with all your heart and mind to overcome; you should, if possible, tear it up. But as you will find your own strength but weakness, go straightway to that Almighty Friend who alone is able to strengthen and assist you. He can take from your hearts the love of sin; and this is the only way of destroying it, as we have destroyed the dock, by pulling it up by the root."—Children's Treasury.

A THOUGHTLESS BOY PUNISHED.

I shall never forget an incident of my childhood, by which I was taught to be careful not to wound the feelings of the unfortunate. A number of us school-boys were playing by the roadside one Saturday afternoon, when the stage coach drove up to a neighboring tavern, and the passengers alighted. As usual, we gathered around to observe them. Among the number was an elderly man with a cane, who got out with much difficulty, and when on the ground, he walked in a most curious way. His feet turned one way, his knees another, and his whole body looked as though the different members were independent of it, and of each other, and every one was making motions to suit itself. I unthinkingly shouted, "Look at old rattlebones!" while the old man turned his head, with an expression of pain which I can never forget.

Just then, to my surprise and horror, my father came round the corner, and immediately stepping up to the stranger, shook his hand warmly, and assisted him to walk to our house, which was but a little distance.

I could enjoy no more play that afternoon, and when tea-time came I would gladly have hid myself, but I knew that would be in vain, so I tremblingly went into the sitting-room.

To my great joy and relief, the stranger did not recognize me, but remarked pleasantly to my father as he introduced me, "Such a fine boy was surely worth saving." How the words cut me to the heart. My father had often told me the story of a friend, who had plunged into the river to save me as I was drowning, while an infant; and who, in consequence of a cold then taken, had been made a cripple for life—and this was the man I had made a butt of ridicule, and a laughing-stock for my companions! I tell you, boys and girls, I would give much to have the memory taken away. If ever you are tempted as I was, remembering that, while no good can come of sport whereby the feelings of others are wounded, you may be laying up for yourselves painful recollections, that will not leave you for a lifetime.

WHY ROBIN REDBREAST SUNG HIS SONG.

"How cold it is," said the thrush one wintry morning, when the snow was on the ground. "I never felt anything so wretched. I shan't stir from this sheltered nook to-day; shall you, friend Blackbird?

"No, I should think not," said the Blackbird; "but there is that foolish Robin Redbreast singing his song as if it were fine and warm, instead of cold and miserable."

Robin Redbreast heard them, and with a twinkle in his merry eye, he answered, "There would be no thanks to me for singing on a bright fine day; there are plenty of birds to do that, and I am only valued because I am bright and cheery when everything else is dreary and dull!"

Then he hopped upon the window ledge, and sang his happy winter song; and the little children opened the casement, and said, "Mother, there is some singing even though it is so cold."

"It is the dear little Robin," said their mother; "give him some crumbs for his song."

BOYS, DO RIGHT!

Never mind if you are laughed at when you do what is right. The time will come when those who do wrong will be the sufferers. Thirty years ago, a little boy who was on his way to the Sunday-school, was tempted by some boys to have a ramble in the woods on the Lord's day. He firmly replied, "No." That boy is now a man, and has cause to thank God for earthly blessings and prosperity. God has blessed him. The Sabbath-breaking boys became bad men—a sorrow to their parents and friends, and a disgrace to their country. The Bible says, "It shall be well with the righteous." Boys, do right!

THE COMPASS TO STEER BY.

"Well, my boy, so you are going to try your fortune in the city. I tell you 'tis a dangerous ocean to launch your craft on," said a man to his neighbor's son.

"Yes, sir," answered the lad, taking his Bible from his pocket; "but, you see, I've got a safe compass to steer by."

"Stick to it, stick to it," cried the man, and the enemy may blow hot or blow cold, he can't hurt so much as a hair of your head."

MY HOPE.

The kingdom of God is before me,
Its brightness illumines my way;
This world has no power to enthrall me,
No more can it tempt me to stay.
I have heard of the light and the glory
That beam on the bright world to come,
And, unmindful of earthly allurements,
I haste to that beautiful home.

The kingdom of God is before me,
What though I may journey alone?
What though I am tired and fainting
With the weight of the cross I have borne?
What matter though rough be my pathway,
And tears in my weariness fall?
I shall rest in the home of the ransomed,
Where gladness and peace are for all.

The kingdom of God is before me,
'Tis sufficient to hasten me on,
To know that such glory awaits me
As the word of Jehovah has shown;
To know I shall share in the blessings
Of the home of which prophets have told;
To know I shall dwell 'mid its brightness,
And its King in his beauty behold.

The kingdom of God is before me,
In the patience of hope I'll endure;
Content with the lot of a pilgrim,
If I may the promise secure.
Not long shall the dark cloud of evil
Envelope the world in its gloom,
Ere a King shall in righteousness govern,
And earth's deserts like Eden shall bloom.

DANIEL'S 69 AND 62 WEEKS OF YEARS.

They begin with a specific "commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," and reach "unto Messiah the Prince." (Dan. 9: 25). If we can determine the beginning and ending of this prophetic measurement, it will place that part of chronology which affects the time question on an invulnerable basis: for after determining what marks the end of these weeks of years, we have simply to run back 483 years to find the starting point. The saying, "unto Messiah," is explicit, and means the same as "unto Christ" in the following text: "From the carrying away into Babylon, unto Christ, are fourteen generations" (Matt. 1: 17), which measurement the preceding verses terminate when Christ was "BORN." If the "14 generations" which reached "unto Christ," ended at the birth of Jesus, it follows that the 69 weeks which reach "unto Messiah," or Christ, must also have ended at his birth, when it was declared, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is CHRIST the Lord." (Luke 2: 11).

When was Christ born? Not at the beginning of the Christian Era, for it has been astronomically demonstrated that Christ was born in the fifth year before the Christian Era, by the aid of an eclipse which marked the death of Herod, locating his death in B. C. 4; and Christ was born prior to Herod's death, B. C. 5. Thus 69 weeks of years (483 years), traced back from the birth of Christ in B. C. 5, carry us to B. C. 488, as the true time for the "going forth of the commandment."

Having learned that Christ was born B. C. 5, and being assured that the 69 weeks terminated at his birth, we have a scriptural measurement establishing the fact that B. C. 488 was the time when the "commandment" went forth. This point being established by the testimony of inspiration, all is plain. By counting the reign of different kings from Cyrus to the Christian Era (omitting the time some of them reigned in consort with their predecessors), we have just 488 years, as the true historic measurement, or 483 from Cyrus to the birth of Christ in B. C. 5. Thus all is harmonious.

There are some expositors who insist that Daniel's 69 weeks reached to the baptism of Christ, assigning as a reason for this claim that Christ was not anointed till his baptism. To this we reply that his baptism did not constitute him the Anointed, or the Christ, for he was born "the Anointed," even if he received a score of anointings subsequent to this epoch. Besides this, if we extend the 69 weeks to Messiah's baptism, and then trace back 483 years to find the starting point, we reach a point whence no commandment can be found to mark their beginning. Here are the facts:

1. Christ was baptized "in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar" (Luke 3: 1–3, 23), being then 30 years of age.

2. An eclipse connected with the death of Augustus Cæsar, astronomically fixes the death of Augustus in A. D. 14. All astronomical tables establish this point. It is invulnerable.

3. Tiberius reigned two years before the death of Augustus, in consort with him, thus beginning his reign A. D. 12, from which point the "fifteenth year of Tiberius Cæsar," in which Christ was baptized, is found to be A. D. 26,—Christ having been born in the fifth year before the beginning of our A. D. Now having discovered that Christ was baptized in A. D. 26, if we end the 69 weeks at this epoch, and run back 483 years, we reach B. C. 456. What do we find there to mark the beginning of this measurement? Nothing!!! No "commandment" went forth at that time, nor has any one ever set up such a claim. This proves that Christ's baptism does not mark the end of the 69 weeks.

But by ending the 69 weeks with the birth of Christ in B. C. 5, and tracing the chain backward, we find the 69 weeks commenced in B. C. 488. What do we find there to mark their commencement? Just what we might expect to find, namely: a "commandment" from Cyrus in fulfillment of an ancient prediction, "That saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built; and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid." (Isaiah 44: 28). "He shall build my city, and he shall let go my captives." (Isaiah 45: 13). Cyrus did issue a "commandment," did let God's "captives go" at the end of their 70 years' captivity, and God affirmed that Cyrus should "build Jerusalem." God told the truth, and NO "commandment" for the accomplishment of this work can be found this side of Cyrus. If God uttered the truth in saying that CYRUS should do this specific work, the "commandment" to do it cannot be issued after the work is done, consequently this "commandment" cannot be located this side of Cyrus. The commandment to do a certain work must precede the work itself; therefore, as God declared that Cyrus should "build Jerusalem," the commandment to do this work must precede this work of Cyrus. What can be plainer than this?

The work which was carried on subsequent to Cyrus' reign, under the reign of other kings, claimed to be done on the strength of the decree of Cyrus, instead of new decrees, or an independent basis. Subsequent decrees were simply intended to stir up the people to carry out Cyrus' decree concerning the building of the "temple" and the "wall" of Jerusalem. In the reign of Darius, while the building of the temple was going on, certain enemies inquired of the Jews, "Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls?" (Ezra 5: 9). The Jews replied, "In the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon, the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God." (v. 13). They then sent to king Darius, saying, "Let there be search made in the king's treasure-house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house." (v. 17). As a result, "Search was made in the house of the rolls, where the treasures were laid up in Babylon. And there was found . . . a roll, and therein was a record thus written: In the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded," etc. (Ezra 6: 13). Thus this work was carried on upon the strength of the decree of Cyrus,—other decrees were given merely to stir the people up to execute the "commandment" of Cyrus.

The "three-score and two weeks" of Dan. 9: 25, which form a part of the 69 weeks, are not identical with "the three-score and two weeks" of verse 26, for in the first instance the measurement terminates with the birth of Christ, for "Messiah being interpreted is the Christ," and we expressly read of "the birth of Christ" (Matt. 1: 18),—not of his being constituted Christ several years after his birth. In the second instance the measurement marks the time when Christ should be "cut off," or crucified. As the former marks the time of Messiah's birth, and the latter the time of his crucifixion, it is obvious they are not identical.

Having found the beginning and ending of the 69 weeks, or "seven weeks, and three-score and two weeks," of v. 25, let us now look at the 2 weeks of v. 26, which is a distinct measurement, as it marks a distinct and different event. Where do they begin? Daniel had just said (v. 25), "The street shall be built again, and the wall even in troublous times," and then adds, "After three-score and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off." Thus the time when the "wall" of Jerusalem should be "built" is here designated as the epoch from which the 62 weeks are to be reckoned. The Bible informs us that the wall was completed and dedicated in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes, which was 82 years after the first of Cyrus, or B. C. 406: from which point 62 weeks of years, or 434 years, reach to A. D. 29. "After" this measurement ends, (not precisely at, but "after,") Messiah was to be "cut off." Now we inquire, in what year was he "cut off?" It is an established fact that Christ attended four annual passovers after his baptism, the last one being closely connected with his crucifixion, thus giving us a space of four current years (strictly, 3 1-2 years) from his baptism to his crucifixion. It is further evident that the crucifixion took place A. D. 30, from the following facts:

1. As Christ's ministry did not commence before "the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar," which we have proved identical with A. D. 26, and as Christ afterwards attended four annual passovers before his crucifixion, no claim can be made for an earlier date than A. D. 30. Was it later? Let us see.

2. The Scriptures repeatedly affirm that Christ was raised on the "third day" after the crucifixion, on the "first day"—thus proving the crucifixion to have occurred on Thursday, at the time of a passover; thus, as Christ was crucified on Thursday, and also on a full moon, we here remark that it has been astronomically determined that no Paschal full moon fell on Thursday for eight years after A. D. 29, except in A. D. 30, April 6. This forever settles the question.

Now if we can learn in what year he was baptized, we can easily find the year of his crucifixion, by adding these four years. Here are the facts:

1. Christ's baptism was in "the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar." (Luke 3: 1–3, 33).

2. Tiberius reigned "two years" in consort with Augustus Cæsar, whose death is astronomically fixed in A. D. 14: consequently, Tiberius' reign began A. D. 12; and by beginning his reign there, his "fifteenth year" would synchronize with A. D. 26, in which year Christ was baptized. Now add the four years above mentioned, and A. D. 30 is indisputably fixed as the year of the crucifixion. With these facts in view, all can see that the 62 weeks begin at the time Jerusalem's "wall" was "built," or completed, B. C. 406, and terminate about half a year before the crucifixion in A. D. 30. Thus from the first of Cyrus, B. C. 488, to the birth of Christ, B. C. 5, we have a measurement given by inspiration of 483 years—thus fixing chronology on a reliable basis. This, also, is in harmony with unperverted history.

Also from the thirty-second of Artaxerxes, where Jerusalem's "wall" was completed, B. C. 406, we have a measurement of 62 weeks, or 434 years, reaching to the crucifixion,—thus giving an additional sacred measurement, by which Ptolemy's Canon is proved defective, and true chronology is made plain and harmonious with history. "PROMISE OF THE FATHER."

NUMBER ONE.

A NEGLECTED SPECIALITY OF THE LAST DAYS, by Phebe Palmer, Authoress of several works on Christian Holiness. Boston: H. V. Degen, 22 Cornhill.

Sister Palmer is one of the few who dare to speak out their convictions on unpopular truth, and she has done the church a service in the production of a book with the above title and imprint. It is not new, having been published for several years, but its merits are not fully appreciated. Doubtless many of the readers of this critique have not seen it, and some may not. She calls it the "Promise of the Father," and it is a full discussion of that "promise"—"And behold I send the promise of the Father upon you" (to wit): "your sons and your daughters shall prophesy." There is not, perhaps, as much method in the book as some might wish; as scriptural illustrations, translations, quotations from authors, and incidental illustrations, are scattered all the way through it, without any particular system; but the principal object in writing the book is accomplished, and the public have, in a convenient form, the truth as to what Sister Palmer calls a "neglected speciality."

The "promise" refers in general terms to the work of the WHOLE CHURCH; but there has been a question with some in relation to the nature of the work of the "daughters," while that of the "sons" remains UNQUESTIONED. Our authoress has brought out the God-inspired truth on the subject, and her arguments, to the unprejudiced mind, must be conclusive, and lead the reader to see that there is no more authority for a human regulation and limitation of the work of one sex, than the other; and that the same terms and arrangements are made in the word for both.

It is not the intention of the writer of this criticism to notice all the points made in the book, nor to confine himself to the book for evidence. The subject is full of interest, and deserves candid investigation, as it involves the nature of the work of the church so materially, that if it is not rightly understood, and the work of either sex is taken out of the hands of God's providential order, the church is crippled and its power over men weakened. Some have occasionally written on the subject, but the position Sister Palmer takes has but comparatively few hearty supporters. Some oppose as bitterly as any of the Papists opposed christians in the days of the Inquisition. Others are not in favor because they have not fully examined it, and so do not feel prepared to endorse it; while some are supinely indifferent; or, just on the side of the strongest party.

There is no more reason why woman's work in the church should be a matter of criticism, than that the opposite sex should be circumscribed; and in these last days of cold hearts and backslidings and "signs" of the end, it seems to be of special importance that the church should be right on this question. It is doubted whether the real mission and consequent position of the church is much understood; but in order for the bride of the Lamb to be ready for her marriage, it must be.

It is surprising that the position of the "daughters" of the church should be a matter of question, when outside its pale they are allowed even the most exalted position on earth. The crowned head of a mighty government is a woman, and is not a solitary instance in the world's history; and in political circles, as popular lecturers, some of the sex are creating an enthusiasm that makes a sensible difference in elections. Spiritualists, health reformers, and others, seek their aid and acknowledge their potency. We are no advocate for "women's-rights conventions," and have nothing to say whether those who are acting outside the church are right or wrong. Political wire-pulling, demagogueism, blackguarding harangues, and stuffing ballot boxes, disgrace any man, much more so any woman; but if, outside the church, the right of females to occupy a public position, whether it is abused or not, is tolerated, why should some of the so called churches seal their lips to silence, even in the place of prayer? Still more extensively the opinion prevails that she should be circumscribed, and only labor by prayer and the most undemonstrative recital of christian experience. Neither Sr. Palmer, nor the writer, desires to advocate that women should occupy any position, except in the family circle, on the ground of mere human opinion or uninspired reasoning; but it is well to resort "to the law and to the testimony"; and, appealing to that, we feel prepared to say that their sphere in the gospel is as unlimited as the gospel work. And why, when the gentle, humanizing, vitalizing influence of the Spirit of God on her heart, and a live coal from his altar touches her lips, and burns off the seal of silence, is she not qualified to labor as God may require, or according to her convictions of duty? The world allows her a prominent public position, as a lecturer, and so on, when she has only her natural ability, or at most the help of demons; and if she can do anything there, with "the ability which God giveth," as her great qualification, she can certainly be efficient; and we have yet to learn that there is that difference in the natural, i. e., intellectual, sentient, or voluntary ability in the sexes, to make a distinction in the work in the church.

But we will hear God speak, and then judge whether there is any greater limitation of female labor than there is of the gospel work. There is power in truth, and it is reviving to the soul to get into God's providential order, and be brought into harmony with him; and it is hoped that in this examination of the subject, those who oppose, or who are indifferent, or even warmly approve, will be benefitted; for the great object of the church should be to get light, and be right; and if this is the desire, all will say, Let us have the review of the book, Bro., and the evidence you have to present; for we want the truth, and if you have it, or Sr. Palmer, we want it to flash and beam on the soul with its clear light.

There are two classes of testimony furnished by the word, in favor of our position.

FIRST. The doctrinal testimony, which is deduced from the grammatical construction of passages referring to the subject, and the literal rendering of the original words which are used as expressive of what her work is.

SECOND. The numerous individual instances of such effort, both in the Old and New Testament.

Under the FIRST, we find that God has assigned to woman her work in common with man, and made no difference. In Joel 2: 28, quoted by Peter in Acts 2: 17, which shows that it belongs to the church of the Gentile age, we read, "I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy." Waving, for a moment, the meaning of "prophesy" in the text, let us look at the grammatical construction. It is readily seen that both "sons" and "daughters" are the common antecedent of the verb "shall prophesy," as though it read, your sons shall prophesy, and your daughters shall prophesy; and it is impossible to separate their work and diversify it. That we are right, is proved by Gal. 3: 28. "There is neither Jew nor Greek; there is neither bond nor free; there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." Here we have positive proof that the sex are as much out of the question as nationalities or other physical conditions, as Jew or Greek, bond or free. The Spirit of God has drawn three parallels here: 1st, "Jew or Greek"; 2nd, "bond or free"; 3d, "male or female." Paul says, Eph. 2: 14, "He is our peace (or reconciliation), who hath made both (those "afar off"—Gentiles, and those "nigh"—Jews, ver. 17) one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition (ver. 14), . . . to make in himself of twain (Jew and Gentile) one new man, making peace," or reconciling. So we see the consistency of the first parallel, for with the "middle wall of partition" "broken down," and one new man made of two, there can be neither "Jew or Greek"—Gentile. The other parallels are as strong, and unless the "partition" can be built up, and what God has joined together put asunder, one made two again, and Jew and Gentile separated under the gospel, then male and female may be,—otherwise not,—but all, together, may share in the full privileges of the gospel; for it is with reference to the full privilege, and not to anything partial, that the apostle refers; and not, as some vainly imagine, to the simple privilege of being converted, for the gospel has no partial privileges. The whole argument has a partial meaning, and there may after all be somewhere a "difference" between Jew and Greek, or the full meaning must be applied, and the male and female are, after all, unlimited in their work, and their "distinction, in regard to sex," is as extensively lost, as that of Jew and Greek, in regard to their nationality. Seriously, is it not disrespectful to God's word to talk about half-way privileges? It is like the old "half-way covenant" of the Presbyterian church, of the last century, under which unconverted parents, by promising to bring their children up in the fear of God, as though such a thing were possible, might bring them to the altar of the church and have them sprinkled.

The gospel privileges are full, or they are insufficient. If full, then the "Gentile," as well as the "Jew"; the "bond," as well as the "free"; and the "FEMALE," as well as the "male," may enjoy all the privileges of all the Spirit's influences, and all the opportunities of obeying God, and doing duty, that the gospel affords. What these privileges are, we may easily discover by examining a few of the words which refer to the subject.

There are two prominent words in the Bible that refer to this point; to wit, "prophesy," as used in Acts 2: 17 and other places, to some of which we shall refer, and "preach." It is well known that different times and localities often change the meaning of words. To prophesy under the dispensation of the seers meant to foretell; and later, it may have a different meaning, which can be understood in part by considering that the truth of God, by his servants, has passed through three periods in being disseminated. The first, when they foretold events; the second, when by the Spirit they brought out "things new and old," or looked backward and forward, as Peter did on the day of pentecost, when he repeated what the prophets had said, and "caused" the "sense" to be "understood"; and as others of the apostles' age did when they still wrote their visions of the future; and the third period, the present, when the work of foretelling is all done, and nothing left but exposition of what is written by proof texts and reference to the "signs of the times." So the word "prophecy" may have more than one meaning, as it refers both to the foreseeing and expository periods.

The word, as it occurs in the New Testament, is from the Greek verb prophero, to bring out, to produce, to disclose, to publish; and so may be applied to explaining as well as foretelling.

Greenfield defines the noun propheleia, (from prophero), as the language of discourse, uttered through the influence of divine inspiration, which is also applicable to both the former definitions.

Sister Palmer quotes an "eminent Bible expositor's" comment on Joel 2: 28, Acts 2: 17. He says, "'Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy,'—shall preach, exhort, pray, and instruct, so as to be a benefit to the church." And she says further, "If the reader objects to this interpretation, we will present the definition given by the apostle Paul, in 1 Cor. 14: 3. "He that prophesieth (Greek—propheteuon), speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort. He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself: he that prophesieth (Greek—propheteuon), edifieth the church." In 1 Cor. 11: 5–16, Paul gives directions as to how a woman shall prophesy, as follows:—"Every woman that prayeth or prophesieth (Greek same as above) with her head uncovered (Greek—akatakalupto, unveiled), dishonoreth her head" . . (see ver. 3); but "if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn; but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn, or shaven, let her be covered," etc. Vers. 13, 16. "Judge in yourselves,"—form your own opinion. "But if any man seem to be contentious," either for or against the custom of wearing the hair long, "we have no such custom, neither the churches of God"; i. e., we are not thus particular, as the custom is civil, and not ecclesiastical.

These directions cannot possibly refer to the private duties of the female members of the church, their prayers in secret, etc., even though the apostle only referred to prophesying as understood under the old dispensation, which cannot be done in secret, for a direction of this character to the church, to regulate "closet" duties, would be out of place; first, because that the manner of wearing the hair is only of social consideration; and God "who judgeth the heart" would not "judge the outward appearance"; and, again, private duties are a personal matter, and would, if spoken of to the church, be considered as such; the individuals would be privately addressed.

The word preach, as the other prominent word, will be considered, and other points discussed in another paper.

WILL THE SOUL RISE FROM THE DEAD?

Yes, indeed, it must rise from the dead, or it can have no share in the resurrection. If the soul does not die at all, or die with the body, it can have no resurrection with the body. If it lives as a separate conscious entity from the body, it needs no resurrection, but must be alive somewhere. But where is it? It certainly cannot be in heaven, for no one is to receive their reward till Christ comes and raises the dead; and, according to Inspiration, we, or the saints, are to be made immortal at the resurrection; and if the soul is an immortal conscious entity, it cannot be raised, or have a resurrection to immortality, and, of course, cannot receive life from the dear Savior, who came to give us eternal life. We know that the whole tenor of the Bible informs us, that the great mission of Christ on this earth was to purchase eternal life for us, by receiving the penalty of death in our stead, and to prove to us by his own resurrection, that he can and will raise us "up at the last day."

But we are nowhere informed in Holy Writ, that Christ came and died to purchase happiness for us, or to save us from eternal misery; but, as he says, I came that they might have life. Dear reader, who was it that the Revelator saw stand before God, when the books were opened? Was it not the dead, small and great? or those who had been dead? Now if their souls did not die, then, of course, they did not stand before God, and were not judged! And, of course, it could not be anything else but their bodies that were judged, and went to heaven or hell; and the poor souls were left out of the question, without any reward or punishment. But those who are alive when Christ comes, if saints, are to be made immortal, soul and body; and, of course, the sinner must be made immortal, soul and body, in order to go to endless misery, as well as the saint to go to eternal happiness; for we find no intimation in the Bible when Christ comes, of any such thing as a separation of the soul and body; and we have not a particle of Bible to show that any person is immortal, till Christ comes and makes them so; and, Inspiration plainly informs us that no one is immortal but God.

But what is the soul, that so many tell us is immortal? We answer, that the word from which soul is translated, both Hebrew and Greek, is surely translated life and person, when applied to man, and life when applied to the beasts; and, of course, cannot be immortal in either case, till raised from the dead and made immortal. And, as to life being a separate conscious entity in man, or beast, the idea is too absurd to be named by one of common sense. But, what are the three great cardinal doctrines of the Bible, which stand out most prominent for us to understand? We answer, 1st, Man is a sinner, and the wages of sin is death, or second death.

2nd, Christ was sent into this world to fulfill the law, and give us eternal life, by raising us to immortality at the last day.

3d, God only hath immortality, and man is mortal, and must receive immortality from God, the great fountain.

4th, The saint and sinner receive no reward till after the day of judgment.

Now, dear reader, I must say that it is hard for me to go to a meeting of divine worship, and hear about the "immortal soul," "never-dying soul," and death being the door to heaven and immortal glory. Can it be that the world of mankind is so corrupted by vain philosophy and Catholicism?

My dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, in tears I humbly beg of you to do all you can to spread the plain and simple truths of God's holy word; for it is heart-rending to think that we have so many friends and connections, who are corrupted by heathen philosophy; when it is so plainly held forth in the Bible, that, in vain do they worship God, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

Brethren, again I say to you, while tears flow freely from my eyes, do all you can to help promulgate the truth of God's holy word. Yours, waiting for the kingdom, Brattleboro', Vt. B. PERHAM.

DARK OMENS.

"How fading are all things here below,
How false, and yet how fair."

How confused our world seems to be at the present day, and why? Because the hearts of men are joined to their idols, as they were in the days of old, when it was said, "Ephraim is joined to his idols; let him alone." Our once happy land is now filled with wild commotion, because the hearts of mankind seem to be filled with sin and iniquity. The great God of peace seems to have almost forsaken the entire human family. The people seem to be given up, as it were, to Satan, that he may sift them like wheat. They are filled with a wild distraction, warring against each other. Envy and spite reign supreme. O what a sad spectacle for us poor mortals to behold.

And now let me ask, is this the course for us mortals to pursue, in order to get into the kingdom of the pure and the holy? Nay verily. It is only through faith in God, and obedience to his divine requirements, and in loving him with all our hearts, and our neighbor as ourselves; doing all the good we can; making every one as happy as we possibly can; and as much as in us lieth, live peaceably with all men. What if a brother offends, must we retaliate? God says no, but forgive him "seventy times seven." By so doing, peace would soon take the place of war, joy would animate the now sad hearts of the inhabitants of our distressed land and world. There would soon be no more striving for the mastery one over another; but all would be peace and joy. Our fields, once so beautiful, and now stained with the innocent blood of our fellow beings, would no longer be compelled to drink of the blood of the human family, but would soon bloom in their former beauty and loveliness. The sound of the exploding shell and whistle of the bullets, the loud booming of cannon and glitter of the pointed steel, would no longer be heard nor felt among the sons of men, and the death-like sound of the war bugle would be hushed forever. Fathers and mothers, brothers, sisters and friends, would sorrow no more over loved ones slain in battle; but peace, sweet peace, would fill and pervade the hearts of all mankind.

Remember, that in order to live with God and his holy angels, we must have on the wedding garment, spotless and pure; not blackened and stained with the blood of our fellow men. Nay verily. But our garments must be without spot or wrinkle, and the mark of the beast must not be found upon us. In order to live in heaven, we must have the likeness of our blessed Lord and Master. Let us, then, begin to look about ourselves, and fit ourselves to come up with that company that shall have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

ARE WE READY TO MEET THE LORD?

What a solemn time it is in which we live! Everything seems to foretell that some great event is about to transpire. It does seem as if the wicked were doing wickedly, and that they were blinded, and could not see that the "end of all things" is right upon them. How important it is that we who profess to be lights to the world should be just what we profess to be. How many there are, who, when in meeting, will tell how little they care for the world, and how much they love the Lord and his appearing, and how they would rejoice to see him come; when, in fact, after they get home, they scold and fret, and almost forget that they are professors, unless some one who professes the same comes in to see them. Now this is not right. Do we, who profess to have more light than any other people, do we bring our children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, as the word tells us; or, do we instead, when there is a pleasure party, let them go? or do we point out to them the sin of such things? Some may, but I fear some do not. And here let me ask you, who let your little ones go to such places, is that what the Master has committed them to your care for? I think not. Pause ye, who do thus, ere it is too late.

Mother, did you ask the Lord to take care of your children that evening that they went to join in the worldly sports and plays of the world, which you have no business to share in, or your little ones, if you profess to be looking for the Lord? I say, did you, as they went out from home, and closed the door after them, did you seek your closet, and pour out your soul in prayer to God, that your little ones might be kept safe in their absence? I fear that you did not; for it would be as mockery in the ears of God. Did you think as the hours passed away that night, that you had got to stand in judgment for the very way you trained those little ones? Did you ever think that you had only created a desire in them to go the more? But the plea is, my children want to take a little comfort, and I am not going to stop them for your superstitions. Well, have you forgotten how you plead with the Lord a few months since, when they were sick, that if the Lord would only spare them to you, that you would serve him with all your heart, and that you would strive to bring them up in the fear of the Lord? Have you done it? What would you do if they should be sick again? Would you make the same promise? Of what avail would it be? O ye mothers, pause ere it is too late? Consider what you are doing, and return unto the Lord with penitence ere the door of mercy is closed, and you are left in dark despair.

Again, perhaps your husband is a preacher. He is away from home, urging sinners to come to the Lord and be saved; striving to get people ready for the dreadful storm that is soon to fall upon a guilty world, and he prays and pleads with the Lord to bless his labors, and let him see souls brought to the Lord and be saved; and can you, in his absence, let those children, that he loves so tenderly, go where he would not be willing their youthful feet should go? I say, can you let those offspring go and unite in the vain and foolish parties, where they hear everything they ought not, in his absence, and perhaps while he is telling others how to live? You are indulging those in a way that leads to darkness and to death. O, how wicked. Does the Lord seem to prosper that brother? Does he give him an abundance of things? No. What is the cause? He labors faithfully, and tries to do as the Master bids him; but there is a fault somewhere. I think, if that mother would restrain her children more, and pray more with them and for them, she would see a vast amount of good accomplished. Now do heed this warning, given in love and tender pity. I have written, hoping that it may cause many to open their eyes to see their own folly in going on in such a way. We all want a home in the kingdom; but we cannot have one, unless we are ready when the Master comes.

Let us be good, and not bring reproach upon the cause we so dearly love. The people are looking upon us, to see if we live up to our talk. How ready they are to catch every little thing that is against us. No doubt, you thought there was no harm in their going to such places, but we must deny self. Let us be real good children. A word to the wise is sufficient. God help us to be wise, is my prayer, that both reader and writer may at last meet in the better LAND.

HOLY REVIVALS.

"O Lord, revive thy work."—Hab. 3: 2.

Taking this passage of Scripture under a careful consideration, gives us a good reason to desire and pray for a revival of pure and undefiled religion, that those of our fellow men may no longer be led captive by the wiles of the adversary; but that they may be delivered from the bondage of error, superstition and sin, and be admitted into the glorious liberty of the children of God. When we look about us, and see so many of our fellow mortals groping in darkness, strangers to God, ignorant of his character, his will, and his love,—we cannot suppress our desires for a revival of that religion which is pure and undefiled, which works by love and purifies the heart. There is great need of a revival of this kind. I say we need it, and especially at this time of war, tumult and bloodshed. We need it that we may be led to love our neighbors as ourselves; that we may be ever ready and willing to promote peace and advance the happiness of those around us; that we may be led to love God more and better, and to live in obedience to his requirements; that we may be induced to obey the spirit of our Master, to practice his precepts, and imitate his example; that we may have more zeal in the cause of truth and righteousness; that we may be strengthened against sin and temptation, and enabled to overcome the world, the flesh, and the deceitful workings of abomination.

Here we have the whole matter in a small compass. Moral and physical laws are alike given for man's happiness and preservation; to violate either will bring pain, mental or physical, as the case may be. A revival of undefiled religion will fill the mind with peace, and bid us look far above the turbulent scenes of earth for happiness. It will place our thoughts on joys that never die. But how vast is the number around us who never think of praying to God that he would strengthen their faith, remove their doubts, and cleanse their hearts from the love of sin. How important it is, then, that we pray and act for a revival, that those careless souls may open their eyes to see the unnumbered benefits that are to be derived from true and heart-felt religion.

In conclusion, let me remark, we wish to see the professed followers of our Master more zealous in the cause of religion. We desire to see more working, acting, and praying christians. We wish to see them practice the principles of the gospel, so that the unbeliever may be led to banish his doubts, the deluded his fears, and the sinner his sins. "O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years," that thy people may rejoice in thee, and praise thee. J. ELKINS.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER FIVE.

Yet we have seen that it has actually been fulfilled in every particular. This cannot by any possibility be ascribed to some lucky hit. There is only one alternative; viz., that Moses was inspired to utter this prediction. The prophecy is a perpetual miracle. This we are bound to believe; because, as we have just seen, this single, fulfilled prophecy, presents 131,072 times as much evidence of being inspired, as can be brought against it; thus we know when it is a work of inspiration, or from the Lord, as we read in Jer. 28: 9, "when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the Lord hath truly sent him." With such a base on which to rest, the church of the living God may well defy all the powers of earth, or the devil, to overthrow it. To those who say we can know nothing about the prophecies, or the time of Christ's coming, we would inquire upon what they predicate their conclusions? Surely not upon the word of the Lord.

'Tis quoted, "But of that day and hour," etc. This passage only relates to the definite point of time, as the connection clearly shows. Baxter, in his article on prophecy, says:—

"These words being spoken in the present tense, are not necessarily true of any period subsequent to their utterance, when the knowledge, which was then hidden, might be revealed by further prophecies. Moreover, they can only hold good, and continue in force, as long as the divine Son himself does not know the day and hour, which certainly cannot be the case at the present period. It is not surprising that drunkards, swearers, and irreligious characters, should constantly cast this text in the teeth of those who warn them that the advent of Christ is certain to take place during the next several years. But it is indeed deplorable, that any ministers, or professing christians, should be guilty of the same gross perversion of that text. For the least consideration would show that Christ, having subsequently ascended to heaven, and received a fresh revelation from the Father, who alone knew the day and hour, has now imparted to us knowledge which was previously withheld."

Sixty years after the words of that text were spoken, Christ delivered to St. John, in Patmos, further prophecies, entitled, "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass, . . . and the things which shall be hereafter." "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy."—Rev. 1: 1, 3, 19. Here, then, is a disclosure of that which was before known only to the Father. The truth is, that the apocalyptic revelation, given by God the Father to St. John, in Patmos, in A. D. 96, reveals "the times" and "seasons which the Father hath put in his own power," and which it was not for the disciples, sixty years previously, to know.

The text in Matt. 24: 36 is often brought forward as evidence that we can know nothing about the time. They do not look at the context, which says, "When ye shall see all these things, know that it (mar., "he, Christ") is near even at the door." Of like character is all the evidence brought forward on this point. But we have better evidence to sustain our position, and on which to predicate our faith, and most glorious, blessed hope. We have a sure basis, a strong tower, one on which we can stand knowing that heaven and earth shall pass away before this basis shall be shaken.

That God's people, those who heed the sure word of prophecy, living just prior to the end, were to have a knowledge of about the time of Christ's coming, I think can be proved to a demonstration. If this is not the case, then certain portions of the Scriptures can have no meaning; or the language is calculated to deceive and mislead, which in the first place would imply, if not prove, God to be the author of supererogation, or doing more than duty requires; and secondly, as an impeachment of his character for goodness. But God does not thus deal with his creatures. When he says that "the wise shall understand," he means just what he says. Take this passage in its connection, and you will find that time is one point specially referred to in Dan. 12: 11, 13,—"And from the time that the daily (sacrifice) shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days," or prophetic years. "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days"; a day being a prophetic year. See Ezek. 4: 6;—"I have appointed thee each day for a year." Also in Num. 14: 34;—"But go thou thy way till the end be; for thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." In these verses, we have a period of time given as extending to the resurrection. See chap. 12: 1–3; "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince, which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble (tisor—Hebrew meaning distress) such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time. And at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book."

Thurman's Astronomical Tables.

We proposed in October last to publish these Tables as soon as 100 copies were subscribed for. Only thirty copies have been taken, and the rise in the cost of book-making forbids our attempting to publish this work. It was not our intention to have any pay their subscriptions till the Tables were ready for delivery; but some have done so. They can have their money returned, or otherwise applied, by writing to us.

We would say, in this connection, that it is our intention to publish tables in the Voice, with which, by the aid of Ferguson's Astronomy and Tables, any person with a mathematical mind can calculate any eclipse mentioned in history. J. V. HIMES.

A NAME TO LIVE.

"And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach."—Isa. 4: 1. Yes, we will eat our own bread. We don't want the bread of life; that is too stale for us; we have no relish for it. And we will wear our own apparel, for the garments of thy righteousness don't fit us; besides, they are altogether out of fashion. But we do want to be called by thy name, to take away our reproach. Yes, christianity has become so popular that we do want to be called christians, that we may be respected. To this end we do not need, neither will we eat thy food, or wear thy garments. It is thy name only we desire. D. D. CHAFFEE.

CHRONOLOGY AND ASTRONOMY.

We frequently hear it remarked by those who would raise objections to the light that now appears to be shining upon chronology, that they do not believe that we shall be dependent on astronomical calculations for our light on the prophetic periods. Probably such are not aware that for centuries, men have been depending on a chronology based on the astronomical observations of Ptolemy, made out in the second century, by that heathen astronomer, which have been the cause, we think, of great mistakes, and would continue in darkness on the prophetical periods, till by the light which astronomy now gives, Ptolemy's errors are corrected; which can only be done by astronomical observations. Now, why not let modern astronomy correct the errors of the ancients, and thus be set right. This we think Bro. Thurman has done.

We think chronology has never before been set forth in such a simple manner as is done by Bro. Thurman. What has been presented by other chronologers in a complicated manner is now made plain, so that the unlearned may read and understand as well as the educated. This, we believe, is one very strong evidence in favor of Bro. Thurman's work, and is what first awakened our confidence in his arrangement.

It is not to be supposed that every man would be able to test the weights and measures of our country. But we have men appointed for this work, appointed by government, who seal the weights and measures by the approved standard; and after they are thus sealed, then any one can weigh accurately; but before they were tested no one could tell who was right; just so in the case of chronology; after it is so adjusted as to make the decree of Cyrus "to restore and build Jerusalem," 488 years B. C., or 483 years before the true A. D., then any one who has a knowledge of simple addition and subtraction can understand the chronology as arranged by Bro. Thurman. We have seen no other chronology that appears to harmonize so well with the Bible as that of Bro. T.'s. Some appear to confound his chronology with his opinions on certain passages of Scripture, which is quite another matter. We think the chronology will bear very close inspection.

OBITUARIES.

We would earnestly request those who have occasion to write obituaries for our paper, that they make them very short. There are so many sent, that we do not like to devote so much room to that subject as we have done. The reasonableness of this request, we think, must be seen by all the candid. It should be remembered that most obituaries are of a mere local interest; and while they may be precious to those who have lost loved ones, the most of our readers seldom look them over. Other religious papers only publish the simple notice, and we may find it necessary to do the same.

☞ Do not fail to read the article in the health column, from Dr. Thayer. His advice is in harmony with the established laws of health; if followed it would save much suffering, and prevent many from entering a premature grave.

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

The political condition of Europe is very threatening for war on a grand scale. Preparations for the coming conflict are being made by the great powers of Europe as fast as possible. Observing men are satisfied that the winds of war cannot be restrained much longer; and when they are let loose, their effects will be like the whirlwind in the thunder storm—terrible.

Says the Sun and Advertiser of Jan. 8th, 1865, published at Halifax, N. S.:—

"Although actual war has not begun among the great powers of Europe, yet no one acquainted with affairs as they now stand, can fail to see the hair-suspended sword, which the slightest touch might precipitate upon the whole continent. The only difficulty is to guess what kind of combination of the inflamable elements will culminate in an explosion which is to set Europe in a blaze.

Although we will not say that France is the greatest power in the world (our patriotism gives that distinction to England, because she is the best as well as the bravest;) but we do say that every kingdom is looking toward her with anxiety, to know by the decision of her Emperor, not whether there will be war, for that we fear is inevitable, but when and where havoc is to be let loose. By degrees, in the extension of his power, Napoleon has drawn the cords tightly around his yielding and complacent subjects, till at length they are beginning to feel their bonds, and begin to give an occasional tug at them with a grimace of dissatisfaction. They do not want advisers and secret agitators, who are ever at hand to pour the doctrine of revolt into ears equally ready to hear; and all the spies which diplomacy may employ cannot prevent the circulation of inflammatory documents among the people, to conjure up the sanguinary genius of revolution, which in France means blood-thirsty infidelity and insatiate cruelty.

There is no human mind better able to estimate how far it is safe to go than the sagacious Napoleon; yet even the most subtile have been mistaken in venturing 'a step farther still,' which, breaking through the thin crust over the seething volcano, plunges the rash venturer into the heaving-lava beneath."

PUBLIC MORALS.

Many begin to see that these are "perilous times," and that "evil men and seducers" are waxing "worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." No fact is more apparent than that the very worst of crimes are rapidly multiplying; and that the morals of society are continually degenerating, and that too, in a rapidly increasing ratio. Wickedness and infidelity are overleaping all barriers. Good men are becoming discouraged in their efforts to stay the tide of evil, that is spreading so rapidly in all directions. They begin to feel like men looking upon a burning house, after being satisfied that no human efforts can quench the flames. The following from the Portland Advertiser, Dec. 13th, 1864, is but a faint picture of the state of things, compared with the whole truth in the case:—

"The Journal of Commerce says there are times when crime seems to be epidemic. It is one of the curious things in history, both local and general. We are often startled by the account of some terrible crime, and scarcely get over the horror which it occasions, when another and another of the same kind is brought to notice. The last few months have been prolific both in England and America. The papers chronicle an unusual number of murders, and some of them of the most fearful and appalling kind. The public mind is so much occupied with the war and war news that they do not produce the effects which in another state of affairs would be naturally caused by such occurrences. It becomes us to think seriously of the condition of public morals in the country, and to see to it that none of the good influences are allowed to be withdrawn. It will not do to devote all our energies to the war, and neglect the ordinary means of public education and civilization. On the contrary, the strength of the nation consists in the virtue of the people, and he is doing most excellent service to the public cause who devotes himself to the moral elevation of the people around him. There is always danger in time of war, and especially in time of civil war, that the morals of a nation, the whole character of the people, may undergo a change for the worse. But this is no necessary result. It can be guarded against, and the relapse prevented. It becomes us as a people to see to it that the high character we have borne is not lost in these trying times. Our churches, our colleges, our public schools, our style of popular books and publications, our newspaper press, all should be kept at the highest mark, and no one of the refining influences of our civilization should be permitted to fall off or deteriorate."

A STRANGE APPOINTMENT.

We have received the following from C. Pinkham, the California Spiritualist delegate to the National Convention at Chicago, last August. We met him when at Dubuque, Iowa, last Sept. 24th, and learned he was traveling through the country, by the direction of the spirits, to prepare the minds of the people for the new order of things about to be introduced. He appears to be wholly given up to the control of the spirits.

Who would have believed twenty years since, that we should see what we now do, and hear of such strange things as almost daily come to our ears. The following is the appointment, given by the spirits through Mr. Pinkham, for another national convention of Spiritualists. We give a portion of his letter also, that our readers may have a clearer idea of some of the strange developments of these "last days":—

"Since I saw you at Dubuque, I have traveled through Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Penn., to New York City, where I am preparing for the World's Convention, having sent the notices to England, France, Germany, and California, and to many Editors throughout the Atlantic States."

The following is the notice:—

"THE WORLD'S HOLY SPIRITUAL CONVENTION.

There will be a World's Spiritual Convention held for one week in New York City, commencing on Washington's birth-day, Feb. 22nd, 1865, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of considering the propriety of completing the apostolic and great central circle of the world; interpreting the Bible correctly, and to receive a new constitution and by-laws whereby the human family may be justly organized; and attend to such business as may be deemed necessary.

"By order of God, through Jesus Christ, and the Coadjutant of the right wing of the celestial spheres, and their specially developed medium, who will be present and preside over the convention. All persons of every nation, sect, and color, are cordially invited to attend, providing they will observe the rules then and there laid down, through and by the President.

"It is expected by many that the coming Man, or Great Organizer, so long looked for, and so much desired, will make his appearance, and present a constitution that will exceed all others, and be perfect; if this should prove true, he will commence to organize all that are sufficiently developed into a divine order.

"When the true form of government is once worked out and put into practice among a small number, it will be a model for the whole world, and will produce peace, happiness, and harmony, because it is justly administered by God, through a redeemed people. If I had not talked with the humble Nazarene, I might be more skeptical.

"God and his agents are to propose plans, and at the close, men and women will be invited to put them into practical life. Since this is the first World's Spiritual Convention called of God, we shall see if Christ makes his appearance like a thief in the night.

C. PINKHAM."

THE GOLD FEVER.

The covetous strife for riches in these last days is truly alarming in its moral bearing. It seems as though people were almost crazy after the shining dust. It eclipses everything else; hence all means are employed to obtain the filthy lucre, the love of which "is the root of all evil." By reading the following, one may get a faint idea of the passion men have for gold in these last moments of time. It is from the New York Independent, of Jan. 5th, 1865.

"One Monday we sat by the window of a building which commands a view of the room where the speculators in gold have operated so extensively of late.

The place was packed from desk to door, and from floor to ceiling, with brokers, merchants, manufacturers, speculators, agents, clerks, and messengers. There were present old men, young men, fast men, fat men, lean men, short men, tall men, rich men, poor men, and men of every class, color, and creed. They stood on the floor, on the counter, on the desks, on the chairs, on the window-sills, and hour after hour they continued to buy and sell gold. Their flushed faces and flashing eyes told plainly the state of their minds. Fortunes were made and lost in a minute. Sellers were more numerous than buyers, and they resorted to their usual tricks to stimulate purchasers. When a telegraphic message favorable to our arms was read, the Union men men gave three cheers, but they sounded feebly. It was like the music of a lute lost amid the roaring of bulls and the growling of bears. Men who are polite in their drawing-rooms, cordial in their greetings, and quiet in their offices; men who sit demurely in church, and who dare not open their lips to speak in a christian assembly, or at a public meeting, throw off all restraint in the presence of the golden image which they have set up, and shout frantically. A stranger unacquainted with the language, and unused to such scenes, would be impressed with the idea that Bedlam had broken loose. They cried out at the top of their voices, and with great rapidity of utterance, gesticulating violently the price they would take for the shining dust. A score or more of them would speak at the same time, each endeavoring to out-shout his neighbor. Almost every man had a book in his hand, in which, with convulsive fingers, notes were written. He who had plenty of brass as well as gold, and could make more noise than others, commanded the most attention and seemed to do the most business.

At about half-past three the gong sounded for the open Board to commence operations in the street—directly in front of the Gold Room. For several minutes there was a contest between the gong-beater and gold-bidders. Their time was up, but they continued their cries regardless of the rules. The more noise the gong made, the louder they shouted. The former was in danger of being battered to pieces—the latter ran the risk of bursting their lungs. Finally, brass or copper got the better of gold, and there was a general rush toward the street. Out they came like bees swarming, some red and some pale with excitement. Not a few of them resorted to the stimulus of tobacco—lighting their cigars or crowding the quid into their mouths, and rolling it as a sweet morsel under their tongues. Some hastened to the nearest restaurants, where they sought to keep their spirits up by pouring spirits down. In the meantime, the bidding commenced. Sellers were plentiful, but purchasers were scarce. A tall man, wearing a white hat, exhibited a telegraphic dispatch, and the news created considerable excitement, giving a momentary vigor to the market. An energetic man, with a round head, surmounting broad shoulders, offered to sell one hundred thousand dollars for a certain price on the dollar, but he could not inspire an acceptable bid. Several men, wearing a Jewish cast of countenance, offered sums varying from five thousand to fifty thousand dollars, but the buyers were shy and wished to wait until the morning. Although they did but little business, they made a great deal of noise, and the news-boys in the vicinity endeavored to sell their paper to men who dealt chiefly in specie, by screaming out the nature of the news they had for sale. There was also a peddler on the corner, who offered a wagon load of sour oranges to the men whose teeth had been set on edge by their misadventures in the money market. The only quiet creature there was the peddler's horse. The poor beast had lost one of its ears, and fortunately the deaf side of his head was turned toward the mob of speculators. Unlike the animal mentioned in the fable of Midas, the other ear did not turn into gold. In the boisterous gathering were many substantial men, representing almost every phase of business. There were also rebel agents from the Southern States—refugees who came here by the way of Canada, without the protection of our flag; graduates of Lafayette, red-mouthed Copperheads, who would like to see the head of Jeff. Davis stamped on every American coin; Englishmen, Canadians, Frenchmen, Spaniards, Italians, and others. Here and there might be seen millionaires. A young man, who seven weeks ago, commenced speculation with a margin of only $200, and who made $70,000 in that time, has lost every cent of it, and now wears a troubled face, indicative of the wretched state of his mind.

This is the place toward which vast multitudes of men and women in all parts of our broad land turn their faces with anxious interest. It is classic as any battle-ground. The fall in gold is only second in importance to the triumph of our arms in the field. This is the thermometer by which we judge of our success. The lower the fall of gold, the higher the rise of patriotic hope. These are the men, with few exceptions, who have impaired the value of our currency; who have caused to a great extent the high prices of the necessaries of life; who have sought to bring discredit on us abroad; who have shot down our heroes with their bullets of silver and gold. If it is God's will, let them, financially, die. "Peace" to their ashes shall be their epitaph.

Postal Money Orders.

By the new Postal Money Order System, remittances can be made to this office with perfect safety, and without any of the risk which sometimes attends the transmission of monies by mail in the usual way. Large sums should be always sent in this way, or by draft.

Directions.—Pay your money to your Postmaster, take his order for the same, and send the order to us. For it, we obtain the money of the Postmaster here. The fees are as follows:—

For $10.00, or less	10 cents.
For $20.00, or less	15 cents.
For $30.00, or less	20 cents.

For sums over $30.00, more than one order may be taken.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

WHAT THEY THINK OF IT.

"FIRST IN INTEREST."—A prominent minister in the West writes:—"I still think the Crisis must be first with me in interest. If some stop it because it teaches that christians should not fight, I must do the more for it for its Christ-like spirit. Enclosed you will find $2.50 for a new subscriber." D.

"THE BEST RELIGIOUS PAPER."—A Bro. in Wisconsin writes:—"We prize the Crisis very much, and shall take it as long as we can pay for it. It is, I think, the best religious paper I have ever read." H. P.

Waterloo, Wis.

"JUST THE THING."—A correspondent writes from W. Jersey, Ill.:—"I came in possession of a copy of the World's Crisis, through a friend, and I find it just suits my views. You will therefore please send me a copy for one year. I will endeavor to get up a club, which I think I can do without much trouble."

Yours truly, W. P. C.

"NO PAPER LIKE IT."—A subscriber in Concord, N. H., writes:—"A few weeks ago I stopped the Crisis for the purpose of taking the ——, but I am satisfied there is no paper printed that equals the Crisis. I must have it again. Please send it on. I enclose $1.25."

"CAN'T DO WITHOUT IT."—A Bro. writes from Vermont:—"I enclose $3.00 to pay for the Crisis another year. It is a welcome messenger to me, and I would not be without it if I had to pay twice that amount." J. W.

VOICES FROM THE POOR.

FROM THE PENNILESS AND AFFLICTED.

A brother writes from Vermont:—"I received your bill last night, of $3.00 due the Crisis, and thought I would let you know how things are with me. I am out of health, am not able to do any thing, and have not been for seven or eight months. I do not expect to be any better, but soon to go to the grave. I have not a dollar in the world; so, if you cannot send me the Crisis without pay, you will have to stop it. I love the truths it advocates, and do not know how to do without it, while I stay here. I am one of the most afflicted of men. I get but little rest, and cannot sleep day nor night. My trouble is pain in my left side, and very difficult breathing,—walking the house night and day. I believe in the Bible rule, as given by James, 'Owe no man anything,' but have not the means to comply with it. Pray for me, that my faith fail not, for I can say with the apostle—'The time of my departure is at hand.' Your afflicted brother, expecting a crown when Jesus comes." A. P.

FROM THE PALSIED AND POOR.

A brother writes from New Hampshire:—"I am poor, and able to labor but very little. Five years ago last June, I had a shock of the numb palsy, from which I have never wholly recovered. I suffer much pain, and find I am becoming a child the second time. I have been receiving the Crisis free for some time, for which you have my thanks. I shall never be able to recompense you, though I would be glad to; for the reading of the Crisis is a great blessing to me. If you should see fit to continue to send it to me, it will be read with a grateful heart by your brother in tribulation." I. C.

THE BANK OF THE LORD'S POOR.

RESPONSES FROM SHAREHOLDERS.

I feel deeply as I read from week to week the "Voices from the Poor," and my heart responds to the call for help. I therefore enclose $5,00, for which, if you can find among all these poor two self-denying children, old or young, ministers or whoever they may be, who indulge in no unnecessary articles, such as tea, coffee, tobacco, snuff, etc., please send them the Crisis for one year, and may God bless it to them. D. N. K.

An "Orthodox" brother, who takes the Crisis, in Faribault, Wis., writes:—"I send you four dollars,—$2.50 for my own paper; $1.00 from my wife for the dear 'Orthodox' sister, old and infirm; and 50c. from my little boy, Dwight, who denies himself of his Christmas presents for this purpose, for the brother who broke his arm last June. We are all members of the same order (Orthodox)." J. G. C.

A sister in Vermont writes:—"Having read your paper for the past year on half pay, I have concluded to subscribe for it the year ensuing on full pay. Enclosed you will find $2.50 to pay for the same."

Will the sister please give us the post-office to which her paper is addressed; otherwise we cannot find the name to credit the money.

WORDS FROM THE WORKERS.

A preacher in New Hampshire, who sent us five new subscribers with the money, not long since, writes:—

"I will send more soon. I have made up my mind to get fifty subscribers for the dear Crisis. J. G. HOOK.

Nothing is impossible to him that wills. Make up your mind to do it, and it is half done. Forty such workers, and what would be the result at the year's end? Two thousand new subscribers by their efforts alone. Can it be done? Easily. Who'll be one of the forty?

A correspondent in Iowa writes:—

"About three weeks ago I saw a copy of the World's Crisis, and I liked it so well, I have been doing all I can since to get subscribers, and have got three, besides myself. For which, find enclosed $5.00. J. S.

Try again, brother. You have a good field to work in, and, with effort, can obtain twenty more. Shall be glad to hear from you again.

A brother in Vermont writes:—

"I have, by a little effort, obtained four subscribers for the Crisis. $5.00 enclosed."

"By a little effort—four." How many HUNDREDS are there who can do the same, and more,—by "a little effort." Can't YOU, reader?

Our Volunteer Agents.

LIVING IDENTITY.

The question is often asked by materialists, "If man is in possession of an immortal soul, which goes immediately to heaven or hell at death, what need is there of a resurrection?" And it is generally answered by saying,—"If the soul dies, the dust returns to the earth as it was, and there is nothing to raise—no identity preserved." Then, in order to have any analogy whatever between the premise and the conclusion, we are forced to admit that, "if a living identity is necessarily preserved in order to have a resurrection, that identity must be that which hears the voice of the Son of man"; and Jesus says "All that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man," hence that identity must be in the grave.

These ideas were demonstrated at the grave of Lazarus. Jesus says, "Lazarus, come forth," and "he that was dead came forth." Can you believe for a moment that Lazarus left a starry crown,—a paradisiacal home, to mingle again with the wicked inhabitants of this sin-polluted earth? Can you believe that Jesus would have ever called him from the shining courts of everlasting bliss, if so be that he was ever there? Never! Lazarus was never there. No man could ever live again in the flesh after once dwelling in the presence of God and angels. The very idea is absurd. But if such a thing could be possible, what heavenly tidings he could have heralded over the hills and through the valleys of old Palestine. If ever the world was to be converted, he was the one to have done it.

But who ever supposed the soul survived the death of the body? I never did. Yet there are some that actually do; but if they would consult the writings of the Psalmist of Israel, or Paul the aged, they would be quite apt to abandon all such preposterous ideas.

When God led the children of Israel from their Egyptian "task-masters," and overthrew their oppressors in the sea, they (the Egyptians) all died. Certainly, they all DIED. Did they die soul and body, or only their bodies, while their souls went to torments? Let David have a chance to speak first, and then I will leave the subject and you may settle it with him. Ps. 78: 50;—"He spared not their soul from DEATH." Please read the whole chapter, and you will see that it is that event David is speaking of. Then if David is to be relied upon, the Egyptians are dead soul and body. This is but a prelude of the grand arguments that might be adduced from the writings of the prophet David; but perhaps the reader has as much time to read them as I have to write them; hence I leave the testimony of David and call upon Paul. Hear his advice to Timothy. "I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession; that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ; which in his times he shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light that no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen nor can see; to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen."—1 Tim. 6: 13–16. Is not this a plain declaration that God alone hath immortality? Then in the name of high Heaven do not, in the face of the great apostle, attribute to man that which he attributes to God alone. Who can do it without saying in advance of Satan, ye are "as gods"? But if you would attain to that imperishable blessing, immortality, "seek for" it "by patient continuance in well doing."—Rom. 2: 7–9. And then, if the enemy shall call you to the pale nations of the dead, you can say with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8. Correspondence.

From Bro. S. Woodruff.

DEAR BRN. IN THE LORD:— Another year has rolled away. I look back upon the past. How have I spent the past year? I have been trying to do the will of my Master in persuading men to seek the Lord while there is one interceding at the right hand of God in their behalf; but the thought arises, could not I have done more than what I have done? Yes, I could have been more watchful and prayerful, then I should have had more of the spirit and power of the gospel to set the truth home to the hearts of the people where I have held meetings. In view of what the Lord would have me do in the future, a solemn feeling rests upon me. I never realized more the importance of having God's Holy Spirit than now; and would say from the depths of my heart, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy Holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free spirit; then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

The "prayer of a righteous man availeth much;" therefore, O ye righteous servants of the living God, you that are heralding the news of coming salvation to the lost and the perishing, some of you have been these many years in the battle-field, whose weapons have not been carnal, but spiritual, mighty through God; will you not offer up one prayer, at least, for a brother that has been but a little while in the army of the Lord; one who feels, unless the Lord goes with him, the labor will be lost, that I may ever go in the strength and power of the gospel. I feel my salvation depends upon my doing the work of the Lord,—how I improve the blessings God bestows upon me. The Lord help me ever to present the truth in meekness and humility; yet at the same time to be steadfast, unmovable, ever standing firm in the gospel; ever holding forth the word of life, that yet some poor sinner may be constrained to seek the Lord, and ere long be among that number who shall stand upon the shining shore.

A little space of time and the work is over; and the last prayer will be offered for perishing humanity. Christ will soon leave the mercy-seat, rise up and shut the door. The day of hope will soon be ended. O my Lord, who will be found among the saved? They that have "clean hands and a pure heart."

O ye that have left the Lord, I pray you consider your ways, turn to the Lord and live, "for why will you die?" Sinners, seek him while he may be found, call upon him while near, lest you call when there is no mercy for you. Pray while you have Jesus to intercede in your behalf, that your sins may be washed away in his all-atoning blood. Jesus, the righteous, is interceding for you. The angels of the Lord are hovering over a doomed world, inviting you to come. "The Spirit and the Bride say come;" and "whosoever will" let him come. S. WOODRUFF.

From Bro. C. I. Deyo.

BRO. GRANT:—It having been a long time since I have written anything for the Crisis, I thought I would pen a few lines to let the scattered ones know what I am doing in my Master's vineyard; for I believe we all have a specific work to do. In the first place, I feel as though I had a confession to make through the columns of your valuable paper. In 1860, I embraced the doctrine of the soon coming of Christ, sleep of the dead, and destruction of the wicked, through the instrumentality of my brother, J. P. Deyo, who now sleeps in Jesus, and Cousin Eld. P. S. W. Deyo, of Iowa. About that time, I united with the Christian denomination, with which people I am connected at present. However, I preached the doctrine with much zeal for about a year. My peace was like a river while I advocated the truth. During that time, I became acquainted with the "Seventh-day Adventists," or "Free Sabbath-keepers," as some call them, and I found them to be rigid sectarians. They had, in their estimation, the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Being young and inexperienced, I thought, if this is Adventism, I want nothing to do with it; hence, I ceased preaching the soon coming of Christ, and kindred doctrines, in which, I am satisfied, I did very wrong. "O tell it not in Gath." Yet this I did; but I hope and trust God will forgive me; and if I know my own heart, I shall do better in the future. Yes, through God's assisting grace, I have determined to preach what I believe, though men and demons try to overthrow it; and if the denomination to which I belong try to curtail me in my views, I shall secede from them, (Bro. Grant, I think secession is right in that respect), though they cannot if they live up to their principles.

I have now written the honest feelings of my heart. Brethren, let those of us that believe the end is near, live in that way and manner, that we may be prepared for the great tribulations that are coming on the earth. In conclusion, let me tell you that I feel sometimes as though I was doing but little, comparatively speaking, being obliged to work hard during the week to support my family; yet I try to keep up my appointment on the Sabbath. I am preaching two miles from my residence. I trust God will revive his work in this place. Brethren, pray for us, that the word of God may have free course, and be glorified. If any of the brethren in this part of the State wish me to make them a visit, and preach for them at any time during the winter, they will please write me. Direct to Cooper Centre, Kalamazoo Co., Mich. Yours, looking for the return of the Deliverer, C. I. DEYO.

Cooper, Mich.

From Sr. E. Remick.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS. IN THE LORD:—I wish to let you know, through our paper, how we are getting along in Westboro'. Bro. Grant has been with us two Sabbaths. We had a feast of good things. We have not been over fed lately, and it was meet in due season. We had a heavenly time. Praise the Lord. The saints got new strength to be ready to meet the Lord. There were some backsliders reclaimed; two or three unconverted were brought to see their lost condition while out of Christ, and promised to begin to serve the Lord.

In view of these things, let us be encouraged to go to work more faithfully in the service of the Lord, trying to comfort one another, helping the weak ones, removing every obstruction in the way of sinners; not conforming ourselves to this world, with its lusts and fashions; but with meekness, [illegible] and long-suffering, be ready at all times and places to give a reason for our "blessed hope," which is like an anchor to our souls, both sure and steadfast. Let us look over the past year, and see wherein we have come short of the glory of God; and renew our covenant with him to live better this year, than we ever did before. May "all to the glory of God," be our motto; not seeking our own glory, but his glory, that when he comes, we may be glorified with him.

There is no excuse for any one being idle in our Master's vineyard. We can find plenty to do, if we can't preach. We can exhort one another in kindness and love; not confining our labors to those of our own particular doctrines; but look after the lost sheep and stray lambs, trying to persuade them to enter the fold of the great Shepherd. Let us not turn aside for the follies and vanities of this wicked world, which is but for a moment.

Dear brethren and sisters, I have in view a city kept in store for those that do not defile their garments. Hunger, pain, sorrow and death, are all unknown there. What is better, Jesus will be there. I must be there. May we all be there, is the prayer of your sister, looking for the Savior.

Westboro', Mass. E. REMICK.

From Sr. A. P. Grey.

TO THE BRN. AND SRS.—While reading Bro. Munger's short piece in the Crisis of Dec. 6th, I felt as if it was an honest appeal to all the brethren and sisters to bestir themselves up more perfectly to a sense of duty. There are a great many who have lots of old clothes laid away, just because they are out of style, and they are too proud to wear them.

Let me tell you a little of my experience in these things. But a few years ago, I was on a visit to Bro. G., and he said to me one evening, I should like to tell you a little about my trials. I at once consented. He then told me that for many years, he had struggled hard to get rid of doing what he thought the Lord required him to do. Said he was perfectly satisfied that it was his duty to go and preach. I asked him why he did not? Said he, many preachers have often told me of the many trying scenes they have to go through; and if I was to go and preach, and leave my dear wife and children at home, and not know that they had enough to eat and drink, and clothes to wear, and a fire to keep warm, I should be in perfect misery. I told him if it was the will of the Lord for him to go, that the Lord would provide. I talked a long time with him; and in a few days we separated. Four years have passed, and again I find myself seated in the house of Bro. G., with three little ones by his side, and his dear wife by the other side. I have had many happy hours with them, talking about our blessed Master, and the dealings of the Lord with them. He is now a minister of the gospel and labors hard to bring sinners to Christ, and to comfort the saints scattered abroad. He is ready and willing to suffer for the sake of Christ; but he has to deny himself and family of many things that they do need; and while reading Bro. M.'s piece in the paper, I did feel as if the brethren and sisters ought to heed it, and look over their closets and drawers, and see if there is not a chance to do good to the needy.

Sister ——, the preacher's wife, told me that she had not sheets to make up her beds, and have two sheets on them. She did not say it to complain; no, far from that. Her little children need many things, and these old dresses that are laid away, would make some for them, and you will never wear them again. Come, sisters, just set apart some day for the purpose of looking over your old clothes, and see if you have not got many things that will do the preachers' families good. I know of many families that have an abundance of such things, that will never be used, unless you give them away. Remember the words of Jesus, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least, . . . ye have done it unto me." Would you see the blessed Master go cold and hungry? then remember what he has said about these things, and do not be so close with your property. The Lord is soon to come, and then your money will not purchase a seat in the kingdom. Will you trifle now? It will soon be too late. You love to go meeting, love to see the ministers, but you do not like to hear anything about giving them anything. You would not know how to get along without your butter and cheese, tea and coffee, sugar, and many other things; but I know of many poor preachers' families, who have lived for some time without butter, or meat, and with hardly enough to get a meal of victuals, and yet, they did not complain. Think of these things, ye who have more than heart can wish, and just send a little to your preacher, so that he can have something to eat. Your sister in Christ, PHEBE GREY.

From Bro. B. S. Jackson.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you permit me to say a word through the Crisis to my brethren in the East. I am still striving in weakness to meet them in the land of rest. Although deprived of the blessed privilege of meeting those of like precious faith, in the social meeting, as formerly, yet I hope to meet them with joy when Jesus comes. I look back on those precious seasons of social worship with peculiar pleasure.

I feel that I could not do without the Crisis. It is nearly all the preaching I have. There are none of our faith within many miles that I am aware off. O dear brethren, hold on by faith a little longer, and the victory will be gained. Soon Jesus will come and take his weary children home, where there will be no more sorrow. The cannon's roar, the battle cry, the groans of wounded and dying men will never more be heard. O happy day. May the Lord help us to stand with our loins girt about, and our lamps trimmed and burning. Brethren and sisters, pray for me, and my family, that we may meet you in the kingdom. Your brother in hope,

B. S. JACKSON.

BRO. GRANT:—Ever since 1841, I have joined my feeble voice to the proclamation of the speedy coming of our Lord, and his approaching reign of glory on earth. In the meantime, the Scriptures have been my constant study, and I have read with deep interest much that has been written on the subject. In my travels through many parts of the country, it has been my happiness to cultivate acquaintance and fellowship with many persons, and some churches of like faith and hope, and pleasant has been our intercourse. To all that in every place call on the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, both theirs and ours, "grace and peace be multiplied."

Having spent two and a half years in Philadelphia, preaching the last year of the time, last April I took an affectionate leave of the brethren there, with a letter commending me to those in Northern Pa., hoping to recruit my health with the country air, and preach as I go, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." I have cause for joy that by most the subject is respectfully listened to, and by many is gladly received. I have also baptized a few.

Granville, Pa. GEO. WELLS.

From Bro. J. Knowles.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to say through your paper, for the encouragement of the friends of Zion, that the Lord has been reviving his work at Tamworth, Birchintervale. I, with my companion, have spent five or six weeks in that vicinity, and visited from house to house; talked and prayed with the people. The wanderers have been reclaimed, and the stout and hard-hearted sinners have been brought to submit to Christ, and been made happy. The subjects of this revival are mostly heads of families, from thirty to fifty years of age. The meetings are increasing in interest. Many of the youth are very serious. This work has appeared more like the old-fashioned reformations, than any I have seen for years. May the Lord continue to work, and all the praise shall be given to him. JOHN KNOWLES.

Lake Village, N. H.

BRO. GEO. H. FISHER, New Rutland, Ill., writes:—"The good Lord has been blessing the little flock here of late, who are watching for the morning, and we feel encouraged to continue faithful till our Master comes. We have been enjoying a series of meetings, held by Brn. E. Royce and D. S. Clark, of this State; and, although we can see no fruits at present, yet we believe the good seed has been sown, and will bring forth fruit ere long. Many seem to be interested, and are inquiring after truth, and wish to know about the times and seasons. We hope the Lord will add a few more to his little church here, who shall, when Jesus comes, hail him with joy and be saved in that kingdom which shall have no end. If we ever could pray "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done," it is now. We are living in a fast age, and perils beset us on every hand; hence we need to take heed to that "sure word of prophecy," then our course will be made plain to the kingdom. May the Lord help us all to be faithful, and overcome, then we shall be permitted to sit down on his throne, even as he has overcome and sat down with the Father on his throne."

GEO. H. FISHER.

From Sr. P. W. Covey.

TO THOSE OF LIKE PRECIOUS FAITH: O how I long to see those that profess to follow Christ, rise to a higher and a holier life. Why so much conformed to the world? Is it the fear of appearing odd? Have not the people of God always been a singular people, just as long as they were consecrated to God and his service? The language of my heart is,

"O for a closer walk with God."

We are often asked why we do not see such powerful meetings now, as we used to? I can see no other reason only we are too apt to seek honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only. O let us come out from the world, and be separate. Let us hear more from those who can write on the blessed subject of holiness, faith and prayer. They do the soul good. Let us be faithful a little longer. Yours, in the faith,

South Windham, Vt. P. W. COVEY.

BRO. LIBERTY WETHERBEE, Newburg, Me., writes:—"I have been laboring here in Newburg some three weeks, and there is quite a reformation. Three Methodists, four Baptists, three infidels, and five French Catholics, have come out on the truth of the Bible."

For the World's Crisis.

DENYING WORLDLY LUSTS.

The Word is the standard by which to govern ourselves, and by it we are to be judged, a little from this. I shall not be thought unkind by one of God's dear children, if I request no more of them than the Word does. Well let us read (2 Cor. 7: 1),—"Dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." "Tit. 2: 12),—"Denying ungodliness and worldly lusts," etc. Now in the face of such sacred injunctions as these, and more to the same point, can we indulge in the least unnecessary article, such as tea, coffee, tobacco, snuff, or the wearing of gold or jewelry of any kind, and stand acquitted, justified, sanctified and holy?

Fifty years of my life have passed away, and, to the praise of God I say it, none of the above-named have been an indulgence, except for a few years the beverage, and none of that for over twenty years. My health is good generally; performing all my own domestic labor, beside doing work for others, by which, I am enabled to do a little for my Master's cause, which I love more than everything else in this world. CORRECTION.

BRO. GRANT:—It was intended that the resolve passed in the Me. Min. Conf. should read as follows, and you will please make the correction.

Resolved, That we believe that the doctrine of the Seventh-Day Sabbath, as interpreted in the publications emanating from Battle Creek, and the theory of the non-revival of wicked dead, from elsewhere, are contrary to the teachings of the New Covenant; and their promulgation is subversive of the christian faith, and tends to distraction. We therefore exhort all our brethren not to encourage their circulation. Adopted.

C. H. LEVERTON, Secretary.

CORRECTION.—In an article on "The Jubilee," in the last Crisis, in sections 7 and 8, it is stated that "the jubilee year includes four months and twenty days of the forty-ninth year. It should read five months and twenty days.—ED.

THE CANADIAN PASSPORT SYSTEM.—The circular on the subject of passports to Canada, issued by the Treasury Department, after reciting the original passport order of Secretary Seward, lays down the following rules:

1. Passports are issued for one year, and need not be surrendered within that period.
2. Citizens of the United States, desirous of visiting Canada, may take out their passports either from the United States Consulates, or from this Department.
3. United States Consular Agents are not authorized to issue passports; they may, however, vise those of foreigners.
4. Travelers making transit through Canada, from one American port to another American port, must procure passports.
5. Persons residing near the line, who desire to cross and recross daily, in pursuit of their usual avocations, are "travelers" in the contemplation of the order, and must provide themselves with passports.
6. Females and minor children, traveling alone, are included in the order. When, however, husband, wife, and minor children travel together, a single passport for the whole will suffice. For any other persons in the party, a separate passport will be required.
7. Should any person, native or foreign, clandestinely enter the United States, in derogation of the order, the fact should be reported to the military authorities of the district.

FIRST NEWSPAPER IN THE U. S.—The Long Island Historical Society exhibits in its rooms an original copy of the Boston News-letter, printed by John Allen, in Pudding Lane, and sold at the post-office in Cornhill. The sheet consists of one leaf, about ten by fourteen inches. It is dated in the year 1710, or sixty-four years before the Declaration of Independence, but is well printed and in good preservation. This paper is claimed to be the first one published in the United States.

Obituaries.

EMMA DAVIS.

Died in Danielsonville, Conn., of consumption, Dec. 8th, 1864, Sr. Emma Davis, daughter of Joseph H. Davis, aged eighteen years.

Emma was converted by the labors of Bro. Himes, while preaching at this place; was baptized by the writer, with two other sisters of the same family. She lived and died a christian, and was enabled, by grace, to bear her sufferings with patience and resignation. She selected the preacher, and text,—Jer. 31: 16-20. E. BELLOWS.

PHEBE HAWKINS.

Died in West Gloucester, R. I., Aug. 15th, 1864, Sr. Phebe Hawkins, wife of Bro. Allen Hawkins, aged sixty-eight years and six months.

The subject of the above notice never made a public profession of religion, but maintained a strictly moral life, was a kind companion and an affectionate mother. Her home was a home for pilgrims, and she took particular pains to entertain them, of which the writer is a witness; but all this would not satisfy on a dying bed. At last she leaned on Jesus and died in peace. May God help all the family to prepare for a happy meeting.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[Liverpool Jan. 7th, Queenstown 8th.]

Political news unimportant.

The Bombay mail of Dec. 13th has arrived. The whole territory of Kokan has been taken by the Russians, who were said to be preparing to march against Toorkistan.

Dreadful Hurricane and Inundation in Spain.

The river Jucar, which has its source among the mountains of Cuenca, flows through and fertilizes one of the most productive districts in Spain. Many are the villages of from 500 to 2,000 inhabitants respectively. The former is twenty-two and the latter twenty-five miles distant from Valencia by rail on the Madrid line. Of late years England has been supplied with large quantities of Valencia oranges, grown in the neighborhood of Alcira and Carcagente. Rice, Indian corn, and silk, are the other staple productions of these towns. A summer of considerable heat and drought—not a single shower having fallen between the 30th of April and 25th of August—has been succeeded by an autumn of unusual severity. October was more or less so throughout, but on the 1st. of Nov. the heavens assumed a threatening aspect. On the night of the 3d there was a copious fall of rain, which continued on the morning of the 4th, and towards the evening it seemed as if the windows of heaven had opened, and another deluge were inevitable. The rain descended in torrents. As night approached, the water in the streams, rivulets and rivers, rose with incredible rapidity, and the rains fell faster and faster. Before midnight the towns of Cullera, Alcira, Careagente and Jativa, with many adjoining villages, were submerged in water. In Alcira alone, which is the largest of the towns just mentioned, upwards of 200 houses near the banks of the rivers were swept away; others have fallen since, and many have had their foundations sapped. The poor classes, whose houses were of one story only, were obliged to get on the roof to save themselves from being drowned. Thousands from the house-tops anxiously looking for the morning. There was no escape. The waters had risen to a height of six or eight feet in the highest parts of the town—in the lower parts whole houses were covered. In the convent of Carcagente the water was fifteen feet deep. Except cats and dogs not a single domestic or farm animal has been left alive. Now that the waters have subsided, the streets and houses are full of dead carcases of horses, mules, donkeys, pigs, goats and sheep.

On the first entrance into the town twenty-one corpses were found in the streets—how many more are to be found in the houses that have fallen, how many drowned in their beds, and how many swept away with the flood, no one presumes to estimate. Already about one hundred corpses have been taken to the church, but there is no place of interment for them, scarcely a vestige of the cemetery having been left. At the rail-way station some seventy laborers who had been employed on a railway saved themselves by getting on the roof of the station and adjoining warehouses. The station is about a quarter of a mile out of Alcira, and on higher ground, yet in the waiting-room the water was six feet deep. Morning came, but with the morning no succor for the poor isolated, inundated inhabitants. All communication with the adjoining towns and villages had been completely cut off. The railway had been swept away in several places, but had this not been the case, it was for miles from six to eight feet under water. The telegraphic wires were broken, and it was not till near midnight on the 6th instant, that, at all hazards, Senor Mas, the civil governor of Valencia, and some other intrepid individuals, waded through water and mud, waist deep, into the town. The accounts given by the officials and laborers who found refuge at the railway station are heart rending. Those were the first to be relieved, owing to their position; and they state that before the waters rose to their extreme height, their own position was rendered more horrible by the cries of agony from the town.

About one hundred square miles—the most fertile and populous that the province of Valencia can boast of—have been thus inundated. The waters swept with terrific force and incalculable havoc through fertile valleys, converting them into desolate and depopulated deserts. Albalat, a village near Alcira, was completely under water. From the nearest approach only the steeple of the church could be seen. For the present, no estimate whatever can be formed of the amount of damage done to property or the number of lives lost.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, Jan. 17, 1865. Fort Fisher is captured, with twenty-seven hundred prisoners and seventy guns.

Washington, Jan. 17, 10.40 A. M.

To Maj. Gen. Dix:

The following official dispatches have just been received at this Department:

Headquarters, U. S. Forces on Federal Point, N. C., Jan. 15, via Fortress Monroe, Jan. 17.

To Brig. Gen. John A. Rawlings:

General:—I have the honor to report that Fort Fisher was carried by assault this afternoon and evening by Gen. Ames' division of the 2d brigade of the 1st division of the 24th army corps, gallantly aided by a battalion of marines and seaman from the navy.

The assault was preceded by a heavy bombardment from the Federal fleet, and was made at 3.30 P. M., when the 1st brigade (Curtis of Ames' division) effected a lodging on the parapet, but full possession of the work was not obtained until 10 P. M.

New York, Jan. 18. The Tribune's Washington dispatch says it is a well-known fact that the taking of Fort Fisher does not stop blockade-running into Cape Fear River. Zeiks Island commands the other entrance.

Rear Admiral E. P. Lee informs the Navy Department that a resolution will soon be introduced in the Alabama Legislature recommending the return of that State to the Union.

Gen. Butler's testimony before the Committee on the Conduct of the War lifts the veil, which has closely covered many disasters and blunders in front of Petersburg. His testimony produced a profound impression, and a summons was issued for Gen. Grant and other high officers.

The Times' dispatch says Mr. Blair obtained part of his papers while in Richmond, but all idea of any other result arising from his visit is now completely exploded.

New York, Jan. 20. The U. S. monitor Patapsco was destroyed off Charleston at 2 A. M., 17th inst., while doing picket duty, by a torpedo. Forty or fifty of the crew went down with her.

Washington, Jan. 20, 1864. A dispatch from Admiral Porter to the Secretary of the Navy, speaking of Fort Fisher, says: "These works are tremendous. I was in Fort Malakoff a few days after it surrendered to the French and English. The combined armies of the two nations were many months capturing that stronghold, and it will not compare in size or strength with Fort Fisher. The world never saw such fighting as our soldiers did."

New York, Jan. 20. The Tribune's Washington dispatch says Secretary Stanton's visit to Gen. Sherman has developed the fact that Sherman's views and policy on the negro question are those of the government. His treatment of negroes at Savannah has inspired them with confidence, and they rely on him wholly. He has borne in his heart a great scheme for their benefit and will soon electrify the country in an order partitioning among them the abandoned Sea Island property of fugitive rebel planters.

Gen. Butler has turned over to his successor $500,000, the proceeds of taxes on sutlers and other traders and other monies.

The Herald's dispatch says Mr. Blair will start again for Richmond to-day. He has had frequent interviews with the President since his return from Richmond, and his going back indicates that the resources of statesmanship may be actually employed in securing peace.

New York, Jan. 20. Richmond papers contain a debate in the Rebel Congress which shows that the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the peace propositions, reported unanimously in favor of sending commissioners to sue for peace. It also shows that this action has produced a rupture between Jeff. Davis and the Richmond oligarchy on one side and Congress, representing the people, on the other, which is shaking the whole frame work of the Confederacy. Mr. Orr of South Carolina declared that the people were determined that in some form the statesmanship of the country shall be invoked in an honest effort to end the carnival of death by negotiation. The debate is the most important that has occurred during the war.

Toronto, C. W., Jan. 21. The Leader of to-day says the British Government have ordered thirty gunboats, carrying 3500 men, to be sent out from England to the Lakes, and they will probably be here as soon as navigation opens.

☞ The suspension bridge about being constructed across the Ohio, between Cincinnati and Covington, Ky., is ninety feet high, four hundred feet longer than the Niagara bridge, and will cost $1,500,000.

HONORS TO THE MEMORY OF VOLTAIRE.—The heart of Voltaire has been preserved ever since 1788, in a gilded vase, in the possession of the family of the Marquis de Villette, a great friend of Voltaire's. The family now offer the relic to the French nation, and the Emperor has it, to be placed in the great National Library. An entire room will be devoted to it, where it will stand surrounded by all Voltaire's works, the medal struck in his honor, and his original statue, by Houdon—a sort of temple, in short, dedicated to his memory.

☞ CARDINAL ANTONELLI has replied, in the name of the Pope, to the rebel manifesto recently addressed to the Court of Rome and other Cabinets of Europe. The Holy Father treats the paper as a State document, expressing a wish on the part ot the Davis Government for peace by means of negotiation. To this end the Pope will co-operate on any favorable occasion. In proof of this he calls attention to his letters on the subject, addressed to the Archbishops of Baltimore and New York, so far back as October 1862.

☞ A species of Spiritualism prevails in Japan. A late letter from Nagasaki says:—"From the 14th to the 17th inst. (August) the annual ancestral festival was kept up by the natives. On the 14th the dead were supposed to visit their former dwellings, where they remained until the night of the 16th. On that night a vast number of straw boats, brilliantly illuminated, were thrown into the bay, for the purpose of reconveying the spirits to their different localities. The following evening was spent in dissipation of every description."

A SHADOWY HOST.—A correspondent of the Staunton Spectator, (rebel newspaper,) writing from Lewisburgh, Greenbrier county, Va., gives a description of a remarkable atmospheric phenomenan witnessed in that town. It was an apparent procession of shadoy forms like those of human beings—thousands upon thousands in number—moving through a deep valley, in clear view of the spectators, and finally ascending a steep mountain and disappearing.

☞ The city of Paris is about to undertake a gigantic work—the supplying of the city with pure water. To this end a reservoir, capable of supplying 40,000 cubic feet of water every twenty-four hours, is now being constructed at Menilmontant, at the expense of 40,000,000 francs.

☞ At the annual sale of pews in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn (Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, pastor,) the total amount bid for rentals and premiums for the ensuing year was forty thousand dollars, which is nine thousand dollars more than was realized on the pews of the church during the past year.

☞ About 10,000 pieces of Roman money, principally of the reigns of Augustus, Tiberius, Claudius and Nero, have been discovered in the bed of the Mayenne, at St. Leonard. Their presence is explained by the fact of a dangerous ford having formerly existed at this spot, and the custom of travelers to throw in the river a piece of money ex voto.

☞ Mrs. Sherman, wife of the General, has left Cincinnati for South Bend, Ind., where she is to spend the winter, superintending the education of their children, who are inmates of the Catholic institution of that place.

☞ The New York World says that fifty thousand Fenians have been drilling for some time past, with the design of marching upon Canada.

☞ The Fenian brotherhood of New Jersey held a mass meeting recently, and energetically recommended an invasion of Canada.

☞ Two hundred thousand acres of land in Ireland have been permitted to fall to waste and sterility the past year.

☞ The King of Prussia's hotel bill for three weeks, was $11,000. The Emperor of Russia's, $35,000.

☞ A London paper says Mr. Spurgeon has declined to be called reverend.

Notices.

Notice.

As I believe time is very short, and it behoves us to be up and doing; and as I have found many females that feel God has called them to follow in the vineyard of the Lord, but because of the prejudice of the church in its present cold and backslidden state, they are kept back from following as they feel God has called them to do; and as I believe that we are living in the day when God will pour out his Spirit upon his handmaids, I therefore give this notice to all the women of America, independent of denomination or color, who feel that they have been called of God to preach, exhort, pray, or to write, on the subject of his speedy coming, and a preparation for that coming, to open a correspondence with me in reference to holding a convention of women, in the coming spring, May or June, to be held at a place which will be named after hearing from the different sisters. This convention shall be for the promulgation of all Bible truths; but no hobbies.

Now, sisters, let me hear from you as soon as possible, so that we can make arrangements for the convention. Let this be a missionary movement. Remember Jesus is at the door, and wickedness is abounding, and the love of many is waxing cold. Let us be up and doing, so that he may say to us, "Well done, good and faithful servant, . . . Enter into the joy of thy Lord." Let all, who feel interested in this great work, make it a subject of special prayer at the hour of twelve o'clock, every day, that God may bless the effort that we may put forth to his honor and glory.

All brethren who are favorable to this convention are invited to assist us by advice, by kind words of encouragement, and those that can by publishing this notice.

Sisters are requested to form themselves into small missionary societies in their own village, or neighborhood, meet weekly, and report to me as often as possible.

Address Mrs. Anna E. Smith, No. 128, East 27th Street, New York City.

Advent Christian Conference at No. Ohio.

Providence permitting, there will be a general conference meeting of all who are looking for "the kingdom that shall have no end," at Norwalk, Ohio, commencing Wednesday evening, Feb. 1st, 1865. The church of this place extend a general invitation to all of like precious faith to come and worship the Lord with us. We desire to see all the churches of the Northern and Central Ohio represented, as matters of vital importance to the cause of truth will come up for consideration. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield will be with us, and minister in word and doctrine. Let all come, and come praying for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and hold themselves ready to work for God. Brethren from the conferences east and west of us have a special invitation to come to this feast of the Lord. J. D. KNAPP, President.

P. B. HOYT, Secretary.

Minnesota Quarterly Conference.

Our winter quarterly conference will be held in the Ramer school-house, Utica, Winona County, Minn., commencing on Friday, the 24th of Feb., at half past six o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following, day and evening. Preaching by different ministering brethren. All who love God and the salvation of sinners, and desire to know and understand the truth, and be prepared for the day of his coming, are invited to attend. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, but exhort one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching." Pray for God's blessing upon the meeting.

In behalf of the church, PHILIP RAMER, Sec.

A Discussion.

A discussion of the following questions will commence at Morse's Mills, Corinna, Me., Feb. 14th, at one o'clock, and continue several days.

1. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man has a spiritual, thinking soul, that will exist between death and the resurrection.

Affirmative, E. B. FLETCHER.
Negative, N. F. NASON.

2. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that after the resurrection God will destroy the wicked in the sense of making them as though they had not been.

Affirmative, N. F. NASON.
Negative, E. B. FLETCHER.

If the weather is stormy, the discussion will be adjourned one week.

Conference.

By divine permission, Bro. C. S. Emerson will commence a conference with the brethren at Dover, N. H., on Saturday, Feb. 4th, 1865, and continue the same a week or more, as may be deemed expedient. We ardently desire that our brethren who may feel it their duty to attend this conference, will come in the name of the great head of the church, and be wise in winning souls to Christ. May the divine blessing crown their efforts with abundant success. In behalf of the brethren,

J. M. HACKETT.

Notice.

A series of meetings will be held at Whitefield, N. H., commencing Feb. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as may be thought best. Come, brethren, one and all, to the meeting. J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Notice.

A series of meetings will commence in Natick, R. I., Sunday, Feb. 5th. Due notice next week.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 486. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid.

If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe.

For every week of indebtedness before No. 468, charge (at the old rate) four cents; and, for every week of indebtedness since No. 468, charge (at the new rate) five cents,—and you have the amount due the office. (This, however, will give a trifle more than the amount due. To make it exact, deduct four cents for every dollar due before No. 468, and five cents for every dollar due since No. 468.)

For the World's Crisis.

THANKS.

To T. A. and M. G., J. D., E. J. H., M. E. C.

"Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

God bless you! O my brothers,
And you my sisters dear,
They've brought my heart new courage,—
Your messages of cheer.
O, with a full heart melting,
My Father's hand I see;
For oh! they've brought rich blessings,
Far beyond price to me.

A shining link they've added
Unto the chain of gold,
That to God's throne of mercy
My heart by faith doth hold;
And oh! a cloud of glory
Seems hovering o'er me now,
Reflected from the halo
That gilds my Savior's brow.

O, may sweet light from heaven
Life's darkest hours beguile;
Our heavenly Father bless you
With his approving smile.
To you may it be given,
When sinks Time's ling'ring sand,
To dwell for aye in glory,
"In our Immanuel's land."

There may you pluck immortal,
The fruits from "Life's fair Tree,"
Its glorious King forever
All pure and holy see.
Once more, dear friends, I bless you!
I thank you in the name
Of Christ our dear Redeemer,
Our glorious King, the Lamb.

NUMBER SEVENTEEN.

DEATH OF MOSES.

Moses, the prophet and lawgiver, stands upon the craggy brow of Pisgah, to view the promised land into which he is forbidden to enter. He has delivered his last message to Israel, and poured out his last blessing upon the tribes he has conducted so many wearisome years amid the weary wilds of the desert. After so many toils have been endured, so many dangers passed, he must lie down in the solitude of Nebo, alone in the mysterious sepulchre heaven had prepared.

It was a glorious day. Undimmed the resplendent sun pours down its golden light upon the heights of Pisgah. As Moses gains the solitary summit, a ravishing panorama of verdant plain, and hill and dale, and meandering stream, lies spread out beneath his feet, or stretches away in the distance. This is the land of promise, that lies before him, spread out in all the luxuriance of oriental abundance. This is the land that the tribes are so soon to possess under the leadership of Joshua. At his feet lies the inheritance of Reuben. To the north arise in long lines the mountains of Gilead and Bashan, that bound the pleasant land of Gad and Manasseh. And farther still arise the mountains of Lebanon, that limit the estates of Naphtali. His eye ranges over all the future estates of the tribes, till it meets the blue waves of the ever rolling mediterranean; then returns again and rests upon the land of Judah, whose future should be established.

He beheld Zion, the sacred mount of God, and Moriah, consecrated in the distant past by the offering of Abraham, and where the temple of Jehovah should arise, and where for ages the people of God should assemble to worship. Grand and glorious was the vision that passed before the prophet. Not only the promised inheritance, clothed in all its garniture of rich verdure and abundance, but methinks the future unfolded its mysteries and displayed the long line of judges and kings that should rule, and at last the sad captivity of the ten tribes, who were lost to view in the dim vastness of the far east. Then the vicissitudes of Judah arise, now resplendent with glory, then dim with adversity; now her sons and daughters are mourning by the rivers of Babylon; then chanting hymns of gladness over the restoration of Zion's walls. Scene follows scene, till a brighter era dawns on Judah,—on the world. Shiloh comes, the Savior, the Prince of the house of David, the Lion of the tribe of Judah. But alas, only a despised few receive him.

The Jews scorn the deliverer, and crown their guilt by crucifying him. But the rejected one triumphs over death, and ascends on high. One more scene, and Judah sinks in woe and blood and darkest night. A sigh of sadness escapes the prophet as the last vision fades in the smoke of Jehovah's temple. But soon another ray illumines the darkness; joy and peace have been promised to all who will receive the crucified and risen Savior, as their guide. In that Savior's own blood had been offered up the last sacrifice that should be required to expiate sin.

The vision passes away; his eye lights once more upon the grand picture before him; once more the tents of Jacob lie spread out upon the plains of Moab, far down and beyond the slopes of Nebo. As his eye rests upon the people he has conducted so long, he breathes another blessing upon them, and sinks down upon the mossy couch of Nebo's crags, and closes his eyes upon the scenes of earth for ever. There, we are told, he was buried by the hands of the great Unseen; while the people who loved him as a father mourned his loss in the plains below.

Lofty indeed was the character of Moses. He who braved the wrath of a proud Pharaoh, and stood unappalled by the shore of the Red Sea, when his foes press down behind him, was no common man,—no coward leader. And he who entered the cloud environed pavilion of Jehovah, on Sinai, and talked with God, was favored beyond common mortals. The story of Moses is more sublime than the grandest epic. It begins with chaos, when light first dawned, and the earth was formed. It gives the only authentic recital of the first ages of earth that are preserved to us, and tells of God's dealings with men, and with nations that would have faded from record, but for his pen. Once, in a moment, when irritated by the murmurs of the unthinking people, he sinned, by not giving God the glory of the miracle he had performed in supplying them with water. For this act, he was prohibited from entering the land of promise. For this he died on Nebo; for this his footsteps press not the pleasant vales beyond Jordan. But aside from that one act, no one ever sustained a nobler life, or left worthier examples on record.

☞ A crust of bread, a pitcher of water, a thatched roof, and love: there is happiness for you, whether the day be rainy or sunny. It is the heart that makes the home, whether the eye rests on a potato patch or a flower garden. Heart makes home precious, and it is the only thing that can.

☞ Nations in a state of war are like individuals in a state of intoxication; they frequently contract debts when drunk which they are obliged to pay when sober.

A FRAGMENT.

I wonder if anybody else has sat on some calm, still evening, as I have been sitting to-night, and mused on this great dream of life, striving to explain its mysteries, till the brain grew weary and sad? New phases of it are constantly rising before my vision; some few pleasant, but the greater part distorted and marred; so that the prayer has sometimes half risen to my lips, "Let me here stay my footsteps; I have seen enough; I shrink from pressing farther into this labyrinthian maze; here let me rest." But it may not be. While I hold a portion of this strange element in my grasp, I must still go on, still must I see, and hear, and know, and ponder. Truly has it been said "knowledge is power;" but there is a knowledge, the knowledge of sin, which has never brought happiness to the learned.

Oh, how gladly, as I look abroad on this beautiful earth, bearing all over its varied surface the impress of the divine hand, would I believe its inhabitants all pure; how gladly give confidence where there are now only cold distrust and suspicion. But no; the spoiler, sin, has passed over earth and deformed it all. He has spread mildew and blight over its fairest things; and although there are those who oppose its sway, his influence is seen and felt around and within us. Oh, how sad is the first lesson of distrust! how slow we learn it, and with what a withering power does it come over the spirit, scorching as the breath of the tropical simoon. What an utter hopelessness gathers over the soul, till we see stretched out to us the hands of a loving Heavenly Father. It is thus we learn to trust that which cannot fail us; thus that our gaze is directed to things immortal. How sweet to feel that there is another world far more glorious than this, at whose portals will stand white-robed angels, to welcome us in. There this strange enigma of life will be solved. There will be no sin, no distrust, no selfishness; for the former things have passed away; nothing to mar the ransomed, unalloyed happiness. Oh! when the murky clouds of disappointment hover thick about the pathway; when grief and wretchedness are seen and felt; when great and heavy waves of misfortune threaten to engulf our life-bark; where else may the finger of hope point for happiness, but to our blessed Jesus, who has promised to be with us even to the end.

And he who is our life-giver will soon appear to give the little flock the kingdom. Then let us press the battle to the gate, and victory will be ours.

How sweet to reflect on those joys that await us
In yon blissful region, the home of the blest.

Yours, in hope, L. O. Gage.

MEDITATION.

Bro. Grant:—As a stranger in the world, I often peruse the Crisis with profit, while it points to a crown, incorruptible and that fadeth not away, in that bright world which saints are striving to gain. Yes, glory to our God be given, while I cast my eyes around on the heavens, which speak forth our Creator. I would, with higher aspirations, take a survey of those scenes which open before the mind of God's faithful ones here, chosen in Christ. Our Savior says, if I go away, "I will come again," for in my Father's house are many mansions." It is there I hope to meet a dear father and mother, children, and loved ones of earth. Then, amid war and bloodshed we need weep no more. Cheering thought. Yet while friends forsake, and foes unite, we will drop a word of kindness to the desponding ones.

Our Savior hath left his promises on record, which never can be reversed. He hath said, "Behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Let me follow my Savior where ere he calls.

The day long sought for heaves in view, and who shall be able to stand? Your sister, striving to learn of my Savior.

CELESTA, PA.

Bro. Himes:—We are told to prove all things, and to hold fast that which is good. I, for one, try to follow this rule. I wrote to the seer at Celesta to know the truth in regard to things there. Receiving no answer, I made up my mind to go and see for myself, and so I did. I concluded, from the writings of P. E. A., that I should there find a people prepared for the coming of the Lord. I was deceived. I found just three lukewarm professors. It was the greatest piece of deception I ever heard of. The law ought to punish such deceptions. The first moment I set my foot in the place, I saw I had been deceived, but made up my mind to stay awhile and see how things went; and I found they went very bad.

There was no order in any thing. All was confusion. The man's mind seems to be continually occupied in carrying out his wicked designs. He writes for all to come, but what he would keep them on is more than I can tell. If his faith could command the stones to be made bread, he might say to all, come. But that is not all. If any go there with money, he wants it. He thought I had some, and wanted it very bad, but failed to get it. I was one of the first who went there, and the first who left. I was there a month and a few days. If any others are preparing to go, I hope they will be stopped.

JESUS THE GUEST.

Every person, of ordinary observation, will readily bring to mind the sudden change produced, in most, if not all families, by a usual visit from a minister, or some distinguished guest. In words, looks and actions, how careful, pleasant and agreeable, the husband and father tries to make himself appear in his family; how quiet and orderly the children seem in consequence; the wife and mother, too, pleased with the change, forgets her trials and impatient heart for the moment; cheers up, chimes in, and all goes well for the time being. Pleasant family; and as a friend remarked with regard to the head of a certain family once, "that it was a pity the minister could not always stay there."

Well, ministers are only men, and sometimes poor and fallible at that; and their good influence might soon lose its power amongst us; but there is a guest who is exalted and worthy, and who is above and unlike all others; in that the poor, each and every one, can entertain and retain him as long as they choose; and who would delight and love to remain with them forever. He will bear all our burdens; calm our fears; smooth our pathway and pillow; wipe our tears; speak cheering and comforting words at all times; keep us in danger, and deliver us from all our foes. This is Jesus of Nazareth; the Prince of Peace; the Son of God; the coming King. Bless his dear name.

Let us, then, especially we who profess to be his followers, at once draw nigh, and, at the commencement of this new year, invite and receive him into our families and hearts; giving him the pre-eminence in all things; willingly and joyfully obeying all his requirements, and, without controversy, the most blessed results will follow. Come, ye tried and tempted ones, let Jesus be your constant guest the coming year; live every day as though he were here personally with us, and see what report we can bring at its close. Your sister for the trial, D. N. Kidder.

WAIT.

Wait! for the day is breaking,
Though the dull night be long;
Wait! God is not forsaking
Thy heart. Be strong! be strong!

Wait! and the clouds of sorrow
Shall melt in gentle showers,
And hues from heaven shall borrow,
As they fall amid the flowers.

Wait! 'tis the key to pleasure,
And to the plan of God;
O, tarry thou his leisure;
Thy soul shall bear no load.

Wait! for the time is hasting
When life shall be made clear,
And all who know heart-wasting,
Shall feel that God is dear.

"PULLING THEM OUT OF THE FIRE."

While the world is rushing madly down the broad road to destruction, turning away from the only source of hope, let us who profess to love the appearing of the King of kings,—let us "strive to enter in at the strait gate." Let us not spend our breath denouncing the nominal churches, but do all we can to enlighten those professors whom we have reason to think are honest, and within the reach of our influence. It is not seemly for us to smite our fellow servants, or professing christians, even though they should smite us. Do not let your seeming zeal work in such a manner as to quench "the smoking flax" or break the "bruised reed." Rather let your charity seek out and restore the lost sheep, and kindle anew the flame of love on the altar which seems well nigh broken down, and thus lead the brother for whom Christ died, again into the way of life.

One thing you can do for your friends; you can pray for them. Allow me to exhort you to "pray without ceasing," as long as praying can avail. And pray for me also, that I may be filled with all the fulness of the blessing of the gospel. F. H. C.

West Sutton, Mass.

ELEVEN REASONS

FOR NOT ACCEPTING AN INVITATION TO A FASHIONABLE PARTY.

1st. Because I have no desire to form intimacies with the fashionable world, to which christians are forbidden to be conformed, and from which they are called to come out and be separate.

2nd. Because, as a christian, I ought not, and cannot find pleasure in the displays of vanity, and in the frivolous conversation of those whose principal maxim is, "Let us eat, drink, and be merry."

3rd. Because, in such society, I might insensibly imbibe the spirit of the world, which a christian is commanded not to cherish.

4th. Because it would induce late hours, and necessarily lead to the neglect, or sleepy performances of family devotions.

5th. Because it would tempt to undue indulgence of appetite, and perhaps excite a taste for luxuries which would endanger health, and lead to unnecessary expense.

6th. Because I should find few, if any christians there.

7th. Because it would give offence to christian brethren, and might become to them an occasion of stumbling.

8th. Because I can spend my time better.

9th. Because such company, and scenes, appear inconsistent with taking up the cross, and walking in the narrow way.

10th. Because it would encourage and confirm the thoughtless in sin.

11th. Because I should be very cautious where I am found, as I am forewarned that in such an hour as I think not the Son of man cometh.—Selected.

GOOD CHILDREN A BLESSING.

A great blessing. Let parents train their little ones from early infancy in the way they should go—in the path of virtue, rectitude, truth and love—they are a blessing, not a curse—olive plants around the table—"apples of gold in pictures of silver"—loving, cheerful, obedient, smiling happy, joyful. Sight lovely! Happy, too, thrice happy, he who is thus blessed with such a family. "Lo, children are a heritage of the Lord: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man—so are children of the youth. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them." Ps. 27: 5.

What would the world be really worth, if it were robbed of the sweet, cheerful, innocent, merry prattle of little children? What home would be worth the name of "sweet home," if those little vines were taken from it which morning and evening put out their little arms to climb and kiss the parent stem?

Who does not love kind-hearted, obedient little children—innocent as doves, harmless as lambs, cheerful as larks, sprightly as kittens; children that have been carefully disciplined, watched over, prayed over, till every passion, appetite, and all self-will are brought into sweet, lamb-like subjection! O what a blessing! What a little Eden below!—Home Thrusts.

VAIN PHILOSOPHY.

The advocates of the seven-year-change theory inform us, that the man who is seventy years old has had ten different bodies, and then inquire which of them is to raised and rewarded? Granting for a moment that the premises of this "vain philosophy" are correct, we find its supporters involved in a more serious dilemma than they had intended to plunge us into. If this theory is true, the body is never over seven years old; therefore, the man who is seventy years old should have been a gray-headed man ten times. The last one of his ten bodies is not a day older than the first one. Then why was not the first one as infirm and decrepit as the last one? Why did not his hair turn as white at the age of seven years, as at the age of seventy? Why is not the face as really covered with wrinkles at the age of seven years, as at seventy? And why is the first seven-body frequently only four feet high, while the second one is six? If the second seven-year body can vary so much from the first one of the same age, why cannot each succeeding one vary in the same proportion? And why may not the third body be eight feet, and the fourth be ten feet high? Or, since bodies of the same age—seven years each—vary so much in stature, why may not the fifth body chance to be two feet shorter than its predecessor?

Certainly if this seven-year change theory is correct, the first body, being just as old as the last one, should be mature, full grown (for if the first one cannot get its growth in seven years, how can the others?) and gray headed, with a wrinkled face, and infirm appearance!! It surely will not be claimed that the increasing age of the soul which dwells in these bodies produces these results, causing one body, at the age of seven, to be blooming with youth and vigor, and causing another, of the same age, to be infirm and gray. Is is not folly to cling to a theory which is alike condemned by fact and revelation?—Selected.

DISCORD HEALED.

I reached my appointment in time to preach that day, and then went down the lake shore, preaching every day, and the Lord was with me in my way through those wild and dangerous scenes. There was one society on the circuit in quite a disturbed state. It was divided by two parties, and many attempts had in vain been made to unite them, both by myself and the presiding elder. One evening I had an appointment among them, and while preaching the Spirit of God descended upon me and upon them; his love seemed to fill and overflow every heart. They were all melted into tenderness. Now, I thought, is a good time to bring about a reconciliation, and accordingly I said to them, "If you are now willing to settle your difficulties, and forgive and forget the past, rise up, meet one another in the middle of the floor, shake hands, and thus manifest your love one to another."

They instantly rose, seized each other by the hand, some weeping, some praising God aloud, the women kissing one another, the men falling on one another's necks and sobbing. Thus their old difficulties were ended by the healing influences of the Holy Spirit, and they were bound together as the heart of one man. I believe that most of the discords which occur among christians originate in the absence of divine love, from which alone the love of the brethren can spring. The best cure of public troubles in the church is, therefore, a revival of the personal piety of its members.—Life and Times of Nathan Bangs.

ODD ORIGINS.

Confucius was a carpenter. Mohammed, called the prophet, was a driver of asses. Mehemet Ali was a barber. The Emperor of Morrocco was a pawnbroker. Bernadotte, king of Sweden, was a surgeon in the garrison of Martinique when the English took that island. Madame Bernadotte was a washerwoman of Paris. Napoleon, a descendant of an obscure family of Corsica, was major when he married Josephine, the daughter of a tobacconist Creole of Martinique. Franklin was a printer. President Boyer was a mulatto barber. President John Tyler was a captain of militia. Oliver Cromwell was formerly a brewer. President Polk was originally an innkeeper. The step-father of Isabella, Queen of Spain, husband of Queen Christina, and brother-in-law of the King of Naples, was once a bar-keeper of a coffee-room. General Espartero was a vestry clerk. King Christophe, of Hayti, was a slave. St. Kitts Bolivar was a druggist. General Paez was a cow-keeper. Vasco de Gama was a sailor. Astor, the richest man in the New World, before he became the proprietor of the Astor House, used to sell apples through the streets of New York. Joseph Bonaparte, before his arrival at New York, with all the silver, gold, and jewels of the crown of Spain that he was able to take with him from that country, was the King of Spain. Louis Philippe was a teacher of the French tongue in Switzerland, Boston, and Havana. Catherine, the Empress of Russia, was a camp grisette. Cincinnatus was ploughing his vineyard when the dictatorship of Rome was offered to him. A Governor of the Island of Madeira was a tailor; and a Minister of Finance in Portugal was a dealer in bottles of Madeira wine. There are at present in Portugal and Spain, several dukes, marquises, counts, viscounts, and barons, who formerly were cooks, tailors, barbers, cobblers, sweepers, and mulattoes. These few, but remarkable facts of ancient and modern history, are enough for proving that men and women from the lowest class of society have attained power, eminence, and even thrones, crowns, and altars.

ADVICE OF AN OLD LADY.

Now, John, listen to me, for I am older than you. Never do you marry a young woman, John, before you have contrived to happen at the house where she lives, at least four or five times before breakfast. You should know how late she lies in bed in the morning. You should take notice whether her complexion is the same in the morning as it is in the evening, or whether the morning wash and the towel have robbed her of her evening bloom. You should take care to surprise her, so that you may see her in her morning dress, and observe how her hair looks when she is not expecting you. If possible you should be where you can hear the morning conversation between her and her mother. If she is ill-natured and snappish to her mother, so she will be to you, depend on it. But if you find her up and dressed neatly in the morning with the same countenance, the same neatly combed hair, the same ready and pleasant answers to her mother, which characterize her appearance and deportment in the evening, and particularly if she is lending a hand to get the breakfast ready in good season, she is a prize, John, and the sooner you secure her to yourself the better.

SAVE THE MINUTES.

It was the duty of Madame de Genlis, when a companion of the Queen of France, to be at the table and waiting for her mistress just fifteen minutes before dinner. She employed these minutes in writing, and a volume or two was the result.

Erastmus was one of the most active men of his age. Yet by using the fragments of time saved from his principal pursuits, he was able to write more books than most men in like circumstances would have read.

"The man is yet unborn who duly weighs an hour." There is nothing of which men are so prodigal as time. Seneca says "it is a virtue to be covetous of it." There is no way in which it is so generally wasted as in letting slip the odd minutes. The art of "gathering up the fragments that nothing be lost," is seldom or never learned.—Zion's Herald.

Kind Words.—Kind words are the brightest flowers of earth's existence; they make a very paradise of the humblest home that the world can show. Use them, and especially around the fireside circle. They are jewels beyond price, and more precious to heal the wounded heart, and make the weighed-down spirit glad, than all other blessings the earth can give.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

TOBACCO.

What makes my teeth from day to day
Exhibit symptoms of decay,
With pain and anguish rot away?
The weed, the weed.

What makes my breath so fetid, foul,
What makes the ladies on me scowl,
And shun me as they would an owl?
The weed, the weed.

What makes me, when I'm called to speak,
Fly quickly—lest my mouth should leak—
The spit-box or the door to seek?
The weed, the weed.

What is the cause of war and strife
Between the good man and his wife,
Embittering every hour of life?
The weed, the weed.

What makes an appetite for rum,
And sends the drunkard staggering home,
And prematurely seals his doom?
The weed, the weed.

These are the facts—then let us shun
The weed, that many has undone,
And our just vengeance wreak upon
The weed, the weed.

For the World's Crisis.

HYGIENE.—NO. 3.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

Having, in previous numbers, considered the subjects of improper food and drink, and the use of tobacco, I shall now discuss the cause of disease next in importance; viz., bad air. It will be necessary, in order to properly understand this subject, and others, which will be considered in future, that we consider the effects of pure air upon the blood, and the physiology of the

RESPIRATORY APPARATUS.

This consists first of the larynx (Adam's apple), which communicates with the throat at the upper part of the neck. Next the trachea (windpipe), a membranous tube with cartilaginous (gristly) rings; which, upon its entrance into the chest, divides into the right and left bronchus. These again divide successively into secondary and tertiary bronchi; the subdivision continuing while the bronchial tubes grow smaller and more numerous, and separate constantly from each other. As they diminish in size, the tubes grow more delicate in structure, and the cartilaginous rings and plates disappear from their walls. They are finally reduced, according to Kalliker, to the size of 1-25 of an inch in diameter, and are composed only of a thin mucous membrane. They are then known as the "ultimate bronchial tubes." Each ultimate bronchial tube terminates in a division, or islet of the pulmonary tissue, about 1-12 of an inch in diameter, which is termed a pulmonary lobule. It consists of a vascular membrane inclosing a cavity; which cavity is divided into a large number of secondary compartments, by thin septa, or partitions, which project from its internal surface. These secondary cavities are the pulmonary cells or vesicles. Each vesicle is about 1-75 of an inch in diameter, and is covered on its exterior with a close network of capillary (hair-like) blood vessels, which dip down into the space between the adjacent vesicles, and expose, in this way, a double surface to the air contained in the cavities. The whole extent of the respiratory surface in both lungs has been estimated by Lieberkuhn at fourteen hundred feet. The great multiplication of the minute pulmonary vesicles, and of the partitions between them, must evidently increase, to an extraordinary degree, the extent of surface over which the blood, spread out in a thin layer, is exposed to the action of the air.

The atmospheric air, as it is drawn into the lungs, is a mixture of oxygen and nitrogen, in the proportion of about 21 per cent. of oxygen, to 79 per cent. of nitrogen. The principal changes produced in the air by respiration are the loss of oxygen, and again of carbonic acid.

The chief alterations which the blood undergoes during respiration are the following: it absorbs oxygen from the air as it passes through the lungs, and gives off carbonic acid to the air.

Says Dr. Dalton:—"The real process, as it takes place in the lungs, is, for the most part, as follows: the blood comes to the lungs already charged with carbonic acid. In passing through the pulmonary capillaries, it is exposed to the influence of the air in the cavity of the pulmonary cells, and a transudation of gases takes place through the moist animal membranes of the lungs. Since the blood in the capillaries contains a larger proportion of carbonic acid than the air vesicles, a portion of this gas leaves the blood and passes out through the pulmonary membrane; while the oxygen, being more abundant in the air of the vesicles than in the circulating fluid, passes inward at the same time and is condensed by the blood."

Again says the same author:—"In this double phenomenon of exudation and absorption, which takes place in the lungs, both parts are necessary to life. It is essential for the constant activity of nutrition of the tissues that they be steadily supplied with oxygen by the blood; and if this supply be cut off, their functional activity ceases. On the other hand, the carbonic acid, which is produced in the body by the process of nutrition, becomes a poisonous substance if it be allowed to collect in a large quantity."

Thus it will be seen that the air is the great instrument of purifying and vitalizing the blood. The blood being purified during its passage through the lungs, passes to the left auricle of the heart, then to the left ventricle; from thence it is thrown into the aorta and distributed through the system, where it deposits the oxygen with the tissues, receives the inert and carbonaceous matter, and returns to undergo the process described.

It will be very easy, then, to understand the necessity of pure air; and the deleterious effects of impure air will at once be obvious. Oxygen is a stimulant, and is the fire by which the human machinery is kept in motion. Without it, the vital spark is instantly extinguished. We see the effects of carbonic acid by going into a deep well or mine, where it often exists so abundantly as to destroy the lives of those who enter. In such places it is known as "choke damp."

The custom of sleeping in a close room, or a room where there is little or no chance for the free ingress of pure air, and the egress of the foul air loaded with carbonic acid gas, which has been expelled from the system, is most pernicious. As respiration goes on, the oxygen of the air is constantly diminished, and the carbonic acid, mingled with it by exhalation, is increased in quantity. After a time, the air becomes so poor in oxygen that it is incapable of supporting life. At the same time the carbonic acid becomes so abundant in the air vesicles, that it prevents the escape of that which is already in the blood; and the deleterious effects of its accumulation in the circulating fluid is added to that of the diminished supply of oxygen. Hence the blood remains impure, and goes the rounds of the circulation unarterialized; the result of which is a poisoning of the nervous system, a depression of spirits, languor, general debility, impaired appetite, indigestion, eruptive diseases, or pulmonary consumption.

Many persons retire in a small bed-room, lock the door, shut the window, and there breathe over the same air a hundred times during the night, and then in the morning complain of headache! Do not be afraid of "taking cold"; throw open your windows, and, if possible, obtain a current of air through your room all night, being careful to keep the body out of the draught. No matter how sick you are, nor what the disease is; you must have a supply of pure air, or you suffer. If you are sick, so much the more you want the vitalizing gas, in order that the vital force, which is now struggling with the chemical to obtain a preponderance, may be enabled to overcome the element of death which is now gaining the ascendency.

Rooms heated by a stove should always be well ventilated, and there should be a vessel filled with water kept on the stove. Grates, or "fire-places," should be used instead of stoves in all the rooms except, for the sake of convenience, the kitchen. The air of large cities is unavoidably impure; yet it might be rendered still purer by keeping the streets cleaner, the gutters and sewers well drenched, and by removing many manufactories which are constantly emitting offensive and poisonous gases. A slaughter-house should never be allowed within the incorporation, nor where the wind will blow the stench directly to the city. It is the result of decaying animal matter which is most instrumental in producing typhoid diseases.

The purest air is to be found in the country, along the sea-shore, distant from sluggish streams, ponds, and marshes, and among the hills where vegetation is plenty. Vegetation while growing absorbs carbonic acid, and gives off oxygen, while the reverse is true of animals. Hence where vegetation is abundant, the air is rich in oxygen. This accounts, in part, for the vigor and longevity of the American Indian. Our race might profit by the example of the wild man and the brute, however humiliating it may be to us to acknowledge it.

Before concluding this article, I would notice the manner of inhaling air, and the position in which the lungs should be kept. Many people use but half their lungs. From an improper position in standing, or sitting; or from tight lacing, they acquire a habit of short breathing, of expanding the chest imperfectly, so that the air passes only half way down the lungs, and fails to reach the minute pulmonary vesicles in the lower part of the lungs. The result of this is, the air tubes, or cells, become dormant, and, as a natural result, diseased; besides, the air fails to reach a large surface of blood-vessels, which should be accomplished in order to the proper arterialization of the vital fluid. Persons should keep their form erect, the shoulders thrown back, and the clothes loose; and take long, deep, and full inspirations. It is impossible to contract consumption while the air cells are filled with air. Observe these rules, and you will avoid many disagreeable diseases, such as curved spine, pulmonary consumption, shattered nerves, etc. Many are the graves which have been filled prematurely from a violation of these simple laws of nature. Many of the cases of consumption which are so common in our land, have their origin in the negligence of persons in these seemingly trifling matters. Many a pale cheek, sunken eye, and feeble frame, result from the violation of the most simple laws of our being. Many a fortune has been squandered to restore what the observance of these regulations would have saved. Many a fortune has been made by those who furnish the material to redden the cheek, which nature would gladly color were these laws observed.

Young lady, do you wish a blooming countenance, a rosy cheek, a ruby lip, a burning eye, a clear, sweet voice, and what is more, a clear, cheerful mind? Go into the open air; climb the hill-side; stroll among the trees; sing to the squirrel; take music lessons of the robin and the lark; and when you return to your home, let pure air and bright light, your greatest adorners, come freely into your parlors; don't be afraid they will fade your carpet, or soil your piano; but rather fear that their absence will sap your vitality, and blight your mind. Observe the sickly sprout in your cellar; contrast it with the vegetation in the open world around you. Contrast your sickly caged birds with the free ones in the forest. Read carefully; ponder well; act wisely.

Bristolville, O.

AN APPEAL TO A POOR MAN TO GIVE UP TOBACCO.

SIX REASONS.

My Friend: I respectfully call on men in in all positions to drop tobacco—doctors, deacons and dandies—bishops and boys—princes and potentates—and, thanks to a gracious God, many have done it.

You say you are a poor man, and dependent on friends; hence, consider a few reasons why you should drop tobacco.

1. Drop it, for it does you no actual good. It is not a necessary of life. Any honest physician will tell you that it is a rank poison, containing not a single particle of nutrition, and that it does no more to furnish blood, bone and muscle, than would sawdust or ashes. True, it may blunt your sensibilities, and enable you to bear trouble with a more stoical indifference. It may relieve the terrible "goneness," of which you speak; but it actually creates the very "goneness" you think it cures, and deceives you. True it appeases a vile appetite, which God never gave, and affords momentary gratification. Rum and opium appease a similar appetite, and drunkards use them for this purpose.

How useless is your tobacco! Thousands now delving at the plough and anvil—thousands now preaching Christ in this and other lands, together with all the self-sacrificing reformers, the Howards, the Wilberforces of the age—do without it, and so can you. Be not deceived. You need this drug no more than you need the "seven heads and ten horns" mentioned in the Apocalypse.

2. Drop it, for you are poor, and should use every cent to the best advantage. There is no apology for any man, rich or poor, who consumes money for this nuisance; but is not this especially unbecoming in you when your friends give you money simply for the necessaries of life? Is it not a perversion of funds? The evils of tobacco, it is true, are overlooked by church and state, and hence your friends do not consider for a moment that a part of their money is wasted on a vile poison. Tell them, as they pass you the next dollar, that you shall use one-eighth of it on cigars, and they might give you to understand that, were it not for your family, they would never aid you with another farthing! Money for rum, gambling and tobacco, is all the same in the eye of common sense!

You say, your tobacco does not "cost much." What victim of the weed will allow that his tobacco does cost much?

You, my friend, have paid enough for it every year to give your wife a twenty-five cent delaine, or each of your girls a pretty bonnet, or each of your boys a pair of boots. You are about fifty years old, and I understand you to say that you began to use cigars at fifteen. Take the following calculation,—altogether too low,—and you will see that you have expended $1,383.35!

From	15	yrs. to	18—1	cigar a day, at	2	cts. each,		$21.90
"	18	"	20—2	"	2	"	......	29.20
"	20	"	25—3	"	2	"	......	164.25
"	25	"	30—4	"	3	"	......	219.00
"	30	"	35—5	"	3	"	......	273.75
"	35	"	40—5	"	3	"	......	273.75
"	40	"	45—5	"	2	"	......	182.50
"	45	"	50—4	"	3	"	......	219.00
								$1.383.35

Garibaldi, who masters kingdoms, says he can live on eight cents a day! Is it not a shame that any man should waste even eight cents a day on a loathsome poison? Is it not a sin?

3. Drop it, for it impairs your enjoyment of natural and simple food. Tobacco is acrid and pungent, and neutralizes your taste for everything else. It monopolizes tastes; and an appetite for this, like Aaron's rod, often swallows up every other. The tastes of a tobacco sot are pretty much extinct. He likes strong coffee, fiery condiments and drinks, corned beef, cayenne pepper, and cares nothing for the many pleasant forms of food so grateful to a pure palate. Chewing his cud, puffing his pipe, what does he care for delicious fruits?—for a sweet apple, a peach, a plum, a fig, an orange, or indeed for a land flowing with milk and honey? I once said to a poor man, give up your pipe, and I will give you a pair of boots. He shrugged his shoulders, and said, "No; I like my pipe—it is all my comfort." Yes, friend, I said, here is the mischief—you like it too well—better than the choice fruits of this garden, or the berries on these hills and valleys. In a guttural sound, like that of a bull-frog, he muttered, "I like my pipe better than all the berries that God ever made."

I appeal, my friend, to your selfishness. Do you wish to really enjoy a cherry, a strawberry, a potato, an egg, a tumbler of milk or honey, or the honey-comb? drop your tobacco. A rich glutton can afford to sacrifice half his luxuries on this filthy altar; but you need the full enjoyment of your meagre fare, and just in proportion as you stand clear of deadly drinks and drugs, keeping your body in subjection to the laws of God, you will be a happy man.

4. Drop it, for it wastes your bodily strength—strength you need to support yourself and family. Tobacco is a South Carolinian in the republic of your nature—forever making disturbance. It drives at your stomach, disorders digestion, diminishes appetite; and the result is, less food is received, less blood, less bone, less muscle is manufactered, and you of course are less a man. It stupefies and by turns experates your nerves, and sooner or later the nerve system ceases to energize the muscular, and the whole frame becomes relaxed and inactive. It enters the circulation, poisons and thins the blood, and insidiously assails you from head to foot, and tends to make you, like Pharaoh's monsters, lank and lean, the mere apology of what you once were.

Many paupers are made such by this process; and if you, my friend, would regain your strength, and rise in life, then drop this drug, which has had much to do in rendering your life a failure.

5. Drop it, for it tends to crush ambition, and make you satisfied with poverty. Tobacco, by enfeebling the nerve power, paralyzes the sensibilities more or less, and its victims, as a consequence, have less mental and moral power, and manly force for the battle of life. As a soporific, it deadens emotion; self satisfaction takes the place of commendable ambition, and a mind once nobly independent becomes reconciled to beggary, and passive under degradation.

Let any young man in our factories, who smokes morning, noon and night, continue to smoke, and it is a fair presumption that he will always be an understrapper—never "boss" of the factory—never build a house or a hen-coop. A recipe to manufacture our young men into paupers, which should leave tobacco out of the account, would be essentially defective.

Here is no extravagance. I have seen poor men, the victims of this drug, whom you might tread down as mire in the street, who gave it up, and in six months regaining admirable health and courage, displayed a backbone which James Buchanan might envy. "I would not go back to it again," said a poor man, "for all California."

6. Drop it, for you can do it with comparative ease—more easily than a rich and gluttonous man. The rich and gluttonous man loads his stomach with "the fat of the land," with the luxuries of every clime. "His eyes stand out with fatness"—his veins are swollen with blood; and if he must continue to be as he is, literally a stuffed animal, then his expectoration must be free; he must rid himself of an odious plethora, or probably die of an apoplectic stroke. A glutton does not drop tobacco unless he drops gluttony. He must curb appetite, rise superior to swinish indulgences, or remain an abject slave.

You have no apoplexy or paralysis to fear, because you have no gluttony to battle. You have only to drop tobacco, and, so recuperative is your nature, your juvenile tastes will soon come back, and you will enjoy your humble fare better than any smoking nabob can enjoy his gloating meats or soul-destroying wines.

A Boston Don, a gormandizer, taunted an Irishman, at work in his garden, about his black cutty pipe. The sinewy little man straightened up—"Please yer honor, jist drop yer Spanish cigar, and I'll drop my pipe." "Done," said the millionaire. The poor man dropped his pipe, and, like a man of honor, stuck to his bargain. Not so with the rich man; he continued to gormandize, and ceased to expectorate, and was soon laid upon his bed, the apparent victim of a burning fever. The doctor, on being apprized of what had passed, said, "One of two things must be done: I must reduce you by calomel to low water mark, or you must return to your tobacco. Take your choice." He took his choice—returned "as a dog to his vomit"—smoked and gluttonized, gluttonized and smoked, and died a beast, as thousands die.

I do not state this to show that an Irishman or anybody else drops tobacco without a struggle, but to show that, as you can do it with comparative ease, you are under especial obligations to do it.

My friend, I wish you well, or I could not address you as I have. Tobacco, like strong drink, is a deceiver; it deceives millions; it has deceived you, and is the bane of your life. I hope you are no coward—that you have courage enough to look at your nearest neighbor—Tobacco—in the face, and to sacrifice this monster at once, and show yourself a man, by signing this Pledge:

"I hereby pledge myself to abstain from the use of tobacco in all forms, totally and forever."

Your friend, Geo. Trask.

MORNING DAWNS.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Watchmen, tell me, does the morning
Of fair Zion's glory dawn?
Have the signs that mark its coming,
Yet upon my pathway shone?
Pilgrim, yes; arise! look round thee!
Light is breaking in the skies;
Gird thy bridal robe around thee,
Morning dawns; arise! arise!

Watchman, has the tribulation
Of the cruel "man of sin"
Ceased his bloody persecution,
Will it not return again?
Pilgrim, no; his times have ended;
Never shall the monster reign;
"Tekel" on his brow is written—
Soon he will consume in flame.

Watchmen, were there signs attending
At the ending of the time?
With the closing moments pending,
Did the sun refuse to shine?
Pilgrim, yes; the sun was shrouded
In a veil of gloom that day;
Nature was in darkness clouded
On that nineteenth day of May!

Watchman, see! the light is beaming
Brighter still upon thy way;
Signs through all the earth are gleaming,
Omens of the coming day,
When the jubal trumpet, sounding,
Shall awake from land and sea
All the saints of God now sleeping,
Clad in immortality.

Watchman, hail the light ascending
Of the grand Sabbatic year;
All with voices loud portending
Of "the King of glory" near.
Pilgrim, yes; I see just yonder,
Canaan's glorious heights arise;
Salem, too, appears in grandeur,
Towering 'neath its placid skies.

Watchman, in that "holy city,"
Seated on his jasper throne,
Zion's King, enthroned in beauty,
Reigns in peace from zone to zone.
There on sun-lit hills and mountains
Golden beams serenely glow,
Pearly streams and crystal fountains—
By their side sweet flowrets grow.

Watchman, see! the land is nearing,
With its vernal fruits and flowers;
Oh! dear pilgrim, oh! how cheering,
Blooms eternal Eden's bowers.
Hark? the choral strains there ringing,
Wafted on the balmy air;
Soon the ransomed will be singing,
And the pure in heart be there.

THE SABBATH.

DEAR BROTHER:—As I have read several articles in your most excellent paper on the Sabbath, please allow me to say a few things on the subject.

FIRST. Christians are either bound to keep the Sabbath day, or they are not. If they are, let us see what the nature of that observance is, which was prescribed for the Sabbath day. The law reads:

Ex. 20: 8–11, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it."

Now in this command, we can see that God positively forbids all manner of work, or labor, on this day;—son, daughter, servant, cattle, stranger, are commanded to be exempted from all manner of work. On examining the particular precepts originating from this law, as recorded in the Old Testament, we find the following specifications:

First, Ex. 35: 2–7, "Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh day there shall be to you an holy day, a Sabbath of rest to the Lord; whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death. Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the Sabbath day."

SECOND. Ex. 16: 23–29, "And He said unto them, This is that which the Lord hath said, To-morrow is the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord; bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seethe; and that which remaineth over lay up for you to be kept until the morning. And they laid it up till the morning, as Moses bade; and it did not stink, neither was there any worm therein. And Moses said, Eat that to-day; for to-day is a Sabbath unto the Lord; to-day ye shall not find it in the field. Six days ye shall gather it, but on the seventh day, which is the Sabbath, in it there shall be none. . . . And the Lord said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? See, for that the Lord hath given you the Sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place; let no man go out of his place on the seventh day."

THIRD. Jer. 17: 21, 22, "Thus saith the Lord; Take heed to yourselves, and bare no burden on the Sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem. Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the Sabbath day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the Sabbath day, as I commanded your fathers."

FOURTH. Isa. 58: 13, "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable; and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words."

FIFTH. Lev. 23: 32, "It shall be unto you a Sabbath of rest, and ye shall afflict your souls; in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even, shall ye celebrate your Sabbath."

SIXTH. Ex. 31: 14, 15, "Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you; every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death; for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. Six days may work be done, but in the seventh is the Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord; whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death."

SEVENTH. Num. 15: 32–36, "And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man that gathered sticks upon the Sabbath day. And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation; and they put him in ward, because it was not declared what should be done with him. And the Lord said unto Moses, the man shall be surely put to death; all the congregation shall stone him with stones without the camp. And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the Lord commanded Moses."

These passages are a few of many that might be selected out of the Old Testament on this subject. I believe them to be a fair specimen of the law given by Moses, as explained and enforced upon the nation of Israel. Now the question is, are we under this law? If we are, we pay little or no respect to it; for the whole world, professing and non-professing, are habitually violating the law enjoined for the observance of this day; for those that make the most ado about Sabbath-breaking are themselves, according to the law just read, worthy of death. They kindle fire in their houses; they go out of their houses and do a great many things; their sons and their daughters do some kinds of work; they bring in burdens of water and wood, and prepare food; they celebrate it not "from even unto even," but from morning to evening they violate it. They speak their own words, and do many things worthy of death. Why, then, is not the penalty enforced? Assuredly their observance of this law is mere mockery; it is an insult on the Lawgiver. We know that some of the clergy have given, yea, sold indulgences, to violate it. They have told them that certain works of necessity were allowable; they tell them they may prepare food, bring in fuel and water; but God forbade those under this law to do so. So far was he from countenancing such works of necessity, that he wrought three miracles to prevent the necessity of doing a work of necessity; he sent two days' portion of manna from heaven the sixth day; the seventh he sent none; he preserved that gathered on the sixth from putrefaction till the close of the seventh; all of which were special miracles for the space of forty years. If he wrought three miracles to prevent an Israelite from crossing his threshold to gather up a little manna for his daily food, how dare any give allowance, in his name, to do that which is a great deal harder to accomplish. Because the Savior of the world put those to silence, who accused him of breaking the Sabbath, by appealing to their own consciences, and conduct in relieving animals in distress, this doctrine of works of necessity and mercy has been represented as of divine origin. What a perversion. But such a perversion shows great inattention to the laws of Israel. While Israel kept the law, there never would occur an opportunity for a work of necessity, or of mercy, such as those lawgivers tolerate, for while they kept the law, they were blessed in their baskets, stores, fields, houses, children, flocks, herds,—no ox would fall into a pit. If they transgressed the law, they should be cursed in all these respects, and no toleration of a violation of the law was granted as a means of mitigating the curse.

Again. Let me ask, was there ever a law published relaxing that rigid observance of rest enjoined on the Sabbath? was there a law published saying you must, or you may, observe the Sabbath with less care, with less respect; you may now speak your own words, kindle fire in your houses, and prepare victuals, etc.? I say was there ever such a law published? No, indeed. Either the law remains in all its force, to the utmost extent of its literal requirements, or it is passed away with the Jewish ceremonies. If it yet exists, let us observe it according to law; and if it does not exist, let us abandon a mock observance of another for it. But some say "it was changed from the seventh to the first day." Where? when? and by what authority? No man can tell. No, it never was changed, nor could it be, unless creation was to be repeated; for the reason assigned must be changed, before the observance, or respect to the reason, can be changed.

But was not the Sabbath given to the Jews? And again, was it not a shadow, or type? Let us examine the preface to the law of which it was a part. Says Ex. 20: 2, "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage;" therefore remember the Sabbath day. The preface to this law, as the inscription or address upon a letter, shows whose property it is. It was the property of the Jews, and Moses tells them in Deut. 5: 15, "And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence, through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm; therefore (for this reason) the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." Also Ezekiel 20: 12, "Moreover also, I gave them my Sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them."

Said the Lord by Moses, Ex. 31: 17, "It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested and was refreshed." And I am happy to say, that of all the crimes in the long black catalogue of sins specified against the Gentiles, in the New Testament, the sin of Sabbath-breaking is never once preferred against them. I conclude, then, that the Sabbath day, was as exclusively the property of the Jews, as was circumcision. "Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbaths; which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."—Col. 2: 16, 17. Paul says it was a shadow. In the epistle to the Hebrews, fourth chapter, he makes it and Canaan types of that rest that remains for the people of God. The Sabbath, then, was a shadow,—a type given to the Jews only. The whole of the law of Moses being abrogated by Christ, (Col. 2: 14.) "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross."

Christians are under no obligations to observe any of the Jewish holy days, not even the seventh day Sabbath. Wherefore, if any teacher made the observance of the seventh day a necessary duty, the Colossians were to resist him. Though the brethren in the first age paid no regard to the Jewish seventh day Sabbath, they set apart the first day of the week for public worship, and for commemorating the death and resurrection of their Master, by eating his supper on that day; also, for private exercises of devotion. This they did, either by the precept or example of the apostles, and not by virtue of any injunction in the law of Moses; besides, they did not sanctify the first day of the week, in the Jewish manners, by a total abstinence from bodily labor of every kind.

The Sabbath was by the Lord of the Sabbath set aside, as well as the other laws of Moses, Col. 2: 14. It is evident that the law of Moses, in all its parts, is now abolished and taken away; consequently christians are under no obligations to obey even the moral precepts of that law, on account of being delivered by Moses to the Jews; for if the obligations of the moral of his law are still continued, mankind are still under its curse. I would just observe here, that the Lord Jesus Christ observed the last Sabbath that was obligatory on any of the human race, by lying in the grave from evening to evening, in the silence of death. He celebrated it literally, not going out of his place until the Sabbath was past, the Jewish religion being consummated, he rises and becomes the beginning of the new creation. Christians, by apostolic example, which to them is the same as precept, are, in honor of the commencement of the new creation, constrained by Christ's authority and grace to meet on the first day of the week, to show forth his death and commemorate his resurrection till he comes. And when assembled, they should be instructed, and admonish one another, and so much the more as they see the day approaching; and should continue steadfast in the apostle's doctrine, in breaking bread, in fellowship, and in prayer and praise to God. Such was the practice of the primitive church, as the apostles demonstrate.

If christians were to keep in their houses from morning to evening, and celebrate this day as the Jews did the Sabbath, instead of honoring they would be dishonoring Christ. No two days are more unlike in their import and design than the Sabbath and the first day. The former was to Israel a memorial that they were once slaves in Egypt; the latter assures us that the year of release has come. The former looked back, with mournful aspect, to the toils and sorrows entailed upon the human family, from an evil incident, to the old creation; the latter looks forward, with an eye beaming with hope, to perpetual exemption from toil, and pain, and sorrows. The Sabbath was a day of self-denial and profound religious gloom; the resurrection day is one of triumph, of holy joy and religious festivity. The Jew, on a Sabbath morn, from his casement, surveyed the smokeless chimneys and the bolted doors of the silent tribes of Israel. A solemn stillness holds the streets of the city and the hamlet; and not a vagrant foot disturbs the grassy fields. The flowers breathe forth their fragrance to the gentle breeze; no hand plucks the blooming rose, no ear is charmed with the mellifluous notes of the tenants of the groves; the banks of the limpid streams are not frequented by the noisy youth, nor does their clamor mingle with the murmurs of the vocal rills.

The christian welcomes the dawn of the triumphant morn. The new heavens and new earth open to his future view; the incorruptible and immortal saints, rising from their graves, in all the vigor and beauty of youth, fill his soul with unutterable admiration of the wondrous victory of the all-conquering Chief. He forgets the infirmities of the flesh; his mind soars on the pinions of faith and hope to the resurrection morn, and he is lost in the contemplation of the indescribable glories of immortality. His eye ultimately fixes on the firstborn of many brethren, while he adores him who is to be the head of the innumerable host of ransomed ones. Dear reader, what a difference between the Jewish Sabbath and this day of triumph. On this day Messiah entered Jerusalem as son of David, as King of Judea. On this day he rose from the dead; on this day, after his resurrection, he generally met with his disciples in their assemblies; on this day he sent the Holy Spirit down from heaven and erected the first christian church; on this day the disciples came together to break bread; on this day the christians joined in the fellowship of the saints, or in making contribution for the saints; and on this day the Spirit finished its revelation on the isle of Patmos, in giving to John, the beloved, the last secrets of the divine plan, ever to be uttered in human language, while time lasts. If no authoritative precedent enforced the assembling of saints on this day, and the observance of the order of the Lord's house, the very circumstance of such a coincidence of glorious wonders would point it out as the Lord's day; and love to him, the most powerful principle that ever impelled to action, would constrain all saints not to forsake the assembling of themselves together on this day, but to meet to animate, and to be animated; to remember, to admire, to adore, and to sing songs divine to the glorious and mighty King.

For the World's Crisis.

O, WILL HE COME?

O, will he come, my Savior dear,
And coming, come to bless?
O, does the day begin to dawn,
Sweet day of promised rest?

O, will he come, and come so soon
As signs seem now to show?
Is sweet release so near at hand?
O, tell me, is it so?

O, can it be such hope's for us
In this hard, trying hour?
Will it not fail, as oft before,
When hope seemed almost sure?

O hope, sweet hope, thou hast not failed,
But borne us on our way.
And wilt, we're sure, still buoy us on,
Till night shall end in day.

Then come, O come, my Savior, come,
For now we sigh to rest
From toils and trials here in time,
And long thy joys to taste.

We bless thee for this sweet, sweet hope,
Which cannot ever fail;
'Tis like an anchor to the soul,
Secure within the vail.

So. Wilbraham, Mass. D. D. CHAFFEE.

SIGNS OF THE PRESENT TIME.

List, ye mortals! hear the sound
That calls you to prepare;
Hear creation groaning round,
In sighs of deep despair.
See the nations in distress;
Monarchs look with anxious eye,
Of all their hopes they are bereft—
O haste! the judgment's nigh.

Dear reader, there are signs in the east, "Ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" (Matt. 16: 3.) These words savor of reproof. They were spoken by our Savior to the teachers of Israel, the wise and popular of that time, who paid tithes of mint, anise and cummin, and kept the tradition of the elders; but still he reproves them, and why? because they "discern not the signs of the times." The sick were healed, the dumb spake, the lame walked, and the dead were raised to life, in their presence, and yet they ask a sign. The red evening sky was a sign to them of fair weather; but these great wonders performed by Him who spake as never man spake, were no signs. Oh! when will carnal man know his own heart? Thus the Savior answers them: "O, ye hypocrites! ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the times?"

But doubtless the most important sign was the exact fulfillment of the time predicted for the Savior's appearance as the Messiah, as it is written, (Mark 14: 15.) "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, saying, the time is fulfilled." But what time was fulfilled? We answer, the time predicted by the prophet. . . . Thus the blessed Jesus preached his first sermon on the fulfillment of the time, and thus was it exactly accomplished. But who knew it? Not the masses of the Jewish church. They discarded the signs, they knew not their time, they rejected their Lord, and were rejected themselves.

And now, dear reader, let us learn wisdom from their mistakes. As there was a first Advent of the Savior there is also to be a second. And as there were signs of his first Advent, there are also to be signs of his second coming in power and glory. But oh! how severely the Savior denounced that wicked city, Jerusalem, because she knew not her day, nor the things that belonged to her peace. He said [Luke 19: 41–44,) that her enemies should entrench her, should lay her even with the ground and should not leave in her one stone upon another, and should destroy her children within her. And why? His answer is "Because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." And, although the definite time may not be known, yet we learn from this, the indispensable duty of watching. But reader, do you examine the prophets! They spake of things past, present and future. Let us try, (Dan. 7: 25.) "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws, etc." Writers of prophecy generally agree that reference is here had to the Papacy, and indeed that is the only power which has made such daring presumption against the Most High. He best answers the description in the prophecy by the great pretensions to the divine power, by the wearing out of the saints, and by attempt to change the times and laws of the Most High, he has been like unto no other power on earth. But let us read the next verse: "But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion to consume and to destroy it unto the end." And even now we see the scattered power, the crumbling throne, and the waning influence of the Papacy. These things loudly proclaim the nearness of the approaching end, when the body of the beast shall be given to the burning flame (Dan. 7: 11,) and the glorious fulfillment of the following 27th verse shall take place: "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

The decline of the Pope's temporal power, at this time proclaims the end emphatically near; yet, that people may believe when they read, we have line upon line, and precept upon precept; but let us hear the premonitions of our blessed Lord. After speaking of the famines, pestilences, earthquakes, wars, and persecutions, he says, (Luke, 21: 25;) "And upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity." These words plainly indicate an unusual distress and perplexity among the nations, and, dear reader, we do not wish to predict, but rather to look at the present pictures now presented by the so-called civilized nations. You have no doubt asked in your own mind, what all these turmoils mean? For what a picture of anarchy, of rebellion, and of massacres the world now presents, unequalled within the annals covered by the pages of history. Our own beloved land is not alone in its trouble; the most important countries in Europe, Asia and South America, are now sharing in the rebellions, massacres, and civil wars of the times. Says a Boston journal: "The world is one vast camp, and the military power predominates." Indeed, hath not God a controversy with the nations? And from what follows in this prophecy may we not expect soon to see the blessed Lord coming in a cloud with power and great glory, for he says, (Luke 21: 28,) "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

And it seems that the great apostle to the Gentiles, the beloved Paul, saw our day when he says, (1st Tim., 4: 1; "Now the spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils [demons."] This departure from the faith, which was to come in the last time according to the never-erring spirit is now very apparent. No personal coming of the Lord, no resurrection of the dead, no day of judgment, no punishment for the wicked, are doctrines of devils [demons] received and taught by those who give heed to seducing spirits or spiritual mediums.

Again, saith John, (Rev. 16: 13; "I saw three unclean spirits, like frogs, come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet, for they are the spirits of devils [demons,] working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. 'Behold, I come as a thief,' saith the Lord." These spirits are represented as going forth under the sixth vial of wrath, a period to which the world has evidently come, according to many learned writers on prophecy; and, indeed the world seems filled with spiritual manifestations and doctrines of demons; Europe, Asia, Africa, and America are alike infested with them, and all these anti-christian doctrines loudly proclaim the coming of the true Christ.

Hence considering the decline of anti-Christ, the waning of Mohammedanism, the prevalence of the doctrines of demons (Spiritualism,] and the very remarkable perplexity and commotions among the nations, we can but hope soon to see the King in his beauty.

"They that love his appearing are to receive a crown of righteousness." (2d Tim. 4: 8.) Reader, do you love his appearing? Is the prospect sweet to you? "They that look for him are to inherit salvation."—Heb. 9: 28.) Reader, are you looking for him? "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him, and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him, Amen! even so come, Lord Jesus, and rescue thy weary bride."

But ah, dear reader, the Judge is at the door! Prove thine own self—search thine heart. Art thou ready to settle accounts with thy Judge? Hast thou given thy heart to Christ? Art thou reconciled to God? Are thy sins forgiven? Think not these questions are for thy friend, thy brother, or thy neighbor, but for thyself. Canst thou abide the day of his coming?

Mark, the signs have all passed by
That calls you to prepare;
Soon you'll see with your own eye
The Lord of lords appear.
Come, then, lay your scoffing by,
Ere the day of mercy's past,
And you in horror stand and say,
I'm doomed to die at last.

For the World's Crisis.

THE 1335 DAYS—THEIR BEGINNING IN 533, AND END IN 1868.

It is a conceded point that the 1335 days begin at the time the Papal abomination, that maketh desolate," was "SET UP," and reach to the resurrection, when Daniel, who is now resting in the grave, shall "stand in his lot;" and as Daniel's resurrection, with that of all the righteous dead, depends upon the coming of Christ, this measurement terminates at the appearing of Christ; hence, the only point to be settled, as a prerequisite to finding the end of this prophetic measurement, is to find the time of the setting up of this Papal "abomination." This is easily determined, for inspiration has driven a stake in A. D. 534, on the other side of which this Papal government of "abomination" was to be "set up," or developed as a warlike and persecuting power. In the seventh chapter of Daniel, this same power is brought to view as rising after the "fourth kingdom" of universal sway should be divided into "ten" parts, and early enough to "pluck up three" of those ten divisions; and it is certain that this work of plucking up began as early as A. D. 534, and therefore it is equally as certain that the power that should do this work must come into existence before it could do the work; as it would be impossible for any power to do a certain work before it had an existence as a power. So it would be utterly impossible to have three of the Roman horns "plucked up" by the Papal horn till after the Papal horn came into existence.

Now, as this work which the Papal power was to do, began to be done as early as A. D. 534, it is positive proof that the Papal power came into existence prior to 534. The "Vandals" were "plucked up" in 533 or 4, according to Gibbon and other historians, and the beginning of the plucking up of the Ostrogoths was about the same time, being completed A. D. 538.

In the year 533, the "man of sin" was proclaimed "head of all the holy churches," and constituted "corrector of heretics," thus the saints were given into his hand in 533, which fact recognizes A. D. 533 as the epoch of the setting up of the Papal "abomination that maketh desolate," from which epoch the 1335 prophetic days measure to 1868, as the time at which Daniel, who is now dead, shall stand in his lot, by virtue of a deliverance from death's embrace, by a resurrection to immortal life.

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day!"

"At the end of the days" this promise must be verified. Can we not believe it? Have we not fairly fixed the starting point of this measurement, which brings the termination in 1868? Is not the starting point indicated by inspiration, and recorded in history? And is not the evidence strong that this is the prophetic location of this measurement? Is not time put into the Bible on purpose to be believed in "the time of the end," in which we are far advanced? Is it not time to understand it?

"PROMISE OF THE FATHER."

NUMBER TWO.

The word preach now claims our attention, and the different meaning of words, at different times and places, applies to this. When we talk about preaching, at the present day, the idea is conveyed to the mind that we mean to go into a desk or pulpit, take a text, deliver a sort of oration, read an essay, or give an exposition of the meaning of the "word of the Lord." This is the general impression; but Dr. Francis Wayland, moral professor in Brown University, gives us a different idea. He says: "I think the generic idea of preaching the gospel, in the New Testament, is to proclaim to every creature the love of God to man through Christ Jesus. This is the main idea. To this our Lord adds this explanation, according to the Evangelists,—'Teaching them to observe whatsoever I have commanded you.'" And he adds further, which is worthy of note: "A discourse is not preached because it is spoken from a pulpit, or appended to a text. Nothing is I think properly preaching, except explaining the teachings, and enforcing the commands of Jesus and his apostles. The command was, Go preach everywhere, proclaim to every creature the news of redemption; tell them of the love of God in Christ Jesus." He cites the Bible incident of the bitten Israelites looking upon the fiery serpent, and says, "Every one, male or female, became a publisher of the salvation; in other words, a preacher." Sister Palmer asks on this point, "Think you that woman would have been less tardy on this point than her newly recovered brethren? or less energetic, or less persuasive, in her efforts to induce other wounded ones to be healed?" We think that, if differing in any respect, she was even more ardent and energetic than they; certainly she was at the Savior's cross and tomb, to moan his death, and publish the glad news of his resurrection.

This, then, is the very simple meaning of preach. It is but a synonym for prophesy; though what is called preaching is often far enough from properly exposing the true meaning of the word, or speaking under the influence of the Spirit. So the popular idea, that it is necessary to enter a desk, take a text, and, as is the practice, deducing a topic from the text, and declaiming from the topic, not from the text, is erroneous. The only record of a pulpit in the Bible is in the account of the reformation under Ezra, when he stood on a pulpit of wood (margin—tower of wood), and then he took no text, but "day by day," for "seven days," he read in the book of the law of the Lord, gave the sense, and caused the people to understand the reading. Neh. 8: 4–8. The practice of "taking a text" is an innovation, an invention of some who lived long since the apostles' age. It seems plain enough that one can as really "preach," or "prophesy," out of a pulpit as in. And what is there extra about "taking a desk," or "pulpit," to declare the word of the Lord? It is a convenience, but not a necessity; and often, the taking of a text is a violation of the word, because the text is wrested from its connections and used in a fanciful and accommodated sense. Of this interesting illustrations might be given.

It appears clear that it takes the whole church to preach the gospel; that the spirit of prophecy is imparted to all who are in the "secret of the Lord," and are really his "servants and handmaids." There is an equality, and no diversity in the Spirit and its influence, except as it affects different temperaments and gifts differently. Take the use of the work of prophesying, as we have considered it, as the result of the outpouring of the Spirit, and then turn to 1 Cor. 12: 4, and read;—"Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit." Vers. 6, 7;—"And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all; but the manifestation of the Spirit (to prove its work to be genuine) is given to every man to profit withal." Now refer to Rom. 12: 6, 7, and 1 Cor. 12: 28, and read: "Having then gifts differing"—how? "according to" sex? No, but—"according to the grace that is given to us; whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth (Greek, parakaleon) on exhortation." "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities (mar., division) of tongues." Read all these, and see how plainly the Lord teaches that the difference is individual, not in the sex or nation.

It may be objected against woman's position in the church, that some orders are mentioned in the N. T. that were composed entirely of men; that there were no women among the apostles, etc. Paul has just told us that apostles are the highest order, even above the prophets, and they were selected by Jesus, calling them personally, before the outpouring of the Spirit, when the members of the church were differently affected, according to the gifts, and so are exempt from the influence of the promise, as their position was an office by particular nomination and appointment, and does not interfere in the least with the promise that the "daughters," as well as the "sons," were to prophesy when the time for the fulfillment of the "promise of the Father" should fully come.

Again, it is objected that the apostle says (1 Cor. 14: 3, 4), "Let your women keep silence in the churches," as though that decided the matter. Now, if that is a valid objection, then Paul at one moment gives directions as to how a woman shall be adorned when she speaks in the church, and in the same letter says she must not speak; so he contradicts himself, or he means that there are times when she may speak, and times when she may not, regulated by circumstances, and the very nature of this caution shows plainly enough that the latter is the correct view of the subject; and that it cannot refer to her work when prophesying.

Sister Palmer has some sensible remarks on this point. She says: "The apostle has been treating of the gift of tongues, and of persons prophesying one after another. It is evident that in these public assemblies there were different nations, as on the day of pentecost; and that one minister had the gift of one tongue, and a second of another, as they had the other gifts. That all had not the universal knowledge of tongues is evident from Paul's words, 1 Cor. 14: 18;—'I speak with tongues more than ye all.' How reasonable is it, then, to suppose that there were a few inquisitive women, who, not understanding what was said, but prompted by curiosity, perhaps by a better motive, might ask questions to the interruption of the speaker and the auditory; therefore, the apostle gives the admonition, 'Let your women (i. e., wives) keep silence in the churches, . . . and if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home'; which shows that the prohibition was confined to asking questions, and was not general; at least the silence here enjoined was not intended to prohibit pious females from instructing and comforting the Corinthian church; when he had already given them directions respecting their adorning, when thus employed."

Her argument is reasonable. Notice the apostle's expression,—"If they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home." If they would "ask," it was to "learn" what they did not already know, and so could not be prophesying, which is exactly opposite to asking; it is instructing, or rather telling, by the help of God's Spirit; and so they made "confusion," and hence were not in God's order, for "God is not the author of confusion (mar.—tumult or unquietness), but of peace." How reasonable that he should endeavor to show them that their practice was displeasing to God.

A third objection is argued from 1 Tim. 2: 12. "I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence." This is taken as conclusive evidence that she must not "prophesy." Let us notice the grammatical construction of the passage. "Teach" is a transitive verb, in the active voice. What is its "object"? One of the simplest rules for disposing of a verb in a sentence is to supply the ellipsis, making the nearest object fill the place, when it can be done without violence to the sense. It can be done in this text. It would then read, "I suffer not a woman to teach the man, or to usurp authority over the man." Verse 13th is proof,—"For Adam was first formed, then Eve." So the whole direction refers to the relation of the man and woman to each other, and not to their work in the church. A woman can acknowledge and respect the will of God, in making the man her head, when she prophesies, as much as when she is engaged in domestic affairs. Dr. Taft translates the text, "I suffer not a woman to teach by usurping authority over the man"; which gives the same sense; for if she teaches the man by dogmatically dictating, it is usurping authority over him; and the common translation is plain enough to show that fact, except to those who do not believe in public female efforts, and wish to make the Bible agree with them.

Dr. Taft's remarks on this point are clear and forcible. He says: "Most persons, opposed to the praying or prophesying of females, understand from this passage that no woman is to teach, and that all teaching by women is usurping authority over the man; but this grants too much, and involves the following difficulties: No woman can then teach school, nor teach her children, nor write books, nor do any thing that puts her in the position of an instructor, not even to prophesy, though the word should refer only to future events." It is plain enough, as the word prophesy is used expressive of her work, she must at least do that and so occupy a public position. But the position of objectors does not allow it. They should remember that the word "teach" is generic, and can be properly referred by Dr. Taft to all the specific cases he enumerates, and more; for the broad sense, that she is to learn in silence with all subjection, is so broad, that she could never express even an opinion, which cannot be the mind of the Spirit; for if she can prophesy, she can teach to any extent, i. e., in the church, and at the same time not "teach" her husband, by usurping authority over him.

The efforts made to sustain the negative by quoting this passage and others to which we have referred, are sufficient evidence of the weakness of the position; for, certainly, the word is plain enough to show that to all christians there is a common interest in the benefits and duties vouchsafed and enjoined by the gospel.

THE YEAR OF MESSIAH'S BIRTH.

Can we find the precise year of Messiah's birth? I think we can. This is a point of deep interest to the student of prophecy at present, because God's word gives us a measurement of sixty-nine weeks of years, or 483 years, reaching from a specific "commandment to restore and build Jerusalem" (Dan. 9: 25), "unto Messiah," "which being interpreted is the Christ," who was recognized as Messiah, or Christ, not at his baptism, but at his birth; for the angel, at that epoch, affirmed, "Unto you is BORN this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which IS CHRIST," not which shall be Christ, but "which is Christ." Now if we can definitely fix upon the precise year of Messiah's birth, we shall have a measurement of 483 years, which we can trace back to Cyrus; for Jehovah "saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure, even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built" (Isa. 44: 28), and in the "first year of Cyrus," "the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus" to issue the commandment (Ezra 1: 1); thus we shall have inspired chronology, from Cyrus to Christ, that will be invulnerable.

But to the question: In what year was Christ born? The following facts claim attention:—1st. Christ was born before Herod's death, for he "sought the young child's life"; and the death of Herod was marked by an eclipse, which astronomical computation locates B. C. 4. Sometime previously Christ was born, probably B. C. 5; but we want something stronger than a probability. Let us look more closely from another stand-point.

2nd. When Christ was about thirty years of age, he was baptized by John, "in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar," (Luke 3: 1–3, 23). This Tiberius reigned "two years," in consort with Augustus Cæsar, and the death of Augustus was marked by an eclipse of the moon, which is astronomically assigned to A. D. 14; and consequently the reign of Tiberius began A. D. 12; hence "the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar" is identical with A. D. 26, in which year Christ was thirty years old. Now measure backward thirty years, from A. D. 26, and we reach B. C. 5, as the time when Christ was born. This places the matter on a firm basis. It will avail nothing to say that perhaps the fifteenth of Tiberius' independent reign is meant, for we have shown that Christ was born prior to Herod's death, B. C. 4, and therefore Christ would have been 32 instead of 30 in Tiberius' fifteenth year, if reckoned from Augustus' death. So there is no possible escape from the conclusion that Messiah's birth was B. C. 5. This being the case, B. C. 488 is the true date for the "going forth of the commandment," in the "first of Cyrus." This is Heaven's chronology. On this chronology we base our starting point for the 2300 days. WM. SHELDON.

GOOD NEWS FROM MISSOURI.

BRO. GRANT:—I now hasten to give you a report of a meeting commenced here on Christmas eve, by the writer, to continue through the holidays; but owing to the success of the Lord's cause, we continued it till the 8th inst., Lord's day evening. The meeting was commenced under very unfavorable circumstances, as there was no organized congregation here, and owing to our non-resistant principles, (which we have preached openly), as well as the general opposition of the world to the Bible doctrine of the immediate coming of Christ, it was commonly reported that we would not be allowed to preach; but as we were "bold in the Lord," and "not fearing what man could do unto us," we commenced our meeting and concluded it without any disturbance. Our lectures were well attended, and as they were illustrated by the "Great Symbolic Chart" of Bro. Himes, there was a great interest manifested, which resulted in twelve confessing their Savior and obeying him in baptism. We organized in the early part of our meeting with fourteen members, which increased during the meeting to forty. To the Lord be all the glory. The weather was fine for the season, and the Lord blessed us with his presence. Glory to his name.

The tracts you sent came just at the right time, and were gladly received by the congregation; and I trust will, with God's blessing, do a mighty work. Many are reading that have heretofore been but little interested in the Bible. I am the only Advent preacher in this region; and there is a mighty work to do here; and, as I am teaching school now, I cannot do much. Can we have some help? Where are all our traveling brethren? If you would come this way you would be joyfully received. Come, brethren, to the help of the Lord. Truly we are living in the last days, and it behooves us to gird on our armor and go forth to meet the hosts of Satan, who are up in battle array, and stealthily capturing many an unwary soul. Brethren, pray for us, that we continue faithful, and with all of God's dear children be preserved blameless until the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Your brother, looking for the speedy coming of Christ. D. M. KINTER.

THE BLESSED HOPE.

TITUS 2: 13.—"Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ."

Some affirm that the "blessed hope" referred to, is "the appearing of Jesus Christ." That such is not the hope of the text, the context fully shows. It reads as follows: "For the grace of God that bringeth SALVATION, hath appeared, . . . teaching us, . . . looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing," etc. It is evident that the "blessed hope" of the text, is the hope of salvation." Paul so speaks of it in 1 Thess. 5: 8—"And for an helmet, the hope of salvation." The word "salvation" not only signifies deliverance, but often signifies life; and is then used interchangeably, as follows: 1 John 5: 11—"And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." Heb. 5: 9—"And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation, unto all them that obey him." Titus 1: 2—"In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began." Titus 2: 13—"Looking for that blessed hope, (of salvation) and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ." "Wherefore, gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."—1 Pet. 1: 13.

THE CHRONOLOGICAL DISCUSSION.

The chronological discussion in Boston, held Jan. 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th, between Brn. Wm. C. Thurman, Buchanan, Mich., author of the "Sealed Book of Daniel Opened," and John Stevenson, Toronto, C. W., who has prepared a very extensive Chronological Chart, was attended with much interest and profit. Few, probably, are better prepared to speak on the subject of Chronology than these two brethren. Both have devoted several years to the study of this subject. A large and intelligent audience was present, and manifested a deep interest. Many came a long distance for the purpose of listening to the discussion.

The debate was conducted with a kind spirit, that added much to the pleasure of those who listened. It was a feast to those who love to investigate the chronology of the Bible. It appears very evident, from the examination, that we are near the end of the present dispensation.

We see light and harmony now, where before we saw only obscurity. It was very clearly shown that Ptolemy's canon, on which our chronology has been based, cannot be harmonized with the Bible; but when Ptolemy's errors are corrected, all seems to be harmonious. We think it was made quite plain that the only "commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," given in harmony with the Bible, was the one issued by Cyrus, which, according to Ptolemy's canon, was about B. C. 536; whereas the Bible will not allow but 69 weeks, 488 years between the commandment and our A. D. 1, or 483 years to the true birth of Christ, about B. C. 5, which is in harmony with the chronological arrangement of Bro. Thurman.

At the close of the discussion, on Friday evening, the following resolutions were presented to the audience, and adopted:—

1. Resolved, That during the discussion on on the merits of the Canon of Ptolemy, and on the prophetic times involved in it, between Messrs. J. Stevenson of Toronto, C. W., and W. C. Thurman of Buchanan, Mich., we have been highly pleased with the earnest spirit and excellent pleasant temper of the parties, as we have been interested in their arguments.

2. Resolved, That, for their self-denying efforts to offer their views of Bible truth to the public, in their several ways, and on this particular occasion, they deserve the regards of this audience and of their friends, and they have our thanks.

3. Resolved, That, while we have been entertained and instructed, yet the difficulties of reporting the discussion, with the constant allusion made to charts and diagrams, and of its contemplated publication, are such as to render the effort inexpedient.

4. Resolved, That many of their arguments, historical and chronological facts, and other suggestions, might still be given to a larger public, and in a form better in some respects for examination, by communications from the parties through papers devoted to these and kindred topics.

5. Resolved, That the thanks of the audience are due to the Chairman, Eld. J. V. Himes, for the efforts he has made to secure and arrange this discussion, and for the impartial manner and christian spirit in which he has presided over the deliberations of these meetings.

THE TIME QUESTION.

We are glad to see so many candid minds interested in the subject of the time of our Lord's return, and wonder that there are not more. It needs no argument to prove that when we love an event, we love the time connected with it; or, in other words, we are ever anxious to inquire how soon the desired object may be gained. Indifference as to the time of an event is strong evidence that we are not interested in the event itself.

It is a settled fact that all true christians love the Savior; and also, by consequence, long to see him. John the Revelator expressed the real feelings of the true disciples of Jesus, when he said, "Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus." He was anxious to have him "come quickly." When we love a friend, we long to be with him, and feel interested in all evidences that show we may look for a speedy visit from the loved one. We think no one can truly love Jesus and be indifferent about the evidences of his return. Says Paul, "There is laid for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4: 8. In this passage the case is very plainly stated; and we cannot avoid the inference that there is no "crown" for any who do not love the appearing of our Savior. For the idea of being a bride, and not loving the bridegroom, is revolting,—is proof that the bride has placed her affections on something else, and hence does not care to see him. Such an one would not be anxious to know how soon the one she did not love was coming to visit her. She would not wish to hear anything about the matter, only to get evidence that he was not coming at all. Is not this the condition of the great mass of professed christians in relation to the coming of Christ? Is it a safe position? Would you, dear reader, like to be found in such a position when Jesus comes? Are you now in that condition? or, can you say, "Come quickly," as every true member of the bride would say? If in the latter condition of mind, then you will be comforted when any additional light appears to show that our dear Redeemer is soon coming.

We are not a little surprised to find many who profess to love the appearing of our Lord, and who say they believe he is coming very soon, manifest so little interest in the examination of the evidence based on the prophetic periods. In the language of Bro. H. Pratt, we would say:—

"While I regret to see some endorsing, or embracing the time without fully understanding the argument upon which it is based, I am much more saddened to see others, who are capable of investigating this subject, glorying in their professed ignorance of the termination of the prophetic periods."

We think there is much danger now, after past mistakes and failures, of being too cautious; or of trying to save a reputation at the expense of truth. Let us "prove all things; hold fast that which is good." Some will go too fast; but let not that prevent others from moving at all. Stagnation in christianity will work death.

Have we not arrived at a period in this world's history where all the signs of the times indicate that this dispensation is near its close? We know that most of our readers would answer,—certainly. Then are we not in "the time of the end?" We think they would give the same response again. Well, may we not expect then, that the time has come to understand the portion of Daniel's prophecy relating to the prophetic periods, which was to be "closed up and sealed till the time of the end," (Dan. 12: 9)? We think this question admits of but one reasonable answer.

It is certain, we think, that the prophetic periods will be understood by the church, or bride of Christ, a little while before the appearing of the Bridegroom. We no not see how the language of the angel to Daniel can be fulfilled unless this be the case; for he has most plainly and positively declared, "the wise shall understand," but not till "the time of the end." This fact forever excludes the idea that the prophetic periods could be understood before "the time of the end." And as our chronologies for several centuries have been based on Ptolemy's canon, which made "the commandment" of Cyrus "to restore and to build Jerusalem" B. C. 536, which throws the whole subject of Bible chronology into confusion; it follows that the time was "closed up and sealed," till his errors were pointed out, and "the commandment" of Cyrus, as recorded in Ezra 1: 1–5, was shown to be just 483 years, or sixty-nine weeks, from the true birth of our Savior, according to Dan. 9: 25:—"KNOW, THEREFORE, AND UNDERSTAND, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks and threescore and two weeks." We do not see how the matter could be more plainly stated than in the foregoing language. But instead of sixty-nine weeks, Ptolemy makes it seventy-six weeks from "the commandment" "to the Messiah the Prince." Let us be thankful for the light thrown on this subject by the late chronology of Bro. Thurman, expecting it to increase more and more unto the perfect day.

We do not see how any chronology can be correct, that does not make sixty-nine weeks from the decree of Cyrus to the birth of Christ. This is the key-stone of the chronological arch. If this be not in its place, the whole system must fall.

LIGHT READING.

We commend the following sensible and truthful remarks on light reading to all who are tempted to indulge in that bad habit. Satan is accomplishing a great work. His success is truly alarming; and yet but few see any danger, more than the blind man on the brink of the precipice. We advise all christians, who would choose friends for life, to beware of novel readers, if they expect happy homes, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. We have never yet known a reader of novels who loved to read the Bible, and took delight in the service of the Lord. They are opposed to each other, and cannot be wedded in harmony.

The following are the remarks referred to above:

"Can any serious observer doubt, that the reprints and translations now flooding the country, many of them from the very hotbeds of prurient vice in foreign novel manufactories, are exerting a most deleterious influence on the intellect, the morals and the faith of the people of our country? These novels, romances, etc., have within the last few years been multiplied by tens of thousands, and scattered broadcast over the length and breadth of the land. Every steamboat and railroad car seems freighted with them, and they are read, too, by multitudes who read nothing else. The moral poison is left to do its work on such minds without any antidote; and can the effect be otherwise than evil? Then may a bitter fountain send forth sweet waters, and a corrupt tree bear good fruit. If the wives and mothers of America are to obtain their ideas of woman's duties from such writers——if their moral sentiments and religious faith are to be gathered from free-thinking novels and romances—will they be qualified to educate the future legislators and guardians of our republican institutions? This is a question of vital interest to every lover of his country, and to all who seek the improvement and elevation of the human race."

THE INAUGURATION BALL.

The following sensible article is from Zion's Herald of Jan. 25th, 1865. We commend it to the consideration of all candid people:—

"We learn from the newspapers that 'the large room in the north wing of the Patent Office is to be used for the Presidential Inauguration Ball.' We had hoped that that piece of folly and wickedness had been washed out of the national character by the rivers of patriotic blood, which, mingled with the tears of widows and orphans, have been flowing through the land for the last four years. If in these times of universal lamentation and great mourning, when tens of thousands of bereaved Rachels refuse to be comforted because their noble sons are not—when thousands of our Union prisoners are languishing and dying in rebel prisons, and thousands more are suffering in our recently filled hospitals—if, we say, under such circumstances, men and women wish to dance and revel, drink and carouse, and thus insult our country's grief, as well as the great God, by the interposition of whose arm alone we have been saved from national destruction, let them select some other time than the inauguration of the Chief Magistrate of the nation, and some other place than the 'Patent Office,' or any other of the public buildings at Washington. A more befitting place would be in some of the hospitals, or soldiers' burying grounds; most befitting of all, we should judge would be the Gettysburg Cemetery.

It strikes us that the President has issued too many proclamations for a day of 'Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer' to sanction the holding of such a 'Ball' in connection with his own induction into a responsible office, the duties of which he cannot successfully perform without divine aid. These frequent calls from the capital of the nation, when viewed in connection with the social habits prevailing in Washington, many of which are sanctioned by the presence and approval of the President, have to some minds too much the appearance of a solemn farce. The religious sensibilities of the whole country are shocked, pained and offended by them. Christian people whose prayers have ascended daily to God for deliverance from our national calamities, desire to see on such an occasion some decent respect shown to the God they worship by the nation's representatives at Washington."

NAPOLEON ADVANCING.

That "Wonderful Man" upon the throne of France is steadily advancing in power and influence. He is anxious to have the first control of matters on this continent. The following from the Boston Journal of Jan. 27th, is an interesting item:—

NAPOLEON IN MEXICO.

"It would appear from our San Francisco dispatches that the romantic Gwin story from Mexico is, as the novelist say, "founded on fact." It is true Dr. Gwin has not been created a duke, but he has been made a Governor General over several States which have been transferred by the Emperor Maximilian to the French Emperor Louis Napoleon. This is certainly a transaction which, as taking place on American soil, sounds rather strangely to republican ears. The newly transplanted Austrian in Mexico has hardly had time to get fairly seated on his throne, and certainly not time to pacify his own dominions, some of which he cannot yet visit at all, and others only with a powerful military escort, ere he undertakes to bargain and sell a portion of his territory larger than many of the kingdoms of Europe, and the deeds are made out and all the little arrangements are complete before the people inhabiting that territory know anything about it. Yesterday they went to bed as Mexicans—to day they wake up as the subjects of the Emperor of France, under the immediate rule of Governor Gen. Gwin!

Where is the Monroe doctrine after this? It would seem to have been consigned to the same pigeon-hole with the partition of Poland, the holy alliance and the other famous transactions of the historical past. It is not enough that we must have a new-made Emperor trying to balance himself among the turbulent States of Mexico—an amusement apparently harmless to "the rest of mankind" —but we have Louis Napoleon thrusting his undoubtedly powerful arm over our Southern border, and sweeping into his lap that part of Mexico which joins us and which, for its mines and other resources, is one of the best sections of the whole country."

BOOK NOTICES.

HOME THRUSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. By the Editor of the "Golden Rule." New York: Published by the Author, 189 West Twentieth Street. For seventeen years Bro. Newton was editor of the "Golden Rule," which was one of the most thorough reformatory periodicals of the day. He commenced its publication in Kentucky, but was driven out of the State on account of the strong position he took against slavery. He was an outspoken anti-slavery man when it cost something to open one's mouth in behalf of the oppressed. He has devoted his life to the one work of promoting the gospel in its purity. The volume before us is a collection of his most pointed articles on a variety of subjects relating to a life of godliness. It is seldom we see a book the sentiments of which we can so unqualifiedly indorse as those so faithfully advocated in this volume. We do not see how any one that takes the Bible for his guide, can object to the high tone of practical piety it inculcates. This is a book to read yourself; to put in the hands of your children; to lend to your neighbors. It is got up very neatly, contains 432 pages, and a number of wood-cut engravings. In the frontispiece is a good steel-plate engraving of the author. Price, in cloth, $1.50; gilt edges, $2.00. By sending the price to the author, you will receive a copy by mail. Buy it, by all means.—B. T. Roberts, Editor of the "Earnest Christian."

HOME THURSTS AND HOME THOUGHTS. In two Parts. First, The Golden Rule in High and Low Life; second, in the Family Circle. By D. F. Newton, Editor of the "Golden Rule." This book is well worth a lifetime of labor. It is not only a book for the times, but for all time. No ephemeral production to occupy an idle hour and be forgotten, but serious, vital, all-important lessons, teaching men and women how to prepare for eternity. In strong contrast with our modern publications, it carries us back to the strict times of the Puritans, and brings up to fresh life their strict and Scriptural religion, not a religion of sham and show, but a religion of awful realities. Buy the book and read it; take it for your model and guide in bringing up your family; let it be the teacher of your children; and, depend upon it, their religion will be quite a different thing from the religion of the polite world around them.—Nathan Brown, Editor of the "American Baptist."

COOKING: or, How to prepare Food from Grains, Fruits and Vegetables. By F. H. Hurd, M. D., House Physician of "Our Home."

DIPHTHERIA: its Causes, Treatment, and Cure. By James C. Jackson, M. D., Physician-in-Chief at "Our Home."

We have received a fresh supply of these little tracts. The publishers, we see, have advanced their prices. We shall, therefore, be obliged to sell them as follows:—Cookery, 15 cents; by mail, 17 cents. Diphtheria, 10 cents; by mail, 12 cents.

MANY GODS.

According to the theory of the spirits and Spiritualists, every man is a God. In a Spiritualist paper, called "The Kingdom of God," published at Hammonton, N. J., a correspondent addresses the editor, Mr. Cook, as follows:—

"All of the Gods bless you, brother Cook. I still acknowledge you to be what I claim for myself, and many others, a Son of man; which is a Son of God. No two have exactly the same place in the world of mind. Each has his own place. You will see I am not only for a final democracy, but I believe in starting in a democracy to gain a full, final, and perfect democracy. I have already passed the ONE GOD and the three God; and I believe in an infinitely plural God,—if we have any infinity."

BRO. DANIEL O. KENT, Hawleyville, Page Co., Iowa, writes that they have no Advent preacher in those parts, and would like to have some one come that way and preach to them.

Scatter Tracts.

A brother writes from Murray, Pa:—"A friend and myself give each $1.00 for tracts. We intend to drop them into our post-office, properly done up and addressed to such of our neighbors as will be likely to give them a fair and candid reading. Probation is drawing to a close. It is a crime to be idle while the day of earth's doom is so rapidly approaching." G.

Bro. J. H. Harding, Bridgewater, Vermont, writes:—"I received from your office, or from some source, over a year ago, a bundle of tracts. In my travels around, I have distributed them, and have the assurance that they have done some good, many receiving them with grateful thanks. I also lend the Crisis to families until it is well nigh worn out. I could not well do without it, for I consider it the best paper in the world."

VOICES FROM THE POOR.

FROM THE POOREST OF THE POOR.

A brother writes from R——, Mass.:—"I am sixty-two years old, and my health and strength are failing. My lot and portion in this world is small. I am poor—poor as the poorest the paper is sent to; and not able to work much, and do not know how I am to get through the winter. I owe a great deal, and cannot pay; would be glad to do so, if I could. I live seven miles from meeting, and shall not be able to hear preaching much more till spring. I am old, and almost worn out. I like the Crisis very much, and should not know how to do without it any more than my daily bread. Please continue to send it, if you can, and I will do the best I can for you. I pay no money for tobacco; never made any use of that filthy weed in my life, thank the Lord. Your brother in Christ, waiting for redemption." S. G.

FROM THE DESTITUTE AND LAME.

A Sister writes as follows:—"For almost six years, I have had the Crisis free. It is all the preaching I have, for I am lame, and have been for years, and unable to go to meeting. I would willingly pay for it if I could, but I cannot, I am so poor. I am so destitute of the comforts of life, that I have to receive help from those who have pity on the poor."

A Case of Conscience.

A free subscriber writes from ——, Mass.: "I have been receiving the Crisis gratuitously for several years, for which you have my heartfelt thanks. But I cannot conscientiously do so any longer. I therefore send you enclosed $2.50, the subscription price for the ensuing year."

The subscriber will please give the name, that we may not credit the money to the wrong person. There are, doubtless, one or two more cases of conscience of this kind, who feel it duty to do as this subscriber has done. We shall be pleased to hear from them. *

THE BANK OF THE LORD'S POOR.

RESPONSES FROM SHAREHOLDERS.

Bro. Thos. J. Philbrick writes from East Sanbornton, N. H.:—"I thank God that the poor are drawn out to speak in the paper. It has done my poor heart good, and I enclose $2.50 to carry the Crisis to some poor one in Christ, $2.00 to help keep the tract preachers flying, and $2.50 for my paper another year."

WORDS FROM THE WORKERS.

FOUR MORE.—The Pastor of the church in Whitefield, N. H., writes:—

"It is with pleasure that I send you the names of four more new subscribers for the Crisis, (with $6.00 enclosed.) Their names are as follows. . . . . . One is a poor widow, whose husband died a soldier a short time ago. The church pays for her paper. If there are any more of the worthy poor, we will try and find them out, and send you their names with the money. We cannot do too much for them. I love to feed them with the good bread of life. May the Crisis be still filled with healthful meat for the sheep and lambs. God speed you in your work. I will do for the Crisis what I can up here among the mountains and hills."

J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Thanks for your good will and energy. Doing very well, Bro. C. Ten in January. A good beginning for the year. The Lord help you to do as much in the months to come. *

TEN—THE RESULT OF A PAPER LENT.—A sister in Brookfield, N. H., writes:—

"I enclose $10.00 for a club of ten subscribers for the World's Crisis for six months. At the end of that time I will see to their renewal, with additions.

"I have now redeemed my promise made last spring. Two of your papers were lent me by a friend. I liked them so well, that I subscribed for three months. From the paper I learned of the tracts. But having no money to buy, I asked you for some to distribute. You very kindly sent me a package. At that time I told you you should hear from me again. Since then I have been doing all I can to help the cause of my heavenly Father, and now send you these ten subscribers as a New Year's present.

Your sister in Christ, H. R. JOHNSON."

Thanks to the "friend" for the result of lending the paper; and to the "sister," for her very acceptable present. The largest, thus far, in the month. Should be glad to receive a hundred such all the year through. Brethren will need to bestir themselves, or the sisters will outstrip them.

And here, gentle reader, see the good fruits of a paper lent, and a tract given; and thence please take a hint for your own action. You, too, have a friend, who is, perhaps, either partially, or wholly, a stranger to the truth, and to your paper. You lend him one; or, if afar off, you send him one. He reads it, becomes interested, and subscribes. The new subscriber sees in it a notice of tracts,—tracts doctrinal, practical, prophetical. He calls for, reads, believes, and scatters them. They awaken interest in others, and a desire for more light, and THEY subscribe. And thus, in a brief time, ten new subscribers, or more, are the result of one paper lent. Think, too,—the influence of that little deed ends not there; but, (as with all our deeds) goes on, like the eddying waves of the sea, widening and extending to infinity. The full and great result we shall never know till we reach the other shore. Spread, then, the light. Let every little ray shine. Enlarge the influence and usefulness of your paper, by letting it speak to others for you. Scatter tracts, and extend the circulation of truth,—and thus do well your part in the great work of preparing a people for the coming of the Lord. *

OUR TIMES.

We have arrived to the point when we are a distinct people. We occupy a prominent position as a people, looking for the second advent of our Lord; therefore we justly merit the name of the Second Advent people, and we are not ashamed of the name, nor afraid to examine the evidences of his immediate coming. Those that are ashamed of the name, as their given name—not surname, for that is christian—need not caution us about investigating time again. We, as a people, shall do it. I had rather be found looking up evidences of his coming at this time, and preaching it, than to be in any other business.

"But you have been disappointed so many times, Bro. Munger, had you not better be careful?" I have been disappointed only once, in 1844; and that did me good. I now see the Scriptures fulfilled in such a cry and such a tarrying. The church heard the cry, and responded, and the world trembled at it. The devil had a jubilee over our disappointment; and soon after, in 1848, commenced saying the Lord had come, in the spiritual manifestations which commenced in Rochester that year, and have spread over the world, and have become so popular that they have commenced going to the kings of the earth. Five crowned heads have already got their mediums; the rest will soon. Here is chronology. One side of it figures that antichrist is doing his work, which is one of the prophetic signs. We need no caution. Shall not stop for scoffing, for the Lord is nearer than when we first believed. Those that have never believed at all cannot comfort those that have. Call us sectarians, or what they may; this truth, or hope, will separate from the Ashdods of this age.

This continent seems to be the place for the signs to appear—the centre of light. The signs could not be appreciated east, where the prophecy was spoken by our Savior it, being in heathenish darkness. China is all darkness; Africa no better; and the northern regions still more heathenish. The signs must appear where they have, and we shall be the guilty people if we reject these signs. The demons know it, and commence their signs of lying wonders on the same ground, as the devil sowed tares in the same field.

Truly, we are a favored people. There are signs there's no mistaking, and we need no caution; but need investigation, and we mean to have it. While I am now writing, one of the old generation is talking about the first sign spoken of by Jesus, the darkening of the sun in 1780. She is ninety-five years old; was then ten, and recollects it well. She talks lively about it; can repeat large portions of the Bible. She believes in the Lord's coming, and has ever since she saw the first sign. I got a good deal of light from this old saint, on many points of experience.

There is a glorious work going on in all this region. Many are coming out in the truth. The preaching of the coming of the Lord will do what nothing else will. The little book must be eaten again, let the result be what it will; and the Second Advent people are the ones that are willing to eat it. Those that say they had as lief be called a dog as a Second Adventist, will of course object to eating the book, and caution others.

THE ITALIAN MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—Through the mercy of God, we have lived to see the close of the old year, 1864, and are just commencing a new one. I send you all, dear brethren and sisters, my cordial congratulation and best wishes for the year 1865, upon which we have just entered. I earnestly implore God to grant that your building, the foundation of which was laid years ago, and mine also, here in Italy, commenced but six months since, may advance rapidly the present year, should God spare our lives. O let us remember, dear brethren and sisters, that we are the Lord's, and all that we possess, and that he requires a good use of all he has entrusted to us—time, talents, and possessions. May we also bear in mind the shortness of time; that we have at most but a few years in which to finish our probationary work, and that then we must give an account of our stewardship. If we are indeed the children of Abraham, we shall imitate his faith and submission to God. By the mercy of our heavenly Father, we are very well founded in "faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, and brotherly kindness." Let us this year add "charity" to those who are in darkness. The eyes of the Almighty are upon us. The nations groan under the tyranny of sin; God has commissioned us to bring them to the light and liberty of the gospel, and prepare them for his kingdom; that many who are now in the labyrinth of darkness and sin may shout the glad song:—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men." Jesus is coming! and by his grace we are now in liberty (John 8: 36). Our loins are girded about with truth (Eph. 6: 14, and our "lights burning" (Luke 12: 35), and we "watch."

During the past month, owing to the very rainy weather, I have preached but eighteen times. These have been very interesting and glorious seasons. God has, indeed, been with me and assisted and strengthened me by his Spirit. To his holy name be all the glory. My congregation are more established in the sanctifying truths we preach, and the good leaven seems to be working in all this vicinity. Sunday the 18th of Dec. was very rainy, and the roads were very bad. I thought it would be impossible for the people to assemble in the evening, as it was also very dark; so I announced at the close of the morning service that there would be no meeting in the evening; but at night a delegate came for us, whom we gladly accompanied to the house of prayer, and we had a very good meeting, two hours in length.

I feel compelled by the truth to give you, at this time, some account of the National church of St. Jean, though it is a very painful state of things. One year ago, the church of St. Jean, one of the most important in these Vaudois valleys, had no pastor. The church unanimously elected an excellent and talented man, who is now pastor in Florence. The ministers and their "Moderator," or Bishop (?), willed that another should occupy the position, and the elected pastor was driven from the church. The gendarmes entered the temple, and assisted in the installation of the minister chosen by the ministers and moderator. The best part of the members numbering over two hundred, after solemnly protesting against such scandalous proceedings and violation of their rights, left the church. This is not the first instance of the kind that has transpired here. I have heard of two, even more shameful. Such a state of things seems very sad, especially when we consider the history of this ancient holy church, which so long stood nearly alone, a clear light in the thick darkness of superstition and horrible persecutions. But as far as we understand the matter, this departure of the Vaudois ministers from their ancient simplicity and purity, results from their connection with the national church of Switzerland, and from the fact that their preachers were long and until very recently educated in Geneva. The people generally seem to be honest, simple hearted, and intelligent. They do all they can for the education of their children, who are taught French and Italian at their schools. The Bible is much studied at school, and the children seem to have much understanding of the Sacred Scriptures, but according to half Roman Catholic commentary. These dear people understand very well the fallen condition of their shepherds, and pray earnestly for a change.

We are very happy to inform you that God has given us, as the fruits of our labor here, two young men of excellent character and abilities, who, since they have listened to the preaching of "the gospel of the kingdom," have felt that they were called of God to devote themselves to the work of the ministry. It is a great pleasure to me to give them instruction as a preparation for such great and holy work. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for us. Your faithful Bro.,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

Our conference at Bryant's Pond was decidedly a good one. Everything contributed to make it agreeable. Brethren came from Norway, Casco, Carthage, and many other towns, not merely to hear the preaching, but with a mind to work. The brethren and sisters of long experience seemed not at all tired of the way, but with heads uplifted and hearts overflowing, they talked and prayed as though they believed redemption close at hand. How their eyes did glisten, and their faces shine, as they anticipated the kingdom, with all its attendant glory. And the young in experience were there, strong in faith, and full of hope, preaching their short sermons, which often, I think, have more effect upon the sinner than long ones from old and able ministers. The converts at that meeting seemed to feel that they had much to do. They have entered the vineyard at the eleventh hour, not as idlers, but to work. God help them to labor at their homes, as they did at the conference; then they surely will see many saved.

The friends with whom we met gave us a cordial greeting, and provided for our wants in a christian manner. Their houses were open, their hearts were warm, and all were made to feel that their religion was "pocket deep." The ministers present did not feel a disposition to do all the work; yet when they did preach, I think their aim was to preach like workmen. Those not of us, who came to hear, were well disposed, and I think there was seed sown in some hearts, which will not be lost.

Yes it was a good conference from beginning to end. God blessed us with his presence. He gave to truth an edge which made men feel. I hope the Spirit of the meeting may continue with us, who were there, that when Jesus comes, we may be ready with all the elect for an abundant entrance into the blessed kingdom. J. A. LIBBY.

For the World's Crisis.

A FEARFUL DEATH-CHARGE.

Several weeks ago, the men of the 97th Engineers, Regulars, infantry, were sent from Pensacola to Pollard, Ala., to destroy railroads, public buildings, and public property generally.

After they had effected their work, they at once commenced their retreat. When they got to the Escambia river, it was found that a body of Rebels had entrenched themselves at the other end of the bridge, on the opposite side, with a full determination to dispute the passage. The Union men at once opened fire on them, to dislodge them if possible. After firing several hours, it was found that the Rebels still kept their position. It was now ascertained that a body of Rebels were about to come on the rear of the Union men, and thus annihilate them. Col. Robinson, seeing this, leaped from his horse, and cried out, "97th, fix bayonets, double quick, march!"

The men instantly started on the run for the bridge. Lieut. Fred. D. Burnham (son of Eld. Edwin Burnham) led in command on the right. When about half way over the bridge, the storm of fire and death from the Rebels met them. On all sides the men were falling. Fred. saw his Col. fall by his side, but on, on into that storm of death and fire he cheered his men. The enemy were driven before them like leaves before the wind. The victory was won! After the charge, Fred. was found lying bleeding among the dead and dying, and conveyed in an ambulance sixty miles to the Hospital, where, lying side by side with his Col., he is said to be recovering from his wounds. Such is war!

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT CONSTITUTES A CHRISTIAN, AND WHAT IS THE HOPE OF A CHRISTIAN?

The hope of a christian is immortality,—eternal life. Must a christian be isolated, cold and morose, stiff as a statue; condemning every body and every thing that does not comply with his rules of theory, and crush beneath him, like worms of the dust, those who dare have a mind broad, and a heart deep enough, with a christian spirit, extending to the wants and demands of humanity? A true christian is meek, humble, and childlike; and will be strictly honest in all his dealings, true to himself, to God, kind and benevolent in all his acts; condemning none, loving all; a kind word for all at home, as well as abroad; thoroughly cleansed with the truth; his unseen acts as though they were seen, for the eye of God is upon them; having the Christ principle governing all his acts.

What a change it would make in some who profess christianity. Instead of envy, malice and bigotry, we should see kindness, meekness, charity; love, instead of hate; a binding together, instead of separating; using the weapons of love to draw the erring ones, instead of weapons of war and strife to compel them. What a beautiful sight, when we behold the christian graces in one of God's children. How lovely. Faith, hope, and charity are there enshrined.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

BRO. GRANT:—Once more I am out in the vineyard of my Master, having spent some time in recruiting at home, for my nerves will not endure being all the time strained up in this exciting work.

I visited and spent a Sunday in Springfield, where they have a good company of believers in the faith once delivered to the saints. There the prospects look encouraging. I called on some of the scattered ones at Chicopee, and enjoyed their hospitality and fellowship. Called at South Hadley, where there are a few of like precious faith, where I gave one discourse, and was hospitably received. Here I was taken with sciatic rheumatism, which prevented my going to Hawley, where I had an appointment, for it unfitted me for traveling on foot, my usual way. My friends will excuse, when they know the reason. So I turned my course to labor on the line of the railroad in Connecticut, where I can get from one place to another easily, and be near the railroad, where I could go home any day, if not able to labor.

I went to Agawam, and spent a few days and a Sunday. Gave several discourses to an attentive audience. Was kindly and liberally used, and enjoyed my visit. I have spent several days at Warehouse Point, visiting, scattering tracts and giving lectures. Had a very attentive hearing, from a small congregation. They have a commodious chapel, but need stirring up to more zeal and earnestness in laboring for souls. They were very kind. The Lord bless them, and reward them. The brethren generally have done well for me everywhere; helped me on my way after a godly sort. I am glad to see that this duty to communicate to him that teacheth in all good things, is being better understood, and made practical. I have spent many months, when I did not receive one dollar a month, and spent five, besides my time.

I received a bundle of tracts at Springfield, for which the Publication Society have my sincere and hearty thanks; and I promise a judicious, economical distribution of them. I hardly know how to do without them. They introduce me into families, and give access to minds. The signs are very ominous, thickening around us, and many are inquiring, What are the events approaching? Soon will be seen the fiery chariot spoken of by Daniel the prophet, and its rumbling wheels be heard, the graves open, and the dead come forth from their dusty beds, and the righteous living changed in the twinkling of an eye, into a state of immortality. Then lift your heads, brethren, while you see these things, and sing, for your redemption is nigh.

Pray for me, ye who feel interested for me and my mission, for the weakness of age is upon me. I need much grace, strength, boldness, faithfulness and the spirit of discernment. Still I enjoy this work. Still let me be able to labor, is my prayer. Yours,

B. SPAULDING.

Warehouse Pt., Ct., Jan. 23.

From Bro. C. Brown.

BRO. GRANT:—Through the influence of a kind, yet unknown friend, I have been the recipient of your valuable paper, the Crisis, for which I beg leave to express my heartfelt thanks. Being an inquirer after truth, I read the Crisis with deep interest. I find in its columns sound reasoning, sound doctrine, and much light.

I have for years endeavored to reconcile my mind to a certain theory, which I had been taught, or received by tradition, and very readily supposed to be founded upon the word of God, because I had so often heard it proclaimed as truth. At times I have been almost or quite a sceptic, and again would think I did not understand the Scriptures; for I would find text after text that was not congenial with the theory; therefore I would conclude that the fault was in my want of understanding.

The theory I have spoken of is this: 1st, that man has an immortal soul. 2nd, that the soul of the righteous, at death, goes into a state of perfect happiness, and that of the ungodly into perfect misery, there to remain until the Lord shall come again to gather his own unto himself; and 3d, that there will be a general judgment, when the soul will reunite with the body and stand forth in judgment, then and there to receive its eternal awards as it had already previously received them.

How erroneous would be the order, if a person arraigned before a civil tribunal should be acquitted if innocent, or punished if guilty, before a trial is had and judgment passed, and then tried, condemned, or acquitted again. If the soul at death is rewarded or condemned according to its righteous or sinful character, then is judgment already past; if past, then it is not in the future; if not future, then there will be no resurrection; and if no resurrection, then are all our hopes vain.

But there will be a resurrection, and, as a matter of necessity, a judgment; then the righteous will receive the approbation of their blessed Lord and Master,—the reward of eternal life. The wicked will also receive their reward—eternal death. Therefore we have a foundation for our hope, builded on Christ Jesus our Lord, who is the first fruits of them that sleep; who hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel.

The Scriptures begin to open to me with new light, yet there are some passages which I do not fully understand. Will some one who has light write on the sixth chapter of John, the forty-seventh, fiftieth, fifty-first, fifty-fourth, and fifty-eighth verses. C. BROWN.

Carthage, Me.

From Bro. L. Laskey.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been in the habit of going to Boston to work for about three years, and while there heard some of the Advent preachers. Although I had made a profession of religion in early life, it seemed when I heard this preaching I never had known what the gospel was. I have reason to thank God I ever heard it. While there last fall I bought the Bible Student's Library, and lent it to my neighbors. It has made quite a stir in the place, and I have been distributing those tracts you sent, and there is quite an inquiry to find if these things are true. I do what little I can in the way of talking to my neighbors, but we need a preacher to visit us very much. I hope it will please God to direct some of his servants this way. I think if we had a good preacher here a few days we could start a church with about twenty members in this town. There are in a circle of a few miles, from fifteen to eighteen thousand inhabitants, and not an Advent preacher ever visits them, as far as I can learn. I hope you and all who read this will unite with me in prayer that God will send some laborers into this part of his vineyard. The signs of Christ's coming are growing more and more distinct every day, and may God keep us by his grace and save us in his kingdom. Your brother in Christ,

LEONARD LASKEY.

South Robbinston, Me.

From Sr. M. C. Whitaker.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord has been very merciful to us in this place, sending his servants to proclaim the glad tidings of the coming King. Five different brethren have been here since about the middle of September. Bro. J. K. Bellows has just closed a series of meetings, treating mostly on the prophecies, which have been very interesting, showing us the state of the nations down to the present time. Much good feeling has been manifested during these meetings. The saints have been quickened. Two sisters have been converted, and put on Christ by baptism, and the sinner has been led to say, Surely these things are so. To God be all the glory. We praise his name for what has been done, praying that this may be but a few drops before a plentiful shower. It is high time we were all at work. Soon the Lord will come. Will our skirts be clear from the blood of saints? We are living in a solemn time. Let us be up and doing. Your sister, waiting for redemption when Jesus comes.

Whitakerville, Vt. M. C. WHITAKER.

From Sr. Lizzie Davis.

BRO. GRANT:—How my heart was cheered when I saw your appointment for Westboro', Mass. Yet more so, when I learned by the dear saints and the Crisis how they welcomed you. I love them. It was there, fourteen years ago, I first heard the cheering news of the Lord's coming. It was good then; now, more so, because we are so much nearer the event. It was at Westboro', I received the first number of the Crisis, and believe I have taken it ever since it was first issued. I think it the best paper printed. I expect to take it as long as we need a paper. I can say I endorse the whole of its doctrines,—love them, and am striving for that preparation which we all need, in order to be ready for the Master, when he comes. I am unworthy, but Christ is worthy; and through his atonement, I hope to meet you, and all the dear saints, in that kingdom, where there will be no death. May the good Lord direct you, and keep you until his coming.

Fitzwilliam, N. H. LIZZIE DAVIS.

From Bro. George Alkire.

BRO. GRANT:—There is a little band of us here that meet every Lord's day to talk of the near coming of our Lord, and of his glorious kingdom; and we are striving to be prepared to have our lamps trimmed, ready to go forth to meet the Bridegroom. We all take an interest in the Crisis and Voice of the West, and feel that they do us much good. We greatly desire if any Advent brother is traveling in our part of the country, that he would stop and hold a meeting with us this coming spring or summer. Yours, in the blessed hope. ELD. GEO. ALKIRE.

Barry, Pike Co., Ill.

CAROLINE TWOMBLY writes from Levant, Me.: "I feel anxious to have the community see the difference between truth and error. There are a number of believers in the soon coming of Christ in the place, enough to pay one of God's servants well to come and preach to this people. Cannot some of the faithful watchmen come? May God help us all to awake and gird on the whole armor of righteousness, that we may be found at our post when the Master comes.

Obituaries.

SALLY PUTNAM.

Fell asleep, on the 20th of Jan. 1865, in the Putnam Settlement, Township of Bavaria, Sr. Sally, wife of Bro. Warren Putnam, about fifty years of age.

Twenty-eight years ago, she was brought under serious impressions, was convinced that she was a sinner, and found redemption in the Savior's blood. She united with the Freewill Baptist church, and adorned her profession. In 1843 she and her husband heard the glad tidings of Christ's second coming, to set up his everlasting kingdom, when both embraced the good news. Their house from that time to the present has been the home of the heralds of the coming kingdom.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer.

JOHN ELLIS.

Died in Hardwick, Mass., April 10, 1864, John Ellis, aged seventy-five years.

He embraced the doctrine of the Advent in 1842. Since then his house has always been open for the servant of God.

Also, April 12th, Letis, wife of John Ellis, aged sixty years.

She loved the Lord and all his children, and longed for the time to come when Jesus would appear and make up his jewels. They were both thrown from the wagon, March 26th, which was the cause of their death.

GEORGE A. STREETER.

LUCINDA KINSMAN.

Sr. Lucinda Kinsman, widow of the late Capt. Jos. Kinsman, fell asleep in Jesus, in Cape Elizabeth, Me., Dec. 25, 1864, aged thirty-seven years.

Although she suffered much, she never murmured. With true christian patience she passed through her sickness, and calmly met the king of terrors. She loved the truth, and died in the blessed hope of immortality at the coming of the Just One. May the surviving mourners be sustained by the grace of God, and be prepared to meet Sr. Lucinda, and all the good in the better land.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Jan. 17th. The Turin correspondent of the London News reports that the French troops will be withdrawn from Rome before March.

FRANCE.

The Archbishop of Bessancon, in a letter respecting the Encyclical letter of the Pope, referred to the order of the Council of State as an abuse of ecclesiastical authority.

[Liverpool 19th, Londonderry 21st.]

The Liverpool Post says extensive orders for army clothing for the rebels have been executed in Liverpool lately, of which 2000 uniforms for the rebel artillery is a part.

SPAIN.

The Correspondencia announces that the Government will act energetically if the Encyclical letter is published without authority of the Council of State.

ITALY.

It is rumored that Russia and the Pope have quarrelled over the Encyclical letter.

The Pope's Encyclical letter is the leading theme in France. The Prefects have been ordered to report on its effects. The Government, it is said, contemplates a serious step in the matter.

It is rumored that there is an Anglo-French difficulty between the military authorities at Aden.

It is asserted that Napoleon has nominated Prince Napoleon for Regent in the event of his death.

BRAZIL.

Paraguay had declared war against Brazil, and a decree has been issued announcing the rupture of the treaty.

ANOTHER CYCLONE IN INDIA.—A letter from Melur, India, dated Nov. 23, gives the following account of another terrible cyclone which had occurred in that vicinity.

"The most fearful cyclone perhaps on record visited the city of Calcutta and vicinity on the 5th of October, and to-day we have accounts of another less severe one on the 1st of November about three hundred miles north of Madras. An American Lutheran missionary at Gunter writes that the storm raged with terrific fury from midnight till three o'clock, and that in the morning after nothing could be seen in any direction but the tangled wrecks of trees, houses and gardens. In his own compound, the beautiful Indian cork trees, thirteen in number, are all uprooted and prostrated except two, whose trunks are, the one ten feet and the other twenty feet high. Hundreds of people are now completely houseless, and many of them too poor to rebuild, though only ten rupees would be enough to put up a better house than many of them had before the storm. The torrents of rain, driven by the fierce wind, made short but decisive work with these native mud walls, especially after their light, thatched roofs had been carried off by the wind. Our mission school houses and cook house are so badly damaged that they are almost useless. Numerous lives at Masulipatam (two thousand it is said,) and much property were lost, but so far as now heard from, this cyclone was very much less destructive than the previous one, Oct. 5th, at Calcutta."

POVERTY IN FRANCE.—It is computed that there are a million of beggars and vagabonds in France. In a recent work Hugo says there are thirteen hundred thousand peasants' cottages that have but three openings; eighteen hundred and seventeen thousand but two—the door and one window; and finally, three hundred and forty-six thousand cabins, with only one opening—the door. And this in consequence of what is called the excise upon doors and windows. In these poor families, among the aged women and little children, dwelling in these huts, how abundant is fever and disease! In Asere, in Var, and in the Upper and Lower Alps, the peasants have not even wheelbarrows; they carry the manure on their backs; they have no candles, but burn pine knots and bits of rope soaked in pitch. And the same is the case all through the upper part of Dauphine.

THE FRENCH ACQUISITION IN MEXICO.—The Northern States of Mexico which are said to be ceded to the French Emperor have an area of 305,000 square miles, or 50 per cent. more than the whole of France, and nearly one-half of the entire territorial surface of Mexico. About the year 1858 they contained a population of only 700,000—which has varied but very little since that time. They comprise a great variety of soil and climate, and are very rich in mines of silver and gold, out of which, if he is so disposed, Louis Napoleon can satisfy his claims against Mexico; and so give back the land in a few years. We shall see whether he does it.—Boston Journal.

☞ The Pope has issued a bull condemning all modern religious and political errors having a tendency hostile to the Catholic Church, and exhorting the Bishops to confute them. The bull, which was signed on the 8th of October last, was drawn up by a committee of theologians, under the presidency of Cardinal Caterini.—The Catholic.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, Jan. 24, 1865. Washington was startled just before 3 o'clock this afternoon by the announcement that the Smithsonian Institute was on fire, and soon afterward the central portion of the edifice was crowned by flames, which mounted nearly to the height of the numerous towers. The fire originated in the loft above the Observatory tower, and was probably caused by the pipe of a stove temporarily put up by some workmen who were hanging pictures. It soon spread to other portions of the central building, destroying the lecture-room, apparatus hall, and the apartments used by the Regents, and by Prof. Henry and his assistants. Although three steamers were promptly at work, it was impossible to check the flames, but by the exertions of the firemen the east wing, which is occupied by Prof. Henry as his residence, and the west wing, which is used as the library, will be saved.

Quebec, C. E., Jan. 24. In Parliament to-day Mr. Galt, the Finance Minister, brought down a message from the Governor-General, transmitting the estimates for the current year, in which is included some $50,000 in gold to make good the money improperly surrendered in the case of the St. Albans raiders, and claimed by the Government of the United States under the extradition treaty.

New York, Jan. 28. Gen. Sherman has issued an order setting apart the South Carolina Coast Islands for the negroes freed by his army in passing through Georgia.

New York, Jan. 30. The Herald's Washington dispatch says Blair's mission was not an entire failure, but discloses facts that there is confusion, jealousy, suspicions and bickerings among rebel officials; that Jeff. Davis and his associates admit that they will be obliged to submit; that all want to make terms, but no official is willing to assume the responsibility.

The Tribune's dispatch says two Democratic members of Congress state that Blair told them that Davis entreated him to secure the passage of the amendment to the constitution abolishing slavery, as slavery had induced disunion and the only thing that continued the rebellion was the hope of continuing slavery.

The Tribune, in a leading editorial, announces that it has a clue to a recognition intrigue. It appears that Jeff. Davis long since sent the Roman Catholic Bishop, Lynch of South Carolina, to hunt up sympathizers. The Bishop went to Rome, and assured the magnates of the Catholic Church that its expansion and predominance throughout this hemisphere depended upon the success of the confederates. Whereupon the Roman Catholic powers of France, Spain and Austria, under the guidance of the Pope, have formed a secret league pledged to recognize the Confederacy after the 4th of March next, on the ground that it had taken no part in the last Presidential election.

The Tribune also states that the rebels will burn Richmond if in danger of being taken, so as to show Christendom they would rather be exterminated than subjugated.

The Herald's St. Louis correspondent announces that the rebel Gen. Kirby Smith has been negotiating with Maximilian for the transfer of all the rebel troops in the trans-Mississippi Department to his standard. It is thought that he will have some difficulty in consummating the scheme, as his forces are a lawless set and will resist their sale.

The Herald publishes the rebel army roster, obtained, it says, from a most authentic source, which shows their full strength at only 168,000, scattered from the James to the Red rivers, and from the Atlantic coast to the Indian Territory. It also shows Lee's army to be their main dependence.

The New Atlantic Cable.

New York, Jan. 15.—A letter from George Seward, Esq., Secretary and General Superintendent of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, to Cyrus W. Field, Esq., after alluding to the absolute electrical perfection of the cable now being manufactured, states the amount completed up to Dec. 30th to be 750 miles. The cable is now being manufactured at the rate of eighty miles per week. Without hurry and night work it will be finished by the end of the first week in June. Two tanks have been constructed on the Great Eastern for the stowage of the cable, and the third is rapidly progressing. There is no reason to doubt that the cable will be on board and the great ship ready for sea, with every appliance of the best kind and in the best order, during the month of June. Mr. Seward has no doubt the cable will be successfully laid and worked.

Notices.

Notice.

As I believe time is very short, and it behoves us to be up and doing; and as I have found many females that feel God has called them to follow in the vineyard of the Lord, but because of the prejudice of the church in its present cold and backslidden state, they are kept back from following as they feel God has called them to do; and as I believe that we are living in the day when God will pour out his Spirit upon his handmaids, I therefore give this notice to all the women of America, independent of denomination or color, who feel that they have been called of God to preach, exhort, pray, or to write, on the subject of his speedy coming, and a preparation for that coming, to open a correspondence with me in reference to holding a convention of women, in the coming spring, May or June, to be held at a place which will be named after hearing from the different sisters. This convention shall be for the promulgation of all Bible truths; but no hobbies.

Now, sisters, let me hear from you as soon as possible, so that we can make arrangements for the convention. Let this be a missionary movement. Remember Jesus is at the door, and wickedness is abounding, and the love of many is waxing cold. Let us be up and doing, so that he may say to us, "Well done, good and faithful servant, . . . Enter into the joy of thy Lord." Let all, who feel interested in this great work, make it a subject of special prayer at the hour of twelve o'clock, every day, that God may bless the effort that we may put forth to his honor and glory.

All brethren who are favorable to this convention are invited to assist us by advice, by kind words of encouragement, and those that can by publishing this notice.

Sisters are requested to form themselves into small missionary societies in their own village, or neighborhood, meet weekly, and report to me as often as possible.

Address Mrs. Anna E. Smith, No. 128, East 27th Street, New York City.

Minnesota Quarterly Conference.

Our winter quarterly conference will be held in the Ramer school-house, Utica, Winona County, Minn., commencing on Friday, the 24th of Feb., at half past six o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following, day and evening. Preaching by different ministering brethren. All who love God and the salvation of sinners, and desire to know and understand the truth, and be prepared for the day of his coming, are invited to attend. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, but exhort one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching." Pray for God's blessing upon the meeting.

In behalf of the church, PHILIP RAMER, Sec.

A Discussion.

A discussion of the following questions will commence at Morse's Mills, Corinna, Me., Feb. 14th, at one o'clock, and continue several days.

1. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man has a spiritual, thinking soul, that will exist between death and the resurrection.

Affirmative, E. B. FLETCHER.
Negative, N. F. NASON.

2. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that after the resurrection God will destroy the wicked in the sense of making them as though they had not been.

Affirmative, N. F. NASON.
Negative, E. B. FLETCHER.

If the weather is stormy, the discussion will be adjourned one week.

Conference.

By divine permission, Bro. C. S. Emerson will commence a conference with the brethren at Dover, N. H., on Saturday, Feb. 4th, 1865, and continue the same a week or more, as may be deemed expedient. We ardently desire that our brethren who may feel it their duty to attend this conference, will come in the name of the great head of the church, and be wise in winning souls to Christ. May the divine blessing crown their efforts with abundant success. In behalf of the brethren,

J. M. HACKETT.

Notice.

A series of meetings will commence at Natick, R. I., Sunday, Feb. 5th, and continue evenings, except Sundays, as long as the interest demands. The only place which could be obtained, and large enough to accommodate all, is the hall of the hotel, where the meetings will be on Sundays. Let all in the surrounding vicinity, who feel an interest in the salvation of sinners, and are willing to work in the highways and hedges, come, having on the gospel armor. The meetings on Sunday will commence at 10 A. M., and at 2 and 6.30 P. M. The time for the evening meetings to commence will be given on Sunday.

E. BELLOWS.
H. K. FLAGG.

Notice.

To the brethren in Northern New York:

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I would say that sickness in my family, with the severe snow storms, has kept me from visiting you; but, the Lord willing, I shall see you ere long, and hope to be made glad by finding you all strong in the faith of the gospel. Pray for me, that utterance may be given to me. Your brother in Christ, C. B. TURNER.

Notice.

A series of meetings will be held at Whitefield, N. H., commencing Feb. 8th, and continue over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as may be thought best. Come, brethren, one and all, to the meeting. J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Notice.

There will be a series of meetings held at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Feb. 3d, and continue every evening, and over the two following Sundays. It is expected that Bro. Wm. A. Fenn will be present to help preach the word. Let all attend that can from the surrounding country. C. B. TURNER.

Notice.

As there have been appointments for this place conflicting with each other, I would inform those wishing to send appointments here, that we are supplied the third Sunday in each month for the present. For the brethren. CHARLES HALEY.

Exeter, N. H.

Notice.

Eld. Wm. B. Morgan wishes to say that he is ready and willing to travel and preach the gospel of Christ wherever doors may open. His post-office address is Canaan, Vt.

Notice.

Brethren sending appointments to Lynn, Mass., will please correspond with

S. K. PARTRIDGE, R. R. YORK, I. C. WELLCOME, Board of Managers.

I. C. WELLCOME, Secretary and Business Agent.

ISAAC WIGHT, Treasurer.

It was voted that all orders for tracts and books for distribution by this Society be addressed to the Agent, I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me., who will supply them as fast as the means are furnished.

All our ministers will receive subscriptions for the Tract Fund, and they purpose to raise $200, or more, for free distribution in Maine this year.

I. C. WELLCOME, Agent.

Agency for Maine.

Having been solicited to take the agency for Maine of Bro. Himes' "New Chart of Daniel and John," I would say to any and all in Maine who wish it, I am prepared to furnish it at the regular retail price, $5.00, and to preachers (or others who wish them to sell) at a liberal discount. Address orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 487. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid.

If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe.

For every week of indebtedness before No. 468, charge (at the old rate) four cents; and, for every week of indebtedness since No. 468, charge (at the new rate) five cents,—and you have the amount due the office. (This, however, will give a trifle more than the amount due. To make it exact, deduct four cents for every dollar due before No. 468, and five cents for every dollar due since No. 468.)

IMPORTANT BOOKS WORTH BUYING, LENDING, READING, AND PRESERVING.

I. THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, a Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

A sad exhibition of the predicted perils of the Last Days; the selfishness, hypocrisy, and crimes of Christendom, as shown in STATISTICAL ACCOUNTS of the slave trade, cotton trade, opium trade, Coolie trade, and the Homelessness, Illegitimacy, child murder, bloodshed, and military preparations of this age.

II. THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Edited and prefaced by H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

A history of the doctrine of the reign of Christ on earth, containing the views and testimonies of nearly four hundred of the greatest preachers, reformers, and writers the church has ever known, concerning the establishment of the future glorious Kingdom of God, under the whole heaven.

III. THESSALONICA, OR THE MODEL CHURCH; A Sketch of Primitive Christianity; and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, or the Tokens of Speedy Redemption, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION, by Wm. Ramsey, D.D. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

"Thessalonica," portraying the faith and practice of the early Christians; "Reasons," exhibiting the hope of the Church, the fulfilment of prophecy, the spread of the gospel through Missionaries, Bible and Tract Societies, etc; and "Spiritualism," unveiling and exposing the monster delusion of Satan in these latter times.

IV. THE GREAT CONTROVERSY BETWEEN GOD AND MAN; its Origin, Progress, and End; with numerous TRACTS on Prophetical and Practical subjects. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

The "Controversy" sketches the History of the World since man's revolt from God, narrates the judgments already inflicted upon the nations of the earth for their iniquities, and those more terrible and exterminating calamities yet to overwhelm the nations, and prepare the way for the establishment of a divine government upon the earth. The TRACTS are, "The Church not in Darkness," "The Three Worlds," "The Last Days," "Plain Truths," "Ancient Landmarks," "Important Questions," "Olive Leaves," etc., etc.; a valuable and spirited collection.

V. FUTURE PUNISHMENT, as Taught in the Scriptures, with the various Doctrines of Men upon this subject. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

Containing "Pauline Theology," or Future Punishment as Taught by Paul; "The Old Paths," or the Doctrines of the Apostolical Fathers; "Retribution," or the Resurrection and Punishment of the Wicked; "Will all Men be Saved?" an Antidote for Universalism; "The Destiny of the Wicked," a Scriptural Tract; "The Decrees of Popes and Councils on the Immortality of the Soul;" with the Views of Justin Martyr, Luther, Jeremy Taylor, Milton, and Bishop Law on the state of the dead, etc.

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE.

To aid the temperance cause we come,
And banish the sad effects of rum,
Secure to such a smiling home,
Where all around may thrive;
The old and young its blessings share,
While from their hearts it drives dull care,
And peace and joy revives.

It takes the drunkard from the ground,
And makes him in good deeds abound,
And help his fellows all around—
A useful man become;
His children saved from numerous woes,
His wife no longer sorrow knows,
Nor feels a drunken husband's blows,
But happy is his home.

Come, men of sense, who wish to see
Your fellow kind from bondage free,
Now let us in the work agree,
Be active and go on;
Be zealous, prudent, faithful all,
And cause the tyrant foe to fall,
And save the young and old from thrall,
Until our work is done.

Come, friends and neighbors, one and all,
Come old and young, come great and small,
Come listen to our earnest call;
Come join us and be free;
Beneath our pledge enrol your name,
And faithful live up to the same,
And put the tipling hosts to shame,
And happy you will be.

C. P. Dow.

For the World's Crisis.

DEATH IN THE POT:

OR,

Voting Ungodly Men to Offices of Trust.

One of the greatest evils that has ever visited our own nation and others, is electing wicked men as rulers,—men destitute of true virtue, the fear and love of God; office seekers, proud, covetous, ambitious, oppressive, intemperate. God in his holy word has pointed out clearly and definitely the men to preside over us in authority, to make laws and execute laws. "Moreover, thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens."—Ex. 18: 21. "Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you." Deut. 1: 13. "The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel said unto me, He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God."—2 Sam. 23: 3. "And I charged your judges at that time saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him. Ye shall not respect persons in judgment, that ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man; for the judgment is God's: and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it."—Deut. 1: 16, 17.

Have we any right to vote for any one to offices, stations of trust and responsibility, save those designated by the Holy Spirit? In the command to "honor the king," "be subject to the higher powers," is it not expressly understood these rulers are such as the Lord approves, men fearing God, and hating covetousness? "For this cause pay ye tribute also, for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing." "Render therefore to all their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor."—Rom. 13: 6, 7.

Does God require us to honor wicked men, sons of Belial, who judge unjustly, and accept the persons of the wicked? He hates them, and denounces them. We are bound to respect the offices of those in authority, but not the unprincipled wretches who occupy them. 2 Pet. 2: 13, 14. So far as our rulers obey God in the higher law, we submit unhesitatingly to "the powers that be," and no further. "But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men children alive. . . Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty."—Ex. 1: 17, 20. "And the people said unto Saul, Shall Jonathan die, who hath wrought this great salvation in Israel?"—1 Sam. 14: 45. The example of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego (Dan. 3: 16, 17) is in point. Also that of Daniel, Dan. 6: 13.

"But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye."—Acts 4: 19. These, and many similar passages, from the inspired penman, show conclusively that wicked rulers and wicked laws are not to be regarded when they contravene in the least with the word of the living God. "How long will ye judge unjustly, and accept the persons of the wicked? Defend the poor and fatherless; do justice to the afflicted and needy. Deliver the poor and needy; rid them out of the hand of the wicked."—Ps. 82: 2-4. "It is an abomination to kings to commit wickedness; for the throne is established by righteousness."—Prov. 16: 12. "And say, Hear the word of the Lord, O King of Judah, that sittest upon the throne of David, thou and thy servants, and thy people that do enter in by these gates: Thus saith the Lord: Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor; and do no wrong; do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow; neither shed innocent blood in this place."—Jer. 22: 2, 3. "The king that faithfully judgeth the poor, his throne shall be established forever."—Prov. 29: 14.

Whenever we cast our votes for the elevation of selfish, ungodly men to offices of state, do we not thereby take sides with the enemies of Christ's kingdom, and sin against God?

The plea that the Lord has ordained wicked men to rule over his people with a rod of iron, is not sufficient reason for us to use our influence in electing men to stations of responsibility and honor, whom we have good reason to believe will not execute judgment and righteousness in the fear of God. When the Lord permitted Saul to reign, Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the bloody Manasseh, it was in judgment, not in mercy; as a curse, not a blessing. And what curse can be greater to a city, a State, or a nation, than an ungodly ruler. God informed the Jewish nation what kind of a king they should have if they persisted in their rebellion, in refusing the King of kings and Lord of lords to rule over them. Saul well nigh ruined the twelve tribes of Israel. God gave them a king in his wrath. When a nation becomes exceedingly corrupt, retribution must come, terrible, causing every ear to tingle.

We are told by wise men, or those professing to be teachers in Israel, to "choose the least of two evils"; that is, when two candidates are before the public for some high office, both of whom have no special regard for the higher law, or the "thus saith the Lord," for what they do, "select the least wicked of the two." Both church and state adopt the principle of choosing between two evils, compromising with sin and Satan. When one wicked man for office is not quite so selfish, so proud, so devilish as the other, be sure and choose the one who is the least devilish! Thus our nation, states and cities, are cursed from year to year with men in authority, lovers of their own selves, proud, oppressive, covetous, boasters, blasphemers, truce breakers, false accusers, traitors, Sabbath desecrators, despisers of those that are good, who "neither fear God nor regard men."

The result of this atheistical course is what it ever has been, and what it ever will be. "The wicked walk on every side when the vilest men are exalted." "As a roaring lion, and a ranging bear; so is a wicked ruler over the poor people."—Prov. 28: 15. "And he shall give Israel up because of the sins of Jeroboam, who did sin, and who made Israel to sin."—2 Kings 14: 16. "So Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to sin, and to do worse than the heathen whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of Israel."—2 Chron. 33: 9. "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when the wicked bear rule, the people mourn." "The king of judgment establisheth the land; but he that receiveth gifts overthroweth it."—Prov. 29: 2. 4. Mark the times of Jeroboam, Ahab, Belshazzar, Manasseh. How exceedingly corrupt the nation at that period. "Can a man take fire in his bosom and his clothes not be burned?" We have cast off fear, conferred with flesh and blood, gone down to Egypt for help. "Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the Lord." Isa. 31: 1.

False prophets and false teachers, expounders of God's truth, have been the ringleaders in this downward course. "If the blind lead the blind, both will fall into the ditch." "In vain do they worship me teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?"—Ps. 94: 20. "His watchmen are blind: they are all ignorant, they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber."—Isa. 56: 10. "And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also. When they heard the king, they departed; and lo, the star which they saw in the east went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was."—Matt. 2, 8, 9.

A more correct and vivid likeness could not be drawn of our present state as a nation and a people, than that which is drawn by Isaiah in the first chapter of his prophecy. Reader, beloved, how readest thou? Begin, if you please, at verse second,—"Hear, O heavens," and continue to verse twenty-fourth. Whenever and wherever a corrupt ministry prevails, false prophets and teachers, dumb dogs, that will not bark, that heal slightly, prophesying smooth things, cry "peace, peace, when there is no peace," there is "death in the pot"; iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold. By casting our votes for wicked men to office, we speed the work of Satan, help the devil and wicked men to do their own work.

President C. G. Finney, in his Lectures to Christians, says: "Christians ought to cease from conformity to the world in politics, from the influence which such a course would have on the world. Suppose christians were to act perfectly conscientious and consistent in this matter, and say, "We will not vote for any man to office unless he fears God, and will rule the people in righteousness." Ungodly men would not select men as candidates who themselves set the laws at defiance. No. Every candidate would be obliged to show that he was prepared to act from higher motives, and that he would lay himself out to make the country prosperous, and to promote virtue, and to put down vice and oppression and disorder, and to do all he can to make the people happy and HOLY. It would shame the dishonest politicians, to show that the love of God and man is the motive that christians have in view; and a blessed influence would go over the land like a wave.

"Only let it be known that christian citizens will on no account assist bad men into office; only let it be known that the church will go only for men that will aim for the public good, and both parties will be sure to set up such men. And in this way the church would legitimately exert an influence, by compelling all parties to bring forward only men who are worthy of an honest man's support."

It is in the power of the church, united as one man, clad in God's complete armor, walking in white, baptized into gospel fulness, "looking forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, terrible as an army with banners," to rule the ballot box, elect what men to office she pleases, subdue kingdoms, cause Satan to fall as lightning from heaven, the "earth to blossom as the rose," salvation to go forth as the dawning light, and angels to rejoice and sing anew,—"Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, and good will to man." And woe be unto her if she do it not!

Up! while ye slumber, deeper yet
The shadow of our fame is growing.
Up! while we pause our sun may set
In blood, around our altars flowing!

THE PROMISES.

WHY WAS PAUL A HERETIC?

When Paul was arrayed before Felix, he says: "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all that is written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."—Acts 24: 14, 15. So you see that the Jews called Paul a heretic, and yet allowed that there would be a resurrection of the dead. Bear that in mind.

When he was brought before king Agrippa, he says: "And now I stand, and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God to the fathers; unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" We begin to see why they call Paul's doctrine heresy now. They had Moses and the prophets as well as Paul; they understood, in one respect, the promises of God to the fathers, as well as Paul; that is, they could and doubtless did read the glorious promises, and knew that they were to be fulfilled under Messiah, but overlooking "his first advent," they expected him to come "in great power," and deliver them from under the Romans. But, alas! he comes the meek babe of Bethlehem.—They reject him, condemn, and nail him to the shameful tree, denying his claim to the Messiahship.

Now Paul declares that he is the Messiah, and the rightful heir of all those promises, and that through him they are to be fulfilled to all God's waiting people; but through the resurrection of the dead: "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" Paul shows conclusively that unless there is a resurrection of the dead, these promises can never be fulfilled; but all they which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished; that instead of its being fulfilled to a few literal Jews, at that time, it was also to the Gentiles who possessed Abrahamic faith; "for the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham or his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith."—Rom. 4: 13. He declares to them that, although they had rejected him, and crucified him, he yet liveth, and is gone into the heavens, where he is to remain until "the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began"; when he will again return in all the glory of his Father, and call the sainted nations from their tombs, to hail the glorious jubilee of jubilees, and enter into the joys of their Lord.

"Then there'll be a mighty shaking
In the old church-yard!"

Well, where stand the churches to day? They all agree there are glorious promises to the people of God, and that they are to be fulfilled through Messiah; but when we say that they all depend on the resurrection (which they themselves also allow) for their fulfillment, they cry, "heresy!" They are going to heaven at death, and get their reward then. Well, the wages of sin is death; and if they choose that for their reward, however, I would admonish them to seek for eternal life.

The Babylonians built a tower on which to get to heaven, but when God came down to see it, he destroyed it at once; now they have got another which they call death,—

"Death is the gate to endless joy."

But when he comes down again, he will destroy that. Heb. 2: 14. So if death is the gate to endless joy, the gate will be destroyed, and many, I fear, will fail to get through. Christ says, "I am the way,"—"I am the resurrection and the life." He that climbeth up any other way, "the same is a thief and a robber." Let us, then, be satisfied when we "awake in His likeness." Yours in hope,

BE OF GOOD CHEER.

Bro. Grant:—When I last wrote for the Crisis, I resolved, as I had occupied so much room, that might be filled by abler hands, to do so no more at present, if ever; but pardon me, brethren, in looking over its columns, I noticed some poor, lonely, tried, discouraged ones, who, I felt, needed a word of good cheer, notwithstanding we have the words of Christ bidding us be of good cheer. Yet, sometimes we feel comforted in receiving those same words from a fellow-traveler right down here in these perilous last days, passing with us through the same trials and the same tribulations. Sometimes we consider ourselves exceptions, forgetting it is written, "think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." Also remember, "no temptation hath taken you, but such as is common to man." Yet often times to us it seems differently. Are we poor? so was our Master. "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man not where to lay his head."

Are we sorrowful and grieved? Christ was "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief." Do we feel forsaken and alone in the world? Christ was forsaken by his nearest friends. In the most trying hour of his life, all men "forsook him and fled." Still he says, yet I am not alone, the Father is with me. We can adopt the same language.

Do we have burdens intolerable to be borne? The word says, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee." Do cares press upon us, ready to crush us? "Casting all your care upon him for he careth for you." Is our path rough, beset with trials and difficulties at every step? The road may be rough, but it cannot be long. I verily believe we are almost home. My prayer is, let thy kingdom come, put an end to carnage and strife, sorrow and crying, pain and anguish. O how much is in the land! I am homesick. My cry is, "Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven. "I sigh for the new heavens and earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, when all war will cease, all sin be cleansed out of it, and nothing remain but love, joy, peace.

While many scoffers say, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were," and close their eyes to what we think is truth, we cry, Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

"O land of rest, for thee I sigh."

Like as an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings; so our kind Father, when we ought to seek another and better home, suffers our nest to be all stirred up, in order to bear us up above this world, and lead us into green pastures, and by the side of still waters. The physician knows better than the patient what medicine he needs to effect a cure. The patient sometimes says, "that is such a bitter pill, I can't take it." The great Physician says, it is just the medicine you must take to effect a perfect cure. We look back, and say, there, I am glad I took it. "Before I was afflicted I went astray." No affliction "for the present seemeth joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby."

Do we cry out, this is a useless sorrow, an unnecessary affliction? "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment worketh out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." O let us take courage, knowing "tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope." Perhaps we pictured out our path as being very smooth, fair winds and no storms; when in reality, we have experienced adverse winds, storm after storm, till we sigh, in earnest, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every one whom he receiveth." "Let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

THE WHOLE ARMOR.

O speed thee, christian, on thy way,
And to thy armor cling;
With girded loins the call obey
That grace and mercy bring.

There is a battle to be fought,
An upward race to run;
A crown of glory to be sought,
A victory to be won.

O faint not, christian, for thy sighs
Are heard before his throne;
The race must come before the prize,
The cross before the crown.

For the World's Crisis.

"WHAT DO YE MORE THAN OTHERS?"—Matt. 5: 47.

This heart-searching question should be one of special interest to all who are waiting for the Lord from heaven and longing for his appearing. How many short comings, dear brethren and sisters, will it bring to our view in the light of God's word? See 1 Cor. 10: 24;—"Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth." Ver. 33;—"Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved." 13: 4;—"Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." Phil. 2: 3;—"Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." Luke 6: 35;—"Love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again." 1 Pet. 3: 3;—"Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

I have made but a limited selection from the word of God, which abounds both in example and precept as to what manner of persons we ought to be in all manner of conversation and godliness. Those who are christians indeed will let their light shine. What do ye more than others? is not asked of Christ's devoted followers. Noah, Abraham, Moses, and many others, were men wondered at in their generation. In our own day, "Muller's Life" is a living testimony of the power of faith in accomplishing works deemed by the world impossible. All of us can bring to mind instances where the fruits of a godly walk and conversation are evident to the world. Let us emulate "like precious faith," that we may be found ready for the "marriage supper of the Lamb."

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess;
So let our works and virtues shine,
To prove the doctrine all divine.

Religion bears our spirits up,
While we expect that blessed hope,
The bright appearance of our Lord,
And faith stands leaning on thy word."

REVELATION 21: 1-7.

What a precious portion of the "true and faithful word!" Present experience leads me to view and appreciate it as never before. Oft I inquire, shall I be an overcomer? shall such blessedness, such an inheritance, such complete exemption from suffering and trial, ever be realized by one so undeserving as I? O, shall I be permitted to share in such a triumph? if so, truly it will be of grace, all grace!

I would heed the exhortation in Crisis of Jan. 10th—"live better," "time is short." How much to do! how many golden moments I have wasted; how disobedient have I often been! God help me this new year to double my diligence, "redeeming the time."

Of any, and all, whom I may in any way have injured, directly or indirectly, in word or deed, I humbly crave forgiveness; as I freely forgive all, so I can be heard when I pray, "forgive me my trespasses."

Ye fainting, tried and tempted ones, burdened with mental, domestic or pecuniary trials; fainting under the power of disease, and at the approach of death; oh, rest in hope and faith, in the assurance of being among the victors in that glorious "state" referred to above; then with the trust of David, (Psalms 23), you can smile amid your tears; triumph in nature's sharpest conflict; overcome all, and finally "inherit all these things" (margin).

Thank God, we are to dwell but a short time now in this tabernacle, to weep amid these shadows. Night soon will pass. "The morn cometh," and with it the Heavenly Tabernacle, with its painless, sorrowless, deathless state. Then, praise God, all tears shall be forever dried; for the "former things" shall have forever passed away.

"PERDITION NEAR."

To whom? To Louis Napoleon. Read the following, said to be from the Vienna Presse:

"The Mexican monarchy is intended not only to react against the Anglo-Saxon race and the Democratic ideas of North America, but also against American Protestantism. Hence the immense enthusiasm with which the clerical party of both hemispheres has welcomed the advent of Maximilian.

By the erection of this throne Napoleon III. has rendered an immense service to the church, and this service is so highly appreciated by the court of Rome, that important concessions have been made therefor to the French government.

In view of the advantages that the court of Rome anticipates from Mexico, it has appeared necessary to have it represented there by a personality, decided and energetic. The Pope has therefore chosen (in accordance with the advice of Antonelli) as Nuncio to Mexico, the Minister of War of Rome—Monsignon de Morode—who on this occasion will be made a Cardinal. As Morode was on good terms with the French, it is thought, too, that his distant appointment will be satisfactory to the court of the Tuileries.

But the greater concession made to France will be the speedy elevation at the approaching consistory of the Abbe Lucien Bonaparte, long a resident of Rome, and the cameriere of the Pope to the rank of Cardinal.

"The Prince Lucien would then be eligible to the Papacy, and on the death of Pius IX. can thus await the end of his days in peace. If Bonaparte mounts the Pontifical throne, the Papacy and its temporal possessions are safe. We must say we are now witnessing very extraordinary things. An Austrian Archduke ascends the throne erected by a French Emperor, and the Emperor of Mexico becomes, by the force of circumstances, the mediator between the Tuileries and the Vatican."

That Napoleon III. is the last representative of the "scarlet colored beast" of Rev. 17, hardly admits of a doubt in our mind; and that he is to "go into perdition" is equally clear. What mischief he may first inflict on the world, we do not know; but that he will virtually become the head of the Latin, or Roman Catholic Church, we have often expressed as our conviction. That he designs mischief to the "Anglo-Saxons," and "Protestants" generally, we presume is a truth; but God is now disciplining the Anglo-Saxons and their "companions," or such as cleave to them, preparatory to a war with the Latin power, with Napoleon as its leader, so that Jehovah's "battle-axe" will be ready to strike the blow that shall "break in pieces the" Latin "nations," and send the "scarlet colored beast," or Napoleon dynasty, reeling "into perdition." That conflict seems to be hastening on, and when it comes we shall know that the end is nigh.—Herald of Life.

THE CRITICS AND THE BIBLE.

Faith and patience are wise readers of the Bible, and time is an excellent expositor. How many instances might be quoted where even celebrated critics have said that the Bible was wrong, and all the while they themselves were wrong in saying so. Theodore Beza was a learned man, and he thought—on the strength of a passage in Strabo—that Luke had written carelessly, the governor of Cyprus, Sergius Paulus, a Proconsul instead of a Proprætor, Acts 13: 7, and he actually submitted the word Proprætor in his own translation of the Acts; but prudent people waited a little, and soon afterwards some old coins of the island of Cyprus and some ancient inscriptions were turned up, which proved that Beza was wrong and Luke was right. And many of us may remember what a noise was made by a book published twenty-five years ago by a celebrated critic, Von Bohlen, in which he undertook to prove that the author of the books of Moses must have been a Chaldean, and could have known nothing of Egypt, because in the book of Exodus he speaks of vines and grapes in ancient Egypt, and of making wine there, and of buildings of brick, and of asses and sheep. And the faith of some was shaken by these objections; but wise men waited patiently; and thanks to the antiquarian researches of some recent explorers of Egypt, (Sir Gardener Wilkinson, Rosellina, and others), we all know now that the author of the Pentateuch was right, and that this celebrated critic was wrong.—Selec.

THE GREAT FAMILY UMBRELLA.

Many years ago an unusual drouth prevailed in Scotland, so that fears were entertained that the crops would be seriously injured thereby. Day after day for many weeks the sun had risen like a ball of fire, and even children watched in vain for clouds. Meetings for prayer were appointed in all the parishes, to ask God to send rain upon the parched earth. A good minister in one of the country churches, before the commencement of the services, noticed a little girl ascending the steps of the church bearing an unusually large umbrella—so large that it seemed quite a burden to carry. As no signs of rain had appeared, he smilingly inquired,

"Why, my little daughter, have you brought this big umbrella?"

"Why! sir," she replied, in a tone of surprise, "I thought we met to pray to God for rain, so I should surely need an umbrella."

Before the meeting closed the wind arose, the sky was overcast with clouds, and a drenching rain impressed upon minister and people the lesson the little girl and her great umbrella had taught.

Let all cultivate a child-like faith if we would receive answers to our prayers.—Selected by M. P.

THE PUNCTUAL MAN.

Mr. Higgins was a very punctual man in all his transactions through life. He amassed a large fortune by untiring industry and punctuality; and at the advanced age of ninety years was resting quietly on his bed, and calmly waiting to be called away. He had deliberately made almost every arrangement for his decease and burial.

His pulse grew fainter, and the light of life seemed just flickering in its sockets, when one of his sons observed—

"Father, you will probably live but a day or two; is it not well for you to name your bearers?"

"To be sure, my son," said the dying man, "it is well thought of and I will do it now."

He gave the names of six, the usual number, and sank back exhausted upon his pillow.

A gleam of thought passed over his withered features like a ray of light, and he rallied once more. "My son, read me the list. Is the name of Mr. Wiggins there?"

"It is, father."

"Then strike it off!" said he, emphatically; "for he was never punctual—was never anywhere in season, and he might hinder the procession a whole hour.

HOW TO BE MISERABLE.

Sit by your window and look over the way to your neighbor's excellent mansion which he has recently built, and paid for, and fitted out. "O that I was a rich man!"

Get angry with your neighbor, and think you have not a friend in the world. Shed a tear or two, and take a walk in the burial ground, continually saying to yourself, "When shall I be buried here?

Sign a note for a friend, and never forget your kindness, and every hour in the day whisper to yourself, "I wonder if he will ever pay that note?"

Think everybody means to cheat you. Closely examine every bill you take, and doubt its being genuine until you have put the owner to a great deal of trouble. Put confidence in noboby, and believe every man you trade with to be a rogue.

Never accommodate if you can possibly help it. Never visit the sick or afflicted, and never give a farthing to assist the poor.

Buy as cheap as you can, and screw down to the lowest mill. Grind the faces and hearts of the unfortunate.

Brood over your misfortunes, your lack of talents, and believe that at no distant day you will come to want. Let the workhouse be ever in your mind, with all the horrors of distress and poverty.

Follow these recipes strictly, and you will be miserable to your heart's content—if we may so speak—sick at heart and at variance with the world. Nothing will cheer or encourage you—nothing throw a gleam of sunshine or a ray of warmth into your heart.

Pride.—We have often heard a half-grown-up boy say pettishly to his mother, "I don't like to be seen carrying a big bundle through the streets." But true pride is ashamed of such littleness of mind. Mr. Astor, the wealthy millionaire of New York, was reluctant to sell some goods to a young man except for cash. The merchant paid for them, and took them on his shoulder to carry out of the store. Mr. Astor looked in surprise, but before the merchant had gone many steps he called him back, saying, "You may buy on credit any amount. I can trust you, sir. A man who is not ashamed to do his own work is sure to succeed." Here is another lesson for false pride.

The Gentleman.—A minister should be a gentleman. This, of course, involves polished manners and attention enough to the etiquette of life. But this is secondary, and always secondary. To bow well, and walk well, and be graceful at table, and in society, all this is but the outer garb of a gentleman. The inner heart is a far better thing, and manners are not its essence. A gentleman is frank and manly; a gentleman is sincere and straightforward; a gentleman is of a gentle spirit, considerate of the feelings of others, knowing how to say things, even though they be most unpleasant, in a handsome way. If you can say of a preacher that he is a christian gentleman, you say what is the highest praise.

Damage from Soda in Washing.—Thirty years ago the linen parts of shirts were worn out before the cotton; now it is the reverse; and both perish much sooner than they used to. The cotton does not last a third as long, in the experience of some of our acquaintance. This hasty rotting of cotton fabrics is ascribed to the hasty processes of bleaching, and to the excessive use of soda in washing, but, in the worst cases, chiefly to the latter. A prudent housekeeper should watch to prevent her servants from using soda, to save themselves labor; servants have been known to buy it with their own money for that purpose. As for those who depend on laundresses, there is no remedy but to find, if possible, a laundress who makes clothes last well. The use of a good washing apparatus should abate this mischief.

Caterpillars.—Perhaps there is no better time to destroy caterpillars than during the cold weather. By carefully examining the trees the egg that is to produce the insect next season will be easily detected. Wherever a dark, smooth, gummy looking substance is found on the small limbs, sometimes completely encircling them, the caterpillar egg may also be found. This substance will readily cleave off, and the whole deposit for thousands of the disgusting and injurious insect may easily be destroyed. We think the owners of orchards can profitably employ the time in examining their trees for these caterpillar deposits. If they are not sharply looked after now there will be an enormous number of nests another season, for there has rarely been a time when there were so many of the pestiferous things burdening the trees as last summer.

To prevent Cattle from Jumping.—A "Soldier Boy" writes us that he has always succeeded in breaking cattle of the habit of jumping by piercing the ears of the unruly animals, and tying them over the head with a piece of twine or ribbon. The philosophy of this is, that an animal always droops its ears when about to jump. When thus tied, this cannot be done, and the idea is abandoned.—Prairie Farmer.

Polished Boots.—Brightly polished boots are cooler in warm weather, and warmer in cold weather than dull and dusty boots; for in warm weather they reflect the sun, which dusty and dirty boots absorb; and in cold weather the clean boot does not allow the warmth of your foot to radiate freely, whereas the unclean boot does.

Emptiness of the World.—The late Duke of Queensbury, leaning over the balcony of his beautiful villa at Richmond, where every pleasure was collected which wealth could purchase or luxury devise, followed with his eyes the majestic Thames, and exclaimed.—"Oh that wearisome river! Will it never cease running, running, and I so tired of it?"—Remains of Mrs. R. Trench.

Good Advice.—Be careful of your table talk. Do all your biting at the table in biting your food. Don't be biting in your remarks.

THE HARD WAY.

Bob Winslow was the worst boy in the village. His father never checked him, but let him have his own way till he had grown to be the terror of the neighborhood. He particularly loved to make sport of old, lame, crippled persons. There was one poor woman, bent down by age and infirmities, that Bob used especially to make game of. She came every day, leaning on her crutch, to draw water from the well near her house, and just within the play-ground of the school-house. Bob would sometimes follow close behind her, pretending to be lame, and hobbling along on his umbrella for a crutch, and mimicing her motions. "Only look at her," he would say, "isn't she like the letter S with an extra crook in it?" One day when he was doing this the old woman turned round, and, looking at him reproachfully, said, "Go home, child, and read the story about Elisha and the two bears out of the woods."

"Shame on you, Bob!" said Charles Mansfield, one of the best boys in the school. "Shame, I say, to laugh at the poor woman's misfortune! I've heard my grandmother say that she became a cripple by lifting her poor, afflicted son, and tending him night and day."

"I don't care what made her so," said Bob. "I wouldn't stay in the world if I was such an ugly-looking thing as that. Do look!"

"Shame, shame on you!" said Charles, and, "Shame, shame!" echoed from each of the boys present. "You may get your own back broken one of these days, Bob—who knows?"

Charles Mansfield sprang to the old woman, and said, "Let me help you, grandmother." Then he kindly took her pail, filled it at the well and carried it home for her, and the boys made an arrangement for one of them to come every day and fetch her a pail of water. "God bless you! God bless you all, dear boys!" said the old woman, as she wiped away her tears and entered her poor, lonely home.

Bob Winslow's conduct was reported to the master. He was much grieved, and sentenced him to stay in school and study, instead of going out to play at recess, for a week. This was pretty hard punishment, for Bob had but very little love for study, but was prodigiously fond of play. Yet this was a slight punishment compared with what he was soon to receive.

On the second day of his confinement he sat near the open window watching the boys at their sports in the play-ground. Suddenly, while the master was occupied in another part of the room, he rose and jumped from the window into the midst of the boys, with a shout at what he had done. "Now let him punish me again, if he can!" cried he. As he said this he ran backwards, and threw up his arms in defiance, and shouting, when—suddenly his voice ceased; there was a heavy plunge, and a loud groan burst on the ears of his startled companions.

It so happened that the well of which we have spoken was being repaired. The workmen were at a distance collecting their materials, and had carelessly left the opening of the well uncovered. As Bob was going backward at the very moment of his triumph, he stepped into the mouth of the well, and down he went. There was a cry of horror from the boys. They all rushed to the spot. Charles Mansfield, the bravest of them all, was the first to seize the well rope. He jumped into the bucket, and got the boys to lower him down. The well was deep, but fortunately there was not much water in it; and Bob lay motionless at the bottom. Charles lifted him carefully, and with one arm around his apparently lifeless body, the other on the rope, he gave the signal and was slowly raised to the top. The pale face of the wicked boy filled his companions with horror. Without saying a word they carried him to the house of the poor woman whom he had treated so cruelly. She had seen the accident from her window, and was hobbling along on her crutch to meet them. Poor Bob was taken into her humble home, and laid upon her bed. The kind-hearted old woman, forgetful of his ill-treatment of her, got out her bandages, her camphor bottle and other things; and while one of the boys ran for the doctor, and another for their teacher, she sat down by his side and bathed his hands and forehead as tenderly as if he had been her own son. After the doctor had dressed his wound, he was carried on a litter to his own home, surrounded by his sorrowing companions, but still insensible.

A few hours later in the day a group of boys met on the play-ground. They talked to one another in a low voice. They looked pale and sad. Presently Charles Mansfield came up.

"Well, boys, how is poor Bob now? Have any of you heard?"

"O, Charlie!" cried several at once, as they gathered round him. "O, don't you know? Haven't you heard? Why, he has opened his eyes and is able to speak; but his back is broken, and he will be a cripple and a hunchback for life."

Charles clasped his hands without uttering a word, and burst into tears. At last, with the tears still streaming down his pale cheeks, but with a manly voice, he said, "Boys, I hope we shall never forget the lesson we have learned to-day. The Bible says, the way of the transgressor is hard;" and poor Bob's experience proves how true that is."—Pittsburg Advocate.

FIBBING.

"Why, Neddie, where have you been?" inquired Mrs. Stepney of her son Edward, a boy of ten, as he entered the parlor a little flushed with running. "It is six o'clock, and your school closes at four. What have you been doing since school, my son?"

"Oh, ma," replied the boy, "when we play base ball, we have such jolly good fun, we don't think at all about the clock or tea-time, or any thing else. Is tea ready now?"

The answer led Edward's mother to conclude that he had been playing base-ball. What else could she think? But had he been playing that game with his schoolmates? Not at all. He had been "kept in" by his teacher for bad lessons, and was ashamed to confess his disgrace. So he made his mother believe that he had been playing.

"What a shame and a sin it is for you to deceive your good mother so!" said Neddie's conscience as he sat eating his nice supper.

"I don't care," replied the boy to this faithful but troublesome voice. "I don't care. I did'nt tell her a lie. I didn't say I had been playing at base-ball."

"But you said words which made your mother think you had, and which you meant should make her think so, replied conscience.

But Edward was stubborn. He had entered the wrong path, and so he went to bed leaving the false impression on his mother's mind.

Children, did Edward lie or not? "Of course he did, sir," I hear you reply. You are right, my children. Edward did not squarely lie, because he did not say he had been playing base-ball; but he used words which deceived her just as he meant they should. He intended to deceive her, and that intention made his words a lie. Indeed, it was a very bad sort of lie, because it was dressed up in the livery of truth.

Some children would call Eddie's lie a fib. Nonsense! A fib is a lie. Every word you utter, my child, with an intention to produce a false impression on some person's mind, is a lie. So be careful of your words. Always tell the exact truth, for no character is more hateful either to God or man than that of the liar.—S. S. Advocate.

"JUST GOING TO."

"Now, mother, isn't Hal too provoking? He promised to take me strawberrying with him, and now he has gone and left me," cried Jessie, trying to keep back her tears.

"Our Hal broken his promise?" Her mother looked as if she could hardly believe it.

"Why no, mother, I suppose not, exactly. You see, he said I might go if I would be ready at two o'clock, and I was just going to put on my things, when he started off as hard as he could run. There he is now, away down the other side of the common!" she added, with a little sob.; and it's a quarter past two.

Why didn't you get ready in time?"

"I didn't think it was so late. Besides, I was going as soon as I finished Dolly's apron. But Hal said the rest were waiting, and he could not stay another minute."

"And you don't blame him, Jessie? He had no right to keep the other children waiting, any more than you had to keep him. I am sorry you have lost your afternoon's pleasure, just because you were behind the time, but you can do nothing now but make the best of it, and learn that while you are "just going," your chance may be "just gone."

Jessie, who had learned that "it is no use to cry for spilled milk" drew a deep sigh, and sat down to console herself with a book.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

PAST, PRESENT, FUTURE.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Time rushes swiftly like a river,
Nor stays its progress onward ever,
Since God pronounced it Day and Night,"
To mark its ever restless flight.
What mighty changes have there been,
What desolation man hath seen;
Kings have ruled with bloody sway,
And like their glory passed away.

Friends we have met in days of yore,
Alas! we see them now no more;
Painful now those halcyon days,
When we together sung God's praise.
Tears course my cheeks o'er hopes long sped;
With grief I mourn the dear ones dead;
But death shall end his baleful reign,
And saints shall wake to life again.

O earth! thy charms but make me weary,
Thy smiles are empty, void and dreary;
No spot upon thy vast domain
Is found secure from death and pain;
But glorious hope within my breast
Looks forward to that land of rest,
Where all the loved of earth shall meet,
Mid joys eternal, pure and sweet.

Great God, impart the needed grace
To help us rightly seek that place;
And as earth's sun is gliding down
Beneath God's righteous, angry frown;
Then when the day of doom shall break,
And all the saints in Christ awake,
It will be blessed to unite
With all the blood-washed, clad in white.

Beneath fair Salem's massive dome,
The saints' eternal, happy home,
Where all is peaceful and serene,
Be present at the nuptial scene;
O, then, the ransomed host will raise
In raptures loud their songs of praise;
To Christ, the mighty conquering King,
The blood-besprinkled hosts will sing.

"PROMISE OF THE FATHER."

NUMBER THREE.

In discussing the subject of Female Preaching, as it is technically called, (although we do not admit the use of the word in its popular sense as applying only to taking a desk and text), we can support our position by noticing the numerous individual instances, recorded in the word, of women on whom rested "the burden of the word of the Lord."

We have examined the texts which show that the "daughters," as well as the "sons," should prophesy. Now we want the evidence that they did so. The first citation is of a more general character.

Sister Palmer refers to Ps. 68 : 11;—"The Lord gave the word; great was the company that published it." She quotes Drs. Clark and Benson as authority for considering the text as a general proof that females were engaged, even under the old dispensation, in preaching the word; and further, that the number thus engaged was not small. The common version according to these authorities does not give the full meaning of the text. "Benson says indeed the Hebrew word hambasseroth, here rendered that published it, is in the feminine gender, and therefore refers chiefly to women. Dr. Clarke quotes the original text, ham-me basseroth tsaba rab, and follows it with the literal rendering—'Of the female preachers there was a great host'; and then, as though he anticipated the incredulity with which it would be received, says, 'Such is the literal translation of the passage; the reader may make of it what he pleases.'"

Sister Palmer says further: "Though this excellent commentator suggests that 'the reader may make of it what he chooses,' it certainly ought to be assumed that all sincere christians, whether male or female, will in their Scripture searchings make it their highest pleasure to ascertain the mind of the Spirit. The individual who shrinks from seeking with all holy carefulness to thus know, adopting the Bible rule by comparing Scripture with Scripture, fearful that he may be compelled to sustain some unpopular theory, is in a state of mind to warrant the belief that he shall not know this or any other doctrine whether it be of God."

How sensible are these remarks. Suppose that after reading this literal rendering, some should make the effort to put it aside,—and such efforts may be made,—would it not show an unwillingness to accept, lest it should commit the persons to a position they do not care to endorse. Dr. Clark is acknowledged to be one of the best linguists of the age, and his critical translations cannot be easily set aside. He is not certainly infallible, but he has often given his testimony in favor of positions opposite in the extreme to the popular theories of the so-called evangelical churches, and we cannot do better in this case than to receive his translation as the yea and amen of the truth.

There are some who claim that they are looking over the word as they should, and deny what we affirm. We do not propose to say they are not sincere, but there is no proof of the tenableness of their position. They are, however, quite willing to reproach those of the weaker sex who feel the crushing "wo." One of this class writes: "Brethren come to me and say that this practice is not according to the original text, and is unscriptural"; but she says shrewdly, "I am unprepared to meet them on that ground, and can only refer them to the Bible as it now reads, supposing it means just what it says; and certainly there is evidence enough in the English Bible to sustain those whose souls have been so stirred by the almost overwhelming conviction that death would be a relief, when they resolve to go forward.

We have the general evidence from the text quoted that there have been, even back to the earliest day of the history of God's people, "a great host" of "female preachers." We find another text which, though indirect, is strong evidence. Ezek. 13 : 17:—"Son of man, set thy face against the daughters of thy people which prophesy out of their own heart." Mark the language. It can certainly be inferred that there were true prophetesses, if there were false ones, and the evidence is increased when we notice that the prophet was not required to set his face against any prophesying daughters except those who prophesied "out of their own heart," not being directed by the Lord.

Said a brother, "There were no females among the prophets." The above is certainly general proof that there were; and as special proof, before referring to the N. T. proof, we find at least seven persons who are particularly mentioned. Miriam (Ex. 15 : 20), Deborah, wife of Lapidoth (Judg. 4 : 4), Huldah, wife of Shallum, who dwelt at Jerusalem in the college (2 Kings 22 : 14), Noadiah, one of the false ones (Neh. 6 : 14), Iriah's wife (Isa. 8 : 3); and on in the New Testament, Anna, who was remarkable for her piety and faithfulness (Luke 2 : 36).

In the New Testament we find as general evidence, Phil. 4 : 3. The apostle (Paul) says, "Salute those women who labored with me in the gospel." It is well known that efforts have been made to prove that this text only refers to the pecuniary and culinary assistance that christian females rendered the apostles. In other words, "laboring in the gospel" was "laboring" in the house. It is not denied that it is a part of the christian duty of females to administer to the temporal wants of the brethren; but is that the literal meaning of the language? Can we in conscience before God honestly put such a construction as that upon his word? Is it candid? Is it not carnal, and an effort to sustain ones own opinions?

Mrs. Taft, wife of Dr. Taft, tells the following story touching this view of the subject. She says, as related by Sr. Palmer: "When Mr. L. Harrison first came to Colne circuit, his prejudice against female preaching was very strong, and he spoke quite freely against it in several places. My mother thought it best to have a little conversation with him. For this purpose she went to the chapel house where he lived, and among other things asked him how he understood the passage, 'Help those women who labored with me in the gospel.' He replied, 'My wife helps me when she sweeps the house, mends my clothes, etc.' She replied, 'Mr. Harrison, is that the gospel? I have done with you if that is your gospel.'" How strange that a professed christian minister should resort to such a subterfuge and question the plain word of God, or deny the hand-maids the prerogatives made theirs by the promise of the Father. It only shows that there is yet much to learn before the position of the church is perfectly understood or God's order in the church comprehended.

The text, in the Vulgate, has the sense of similar or simultaneous operators (laborers), and how could woman thus labor with Paul if they only did housework, unless he did the same thing? The lady might certainly say to Mr. Harrison, "I have done with you, if that is your gospel."

Notice the Greek word "gospel," in the text—Euangelion, from eu, good, and angelia, message, and is defined by Greenfield to mean "glad tidings, good or joyful news, doctrines of the gospel, the preaching of (mark it!) or instruction in the gospel." Notice these definitions carefully, and it will be seen that to "labor in the gospel" is not to do ordinary work in the house, even though it were, like Martha, to wait on Jesus, or wait on Paul, mend his clothes, or prepare his food. Such an interpretation is unworthy of God's word.

Angelos (English, angel) means messenger. A messenger is implied in angelia, message, from which the word gospel is derived; and certainly a "messenger" is implied in such definitions given above, as "news," "preach," "instruct"; and Paul tells us who these messengers were in the text quoted, to wit: "women." We might, if it were necessary, give a free translation of the text as follows: "Assist those women who made united efforts with me in preaching the gospel." That this is according to the literal meaning can not be denied, and it makes it as clear as the light, that women are not out of place in proclaiming, according to their several ability, "the glorious gospel of the blessed God."

The individual instances are still further corroborative. In Rom. 16 : 12, Paul says: "I commend unto you Phebe, servant of the church, which is at Cenchrea, that ye receive her in the Lord as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you; for she hath been a succorer of many and of myself also." We are met here by the same argument that we have noticed previously.

It is said that the position Phebe occupied depends on the meaning of the word servant, and it is affirmed that is proof that Phebe was only engaged in providing for the poor, and laboring in the gospel according to Mr. Harrison's definition. The word translated "servant" is diaconon, from diaconia. The primary meaning is minister; so Sawyer's translation has it. It is true that one may "minister in carnal things" as well as in "spiritual things." It is also true that the word diaconia is used with reference to "serving tables" (Acts 6 : 2); but it is used in verse four when the apostles said, "We will give ourselves unto prayer, and the ministry (diaconia) of the word." It cannot be proved that Phebe was solely a waiter on tables, i. e., that she only provided for tables, even though she was a "succorer of many," for the "bread of life" sustains christians as really as temporal bread, and doubtless Paul and "many" others had been helped by her in that sense.

We are referred sometimes to the appointment of seven men in Acts 6 : 1–4, as proof of the fact that diaconia means to serve tables. The expression (trapezais properyias), "provide for tables"; but let it be understood that the "seven men" who were thus appointed are no where called (diaconoi) deacons, and their work was not exclusively to be the almoners of the church to the Lord's poor, for they did preach.

Philip, one "of the seven," is called (Acts 21 : 8, evangelistes) "an evangelist," preacher of the gospel. We read of him that he "was found (after having preached to the eunuch and baptized him, and had been "caught away" by the Spirit of the Lord,) at Azotus," and passing through he preached in all the cities till he came to Cesarea. Acts 8 : 40. He "had four daughters," we are told, "virgins, who did prophesy," and they certainly may be added to the "host of female preachers."

Stephen was another of "the seven," and one of his sermons may be read in the seventh of Acts. If the deacons preached, would the deaconesses be forbidden? We think not.

PAUPER SLIPS.

"The poor have the gospel preached to them." Where? In those splendid churches whose spires point and reach so far heavenward, where soft-cushioned slips look so inviting to the weary? Is it there? Where can the poor disciple of Jesus have as good a seat in God's house as the rich sinner? Where? O, ye despisers of them that are good, answer. Are there pauper slips in God's house? Who put them there? Friends, when you dedicated that house to God, did you give him to understand your admirable arrangement of those nice slips, in the body of the house, for those rich saints and sinners, that you might thus draw money from them to support the gospel? Did you? And also that other nice arrangement of slips away back in the corners, or behind the doors, where poor saints and sinners would not annoy or repel those rich ones from whom you expect means to support the gospel,—did you give him to understand that? If not, were you honest? Ought you not to have told him what you had done, so that he could say at last, "Well done, good and faithful" servants, ye have been faithful to the trust committed to you in making such admirable arrangements for providing means for the support of my gospel? Would not such be a truthful way of doing business?

O may God have mercy on the poor; and especially on him who shuts up the kingdom of heaven, who will not enter, nor suffer those that would to enter. O how forcibly the Scripture at the head of this article came to mind, when I learned from a friend, a mechanic, that he did not go to church because he could not afford it, not being able to obtain a slip for his family for less than $30, and, being deaf, could not get one where he could hear short of $75! Will not God visit for these things?

For the World's Crisis.

"READ THIS, I PRAY THEE."

Turning to "The book of Common Prayer," of the church of England, published in Oxford, 1818, you may there read the Creed, not of Paul, but of Saint Athanasius, as follows:—"Whosoever will be saved; before all, it is necessary that he hold the Catholic faith. Which faith except every one do keep whole and undefiled, without doubt he shall perish everlastingly. And the Catholic faith is this:—"

The above being true, "we ought to give the more earnest heed" to Athanasius' definition of the Catholic faith, which he gives as follows:—"That we worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity. Neither confounding the persons, nor dividing the substance. For there is ONE person of the Father, another of the Son, and another of the Holy Ghost. But the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is ALL ONE; the glory equal, the majesty co-eternal. Such as the Father is, such is the Son; and such is the Holy Ghost. The Father uncreate, the Son uncreate, and the Holy Ghost uncreate. The Father incomprehensible, the Son incomprehensible, and the Holy Ghost incomprehensible. The Father eternal, the Son eternal, and the Holy Ghost eternal. And yet there are NOT three eternals, but one eternal. As also there are not three incomprehensibles; nor three uncreated; but ONE uncreated, and ONE incomprehensible. So likewise the Father is Almighty, the Son Almighty, and the Holy Ghost Almighty. And yet there are not three Almighties, but one Almighty. So the Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Ghost is God. And yet there are not three Gods, but one God. So likewise the Father is Lord, the Son Lord, and the Holy Ghost Lord. And yet there are not three Lords, but one Lord. For like as we are compelled by the christian verity to acknowledge every person by himself to be God and Lord; so are we forbidden by the Catholic religion to say, there be three Gods, or three Lords.

"The Father is made of none; neither created, nor begotten. The Son is of the Father alone, not made, nor created, BUT BEGOTTEN. The Holy Ghost is of the Father, and of the Son; neither made, nor created, nor begotten, but proceeding. So there is one Father, not three Fathers; one Son, not three Sons; one Holy Ghost, not three Holy Ghosts. And in this Trinity none is afore or after the other; none is greater or less than another; but the the whole three persons are co-eternal, together, and co-equal. So that in all things, as is aforesaid; the Unity in Trinity, and the Trinity in Unity is to be worshipped. He therefore that will be saved MUST thus think of the Trinity."

"Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God"; but did such a faith as the above come thus? We may well exclaim, "MYSTERY," on reading such a creed as the above. Perhaps those who profess faith in it, and make it a test of salvation, think they understand it; but we doubt it, and it may well be queried whether his Holiness, the Pope of Rome, who holds this absurd dogma in common with the Protestant sects, can explain or harmonize it, either he or they. That a Father, a Son, and a Holy Ghost, three distinct, co-equal, and co-eternal persons, alike uncreated, equally almighty, each equally by himself God, (and such is the teaching of the above creed, if it is at all intelligible;) are not THREE PERSONS, but ONE; is simply a monstrous absurdity, and we do not fear to reject it. And certainly the Bible contradicts it most fully; it teaches no such thing; no such creed is to be read there. What an unwarranted, unchristian assumption, to claim that unless an individual receives this unreasonable, unscriptural belief, he shall "WITHOUT DOUBT perish everlastingly." It is not possible for the human mind to conceive of three co-equal persons, and not conceive of three beings, and most, may I not say all christians, do conceive of "ONE GOD the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ." This was Paul's creed, and it is ours; older, and more beautiful than the one we have copied, the product of darkness and wickedness, originated perhaps by those who, after Paul's day, spoke "perverse things to draw away disciples after them."

Let us "search the Scriptures," and learn our faith or creed from the Bible. I hope the preachers of Trinitarianism, as above set forth, will learn better than to use the text, "What think ye of Christ? whose SON is he?" as authority for such a profession of faith,—the faith of the "mother of harlots," popular in the "dark ages," and best becoming such a period.

CHRISTIAN UNION.—No. 2.

"And the glory which Thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one."—ST. JOHN 17 : 22.

The above prayer of our Lord was not exclusively for the apostles, as we learn from the 19th verse: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe ot me through their word; that they all may be one."

Christ designed that all of his disciples should be one in spirit, one in rights and privileges, and one in sharing the glories of his heavenly kingdom. The above prayer was literally answered in the organization of the first christian church, the members of which, "were all of one heart and of one soul;" (Acts 4; 32,) and would doubtless have so remained, had they abode "steadfast in the apostle's doctrine."

The best and holiest men that ever lived, the most Godlike and successful in labors of love, were convinced of the evils of sects and sectarianism; the splitting up of God's people into shreds and parties, with various names, creeds, confessions of faith and "church standards," unauthorized and unscriptural. They saw the serpent of serpents against which Paul aimed a deadly thrust, saying to the Corinthians, "Are ye not carnal"? "for, whereas, there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men? For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?"—1 Cor. 3 : 3, 4. "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences, contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them." Rom. 16 : 17.

Some of these holy men died with the desire on their lips. They could not bequeath a legacy of peace to the church as their dying Lord did, but they approached his example as nearly as they were able, by earnestly desiring it for those they left behind. Some of them, who had contended too eagerly concerning minor points, saw and acknowledged their error even on this side of death. How admirable the letter in which Ridley, writing to Hooper—when both of them were prisoners for Christ—laments their "little jarring in time past about the by-matters and circumstances of religion," but assures him that, "with his whole heart in the bowels of Christ, he loves him for the truth's sake, which abideth in us." "If the ruptures of the church might be composed," says Chillingworth, (English church) "I do heartily wish that the cement were made of my dearest blood."

"I confess," writes Owen (of the Cong'l. church) "I would rather, much rather, spend all my time and days making up and healing the breaches and schisms that are amongst christians, than one hour in justifying our divisions, even wherein on the one side they are capable of a just defense. Hooker in his Ecc'l Polity" writes thus: "Far more comfort were it for us to labor under the same yoke as men who look for the same eternal reward of their labors; to be conjoined with you in bonds of indissoluble love and unity; to live as if, our persons being many, our hearts were but one, rather than in such dismembered sort to spend our few and wretched days in a tedious prosecuting of wearisome contentions, the end whereof, if they have not some speedy end, will be heavy on both sides."

How solemn the adjuration of Bishop Hall when preaching before the Synod of Dords—he adjures his hearers thus: "By that tremendous name of the Almighty God by our own souls—by the most holy compassions of Jesus Christ our Savior, aim at peace, brethren; enter into peace; that laying aside all prejudice, party spirit, and evil affections, we may all come to a happy agreement in the same truth." "It has long been my grief, as well as my wonder," writes Boyle, "to see such wide breaches and vast divisions in affection." "I," exclaimed Baxter, in the golden sentence we have already quoted, "I can as willingly be a martyr for love as for any article of the creed." And such is the spirit breathed in the writings of a Wesley, a Whitefied, and indeed of all the most distinguished "fathers of the modern churches."

Wesley says in his preface to Notes on the New Testament:—"Would to God that all the party names, and unscriptural phrases and forms, which have divided the christian world, were forgotten, and that we might all agree to sit down together as humble, loving disciples, at the feet of our common Master, to hear his word, imbibe his spirit, and to transcribe his life in our own." Such was the language of this great and good man, at an age, or time of life, when his thoughts had matured and ripened into fixed principles; and when experience had taught him the evil of party names and divisions among the humble, loving disciples of Christ.

Whitfield alluding to the evils of sects and sectarianism, speaks thus:—

"Though we all profess to own one Lord, one faith, one baptism; though Jesus Christ never was, and never will be, divided in himself; yet the followers of Jesus Christ have in all ages been sadly divided among themselves; and what has rendered the case the more to be pitied is, that they have generally been divided about the circumstantials of religion, they have generally received one another to doubtful disputation, and embittered one another's hearts, by talking about those things which they might either do or not do, either know or not know, and yet at the same time be the true followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. I am verily persuaded that this is the great artifice and engine of the devil."

These great and good men saw clearly, believed firmly, the spirit of schism, or breach of christian unity, was the work of Satan, issuing from the bottomless pit; and yet it appears they did not act up to their convictions of duty from the light received. They remained in their sectarian folds, held on to their creeds, shibboleths, and denominational peculiarities. Their "hearts were better than their heads" "Thou that teachest another, teachest thou not then thyself?"

"Away, then, with this evil, ye who love
The holy principles of God's blessed word,
And to the truthful pattern there inscribed
Study to bear resemblance. Use no more
Your shibboleths, and rods of measuring lines,
But make alone the perfect LAW OF LOVE
The testing point, standard of fellowship;
So shall ye flourish like the bay trees, green
And freshly watered, and the words of life
Like rivers flow unfettered, while the Lord
Shall be well pleased, and smile approvingly."

GIVE US THE LIGHT.

A certain minister who preached in this place, a few weeks since, in referring to Mr. Thurman's work on chronology, said he had examined it, and was satisfied in his own mind, that there were many weak points in it; and exhorted the people to beware, lest in endorsing that work, they should risk another time failure, or used words to that effect. Other preachers of some note, have given similar advice through the Crisis. Would it not be wiser, and safer for those preachers, to defer publicly commenting on Mr. Thurman's work, until they can adduce the proof, which they say they have satisfactory to their own minds, of the weak points of the work in question.

There are persons connected with those looking for Christ's advent, who are qualified with intellect and education sufficient to go into the merits or demerits of the work, and show up the "weak points" in Mr. Thurman's arrangements,—if such there be. Pardon me, if I would say to such, please inquire if it may not be your duty to use your talents, for the time being, in this direction. Mr. Thurman doubtless desires you to do so, if he is sincere, (which I think no one can doubt who has seen him). Let the Crisis, or some other paper, open to the investigation of Bible subjects, be the medium through which we may be able to separate the true from the false, that he may run who reads. Those time measurements in Daniel and John are among the "all Scripture" which "is profitable," etc. Yours for myself, and many others deeply interested in this matter.

HOLINESS.

I want to be pure in heart. I want to be perfect in love, and perfect in obedience. I will not rest satisfied until I am filled with "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the HOLY GHOST." You will say amen to that.

Some old professors say we cannot be entirely free from sin until death; they will tell you that a holy person would not be fit to live in this world; and if you become holy you would be taken out of the world. Our answer is, "We are not afraid to try it." We want to be as meek as Moses, and as patient as Job, and as holy as Samuel; and we would ask, as Elisha did, for a double portion of the spirit of Elijah. Would there be danger of our being "exalted above measure" if we possessed all these gifts? Let us remember that they are gifts, and let us not glory or boast as though we had by our own strength obtained them.

We should each esteem other better than ourselves. Have we not committed sin enough in time past to make us hang our heads in shame and confusion forever? Then let us remember the wormwood and the gall; and while the time past of our life may suffice us to have lived in sin, let us from henceforth resolve to live as becometh saints. Yes, we have been the servants of sin long enough. Now let us obey from the heart the true doctrine; let us obey the command of the MOST HIGH, "Be ye holy, for I am holy."

But some who have professed the blessing of "perfect love" have fallen back into a state of indifference, or of stupidity and lukewarmness. And some argue from that that we cannot retain the blessing, and therefore it is useless to strive for it. Do they reason thus in the things of this life? If one person who had great possessions has lost all, would they therefore refuse to accept a large portion of the same gold that perisheth? I trow not.

Then away with such false reasoning. Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from your sinful slumbers, and put on the robe of righteousness prepared for you. Lay your all on the altar that sanctifieth the gift. Plunge boldly into the ocean of GOD's boundless love.

Do not be afraid of the purity of the elements. If you had been confined in a loathsome dungeon, shut out from the pure air, would you refuse to come out when your prison doors were opened, on the plea that the pure air would be dangerous for you to breathe? No. You would gladly risk that if you could obtain your liberty. Then do not be afraid to come out into the glorious liberty of the sons of GOD.

Listen no longer to the lies of the enemy, who tells you you could not live if you were holy. Do you not see how this contradicts the truth? The truth is, you cannot have life without holiness. Then come up out of the wilderness, leaning upon the BELOVED.

We cannot be ready to meet the Lord without that perfect love that casteth out fear.

West Sutton, Mass. F. H. C.

OLD AND NEW STYLE.

These terms are of frequent occurrence in history, astronomy, and various departments of science, and the following explanation, not accessible in the original to all readers, may be valuable to many who are careful in regard to dates:

The Julian calendar continued in use among the Romans until the fall of the Empire, and throughout Christendom, till 1582. The festivals of the christian church were determined by it. With regard to Easter, however, it was necessary to have reference to the course of the moon. The Jews celebrated Easter (i. e., the Passover), on the 14th of the month Nisan; (or March); the christians in the same month, but always on a Sunday. Now, as the Easter of the christians sometimes coincided with the Passover of the Jews, and it was thought unchristian to celebrate so important a festival at the same time as the Jews did, it was resolved at the Council of Nice, A. D. 325, that, from that time, Easter should be solemnized on the Sunday following the first full moon after the vernal equinox, which was then supposed to take place on the 21st of March. As the course of the moon was thus made the foundation for determining the time of Easter, the lunar cycle of Meton was taken for this purpose; according to which the year contains 365 1-4 days, and the new moons, after a period of 19 years, return on the same days as before. The inaccuracy of the Julian year, thus combined with the lunar cycle, must have soon discovered itself, on a comparison with the true time of the commencement of the equinoxes, since the received length of 365 1-4 days exceeds the true by about 11 minutes; so that, for every such Julian year, the equinox receded 11 minutes, or a day in about 130 years. In consequence of this, in the sixteenth century, the vernal equinox had changed its place in the calendar from the 21st to the 10th—i. e, it really took place on the 10th, instead of the 21st, on which it was placed in the calendar. Aloysius Lilus, a physician of Verona, projected a plan for amending the calendar, which, after his death, was presented by his brother to Pope Gregory XIII. To carry it into execution, the Pope assembled a number of prelates and learned men. In 1577 the proposed change was adopted by all the Catholic princes, and in 1582 Gregory issued a brief, abolishing the Julian calendar in all Catholic countries, and introducing in its stead the one now in use, under the name of the Gregorian, or reformed calendar, or the new style, as the other was now called the old style. The amendment consisted in this: 10 days were dropped after the 4th of October, 1582, and the 15th was immediately reckoned after the 4th.

Thus the change made by Gregory was simply dropping ten days in the reckoning of the month, and calling the 5th the 15th. This change would not in the least affect the reckoning of the days of the week. Thus the 4th of October, 1582, fell on Thursday. The next day, Friday, instead of being called the 5th, was called the 12th; but it held its order in the week just as usual. So we see that the regular succession of weeks, and the regular recurrence of the Sabbath, was in no wise interrupted by this change.—Encyclopedia Americana, Art., Calendar.

GOOD PHILOSOPHY.—There is a passage in Wilhelm Von Humboldt's "Letters to a Lady" which is worthy of being read daily by some men and women. It is this: "The light and shade, the happiness and the unhappiness of a man's life, depend upon the disposition with which he regards it. An unalloyed contentment of mind cannot be bought by man, it is the golden gift of heaven. But it is within the reach of all to soften to himself the rough shocks of life in this world. He may receive them courageously, sustain them patiently, and by his prudence alleviate or turn them aside; but even if his mind be unequal to these exertions, it need not, as is the case with too many, exert itself to annoy itself." This is good philosophy.

☞ It is a great mistake to think that the majority are always in the right. They were not so in the matter of the flood—and they've been wrong several times since.

For the World's Crisis.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER SEVEN.

It was the wicked that did wickedly, that knew not, until the flood came and swept them all away; so will it be when the Son of man shall come. The world that then was, was destroyed by water for its wickedness; so will it be destroyed by fire for the same cause, as it reads in 2 Pet. 2 : 6, 7,—"The world that then was, being overflowed with water perished; but the heavens and earth, which are now, by the same word, are kept in store, reserved unto fire, against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." Also in Thess. 1 : 7, 8,—"For the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of Jesus Christ."

Justin Edwards, commenting on Thessalonians, says that, "The coming of the Lord . . . can only be applied to the day of judgment." And commenting on the sealed book of Rev. 5 : 1, 2, says, "The purposes of God with regard to events to whom he should reveal them." . . . "Loose the seals and make known the events." And Sir Isaac Newton says, that "at the time of such events, God would raise up men who would turn their attention to the prophecies, and insist upon literal interpretation in the midst of much clamor and opposition." See his Observations on Prophecy.

In Hebrew 10 : 25, we find that at a particular period in this earth's history, the living church is commanded "Not to forsake the assembling of themselves together," but exhorting one another, and "so much the more," as (they) "see the day approaching." This passage has clear reference to a period far distant from the time in which it was written. It could only have reference to the last generation that should be living near the close of time's eventful history. For time and a certain people seem to be the burden of the passage; a time, when a certain peculiar people should have the evidence whereby they might know that the day of Christ's coming was approaching.

Everything warrants us in the belief that a knowledge of the time of the Saturday eve of the world's long, long week, will be known, so that we can form some substantial idea of the close of time, when the lightning's flash from God shall set the heavens and the earth on fire, to the destruction of all earthly things, when the saints shall be transported to another and happier world, to that eternal rest which remains for the people of God.

That time will be known definitely is evident from Christ's prophecy in Luke 21st, Matt. 24th, and Mark 13th, where he informs us beyond the least possibility of doubt, when the last generation should come, or be living on the earth, "When these things begin," that is, the signs spoken of, "Then look up." Look up for what? For my "Coming." For the kingdom of God and your redemption. This was the answer to the question of his disciples. And every sign when fulfilled, has always been inwardly felt as signs of the coming judgment. Instance the signs in the sun, moon and stars, which latter took place Nov. 13th, 1833; when some of our greatest men kept their eyes on the "Morning Star," but expected that to fall. Many thought that the "crash of doom had come," or in the words of Cowper, in his Task,

"The world appears
To toll the death bell of its own decease;
And by the voice of all its elements,
To preach the general doom. . . .
And meteors from above,
Portentous, unexampled, unexplained,
Have kindled beacons in the skies. . . .
Nature seems with dim and sickly eye
To wait the close of all"

Our present position in the prophetic charts is the same as the Galileans of old. Their attitude was that of looking, gazing up into heaven, at Christ's departure, and we, looking, gazing up into heaven for his coming. The interim has always had this comforting language: John 14 : 1, 3,—"Let not your hearts be troubled . . . I go to prepare a place for you . . . And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." I tell you, brethren, if the apostles were living at this time, they could have many Pentacostal seasons.

God speaking through Paul to the Thessalonians, says, "But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you; for yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord, so cometh as a thief in the night; for when they shall say peace and safety, . . . they shall not escape." "I pray God your whole spirit and soul, and body, (whole being) be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Dr. Cumming on this passage says, "When sailing on the ocean we come to large pieces of drift-wood, we instantly suppose we must be approaching some land; or when we discover quantities of floating weeds, as Columbus did on the very point of despair of finding the great Western continent, we take heart and say, The continent of glory is near, for we see the drift detached from the shore, which must indicate we are approaching land." As the men that watch upon the mountain crags catch the first beams of the rising sun before he comes above the horizon, so the students of the signs of the times, comparing what history records, with what the Apocalypse predicts, may form an estimate whether they are distant from or near, to that great continent of glory, to which earth, this broken off island, shall be united, in order that heaven and earth may be one again and forever.

A MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

THEOLOGY REMARKABLE.—WHERE ARE WE DRIFTING?

I have just returned from our ministerial quarterly session at Geneva, N. Y. For various reasons the attendance was small. I was painfully interested by several incidents that occurred during the discussions. As signs of the times, it may be well to chronicle some of them, as the meeting was in every respect public for all who wished to attend.

In the course of eliciting some facts in the past, the case of a brother was presented who had left the ministerial work, and engaged in other work for the sake of gain. The brother who presented the case very justly condemned it in strong terms, as leading to apostasy and poverty. A second brother sanctioned these views and specified cases of the minister putting on the merchant, the speculator, and the soldier. This last named case awakened interest and opposition. One remarked:

"There is soon to be a draft. If I am drafted, what am I to do?" A reply was heard, "Do as the primitive christians did. Go to prison or to the stake." It was replied,

"We must defend our rights and put down rebellion." Said a brother,

"The only reply I have is this: 'The weapons of our warfare are not carnal.'" The closing reply was from a very prominent member of the Association, a D. D., in substance as follows:

"A good Sharpe's rifle would not be very much carnal, in my opinion." So much for the war discussion. Thus we drift.

The state of vital piety in the M. E. Church now, as compared with the past, was also discussed. The fathers mourned and lamented the present conformity to the world and consequent want of vital godliness. Here issue was taken with them by two of the most popular preachers present, who stoutly contended that the church was now far in advance of former years in vital power and vast resources for subjugating the world to Christ. Thus are many of the professed "watchmen" blinded and crying "Peace, peace."

Another part of the exercises for the Association was the reading of sketches of sermons subject to criticism. One was offered on Matt. 7: 21,—"Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Our D. D. offered a criticism suggesting that the term "kingdom of heaven" in the text meant the spiritual kingdom of Christ set up in the heart, when a sinner seeks and finds pardon and peace in believing. Now I submit to all whom it may concern, does not such divinity need to be doctored? and still it is sick? Where are we drifting, and who is at the helm? The flock must be sickly who are thus fed with error.

Another sketch was read, founded on Matt. 5: 8,—"Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." The whole tenor of which went to say, of the pure in heart, they are blest because they do see God through all the present surroundings of the world in providence and nature. Not the slightest hint that it was a promise of seeing Christ at his last glorious "appearing and kingdom." When the association were reminded that it was a promise looking to the future object of Israel's hope, and a parallel to 1 John 3: 2, this was met and waved by the reply, "Watson said it had a reference to the present state"; that is, "the pure in heart" do see God.

Now, Bro. Grant, and readers of the Crisis, do you wonder that I was painfully interested on the above occasion? I was saved from all bitterness or a caviling spirit. I simply bore my testimony, was less thought of, and passed on my way sorrowful, but still rejoicing. I was greatly strengthened in my former faith—the hopelessness of all human efforts to save the church or the world, and that our only hope is in the return of our Elder Brother, the "Nobleman," the "Lord of lords and King of kings." Soon, very soon will the "Desire of nations" come.

I send this brief outline of our meeting in G. to help all who are willing to open their eyes, that they may more clearly see where the church and the world are now drifting, that all may be on their watch, and prepared to meet their Lord at his coming, and to escape all these things that shall come on the earth. FEMALE PIETY.

The gem of all others, which enriches the coronet of woman's character, is unaffected piety. Nature may lavish much on her person; the enchantment of the strength of intellect; yet her loveliness is uncrowned, till piety throws around the whole the sweetness and power of its charms. She then becomes unearthly in her desires and associations. The spell which bound her affections to the things below are broken, and and she mounts on her silent wing of fancy and soars to the habitation of God, where it is her delight to hold communion with the angelic band wreathed with garlands of glory.

Her beauty may throw a magical charm over many; princes and conquerors may bow with admiration at the shrine of her beauty and love; the sons of science may embalm her memory in the page of history; yet her piety must be her ornament, her pearl. Her name must be written in "The Book of Life," that when the mountains fade away, and every memento of earthly greatness is lost in the general wreck of nature, it may remain and swell the list of that mighty throng who have been clothed in the mantle of righteousness, and their voices attuned to the melody of heaven.

With such a treasure, every lofty gratification on earth may be purchased; friendship will be doubly sweet; pain and sorrow will lose their sting, and the character will possess a price far above rubies; life will be but a pleasant visit to this earth, and death a peaceful sleep. And when the notes of the last trumpet shall be heard, and the sleeping millions awake to judgment, its possessors shall be presented faultless before the throne of God, with exceeding joy and glory, that shall never wear away.

Such is piety. Like a tender flower, planted in the fertile soil of a woman's heart, it grows, expanding its foliage, and imparting its fragrance to all around, till transplanted it is set to bloom in perpetual vigor and unfading beauty in the paradise of God.

In conclusion I will say, following this star it will light you through every labyrinth in the wilderness of life, gild the gloom that will gather around you in a dying hour, and bring you over the tempestuous Jordan of death; and in the glad resurrection morn give you a rich reward of eternal life.

DISCUSSION.

We have arranged to hold a discussion with Mr. J. G. Fish, of Michigan, in Pratt's Hall, Providence, R. I., commencing Tuesday evening, Feb. 14th, to continue four evenings.

PROPOSITION FOR DISCUSSION:

"Resolved, Man has a spirit which exists after the death of the body, in a conscious state, and communicates with the inhabitants of earth."

OUR BIBLE CLASS.

Since the discussion, we have had several Bible Classes at the Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, which have been very interesting. We have been looking over the subject of Bible chronology, and find it thus far much plainer than most supposed; especially the periods in Daniel eighth and ninth chapters, consisting of the 2300 days, seventy weeks, sixty-nine weeks, sixty-two weeks, and the one week, mentioned in Dan. 8: 14, and 9: 24–27. We have never attended any Bible classes before so interesting as these. As we advance, the interest increases. Admitting that Christ was born at the time acknowledged by chronology—about B. C. 5, we were able to fix the commencement and termination of all the periods just named without the aid of profane history, or human testimony. Light has burst forth where all seemed dark before. For this great blessing, we all felt like praising the Lord. It was very apparent that the prophetic periods of Daniel would have remained "closed up and sealed till the" end of time, instead of "the time of the end," if all had continued to follow Ptolemy's Canon. As soon as the defects in that were pointed out, the light burst in upon the prophetic weeks of Daniel.

It seems strange to us now, that all our chronologers should have followed Ptolemy instead of the Bible; but when we remember the declaration of the prophet,—"the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end," the mystery is solved. Those periods could not be understood before "the time of the end," and have the Bible true.

We think the period has come to understand the time in the vision, and let us not shut our eyes upon the increasing light on this subject. Daniel informs us, that in "the time of the end" "knowledge shall be increased." We do not think he means a knowledge of mathematics, philosophy, or the languages; but of the "sealed book," which contains light for those who live in "the time of the end." The more thoroughly we examine the subject, the clearer it looks.

LOWELL.

The meetings in Lowell, Mass., continue to increase in interest. Some have found peace in believing, and others are inquiring for the way of life. The prospect has not been so good for years as it is now. We are expecting to see others come out on the side of the Lord and his truth. About eighty sat down to the communion table last Lord's day evening.

A WARNING.

We received the following spicy note Feb. 2nd. It was marked "in haste." It will appear that we have only a little over a month of probation left, as a people. Well, we are not ashamed of our calling, nor our company, and feel willing to trust the consequences that may follow as the result of what we have preached to the people and defended in our discussions. We see no cause to change our position, or change our course, but only wish we had been more in earnest in our calling. Praise the Lord for the sweet peace and joy that continually flows like a river, growing wider and deeper as we approach the consummation of our hope. But to the warning:

"MR. MILES GRANT:—Not wishing that any should be lost, but that all may be saved, you are offered one more chance. Go to Canada, make a public confession to those you had your discussion with; then to Pittsfield, and confess there, and change your paper to a truthful sheet, and support the government you have despised, and exhort all to do the same. By thus doing, you may save yourself and others, for all of the blood of this rebellion in America will come upon the Millerites that do not repent before the 4th of March, 1865. You have confounded the judgment with the the execution of it. Take the 13th chater of Romans for your guide, and stick to it; it will all be fulfilled. Answer this address. O. I. Caswell, care of Charles K. Hunt, Milton, Mass."

WORKS OF DEMONS.

The following questions and answers will develop some of the philosophy of Spiritualism. So far as we know, the spirits admit that they operate in the same way as a mesmerizer, when he would obtain control over his subject. In the Banner of Light, Feb. 4th, 1865, we find the following record of a conversation with a spirit:—

"Q. What is the process of induction of a subject by a developing medium?

A. Well, the process is a changing of the magnetic and electric condition of the subject under a course of treatment. For instance, there may be a superabundance of magnetism. The developing spirit endeavors to equalize the forces, or to bring about an electrical and magnetic condition that shall be adapted to the return of the disembodied spirits, and the making of various manifestations.

Q. Are these changes affected by the brain?

A. No; the nervous system is generally first affected, then the system entire; not simply the centre, but the system entire.

Q. Has the spirit any other way of manifesting itself except through the brain or nervous instruments?

A. Yes.

Q. Where a spirit controls the hand of a medium to write, is the impression always made through the brain?

A. Sometimes the control is what is termed mechanical control, then the connection between arm and brain is entirely severed, and yet the manifestation is made through what is called the nervous fluids, a certain portion of which is retained in the arm for the purpose of action. But when the manifestation is what is called an impressional manifestation, then the brain and the entire nervous system is used."

THE DRAFT.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please inform me through the columns of our much valued paper (the Crisis), the steps necessary, for one who cannot fight with carnal weapons, to pursue in order to avail themselves of the benefit of the laws made by those in authority over us for those who are conscientiously opposed to slaying their enemies. ALFRED AMOS.

Some weeks since we took occasion to consult a gentleman of the legal profession for the purpose of ascertaining "the steps necessary for" those who cannot fight, because of conscientious scruples; who nevertheless, are true and loyal to our government, and have no sympathy with the system of slavery. The following is the proper mode of procedure:—

I (applicant's name) of the town of ——, State of ——, hereby certify that I have been drafted into the service of the United States, to serve in the present war; that I am a member of the Second Advent church and denomination; that the rules and articles of faith and practice of said church and denomination are utterly opposed to the bearing of arms, or engaging in war; and that said rules and articles of faith and practice prohibit the members of said church and denomination from so doing. The undersigned also certifies, that his deportment has uniformly been consistent with said rules and articles of faith and practice; he therefore petitions that he may be allowed to pay $300 in commutation.

Dated ——, 186

Applicant signs here ——.

The above named (applicant's name) personally appeared before me, and solemnly affirmed that the foregoing certificate by him subscribed is true—before me,

—— ——, Justice of the Peace.

Date here.

Personally appeared before me (the Elder's name) a duly ordained elder and preacher of the Second Advent denomination, and made solemn affirmation to the truth of the matters set forth in the foregoing certificate of ——, and that he the said (applicant) has uniformly and consistently deported himself according to the rules and articles of faith and practice of said denomination.

—— ——, Justice of the Peace.

Dated

It may be well for the applicant to have a copy at hand of the 17th section of the conscription act, which reads as follows:—

"That members of religious denominations, who shall by oath or affirmation declare that they are conscientiously opposed to the bearing of arms, and who are prohibited from doing so by the rules and articles of faith and practice of said religious denomination, shall, when drafted into the military service, be considered non-combatants, and shall be assigned by the Secretary of war to duty in the hospitals, or to the care of freedmen, or shall pay the sum of $300 to such person as the Secretary of War shall designate to receive it, to be applied to the benefit of the sick and wounded soldiers; Provided, That no person shall be entitled to the benefit of the provisions of this section, unless his declaration of conscientious scruples against bearing arms shall be supported by satisfactory evidence that his deportment has been uniformly consistent with such declaration."

Our Brn. will do well to preserve the foregoing.

HERALD OF HEALTH, AND JOURNAL OF PHYSICAL CULTURE.

The great interest now being manifested by all intelligent and cultivated people on the subject of physical culture, bodily development, and the laws of life, makes a journal devoted to this subject a household necessity. Parents are beginning to feel as if it was a matter of some consequence that their children be reared in health and vigor. Students begin to feel as if sound bodies were of as much importance to them as sound minds. Professional men are beginning to see that health has much to do with success. Invalids are everywhere finding out that air, light, good food, physical culture, and a wise hygiene for body and mind, are more valuable than drugs in restoring them to health. Now, the HERALD of HEALTH and Journal of Physical Culture treats on all subjects relating to health, the care of children and invalids, hygiene, physical training, growth, the laws of life, the care of lungs, skin, stomach, bowels, brain, nerves, muscles, etc., etc., and should be in the hands of every person who values health, bodily symmetry and physical perfection.

INCREASE OF CRIME.

It is a most startling fact that crime is increasing very rapidly in all parts of the world, and especially in those countries called civilized. The wickedness of the Antediluvians and Sodomites has appeared again, and is coming in upon this generation like a mighty swelling tide, sweeping away old barriers, and overflowing the world like a deluge.

The London Morning Post, when speaking of Baron Martin's charge at the opening of the Liverpool assizes, says:—

"'Never before, says Baron Martin, in the course of his whole judicial experience, has he seen so heavy a calendar. With the single exception of treason, it enjoys the unenviable distinction of embracing every crime under heaven, which can render a man obnoxious to the laws of England. Four murders, fourteen cases of manslaughter, twenty-four of burglary, are among the products of this ominous jail delivery. Rape, robbery, stabbing, and a host of minor offenses have all had their separate representatives. If we need any stimulus to increased exertion in the cause of morality it is amply supplied in the list of prisoners undergoing their trial at the present moment in one country town alone. Little flattering as the conclusion may be to our national vanity, we doubt not whether the Liverpool calendar be not a very tolerable index of the state of crime all over the country.

Within a few weeks we have been called upon to chronicle a succession of homicides, alike repulsive in their barbarous details, and apparently destitute of any adequate incentives. The wretched child who fell a victim to the knife of the assassin in an obscure Wiltshire village could hardly have excited the resentment of his murderer, and might even have been safe from his fears. Yet innocence and helplessness in this case are no security against a cruelty the most apparently purposeless and gratuitous we ever remember. Not to dwell on minor atrocities, we have one case in which a few angry words between two fellow servants at a lonely hill-side resulted in the deliberate butchery of a female. Another woman was sent to her last account in consequence of a lover's quarrel, originating in an ineffectual attempt upon the part of her admirer to tender some good advice. Its ill reception by the object of his affections piqued him, and the death of the girl was apparently the only thing which could give relief to his wounded feelings. A still darker tragedy yet awaits investigation at the hands of justice. A single night proved fatal in one of the suburbs of the metropolis itself to no less than four unoffending individuals. Of five inmates of the dwelling, one alone survives. Mother, brothers, and affianced bride, all perished, undoubtedly by the same knife. While such things can still occur at our very doors, it is vain to plume ourselves upon a civilization and refinement which yet abounds with passages worthy of the recent savage episodes of Lebanon or Damascus."

KIND WORDS.

Kind words cost no more than unkind, and they yield a rich harvest of peace to all who use and hear them; while unkind destroy the peace of the speaker and cast a gloom upon all who hear. They do no good to any one, but a great amount of evil.

The foregoing thoughts ran through our mind after reading the following from a private note of one of our contributors:—

"BRO. GRANT:—I hope you will not think I write too frequently. I have a request to make of you. It is this;—do not insert an article of mine if it crowds any one else out, especially if their articles are better calculated to do good than mine. May the choicest blessings of the ALMIGHTY rest upon you now and forever. Amen."

Every one must be pleased with the spirit of the foregoing. It is pleasant to be associated with such noble hearts.

Our Volunteer Agents.

Illinois	12	Virginia	1
Iowa	19	Delaware	1
Pennsylvania	4	Kansas	1
Ohio	1	Oregon	1
Wisconsin	6

Shall we not look for a greater effort still in the months to come? We have all a great work to do, brethren; and we need to do all we can to prepare the world for the coming judgment.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand, an awful time;
In an age on ages telling,—
To be living is sublime!
* * * * *
Up! it is Jehovah's rally!
God's own arm hath need of thine."

Our Enemies getting Subscribers for us.

A correspondent writes from Enon Valley, Pa., as follows: "Dear Sir,—I am very much delighted with the Crisis. It is the only paper I see worth reading. How unlike the teaching of the day is that of the Crisis. How glad I would be to be near some of the churches of like faith. I cannot hear of one in all these parts who has ever heard of your valuable paper; and here I will just tell you how I came to find it out.

Being in a neighbor's house, some time since, looking at a copy of the Boston Investigator, I saw the article "The Second Advent Imposition," which you have since inserted in No. 17 of the Crisis, under the head of "What others think of us." I read that article, and was sure the Crisis was a good paper, from the way they spoke of it. I wrote to the editor of that paper for the address of the Crisis, which was kindly sent me, and I feel thankful every day that I have found out such a paper as the Crisis. I look for it every week as a feast of fat things. I often hear of God making the wrath of man to praise him. Am I not right in saying that in this case he has made the wrath of man to praise him, for I cannot but praise God day and night for leading a poor pilgrim like me to such fountains of living water as you are sending out every week. May God in mercy ever so turn the wrath and scorn of man to his praise, until there shall be no more such devil-like impiety in the land. WM. LINDSAY.

TO SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE "COMING STRUGGLE."

The attempt to publish the "Coming Struggle" by subscription, as proposed, does not succeed so well as I hoped; and as I do not think it prudent to venture in these times of high price on my own responsibility, I have thought best to give up the attempt to publish it. Besides, if it were now published, the present lull in the interest in Spiritualism would discourage the prospect of a circulation. I have thought some of re-writing it, with alterations and additions, but shall await a revival of the interest in the subject. Future developments may designate a future period as more timely.

Those who have money in the hands of Bro. Adams, who has had charge of the subscriptions sent to the Crisis, excepting a few, can have it by sending to him for it at the Crisis office. These will find their names below.

TRACT DISTRIBUTION.

Few seem to realize the importance of this work. It seems to stand on a level with the preaching of the word. Children of grace, arouse yourselves! Consider your accountability. Heed the word,—"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth;" they must soon be left to the fire. We are hastening to the judgment, to meet our account. Deny self; make a sacrifice for the cause of Christ, if you love him. Each and every one may have a share in this great and Christ-like work of saving souls. May God abundantly bless to his glory the means used, as well as every heart and hand thus employed, is my prayer. Enclosed find $3.00 for the Tract Fund. I feel thankful to God for the means and disposition to aid in this good cause. D. N. K.

VOICES FROM THE POOR.

BRO. GRANT:—I have waited some months considering whether or no it would be right for me to state my case in print. You have sent me the Crisis free for nearly nine years! I embraced its principal teachings at the age of fifteen. Had much opposition from nearest friends, which was hard for one so young. At the age of sixteen, by the request of some of the church, I commenced writing for the paper, and it began to come to me. A brother told me you would send it to me as long as I wrote for it. My father was so opposed to the paper he would neither pay postage on it nor bring it home from the office. It was mocked, ridiculed, and so was I. The Lord helped me to a little money now and then, which I saved to pay postage. Letters to the Crisis office cost me ten cents each, but by saving every cent I made out to pay for every letter but one.

My health has been poor. The paper keeps coming. I love it like an old friend. Have written for it nine years, as the messages came. Now it is published to the church as being a "free paper to the poor." I write for various other papers now and then; write a good many letters to the poor, sick, and discouraged, which, with paper, etc., costs me about all the money I get. If I have to pay for one paper, I can write for none. I feel like writing, private letters especially, but shall write as the Lord directs.

I feel delicate about writing this, but my paper is before the church as a thing of charity. I am the wife of a preacher who gets the name of "Millerite" for his salary. If my paper comes hard, let there be one less sent to this place. I feel very grateful for it so many years. It has been a great help to me. There used to be such spiritual letters in it! O! dear Crisis, you have my prayers.

FROM A POOR WIDOW.

A Sister writes from New York:—"What shall I say,—stop the Crisis? How can I part with it? It has been one of my best friends, since my husband died; and must I give it up? I thank you with all my heart for your kindness in sending it to me as long as you have. I cannot see any way to pay you for it. I have as much as I can do to get bread for my little ones. You would not have to ask me for it, if I had it. I have tried to profit by its teachings, and do what good I could to others. I ask your prayers, in humbleness of heart, that Jesus will not forsake us, little and alone as we are. Yours in hope of everlasting life when Christ appears." M. C. T.

FROM THE OLD AND POOR.

A brother writes from New Hampshire:—"I read your papers with delight, and would like to take them longer, if I were able to pay for them; but I have arrived at the age of seventy-six, and I am poor in this world's goods, and have to work hard for a living. If you can afford to send me the paper still, I shall be much obliged; but if you cannot, I must do without it, for I cannot get the money to pay for it." W. B.

THE BANK OF THE LORD'S POOR.

RESPONSES FROM SHAREHOLDERS.

A Sister writes from Pierce Co., Wis.:—"We read in the Crisis of the wants of the poor, and our hearts are moved to add our mite. We therefore wish to take a share in the Bank of the Lord's Poor. May the Lord bless it to some one who is poorer than we. We are poor, have a large family, and are obliged to deny ourselves of many comforts; use no tea or coffee, and very little meat, sugar, molasses, or fruit. And we have a sick babe, and are not able to get every thing it needs for its comfort; yet, as we read of others who are in great want, we feel like sharing our scanty store. Send it to some of the suffering ones to whom little or nothing has been sent by others.

'Freely ye have received, freely give.' 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.' 'If any man seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion against him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?'" J. S. C.

A poor widow sends to the Poor Fund, for the poor in her town, $6.00, which she earned taking care of the sick. The Lord reward her.

WORDS FROM THE WORKERS.

"ONE MORE."—A brother writes from Strafford Corner, N. H.:—

"I am making an effort to obtain subscribers, and send you one more." E. R. PERKINS.

Who, by "making an effort," can't get "one more"? Try it, brother, sister. 7000 "one mores" in the year would make 14000. *

"TWO."—Another writes from Chatfield, Iowa:—

"I have just read your article calling for four thousand subscribers this year. I send you two towards it." A. G. LOMBARD.

Good. Two are better than one. Are there not two thousand others who will each get "two towards it"? *

"FIVE."—A brother in New Hampshire writes:—

"Please send five copies of the World's Crisis, for six months, to ——, Tamworth Village, N. H. New subscribers." JOHN KNOWLES.

Better still. There are six hundred that can get as many as that, if they will only try. Will they? I mean YOU, reader. *

"FIFTY-TWO."—A preacher who obtained 18 subscribers in 1863, and 22 in 1864, for the Crisis, and some 150 for the Pilgrim at its commencement, writes thus, in response to our call,—"Who will get fifty?"

"I. I am in the field again as a Volunteer Agent. Trust I shall be able to accomplish more this year than last. Will endeavor to send you fifty-two, or at the rate of one a week." A. W. SIBLEY.

You can do it. It has been done, and it can be again. Success be with you. "One a week"! Think of it, preaching brethren; especially you who have a wider range than most have. Who else will TRY for "one a week"? W. B. H.

A Gold Ring.

The following, from a Sister in Iowa, was not intended for publication; yet, as the example is a good one, we give it to our Crisis readers, that others may be incited to go and do likewise:

"I send you in this a plain gold ring, which has been lying in my drawer, doing no good, for two or three years. If you will take the trouble to dispose of it, and send me a few tracts, . . . applying the remainder to the Poor Fund, it may do some good." M. A. K.

Worthy of imitation. That gold ring of yours, christian reader—that breast-pin, bracelet, ear-ring, or other costly, showy, useless ornament,—what will you do with it? It is "doing no good," to you, or to any body else, as it is. Would you put it to a greatly better use? Do as the good sister has done, and as the Master BIDS you do,—"Sell (that useless superfluity) that thou hast, and give to the poor; and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." Convert it into bread for the hungry, garments for the naked, comforts for the sick and afflicted. Send it out in tracts and papers, preaching, hundred-tongued, to the benighted and perishing, of Jesus and the life to come. Strip off the gaudy ornaments, the useless trinkets, the glittering gew-gaws, which foster pride, excite envy and emulation, uphold caste, beget extravagance, and cripple benevolence. They are expressly forbidden to the child of God, and are especially unbecoming and improper in one who professes to be looking for the Lord. They add no charm to beauty; make you none the wiser, better, or happier; nor do they raise you in the esteem of any whose good opinion is worth having. Modesty and simplicity of apparel, a meek and Christ-like spirit, holiness and good works,—these are the christian's adornment, the brightest and the best; and these only will fit you to appear and shine, with immortal beauty and glory, in the presence of the King of kings. W. B. H.

LEND YOUR PAPER.

Your friend, or your neighbor, will be willing to read it, if you offer it to him; and who can tell how much good it may do? He may have, as many have, distorted and incorrect views of us and our belief; he may be filled with prejudice arising from misrepresentation or ignorance. Lend him your paper. You will thus correct these mistaken notions, and remove prejudice; and who knows, but, with the help of prayer and a christian walk and conversation, you may obtain a convert to the truth, and a subscriber to your paper. We give below a few extracts for the encouragement of those who may wish to try it. W. B. H.

A brother writes from Genesee Co., N. Y.:—"I have obtained a new subscriber for the Crisis. . . . It was in this wise. I lent my paper to Mr. M. to read. He became very much interested, and began to search for the truth; and now he has come out a firm believer in the advent, life only through Christ, and no reward till the judgment." D. L.

A correspondent writes from Wisconsin:—"I became acquainted with your paper, the Crisis, a little more than six months ago, through the kindness of a friend, D. S. M., of this place, and now I have concluded to subscribe for it the coming six months, hoping at the end of that time to be able to continue my subscription." J. M.

INFORMATION.

On the first day of Jan., 1865, brig Colin Campbell, of Weymouth, Nova Scotia, on her passage from Trinidad to Weymouth, N. S., fell in with, in longitude 67° 30 west, latitude 37 N., the American schooner Tarquin, from Boston, Mass, bound to Port Royal, South Carolina, with a general cargo, in a sinking condition, and took off the Capt., crew, and passengers, and landed them in Weymouth, N. S., on the 11th inst., at the time the wind was blowing heavy from N. W. with a heavy sea.

The Tarquin, on the night of the 29th Dec., as they suppose, struck a wreck, as they saw pieces of a wreck floating around them in the morning. The crew and passengers are now on their way to Boston, by the way of St. John, N. B.

Names of Capt., and crew.—Capt. Emery N. Wood, Surry, Maine; Ezra P. Carter, do.; Mate, M. R. Wood, do.; John Johnson, Ellsworth, Maine; Elliot Morgan, Surry, Maine. Passengers.—John F. Libby, Boston, Mass.; C. Brown and child, do.; Miss Mary Fisher, do.

Please insert the above in the columns of the Crisis, for the information of all concerned, and oblige yours, very truly, CAPT. W. H. GERMAN.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference was held at Floyd, Iowa. After being called to order, reports were received from the churches, and the amount of money received to pay Bro. J. R. Preston's commutation fee, which was as follows:—$152 paid by the Floyd church, where he lives; $6 from Wilton Junction; $10 from Strawberry Point. There are $60 more pledged at the Floyd church, including the extra expenses. There is still back $100. One of the brethren, who advanced the money, got his money by working by the month. Now it is no more than right that we all take a share in this. I hope that the balance of the churches will not be behind in this matter. These brethren may need another bank for some poor brother before long. Will they lose what they lend to the Lord? Nay, verily. God bless them and help us all to help bear each other's burdens.

The meeting was quite interesting, and we trust good was done. I hope that those wishing meetings appointed will give me timely notice; and those that want the annual conference at their place, in June next, will send in their request, that we may see what will be for the best. The brethren need not expect me at all of these meetings, unless special arrangements are made with me. I have served the conference four years, and I cannot do justice to those that I owe, and travel any longer, at the rates of the past year. It is hard to turn off the repeated calls. I was never in a better state to work, both in health, and light, that is shining from God's word. I long to be free, to go forth again as before.

Dear brethren, remember me at the throne of grace, when it goes well with you.

PETER S. W DEYO, Clerk.

Correspondence.

From Sr. C. E. Gierlow.

BRO. GRANT:—Having enjoyed a year and a half of comparative ease, in the State of Maine, I now find myself away here, among the prairies of the west, contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. We are settled here for the present, my husband having been called to the charge of the —— church in this place.

My heart sickens when I think of the worldliness and wickedness of the present age. When we first arrived here, there was a "Church Aid" or "Mite Society," connected with this parish, which met once a week, each member of the same contributing 10 cts. Of this Society I was chosen President, and at the first meeting after my election we sang a hymn and closed with prayer. One of the most prominent members, a communicant of the church, informed me soon after that she thought it improper to have religious exercises connected with our meetings. She had previously told me that she thought it necessary to have some kind of amusements, in order to draw a "good attendance," etc.; considered dancing, and playing private theatricals, etc., as very innocent. To all these I objected, saying that members of the church had solemnly promised before God, angels, and men, to renounce the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of this evil world, and all the sinful lusts of the flesh, so as not to follow nor be led by them; and that if they indulged in the above named amusements, they were guilty of perjury in the sight of God.

We attended four of these meetings, but finding no opportunity for religious intercourse, after the first, I gave in my resignation, telling them that if God was to have no place in the society, I should withdraw from it. My husband "backed me up," by saying that such a society was a disgrace to the church, and he would not recognize it. A war of words ensued, in which I was—shall I say it?—almost killed. I felt as if the powers of darkness had fast hold of me. How I did wish the good Lord would hide me, though it should be in my grave, from the strife of tongues. But in the midst of the turmoil the enemy fell, mortally wounded, and died the same night.

Some of the members had formed a Euchre club, to meet every Thursday evening, which, in addition to a ball once a week, has been kept up ever since. My name is a song and by-word among them, for say they, "Her husband would be 'all right' but for her. She takes the lead, and he follows."

On the next Sunday after the decease of the Mite Society, he appointed a Bible Class to meet on the same night as the "Club," as he said, to see who were on the Lord's side. We have already some twenty-three members, with a prospect of more. Indeed, many of the club would attend if we would change the night to accommodate them. But we think that if they cannot give up the pleasures of the world for the Bible class, they may stay away. Even the President of the club—the lady already referred to—has requested us to have the Bible class meet at her house on some other evening, when she is not engaged. I have been giving the class a course of lectures on the book of Daniel,—finished last week. They were interested. But two of them winced at the time argument; an ex-clergyman of the Episcopal church was one, and a graduate of Cambridge University, England, was the other. I did not expect either of these gentlemen to attend again; but they did, and every thing connected with our meetings has gone on very harmoniously ever since.

At our last meeting, we made use of "Dr. Tyng's questions on the Acts"—the best book of the kind I know of, and especially adapted to the use of teachers, who are students of prophecy, and desirous to impart that knowledge to others; particularly if they are inclined to be forgetful like myself. The answers are not in the book, but it suggests so many things to the mind, and furnishes so much material for pleasant discussion, that we all think it invaluable.

I often think of kind friends in New Bedford and Lowell, who were once so mindful of me and mine in circumstances of affliction and trial. I also think with much affection of dear ones left behind in Maine, where we spent the last summer so pleasantly. And then I have a friend away in Ohio; one whom I was instrumental of bringing in to our beautiful faith, while boarding with her at the Stanley House, Augusta, Me.; a true lady,—a meek and dutiful child of God, living out her faith in her little family and before the world. She writes me of the peace she enjoys in laboring in the vineyard of the Lord; is thought to be "crazy," and "deluded," but seems to count it all joy, and is "willing to lay down even life itself for this blessed truth." She takes both the Crisis and Voice of the West, and endorses their sentiments in full.

Then, again, there is Bro. C. and his wife, who, in company with the dear family where I spent the summer, have afforded me so many happy hours;—faithful children of the Lord. Oh, may we all soon meet again, to part no more forever. Truly and affectionately yours, C. E. O.

From Sr. M. H. Morrison.

Bro. Grant:—I have been nursing a sick and aged father for the last ten or eleven weeks, which sickness was unto death. He ended his long journey of ninety-one years and one day on Dec. 30th. His last four weeks were restless days and nights. But how blest for him and us that he was sensible all the time, and was led to believe in a future life only through Jesus, the life-giver, and that at his coming and kingdom. In youth he joined the Presbyterian church, and for many years was (what they call) "Presenter;" until about twenty-eight years ago he was (in company with husband and I) planted together in the likeness of (Christ's) death and resurrection, and met with the church, "breaking bread" and "exhorting one another," until the death of Bro. Lloyd, when he left. Then some years after, (being out of the line of duty), he was drawn back into Presbyterianism.

But his last sixteen months were with us, in which time he read his Bible much, comparing some parts of the Crisis with the same. He became satisfied that a man is not more alive when dead, than before he died, and often said, when he died he would sleep until Jesus came; and that he did not believe in any going to heaven at death. So we can but praise our God and Savior, who caused him to cease in making "a covenant with death and with hell" (grave), and enabled him to covenant with the precious corner stone, a sure foundation.

No wonder the popular teachers see no beauty in the coming of Christ, while teaching people to look to death for their reward. The Bible teaches that eternal life is the reward of the righteous, and they are to receive it at the resurrection.

Father asked husband if he would favor him in preaching his funeral sermon, and state what was his hope, and only hope, viz.: to see Christ and be made like him at his appearing. This, by the grace of God, he was enabled to do, to an attentive and respectable assembly on Jan. 2d.

Come, Lord Jesus, and gather thine elect! Gather them from plain and glen, from mountain and valley, from land and from ocean, from east and from west, south and north,—even all who are created for thy glory. Gather prophets from their caves and apostles from their prisons; bring the patriarchs and the ashes of the martys from the gloomy earth to the bright, restored kingdom. O banish the darkness of death with the light of life; scatter dark clouds of sin with the bright beams of the sun of righteousness. O chase far away the deepening gloom of sinful shame, with the ever brightening blaze of eternal glory. O come, and bid the usurper's triumph cease; end the trial, and bring the reward; end the pain, and bring us peace; end the sighs, and bring the songs; end the cross, and bring the crown. O come, come in majesty, come with angels for thy saints, come to judge and to reward, come to rescue, and come to reign.

Come, Lord Jesus, for we would see thee in thy beauty, and behold thy many crowns. We long to see thy face. Earth groans beneath the ravages of war and bloodshed. Saints mourning amid the deepening tide of sin, cry come. Sufferers amid affliction's waves are crying, come! And mourners weeping amid the new made graves cry, come. And as "the glorious gospel" proclaims thy coming near, all, like the voice of many waters, respond with John, "Amen, Even so, come, Lord Jesus!" M. H. Morrison.

New Glasgow, C. E.

From Sr. M. M. Weaver.

Brn. and Srs.:—I am again in Canada, but find signs of war even here. O the confusion of earth at this hour! My health has been poor since my journey; hence friends must pardon me for unanswered letters.

Dear pilgrims, the present state of the church is a cause of grief to me. How divided! How void of the spirit of love and long-suffering. Brethren that have taken "sweet counsel together" are made enemies. All over the land we find such sad instances. Those who preach peace are themselves at war. In the church confusion reigns as truly as in the world. Why is it? Has God left us no rules to regulate these irregularities? Must we live on "at this poor, dying rate?" O will the time come once more when there shall be union and strength in the church of God? Will Love again bind our hearts in one? Not unless we act after the given rule; for there are rules for the church to observe, and it is as much our duty to "mark them which cause divisions" and withdraw from them as it is to be baptized. And these "divisions" are not all caused by those who disagree with us on points of doctrine. It truly is points of practice which affects us most fatally.

But here and there we find true christians. Thank God for it. If each of us will keep our own souls in the love of God we can soon have a shining church. Will Christ come to save a people who are not prepared for his glory? We must awake once more, and then let us keep awake. Perhaps there is more to "church order" than some imagine. At least there is much to church disorder. God bless us and bring us into gospel order, help us to be obedient and so inherit the kingdom. Amen. M. Mathews Weaver.

Danville, C. E.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Beloved Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—While feelings of gloom and sadness are resting upon me I will try to turn my thoughts from my own feelings and pen a few lines to the poor wayworn pilgrims. I am glad in God that there is in store for his dear children a sweet land of rest, and, best of all, it is very soon to be given to the saints of God. How sweet and cheering it is to a lonely pilgrim like me, who is seeking rest, but finds none, only in the peace that Jesus gives.

For the last few months I have been prostrated upon a bed of pain and suffering; but the good Lord has been my stay, and has never left me, but has stood by me in the hours of my greatest distress, and when clouds of darkness arose he has come with words of consolation and chased them all away, and let the light of his countenance beam into my heart. O! it is good to live where the Lord will own and bless. Those that are blessed with good health can know but a very little of the suffering and privation that a poor afflicted and helpless child endures.

I never knew how to sympathize with the afflicted until I have been so deeply afflicted. Remember the sick and suffering ones who are deprived of all the privileges that you enjoy. Pray for them.

I am weary of this world of misery and suffering. I sigh for rest. I long for a home where all is fair. I want a home where there will be no broken bonds. I long for a body free from pain. I long for feet and limbs that can walk. I long for a glimpse of my blessed Jesus. I want to gaze upon his lovely face. I want to have my fragile bark anchored in the city of my King. I want to be where all will be peace and love, no striving to be the greatest, no deceit or strife. I want to be where

> "No chilling winds, or poisonous breath,
> Can reach that healthful shore,
> Sickness and sorrow, pain and death,
> Are felt and feared no more."

I want to be where I can run and not be weary, walk and not faint. I want to be where pain will not be my constant companion from morn till night. I want to be where there is no slanderer's tongue. I want to be where death cannot sever the tender ties of those we hold so dear; where

> "Death and the tomb can divide us no more."

I want to bask forever in the sunshine of God's eternal love. I want to drink from the crystal fount, to walk the new earth o'er. I earnestly long for these things, and not only long but mean by the help of God to participate in all of the beauties that are in the new earth. Luthera B. Weaver.

Dana, Mass.

From Sr. L. M. Collins.

Bro. Grant:—The five dollars which the widow in Illinois sent you for my benefit has been received. And let me say to her that her gift, as well as others, was very thankfully received. I had no wood, and no money to buy with. I asked the Lord to provide for me, believing that he would, and he has done it. How can I ever distrust my Heavenly Father, who will not suffer a sparrow to fall to the ground without his notice. I take in sewing, and do all that I can to get along, but I cannot earn enough to pay my rent and buy wood.

The tracts I have been distributing, I think will do good. Some in this place are looking into the subject. They all seem quite willing to receive tracts. They did not know what our faith was, but thought it was something bad to be a "Millerite." The most of the people here have never heard an Advent sermon; and what few have attended any of the meetings, have not since 1843 and 4. They gave it up then as a failure. The churches here are very popular, so much so that a poor person hardly dares to go to church.

I wish that some of our brethren that are in the work, would come this way. Will not Bro. Edwin Burnham come here when he goes to Dansville? I am alone in the faith. I cannot promise him that he would get any recompense aside from what God gave him. I have found some seventh-day believers in Oswego, who seem to be good. I have had some works on the Sabbath question. I would like to see both sides. Pray for me that I may hold on to the truth.

Scriba, N. Y. Lydia M. Collins.

Bro. H. H. Janes writes from Boylan's Grove, Iowa:—"The good cause of God and truth is gaining ground in this region, and in this immediate community, and many are becoming convinced of the truthfulness of our position in relation to Christian Theology and the soon coming of our blessed Lord. Bro. Peter Hough has labored some with us the past season; also Bro. A. Brown, late from Kentucky, for a few days past. The labors of both have been crowned with abundant success. To God be all the praise.

Obituaries.

Delanson Libbey.

Died in Compton, C. E., Nov. 26th, 1864, Delanson Libbey, second son of Bro. Gilmann and Sr. Zillia Libbey, aged seventeen years.

Delanson was a follower of Christ, full of faith. He was faithful to God and man. His voice was always heard when the morning prayers of Bro. Libbey's family were said. How often has the petition gone forth from his heart, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt,—any way, Lord, only let me have a home in thy kingdom." The day before his decease, he got caught in a threshing machine. His arm was mangled to atoms. He called his friends around him, and with earnest exhortations bade them farewell. His last prayer was, "Help us to live so that we can hear Thee say, 'Come ye blessed of my Father,'" etc. They buried God's jewel in the garden, close by the room where he offered so many prayers. He will not sleep long, for the King wants every jewel gathered into his habitation.

Bro. Uriah Ladd spoke to us on the occasion words of gospel consolation. May this affliction be sanctified to the good of souls. Amen.

M. Mathews Weaver.

Francis, Mary, and Lorenzo Wilcox.

Died in Attawagan, Conn., of diphtheria, Francis Wilcox, aged seventeen years; Mary Eliza, aged nine years; Lorenso, aged seven years; children of Bro. Joseph and Sr. Lydia A. Wilcox.

Thus these parents were called to lay away in the dark grave three loved ones, within the short limit of three weeks. The young man found forgiveness of sin, and died in hope. We endeavored to speak words of comfort to those stricken-hearted parents, from the words of the prophet,—"There is hope in thine end, . . . that thy children shall come again to their own border."

E. Bellows.

Frank B. Johnson.

Died in South Providence, R. I., Jan. 15th, 1865, of diphtheria, Frank Burnside, only child of William N. and Lydia Johnson, aged two years, six months and thirteen days.

The mourning parents find consolation in the blessed hope. They believe that the time is not far distant when they will again be united with their loved one, never more to be separated.

C. H. Sweet.

Etta Claflin.

Died in Apponaug, R. I., Nov. 16th, Etta May, only child of A. Dwight and Mary A. Claflin, of Attleborough, Mass., aged one year, one month, and four days.

> The bud we so fondly had cherished,
> And nursed in its own native bower,
> Has drooped 'mid our heart's love and perished,
> To bloom a more beautiful flower.

H. E. Bennett.

Charles Stone.

Died in New York, last December, Charles, only son of William and Julia A. Stone, and grandson of J. K. and Elzada Bellows, aged eleven months.

Charlie is taken from the evil to come. May father, mother, and all friends, be prepared to meet little Charlie in the resurrection morning. Amen.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[Liverpool Jan. 21st, Queenstown 22nd.]

The political news by the Africa is unimportant. The London Globe authoritativly contradicts the rumor that British troops were about to embark for Canada.

FRANCE.

M. Proudhon is dead.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News makes the important announcement that at the same time the Emperor made Prince Napoleon Vice President of the Council, he resolved, in case of his death during the minority of the Prince Imperial, that Prince Napoleon should be Regent. The resolution was taken with the consent of the Empress.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, Feb. 1, 1865.

Washington is filled with rumors to-night about the rebel peace commissioners, and it is known that Secretary Seward left to meet them.

The Richmond Sentinel of Monday says, in its leading editorial, that the deputation visits Washington "to confer with President Lincoln on the subject of putting an end to the war if possible."

The Sentinel goes on to relate that Davis having informed Blair that he would send Commissioners to Washington, if informed that they would be received, Blair brought the consent of Mr. Lincoln, on his second visit, to receive and confer with them. "The gentlemen have gone without formal credentials, and merely as informal agents, to see whether it be possible to place a conference for peace on any basis which may serve for attaining so desirable a result."

The Richmond Whig of Monday says: "We have arrived at a critical point in our controversy with the Government at Washington and the people it represents. Commissioners have left this capital for that of the enemy, under a quasi invitation from President Lincoln, to discuss the possibility of adjusting the matters in dispute, and ending the war. It is of vital importance that we should just now remember that we are dealing with an unscrupulous foe. It is not impossible that this is an honest and sincere endeavor on their part to terminate the war, and that such shall be the result; but it is not safe for us to think so. On the contrary, while our commissioners should make the most earnest efforts to secure a satisfactory peace, and while our people should second these efforts with their prayers, it is just the time, above all others, when we should put forth every exertion for continued war. If the enemy desire peace, these efforts will not diminish their desire. If they intend a snare, this is the way to foil them."

Here in Washington well-informed persons do not believe that peace will follow the commissioners sent by Davis, who has doubtless desired to consolidate and strengthen his power by demonstrating to the rebels that emancipation will not be abandoned even to secure reconstruction.

There are those, however, who profess to be certain that an arrangement will be made, in which it will be agreed to suspend hostilities and to submit the constitutional amendment to all the States, which are to be governed by the three-fourths majority; President Lincoln to withdraw his Emancipation Proclamation meanwhile, and the operations of the confiscation act to be suspended, with free pardon for all, and a safe conduct for Davis and such as choose to accompany him into Sonora. I do not believe that the President will back down a hair on his Emancipation Proclamation, but give the above as the theory of the peace men.

When the rebel emissaries were passing through the lines the soldiers on both sides cheered each other's bands, which played "Yankee Doodle" and "Dixie," but the wearers of loyal blue and of secesh grey both joined in shouts when one of the bands struck up "Home, Sweet Home."—Boston Journal.

Washington, Feb. 4. President Lincoln and Secretary Seward arrived here from Fortress Monroe this morning. They had an informal conference with Stephens, Hunter and Campbell on board the River Queen in Hampton Roads.

The conference occupied four hours and is positively known to have resulted in no change of attitude either of the Government or of the rebels; in other words it was a failure.

New York, Feb. 4. The Post's Washington dispatch says Secretary Seward declares without reservation that peace negotiations were a total failure.

Feb. 5. The morning papers throw no new light on the Peace Conference. The interview lasted sixteen hours. According to the Herald's correspondence, the President stated to the rebels, if they were prepared to promise to return to the Union, that he was ready to waive all minor questions, but that he would take into consideration no terms involving a division of the Union. The rebels confessed they did not feel authorized to promise, and so the negotiations ended. The conference was conducted in the most cordial and frank manner on both sides. Great anxiety is now felt to hear from Richmond.

The indications are that a more vigorous war policy will now be adopted. The Cabinet was called together to-day, and doubtless had the result of the President's conference laid before them.

The late fire in Savannah destroyed more than two hundred buildings. A bombardment of the city, lasting two hours, was occasioned by the fire reaching the magazine. Several persons were killed and wounded, and the scene of fright and despair were appaling.

The Constitutional Amendment Passed.

Nearly every loyal man in the country will rejoice in his heart, whether he does openly or not, that the proposed amendment to Constitution, prohibiting slavery in the United States forever, has passed both houses of Congress. Even those who do not believe that this is the inauguration of a most righteous measure, for which Providence has been miraculously preparing our people, may cheerfully acquiesce in the step which fairly lays the whole question before the voters of the country for an impartial and final settlement. In this connection we would render the thanks of the House who, having power to defeat the measure in this Congress and put it over to the next, or else to subject the government to the great expense and trouble of an extra session, have chosen rather to defer at once to the evident will of the people. They have acted like true Democrats in this respect; and it should not be forgotten that, through their compliance, most, if not all, the State Legislatures will be able to act upon the amendment during the present winter or coming spring. The joint resolution reads as follows:

"That the following article be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of said Legislatures, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as a part of the said Constitution, namely:

ARTICLE XIII.

Sec. 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

Sec. 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."—Boston Journal.

A Murderous Weapon.—The New York papers state that the thieves and highwaymen who infest their thoroughfares have lately introduced a new and murderous weapon from England, called the sand bag, the use of which is almost certain to produce instant death. It is described as follows:

"It is made of strong canvas, in the shape of a club, about twenty inches long, and from six to eight inches in circumference. This bag or club is filled with closely packed fine sand, and weighs from five to ten pounds, and has great advantage over the ordinary club or bludgeon, brass knuckles or slung-shot. It will not rebound after a blow is struck, and it is said leaves no mark or bruise. When the victim is struck on the top of the head, and there is where the sand club is directed, he instantly sinks to the pavement without a struggle, the result of concussion to the brain, and not even a bruise, which any ordinary blunt instrument makes, is to be discovered on the scalp of the victim after the sand club has performed its fearful mission. A few of these instruments have already been found in the possession of desperate characters, and their use and history confessed to the police. A victim of one of the sand clubs might be found dead in the street the next morning, and no doubt the verdict of a coroner's jury would be "cause of death unknown," or "died of apoplexy."

☞ A very erroneous idea is prevalent regarding the largest city in the world; many confidently asserting that London is far superior to any other both in size and number of inhabitants. But such is not the case. Jeddo, the capital of Japan, is, without exception, the largest and most populous city in the world. It contains the vast number of one million dwellings, and five million of human souls. Many of the streets are nineteen Japan seris in length, which is equivalent to twenty-two English miles.

☞ A watch-maker in Spain has constructed a watch that only needs winding up once a year.

Important to Everybody.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue gives notice that after the 1st of February, 1865, persons executing receipts for the delivery of any property must affix a two-cent stamp to such receipts and cancel the same, otherwise they will be prosecuted for the penalty of $200, incurred under section 158 of the act of June 30, 1864. Receipts for the delivery of coal, wood, etc., will, it appears, require a stamp hereafter.—Boston Journal.

☞ The shipping of the Atlantic cable from the works to the vessels to convey it to the Great Eastern commenced on the 19th of January, and will continue without intermission until the end of May, by which time all will be coiled on the great ship. The Times has a very hopeful article on the enterprise, and says the uncertainty of the weather for submerging the cable seems the only cloud over the prospects of the new enterprise.

☞ On Friday, about noon, some persons, on entering the apartments of a family named Van Buren, consisting of six persons, residing at Brooklyn, N. N., found the rooms filled with gas and all the inmates lying insensible from suffocation. Only an infant, soon after expired. It was thought the father of the family, Mr. Van Buren, could not recover.

☞ The palace of the Grand Vizier of Turkey was lately destroyed by fire, and all the plate, jewelry and decorations of the Grand Vizier were burned up. The Sultan evinced his sympathy with his official by presenting to him four carriage loads of valuable wearing apparel and nicknacks, and two large houses, which are to be converted into a splendid palace and furnished at the Sultan's expense.

☞ At Summit, in Pennsylvania, a coal mine is burning, which has been on fire for the last eight years.

☞ Gold fell Saturday afternoon to 196 3-4.

Notices.

Notice.

As I believe time is very short, and it behoves us to be up and doing; and as I have found many females that feel God has called them to follow in the vineyard of the Lord, but because of the prejudice of the church in its present cold and backslidden state, they are kept back from following as they feel God has called them to do; and as I believe that we are living in the day when God will pour out his Spirit upon his handmaids, I therefore give this notice to all the women of America, independent of denomination or color, who feel that they have been called of God to preach, exhort, pray, or to write, on the subject of his speedy coming, and a preparation for that coming, to open a correspondence with me in reference to holding a convention of women, in the coming spring, May or June, to be held at a place which will be named after hearing from the different sisters. This convention shall be for the promulgation of all Bible truths; but no hobbies.

Now, sisters, let me hear from you as soon as possible, so that we can make arrangements for the convention. Let this be a missionary movement. Remember Jesus is at the door, and wickedness is abounding, and the love of many is waxing cold. Let us be up and doing, so that he may say to us, "Well done, good and faithful servant, . . . Enter into the joy of thy Lord." Let all, who feel interested in this great work, make it a subject of special prayer at the hour of twelve o'clock, every day, that God may bless the effort that we may put forth to his honor and glory.

All brethren who are favorable to this convention are invited to assist us by advice, by kind words of encouragement, and those that can by publishing this notice.

Sisters are requested to form themselves into small missionary societies in their own village, or neighborhood, meet weekly, and report to me as often as possible.

Address Mrs. Anna E. Smith, No. 128, East 27th Street, New York City.

Minnesota Quarterly Conference.

Our winter quarterly conference will be held in the Ramer school-house, Utica, Winona County, Minn., commencing on Friday, the 24th of Feb., at half past six o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following, day and evening. Preaching by different ministering brethren. All who love God and the salvation of sinners, and desire to know and understand the truth, and be prepared for the day of his coming, are invited to attend. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, but exhort one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching." Pray for God's blessing upon the meeting.

In behalf of the church, Philip Ramer, Sec.

A Discussion.

A discussion of the following questions will commence at Morse's Mills, Corinna, Me., Feb. 14th, at one o'clock, and continue several days.

1. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that man has a spiritual, thinking soul, that will exist between death and the resurrection.

Affirmative, E. B. Fletcher.
Negative, N. F. Nason.

2. Resolved, That the Bible teaches that after the resurrection God will destroy the wicked in the sense of making them as though they had not been.

Affirmative, N. F. Nason.
Negative, E. B. Fletcher.

If the weather is stormy, the discussion will be adjourned one week.

Meetings at Colebrook, N. H.

If the Lord will, I commence meetings at the Town Hall in Colebrook, N. H., Saturday evening, Feb. 11th, and continue them as long as may be duty; passing thence to Canaan, Vt., and perhaps into Canada in the course of the month. Pray for us. H. L. Hastings.

Who Ordered Hymn Books?

Having just received a letter from Barnstead, N. H., without the name of the writer, saying he had ordered hymn books, sent money, etc., in a previous letter, I take this means of asking him to write again and explain what books he wants, and how much money he sent, and who he is, as I cannot address him without knowing his name.

Yarmouth, Me. I C. Wellcome.

Conference.

There will be a conference holden in the Union meeting-house, Round Pond, Me., commencing Feb. 16th, to continue over the following Sabbath. Stephen Harding.

Maine Second Advent Tract Society.

S. K. Partridge, R. R. York, I. C. Wellcome, Board of Managers.

I. C. Wellcome, Secretary and Business Agent.

Isaac Wight, Treasurer.

It was voted that all orders for tracts and books for distribution by this Society be addressed to the Agent, I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., who will supply them as fast as the means are furnished.

All our ministers will receive subscriptions for the Tract Fund, and they purpose to raise $200, or more, for free distribution in Maine this year.

I. C. Wellcome, Agent.

Agency for Maine.

Having been solicited to take the agency for Maine of Bro. Himes' "New Chart of Daniel and John," I would say to any and all in Maine who wish it, I am prepared to furnish it at the regular retail price, $5.00, and to preachers (or others who wish them to sell) at a liberal discount. Address orders to I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.

As there have been appointments for this place conflicting with each other, I would inform those wishing to send appointments here, that we are supplied the third Sunday in each month for the present. For the brethren. Charles Haley.

Exeter, N. H.

Notice.

Eld. Wm. B. Morgan wishes to say that he is ready and willing to travel and preach the gospel of Christ wherever doors may open. His post-office address is Canaan, Vt.

167 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

IMPORTANT BOOKS WORTH BUYING, LENDING, READING, AND PRESERVING.

Each vol. contains over 400 pages, uniformly bound in Cloth and in Paper Covers. Sold separately or in sets. Single volumes sent post-paid on receipt of the price.

I. THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, a Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

A sad exhibition of the predicted perils of the Last Days; the selfishness, hypocrisy, and crimes of Christendom, as shown in Statistical Accounts of the slave trade, cotton trade, opium trade, Coolie trade, and the licentiousness, illegitimacy, child murder, bloodshed, and military preparations of this age.

II. THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. By D. T. Taylor. Edited and prefaced by H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

A history of the doctrine of the reign of Christ on earth, containing the views and testimonies of nearly four hundred of the greatest preachers, reformers, and writers the church has ever known, concerning the establishment of the future glorious Kingdom of God, under the whole heaven.

III. THESSALONICA, OR THE MODEL CHURCH; A Sketch of Primitive Christianity; and REASONS FOR MY HOPE, or the Tokens of Speedy Redemption, by H. L. Hastings; and SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION, by Wm. Ramsey, D.D. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

"Thessalonica," portraying the faith and practice of the early Christians; "Reasons," exhibiting the hope of the Church, the fulfilment of prophecy, the spread of the gospel through Missionaries, Bible and Tract Societies, etc.; and "Spiritualism," unveiling and exposing the monster delusion of Satan in these latter times.

IV. THE GREAT CONTROVERSY BETWEEN GOD AND MAN; its Origin, Progress, and End; with numerous TRACTS on Prophetical and Practical subjects. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth $1, paper 50 cts.

The "Controversy" sketches the History of the World since man's revolt from God, narrates the judgments already inflicted upon the nations of the earth for their iniquities, and those more terrible and exterminating calamities yet to overwhelm the nations, and prepare the way for the establishment of a divine government upon the earth. The TRACTS are, "The Church not in Darkness," "The Three Worlds," "The Last Days," "Plain Truths," "Ancient Landmarks," "Important Questions," "Olive Leaves," etc. etc.; a valuable and spirited collection.

For the World's Crisis.

WILL YOU BE THERE?

Beyond this life of hopes and fears,
Beyond this world of griefs and tears,
There is a region fair;
It knows no change and no decay,
No night, but one unending day;
Oh, say, will you be there?

CHORUS. Yes, we'll be there, yes, we'll be there,
In that beautiful world of light.

Its glorious gates are closed to sin,
Nought that defiles can enter in,
To mar its beauty rare.
Upon that bright, eternal shore,
Earth's bitter curse is known no more;
Oh, say, will you be there?

No drooping form, no tearful eye,
No heavy head, no weary sigh,
No pain, no grief, no care;
But joys which mortals may not know,
Like a calm river ever flow;
Oh, say, will you be there?

Our Savior, once as mortal child,
As mortal man by man reviled,
There many crowns doth wear;
While thousand thousand swell the strain
Of glory to the Lamb once slain!
Oh, say, will you be there?

Who shall be there? The lowly here,
As those who serve the Lord in fear,
The world's proud mocking dare;
Who by the Holy Spirit led,
Below the narrow path do tread,
These, these shall all be there!

Those who have learned at Jesus' cross
All earthly gain to count but loss,
So that his love they share;
Who, gazing on the Crucified,
By faith can say, "for me he died,"
Those, those shall all be there!

Will you be there? You shall, you must,
If hating sin in Christ you trust,
Who did that place prepare;
Still doth his voice sound sweetly, "Come!
I am the way, I'll lead you home—
With me you shall be there!"

SARAH CHANDLER.

LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE.

Under this caption we published several years ago a series of letters, which were productive of much good, judging from the very numerous testimonies furnished us. We purpose to give another series, hoping and praying that they may prove equally acceptable and profitable. M. D. W.

To MRS. L——.

My Dear Sister:—It gave me pleasure to receive your letter, and I perused it with interest. It is no new thing for me to receive letters from strangers, and a profitable correspondence is sometimes the result. When, however, I am thus addressed, I feel an inward shrinking from the responsibility of a reply, knowing how insufficient I am for the work,—how incapable of imparting right instruction without the aid of the Divine Teacher.

You say that twenty years ago you united with the Methodist church. Nineteen years ago I did the same. "Eight years ago" you "felt the need of being wholly consecrated to the Lord." Sixteen years ago I felt thus, and, as you remark, "laid all on the altar." You next speak of "a change," a loss of that "strong hold upon Christ as an indwelling Savior," and this you "have not been able to regain, although earnestly sought."

Again, you say "I do not know of anything to give up"; you feel that it is well with you, and you are "not afraid to die." Now, judging from this language, taken in connection with your statement respecting the time of your ill health, I conclude that a change of feelings, and not a change of will, has caused you to be thus troubled. You know of nothing to give up; then you are not consciously withholding more than is meet, which tendeth to poverty. Your disease may be such as to produce depression of spirits, so that you do not have that vivid perception of divine things, and those lively emotions of joy, that marked your first experience in the higher life. To learn to live by faith, when naught but the simple manna is given us day by day; to walk by faith, when our path is through the waters or the barren wilderness, is one of the greatest lessons that the christian ever acquires. As the Israelites lusted for the good things of Egypt, so we often look back after former joys and illuminations, and covet them more than the trials and refinings God now bestows, and are far more valuable because more crucifying to self, more purifying to the soul, more strengthening to the graces of the Spirit.

It is the common experience of those who count the cost of the sacrifice, and enter upon a life of entire devotion to God, that after a period of enlarged communications of light, joy, and peace, these emotions subside, and give place to "fiery trials," crosses are multiplied, duties increase, and furnaces more intense are awarded them in proportion to their strength and progress. I know that very many enter upon the way with the expectation that their joys will increase and their path become more easy and delightful. In a certain sense this is true. Their joy, however, is of a higher character, less emotional, but more solid and abiding, resulting from the deep consciousness that all things work together for their good, and an unwavering reliance on the love and faithfulness of their covenant-keeping God. Their path does become more easy and delightful, not because there are less crosses to bear, for they increase, but because through the divine power and energy imparted they are far better able to endure them. The more perfectly the whole mind becomes assimilated to that of Christ, the more readily does it yield and adapt itself to all the duties, conflicts, and trials of the christian warfare, while the love which fills the soul constrains to constant and cheerful obedience.

The disciples had but one bright and overpowering manifestation of divine glory; then they, like modern disciples, would fain build their tabernacles on the spot, evermore to abide amid the dazzling effulgence; but no! it must not be. They must leave the mount, and journey, weary oft and sad, from city to city, to proclaim the glad tidings of the kingdom; they must follow Jesus to the garden of Gethsemane, and there behold his agonies, and linger around his cross on Calvary. They must drink of his bitter cup, by being made partakers of his sufferings.

O! I have sometimes felt that I would fain impress it on every heart panting for the higher walk of christian life, that they must expect deep humiliations, crucifying crosses, fiery trials, enemies, slander, hatred, malice (and that, too, from the professed followers of Jesus Christ); but with all grace sufficient to sustain, strength made perfect in weakness, "the form of the fourth" in the midst of the furnace, the hundred-fold in this life, peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, and an assurance of eternal life in the world to come. The rest from warfare, the song of victory, the glorious reward, are in the future; here we have only the foretaste of glory! But I am dwelling too long on these points, and shall not have room for the rest, unless I hasten.

"'Tis just four months since I laid aside all prejudice and commenced searching the Bible for those truths that I now see." As the result of this, you are willing to identify yourself with those who "bear the name of Second Adventists." I rejoice, dear sister, that those precious truths, which for more than fourteen years have made glad my heart, have been received by you, and I assure you that they will make the Bible more precious, and increase your interest in the coming of Christ to reign. You will also find that these truths will crucify you unto the world, and the world unto you, far more than any previously embraced.

When, before assembled multitudes, during the public services on a Sabbath morning, on the encampment at L——, two days after I believed in my heart that Christ was at hand, and felt the "Advent glory" thrilling my whole being, I arose and confessed my faith, thus nailing the flag at the mast head, I died to the world as I had never died before!

But now with you, as it was with me, baptism is presented. I have but a word or two respecting the Spirit's witness, of which you inquire. God's Spirit bears direct testimony to our spirit, if we are christians. "The Spirit of God beareth witness with our spirit," says Paul. This is evidence that our spirit has consciousness; it possesses the power to perceive the inward testimony conveyed by the divine Spirit to the fact of our adoption. In regard to the Spirit's illumination, I have expressed my ideas somewhat on that point in "Letters" No. 3, or 4, I think.

I shall be happy to hear from you again, and hope you will feel perfectly free to express any thoughts, or ask any questions you wish, and I will answer "according to the ability God giveth, that God in all things may be glorified." Yours truly, M. D. W.

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND EAST CONN. QUAR. CONFERENCE.

Met, according to adjournment, with the Danielsonville church, Wednesday, Jan. 4th, 1865, at 2 P. M. Very stormy. Prayer and exhortation. Six P. M., met for social worship. Seven, preaching by H. L. Hastings, from Num. 32: 11, 12. Thursday, ten A. M., met for social worship. An interesting time. Half past one P. M., preaching by H. L Hastings, from Luke 10 2. Six, met for social worship. At seven, preaching by H. L. Hastings, from 2 Pet. 3: 14.

Friday, half past nine A. M. The President having arrived, we proceeded to business. Clerk being absent, Bro. Joseph Thomas was chosen Clerk pro. tem. First, election of officers for the year 1865. M. R. Phetteplace was chosen President, and Wm. H. Chapman Clerk and Treasurer, for the ensuing year. Minutes of the last conference read and accepted. Second, delegates' reports.

Bro. Smith reported the River Point church in rather a low condition. Sabbath school about the same as usual. Bro. Taylor the church at Lafayette. Some striving to do the Lord's will. Meetings kept up as usual. The following preaching brethren have visited and discoursed the word of life to the church:—E. R. Wood, E. Bellows, J. J. Northrup, J. W. Thomas, and Sr. Otis. Bro. Shumway reported the church at Danielsonville in rather a low state. Three prayer meetings and one class, but not very well attended. Three have died since the church was last reported. Number seventy-four, but are scattered here and there; but few can be relied upon.

Bro. Corey, unofficially, reported the East Killingly church. Few serving the Lord. Thought if some good preacher would come and hold meetings it would stir them up to duty. Bro. D. O. Hopkins, unofficially, reported the Foster church. No special interest. Preaching every Sunday.

Bro. Brackett reported the Abington church. Scattered considerably, and but few attend the conference meetings. The following preaching brethren had been with them since the last conference: D. Morse, Geo. A. Streeter, Wm. Wheeler. The church extended an invitation to the Conference to meet with them the next time.

Bro. E. R. Wood reported the Exeter church by letter. "We are still striving for the kingdom. The church numbers twenty-two members, and the last time I met with them, out of this number there were sixteen lively testimonies for the Lord. Some were not present; perhaps they are rather cold; if so, I hope they will get thawed out. Want to see them at their post and stand there until Jesus comes. Amen."

C. F. Dixon reported the Rocky Brook church by letter. "We can record a small amount of prosperity since the last conference. We have had preaching from Brn. J. J. Northrup, E. Bellows, A. Ross, and H. L. Hastings. Our prayer meetings have been well sustained, and generally interesting. One young man has started to serve the Lord. We have been laboring with the wanderers from the fold of Christ. Some have publicly confessed their sins and started anew for the kingdom. Under the sense of duty, we have been obliged to cut off some, and withdraw the hand of fellowship from others. May God bless them all and show them on what a frail foundation they stand."

A letter was received from Bro. V. P. Simmons, and read before the conference. Wished to retain his connection as member of the conference,—"For my love for the brethren and interest in our little conference is in no way lessened." Feels that he is still in the path of duty. Has no misgiving in respect to the subject of the right of war. "Trying to be good, but somehow I have not that faith that takes hold of God in prayer, that enables one to live above the world. I would to God that I might arrive at that perfect state which I have ever believed was attainable, but to which I have never attained. Thought for a little while I had it, but, alas! when trials came, my depth of experience was wanting."

Moved, That Brn. R. W. Pierce and D. Morse be ordained at this conference. Carried. Moved, That we invite preaching brethren from abroad to take part in our deliberations. Carried.

Report of the preaching brethren called for. E. Bellows reported. Preached at Carolina Mills. Had a good time with Bro. Northrup. Been at Rocky Brook. Found them in a good condition. Found the church at Exeter in a prosperous state, and at Lafayette thought the Lord was answering their prayers. Also been at the Plains. Had an old-fashioned shouting time.

Bro. D. O. Hopkins had labored in several places. Good attention. Had scattered some dollars' worth of tracts. Doors are opened for Advent preachers.

Bro. Smith had preached at Foster and Washington. Thought of going out among the brethren.—Bro. Pierce had been mostly at home. Thought of going out into the highways and hedges, and compel some to come in to the service of the Lord.

Bro. M. R. Phetteplace had been most of the time with the Free-will Baptist church. A free time preaching the word. Have an interesting Sunday school.—Bro. H. K. Flagg had been laboring at home and in Ct. Have seen some converted.—Bro. George Teeple had been laboring about home for the last three years. Thought his labor had not been in vain in the Lord.—Bro. Morse had preached in the vicinity where he embraced the blessed news of the soon coming of the Lord.

Moved, That we adjourn this conference to meet with the Abington, Ct., church on the first Wednesday in April, at two P. M. Carried.

Friday, half past one P. M, met for social worship. Some earnest prayers and stirring exhortations. They did us much good. At half past two, preaching by J. W. Britton, from Eph. 1: 13. Six P. M., met for prayer, after which a sermon by H. K. Flagg, from 2 Pet. 3: 18.

Saturday, two P. M. Met for social worship. An interesting interview. Six, met for conference. An old-fashioned, Holy Ghost meeting. Sinners trembled, and backsliders confessed their wanderings, and God blessed them.

Sunday, half past nine A. M. Met for a love feast. It was truly a feast to those present. Half past ten, sermon by Bro. Teeple, from Rom. 8: 18; also at half past one, from Matt. 22: 14. Six, met and spent one hour in prayer and exhortation, after which thirty-four happy souls gathered around the table of the Lord. A solemn and impressive scene. After supper we sung a hymn and went out.

Thus ended, as admitted by all, one of the best conferences that we have been permitted to enjoy for a long time. Thus we meet and rejoice together a little while, as we journey through this vale of tears, trying to encourage and cheer the lonely pilgrim, while he battles with the powers of darkness and those evil influences which beset him on every hand; but soon our pilgrimage will be ended, and we shall rest at home. Then let us stand at our post armed with all the panoply of heaven, ready for every good word and work, knowing that the time is short, therefore we must double our diligence and press for the kingdom.

Preaching brethren present:—E. Bellows, H. K. Flagg, H. L. Hastings, Geo. Teeple, D. O. Hopkins, Wm. Smith, J. W. Thomas. D. Morse, O. Shippee, R. Pierce,* and Sr. Otis. WM. H. CHAPMAN, Clerk.

* Brn. R. Pierce of Westerly, R. I., and D. Morse of Union, Conn., were ordained on Friday afternoon. Prayer by H. K. Flagg. Right hand of fellowship and charge by G. Teeple.

METEORIC PHENOMENON.

BRO. GRANT:—In taking up the Christian Messenger, published in Nova Scotia, my eyes rested on the following:

"METEORIC PHENOMENON.—We have seen some accounts of a recent strange appearance in the heavens in Parrsborough and its neighborhood. The following description of it is from the pen of Rev. D. McKeen.

'There was a strange phenomenon on Monday night, 21st Dec., 1863, about eleven o'clock, throughout the whole of the western part of this county, and I know not how much further. It was a most brilliant light, followed about five minutes afterwards by a shock very much like an earthquake, which awoke many persons from sleep, and made houses to tremble. From several reasons it is most certain that it was not thunder and lightning. It was one of the clearest, moonlight nights I ever saw, and yet such was the nature of this that it overpowered all other lights both without and within dwellings. I have seen lightning, northern lights, and very large meteors, but this was unlike any of them. I regret I was not out of doors so that I could have seen it more distinctly. There has been almost every kind of description given of it, although all agree upon one point, the overpowering nature of the light. Some say it came from Blomidon, others a great body of fire like a ball. Some ignorant people say that a comet fell in the Bay below Parrsborough; others that a great sheet of flame passed through the heavens, which I think most likely; but I cannot account for the shock. I wish some of your wise ones would unfold some of its mysteries to us.'

I wonder that the reverend gentleman did not refer to the sixteenth chapter of Matthew, from the first to the fourth verse. "The Pharisees also with the Sadducees came, and tempting, desired him that he would show them a sign from heaven. He answered and said unto them, when it is evening, ye say, it will be fair weather: for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day: for the sky is red and loweriing. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?"

The same phenomenon was seen at Smith's Cove, County of Digby, at the same hour of night." E. W. POTTER.

WANT OF DECISION.

Sidney Smith, in his work on Moral Philosophy, speaks in this wise of what men lose for want of a little "brass," as it is termed:—

"A great deal of talent is lost to the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to their graves a number of obscure men, who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort, and who, if they only had been induced to begin, would, in all probabiliiy, have gone great lengths in the career of fame. The fact is, that doing anything in the world worth doing, we must not stand shivering on the bank thinking of the cold and danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can. It will not do to be perpetually calculating risks and adjusting nice chances; it did all very well before the flood, when a man could consult his friends upon an intended publication for a hundred and fifty years, and live to see its success for six or seven centuries afterwards; but at present a man waits and doubts, and consults his brothers, and his uncles, and his particular friends, till one day he finds that he is sixty-five years of age, that he has lost so much time in consulting first cousins and particular friends, that he has no more time to follow their advice. There is little time for over-squeamishness at present, that the opportunity slips away. The very period of life at which man chooses to venture, if ever, is so confined, that it is no bad rule to preach up the necessity, in such instances, of a little violence done to the feelings, and efforts made in defiance of strict and sober calculations."

UNION IN THE CHURCH.

A great deal may be done in almost any field of labor, if the laborers are all willing to pull together. Suppose twenty men with all the requisite machinery and plenty of stout teams should undertake to move a building. They all work together until they get the building started, when some of the men hitch their teams on one side and pull toward the east, some hitch on to the other side and pull toward the west; while others pull north, and yet others pull south. The prospect of moving it would be very uncertain, and perhaps there might be danger of pulling the building in pieces. The true church is compared to a building, and those who are connected with the church may be compared to the men who undertake to move a building. If we all pull together, we shall have the blessing of GOD upon our efforts, and the church as a body will be moved onward toward perfection. Then let us be united; let us be all one in CHRIST. F. H. MESSIAH'S REIGN.

AIR.—"Battle cry of Freedom."

There is a King of glory on earth soon to come,
Reigning forever in the kingdom,
To awake the sleeping saints and restore their Eden home,
Reigning forever in the kingdom.

CHORUS.
Messiah will reign, let every voice
O'er hill and plain in earth rejoice;
For our King will come in glory, and we long to be there,
Reigning forever in the kingdom.

This royal King on David's throne will sit in great command,
Reigning forever in the kingdom;
And the nations yield obedience within that holy land,
Reigning forever in the kingdom.

From the river to the ends of the earth his reign will be,
Reigning forever in the kingdom;
And a universal glory will spread from sea to sea,
Reigning forever in the kingdom.

'Tis the very same Jesus the Jews once denied,
Reigning forever in the kingdom;
No more a bleeding Lamb, but the Prince of Judah's tribe,
Reigning forever in the kingdom.

We are bound to be true soldiers, for Jesus is the King,
Reigning forever in the kingdom;
And we'll keep the armor on, that his glory we may sing,
Reigning forever in the kingdom.

Come, all who want to wear the crown and be forever blest,
Reigning with Jesus in the kingdom;
Obey the sacred word of God, and seek eternal rest,
Then you shall reign with Jesus in the kingdom.

THE 2300 DAYS.

Joseph Wolfe states that the Jews of Ispahan and Bochara possess some ancient manuscripts of the prophetic writings of Daniel, in which, chap. 8: 14, "reads 2400, instead of 2300 days." Also that in Adrianople, in 1826, he saw an Armenian manuscript of the Bible, in Greek, supposed to be of the fifth century, and translated by Misrob, in which the same number occurs; and yet this missionary tells us that, "as the most number of the manuscripts contain 2300," he adopted that number in his arguments with the Mura at Lucknow. And, indeed, the authorities in favor of this latter number of 2300 days are so nu merous compared with others, "that there is probably no numeral in the Scriptures the correctness of which may be more entirely relied on." And as for the Vatican copy, it is affirmed by competent judges "that there is not a single manuscript known to be extant, whether in Hebrew or Greek, that sanctions the reading of 2400 days. It rests entirely upon a manifest typographical error of the Vatican edition, taken from the Vatican manuscript; which the Christian edition of Daniel notices, and says that the Vatican manuscript reads 2300 days."—Shimeall's Chronology, p. 152.

THE POWER OF GOODNESS.

John Kant (not the German phiolsopher of that name) was professor and Doctor of Divinity at Cracow. He was a pious, holy man, with a spirit peculiarly gentle and guileless, and he at all times would have preferred to suffer injustice rather than to exercise it. For many years he had conscientiously followed his duties as spiritual teacher of the place to which he had been appointed by God. His head was covered with the snows of age, when he was seized with an ardent desire to revisit the scenes of his youth in his native country, Silesia. The journey appeared fraught with peril to one at his advanced age; but he set his affairs in order, and started on the way, commending himself to the care of God. He rode slowly along, attired in his black robe, with long beard and hair. Thus he pursued his way through the gloomy woods of Poland, which scarcely a sunbeam could pierce; but there was a light in his soul, for God's Holy Spirit irradiated it.

One evening as he thus journeyed along, holding communion with God, and taking no heed of objects beside him, on reaching an opening in the thick forest, a trampling noise was suddenly heard, and he was instantly surrounded by figures, some on horseback and some on foot. Knives and swords glittered in the moonlight, and the pious man saw that he was at the mercy of a band of robbers. Scarcely conscious of what passed, he alighted from his horse, and offered his property to the gang. He gave them a purse filled with silver coins, unclasped the gold chain from his neck, took the gold lace from his cap, drew a ring from his finger, and took from his pocket a book of prayer, which was clasped with silver. Not till he had yielded all he possessed, and seen his horse led away, did Kant intercede for his life.

"Have you given us all?" cried the robber chief, threateningly. "Have you no more money?"

In his alarm and terror, the trembling doctor answered that he had given them every coin in his possession; and on receiving this assurance he was allowed to proceed on his journey.

Quickly he hastened onward; rejoicing at his escape, when suddenly his hand felt something hard in the hem of his robe. It was his gold, which having been stitched within the lining of his dress, had thus escaped discovery. The good man in his alarm had forgotten this secret store. His heart, therefore, again beat with joy, for the money would bear him home to his friends and kindred, and he saw rest and shelter in prospect, instead of a long and painful wandering, with the necessity of begging his way. But his conscience was a peculiarly tender one, and he suddenly stopped to listen to its voice. It cried in disturbing tones, "Tell not a lie! tell not a lie!" These burned in his heart. Joy, kindred, home, all were forgotten. Some writers on moral philosophy have held that promise made under such circumstances are not binding, and few men certainly would have been troubled with scruples on the occasion. But Kant did not stop to reason. He hastily retraced his steps and entering into the midst of the robbers, who were still in the same place, said meekly: "I have told you what is not true, but it was not intentionally; fear and anxiety confused me; therefore pardon me."

With these words he held forth the glittering gold; but to his surprise, not one of the robbers would take it. A strange feeling was at work in their hearts. They could not laugh at the holy man. "Thou shalt not steal," said a voice within them. All were deeply moved. Then as if seized by a sudden impulse, one went and brought him back his purse; a third restored the book of prayer; while a fourth led his horse towards him and helped him to remount it. They then unitedly entreated his blessing; and solemnly giving it, the holy man continued his way, lifting up his heart in gratitude to God, who brought him in safety to the end of his journey.

BEECHER AND BLASPHEMY.

The Rev. Mr. Beecher is adding to his fame, or rather to his infamy. From a New York journal of a recent date, we learn of his doings in Plymouth church on Sundays. He makes a well-aimed hit at President Davis' hopes of salvation here and hereafter, and his congregation cheer and laugh immoderately. He then launches out into the Brownlow vein, and predicts death and destruction for the South—likens the civil war to the rebellion of the angels, and condemns them all to fire and brimstone. He preaches war in the pulpit—war to the knife—war to the bitter end—war to extermination. He also teaches a Sunday school. The doctrines he instils into the hearts of the young are as much the same as those he preaches to his congregations. On a recent occasion, a precocious scholar interrupted one of his Sunday school orations, by profanely exclaiming. "Bully for Jesus!" The saying was "smart," and Mr. Beecher relished it so much that he repeated it to an admiring crowd on the first opportunity.

Such is the conduct of the most popular preacher in New York; for blasphemous as his conduct is, his church at Plymouth is always crowded. A New York journal informs us that the class of people who sit under Mr. Beecher's "droppings," are very low in the scale of human organization; but the same authority admits that the church is crowded. The fools predominate, and Beecher draws them all to himself. It is satisfactory to know, however, that there are some few persons in New York who rate him at his true value. It is reassuring to know that his blasphemies make some New Yorkers shudder, and that by them he is regarded as a disgrace to his sacred profession. Well may this minority anxiously ask, if such desecration can overtake the pulpit in the first four years of the war, what would be its condition if the war were to last four years more.—London Prototype.

KEROSENE LAMP WICKS.—A correspondent says:—"In the present price of kerosene lamp wicks, people can make a better wick than they buy by taking cotton flannel, of which all have pieces, and folding it up three thicknesses, just wide enough to go into the tube, and catching the edge with coarse stitches."—Scientific American.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

HYGIENE.—NO. 4.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

We will next examine some of the causes of disease acting upon the exterior of the body; and prominent among these is

IMPROPER CLOTHING.

Much has been said, of late, relative to this subject; and much, too, which is ridiculous. As with all other matters relative to health disease, there are fanatics, those who carry a subject to an extreme. There are many persons whose mental nature is so balanced that it seems impossible for them to occupy a medium ground upon any subject. Like a horse, that sees the gulf upon one side of the bridge, and in attempting to escape it runs off at the other, they, seeing the evil effects of the abuse of a custom, run to the opposite extreme, which amounts to about the same final result. Because I see a man frozen to death, shall I throw myself into the fire in order to escape a like fate? Because I see a man kill himself eating, shall I refuse to eat? I shall not, however, enter into a discussion relative to any particular style of dress, except so far as it interferes with the healthy performance of the functions of the body.

As regards the quality of clothing, there is some diversity of opinion among medical men. Some contend that woolen goods should be worn next the skin continually; while others object to wool, thinking it effeminates the skin. The latter opinion, however, I think erroneous. Woolen vestment is a poor conductor of caloric, and hence, in winter, is the best article of clothing, from the fact that it retains the heat generated in the body. In extremely warm weather, it wards off the external heat, and keeps the body in its natural temperature. In changeable weather, as in the spring or fall, it guards the body against the atmospheric vicissitudes.

Cotton is the next best article of clothing; and where woolen goods irritate the skin, or produce other unpleasant feelings, they can be lined with cotton, thus avoiding any disagreeable sensations from the wool, and also secure the advantages of that article in regulating the temperature of the body. Linen is a good conducter of heat, and hence, when worn, subjects the body to all the variations of the external temperature. It should not, therefore, be worn except with wool.

With reference to the quantity of clothing, much depends upon the temperature; but as a general thing, too much is worn in all seasons, especially on some parts of the body. The effect of an excess of clothing, is to weaken the system, and render it much more liable to "colds." Suppose, for example, you put your hand into a poultice and keep it there for some length of time; on removing the poultice, the hand would feel as though there was no skin upon it, so sensitive would it be to external air. Too great a quantity of clothing has the same effect, and makes us more liable to the diseases which proceed from a change of temperature.

The distribution of clothing should be materially reformed. The custom of loading the neck and body with a large amount of cloth, while the extremities are left with but one or two thicknesses, is the reverse of what it should be. The extremities are the parts most remote from the great centre of circulation, and, consequently, are more liable to suffer from extreme cold; the circulation is more easily checked, and the heat is less. People labor under a great mistake when they clothe the neck so excessively, thinking to prevent sore throat; for by so doing they debilitate the part, and infinitely increase the predisposition to this disease. While wrapping the body with such a redundance of clothing, they not only produce a similar effect upon the vital organs, but, mechanically, they retard the respiratory movements of the chest, and obstruct the circulation to the extremities, where the clothing is lighter, and the circulation naturally more feeble.

The color of clothing should also be regarded. The darker colors transmit the heat most readily through them. The same rule applies to odors, the darker colors retaining a greater amount of odorous particles than the lighter; hence the necessity of white walls, white bed-clothing, etc.; especially for the sick room. In cold weather heat is allowed to escape faster, and in warm weather penetrates the dark cloth more rapidly than the lighter hues. Hence, light colored clothing is the warmest in the winter and coolest in the summer.

There are a few styles of dress to which I must allude in this place, as they so materially interfere with physiological action. Need I name tight-lacing, as one of these injurious customs? Volumes have been written upon this style of dressing, and many have heeded the precepts therein contained; yet the practice is now carried to a fearful extent, and I cannot but briefly refer to it in this connection. The effects of tight-lacing are four-fold. First, it retards the movements of respiration; secondly, obstructs the circulation; thirdly, prevents the healthy movements of the stomach and intestines, and fourthly, it weakens the abdominal muscles. In this practice, the ribs are thrown on to the lower portion of the lungs, compressing them, and obliterating the air-cells. Hence the blood fails to reach them and receive that vitalizing gas from the air, and to give off the carbonaceous matter which has been gathered up in its circulation. It enters upon its second round highly charged with a poison that rapidly destroys the nervous forces, disorganizes the great mass of vital fluid, and vitiates all of the fluids of the body. The air-cells, from this compression and inaction, speedily become disorganized, and pulmonary consumption is induced. Again the circulation failing to reach the extremities in its natural quantity, the limbs become cold, and the blood is thrown back on to some internal organ or organs, and a disease of such organ is produced. The compression upon the stomach, liver, and intestines, renders them inactive, and, as a natural result, diseased. Hence dyspepsia, liver complaints, hemorrhoids, etc., with all their attendant symptoms.

Again, the inactivity of the abdominal muscles, produced by compression, causes costiveness, dyspepsia, and a long list of diseases, to which the female system is subject. All these effects produced by compression at the waist, operate together to bring the victim to an untimely grave. Millions now rest in premature graves from the effects of this barbarous practice. Tight-lacing, then, produces pulmonary consumption, dyspepsia, liver complaints, scrofula, hemorrhoids, and all diseases to which the female economy is liable, with all the attendant symptoms peculiar to each and all of them. Why is it that in the face of all these facts, persons continue the practice? It certainly is very uncomfortable. Do they suppose it adds to their personal beauty? Not in the mind of a sensible man, is there any feeling but disgust. Let me say to the would-be fine and genteel young (or old) lady, as you value beauty, health and long life, desist from this vulgar and abominable practice. You destroy your attractiveness, your health, and the prospect of a healthy posterity.

It may be asked, "What is tight-lacing?" I answer, any compression which in the least interferes with a full expansion of the chest. When, upon taking a long, full and deep inspiration, you feel the least degree of tightness from the clothing, you are guilty of tight-lacing. But the waist is not the only part of the body which suffers from the mistaken idea of refinement. The feet also suffer compression, and the result is corns, bunions, chilblains, ringworm, toe-nails, etc. As unimportant as it may seem, much misery is produced in this way.

Hoop skirts as they are generally worn, have been the cause of a vast amount of mischief. They hold the clothing from the lower extremities, and thus expose them to a stratum of atmosphere much lower in temperature than the remainder of the body, which causes the blood to recede and embarrass the vital organs. Keeping the feet and limbs cold produces more injury than most people apprehend.

I will not presume to prescribe a particular style of dress, but would point out a few very essential points to be observed. 1st, Keep the extremities warm. 2nd, Have the clothing perfectly loose. It should be nearly twice the circumference of the body, or part clothed. 3rd, Use no more cloth than is absolutely necessary to keep the body comfortable. 4th, Cloth should be of fine wool, and of a light color.

FOOD FOR CHILDREN.

"Fathers, mothers, when your sons
Look to you for daily bread,
Dare ye, in mockery, load with stones
The table that for them is spread?
How can ye hope your sons will live,
If ye, for fish, a serpent give?"

Few things are more vitally important to children, as it respects their life, their health, their present and eternal well-being, than well-regulated dietetic habits, the quantity and quality of food requisite, the frequency of indulgence.

O that parents knew this and would give heed. Our world, in a measure, would cease to groan, being burdened. The parent, by all means, should keep a prayerful, watchful, constant supervision over this department of domestic training, and on no occasion yield the reins of government, or ask his child whether or not he will be helped to this article of food or that. In this particular, as in every other, the parent must be the judge. The appetites of children are not a safe guide. This we have reiterated, and shall continue to reiterate—give line on line, precept on precept, louder and still louder, till the dead awake, arise! And we rejoice that in this needed reform we have the concurrent testimony of the most emiment physicians.

The following valuable thoughts are from "The Home," on the "PROPER HOURS FOR TAKING FOOD.—There is probably as much harm done by allowing children to eat at all kinds of improper hours, as giving them improper food. Children should, from their birth, be accustomed to take food at regular intervals, and though these periods occur more frequently in infancy, every child should, as early as possible, accustom himself to take all the food that nature requires, at the regular periods in which his meals are prepared. Where children are allowed to eat at all hours of the day, whenever it may occur to them to do so, they will mix the taking of food in with their amusements, and eat to surfeiting because they are tired of their toys and do not know what else to do. And parents permitting this are just as sure to have sickly children as they are to allow the unwise indulgence."

How many doctor's bills might be saved, wakeful nights, wearisome days, scorching fevers, dyspepsias, dysenteries, croups, colics, scrofulas, the numerous ailments to which flesh is heir, and premature deaths, were children rightly trained in this direction. It is painful to think of the amount of suffering caused by this early repletion. Says an eminent writer:—

"I firmly believe that almost every malady of the human frame is, either by highways or byways, connected with the stomach; and I must own I never see a fashionable physician mysteriously consulting the pulse of his patient, but I feel a desire to exclaim, why not tell the poor invalid at once, Sir, you have eaten too much; you have drank too much; and you have not taken exercise enough! The human frame was not created imperfect. It is we ourselves who have made it so. There exists no donkey in creation so overloaded as our stomachs."

THE REASON WHY CHILDREN DIE, is because they are not taken care of. From the day of birth they are stuffed with food, choked with physic, slushed with water, suffocated in hot rooms, steamed in bed clothes. So much for in-door. When permitted to breathe a breath of pure air once a week in summer, and once or twice during the colder months, only the nose is permitted to peer into daylight. A little later they are sent out with no clothing at all on the parts of the body which most need protection. Bare legs, bare arms, bare necks, girted middles, with an inverted umbrella to collect the air, and chill the other parts of the body. A stout, strong man goes out in a cold day with gloves and overcoat, woolen stockings, and thick, double-soled boots, with cork between and rubbers over. The same day, a child of three years old—an infant's flesh and blood, and bone and constitution—goes out with shoes as thin as paper, cotton socks, legs uncovered to the knees, neck bare, an exposure which would disable the nurse, kill the mother outright, and make the father an invalid for weeks. To rear children thus for the slaughter-pen and lay it to the Lord, is too bad!

Author of "Home Thrusts."

ROUND SHOULDERS.

First, round shoulders and stooping forms detract from a fine personal appearance, either when standing, sitting, or walking. Women like a beautiful face, eyes, feet, hands, fine dress, ornaments, splendid houses, horses, etc., and take great pains, often run great risks of life to obtain them. Why not work as hard for fine forms?

But laying aside all thoughts of good looks, and turning to our ability "to do and dare," we find that a truly graceful posture is the only easy one; that where the "bearing" of the body is not correct, as in stooping, we wear ourselves out by spending strength to support ourselves in an unnatural position; that those who go about their business gracefully, do more, and do it easier than the awkward.

Stooping is unhealthful. The lungs are cramped, and do not fully inflate. This brings on consumption; and besides, the blood being only half oxygenized, we only half live. Nothing is so important in securing good health and good feelings as thorough breathing.—Home Journal.

EATING FAST.—The habit of eating fast and carelessly is supposed to have paralyzed Napoleon on two of the most critical occasions of his life—the battles of Borodino and Leipsic, which he might have converted into decisive and influential victories by pushing his advantages as he was wont. On each of those occasions he is known to have been suffering from indigestion. On the third day of the battle of Dresden, too, the German novelist, Hoffman, who was present in the town, asserts that the Emperor would have done much more than he did, but for the effects of a shoulder of mutton stuffed with onions.

WEARING SPECTACLES.—Persons living in cities begin to wear glasses earlier than country people, from the want of opportunities of looking at a distance. Those who wish to put off the evil day of spectacles, should accustom themselves to long views. The eye is always relieved and sees better, if after reading awhile, we direct the sight to some far distant object, even for a minute. Great travelers and hunters are seldom near-sighted. Humboldt at eighty-seven could read unaided. Sailors discern objects at a considerable distance with considerable distinctness when a common eye sees nothing at all.

COLD CREAM.—The best cold cream, and the only thing of the kind that is really softening and healing to the skin, is made as follows: Take two ounces of white wax, half anounce of spermaceti, and a pint of sweet oil, put all together in a jar, place on the hob close to a good fire, let the ingredients melt and remain molten for some time, stirring them occasionally. When cold, the preparation is complete. Scent of any kind, though agreeable to the olfactory nerves, is injurious to the skin, and should not be added to the cold cream.

SOWING AND REAPING.

Air.—"Annie Lyle."

Sow thy seed from dawn till evening,
Withhold not thy hand;
Souls for lack of truth may famish
In this barren land.
Jesus has within his vineyard
Work for all to do;
Why stand ye, then, idly waiting,
Who the seed should sow?

Chorus. Who will work in Jesus' vineyard
With a willing hand,
Light and truth to freely scatter,—
Come and join our band.

Jesus calls you to his vineyard!
Him be faithful to;
Think not all thy strength is weakness,
Each some good may do.
Sow, then, for the hours are fleeting,
Seed must fall to-day;
A joyful harvest thou shalt reap,
Which will toil repay.

Sown in spite of cowards doubting,
Faithful watch-care keep;
Perchance some thou'lt find indulging
In a quiet sleep.
Tell them soon the Bridegroom cometh,
With the word "Depart!"
Let thy warm tears falling o'er them,
Melt the wanderer's heart.

Sow until the Lord of harvest
On the earth appears,
To reward each faithful servant
For the part he bears.
Oh! look onward, and look upward;
Cast out trembling fear;
Let thy heart fill with rejoicing,
Our redemption's near.

"PROMISE OF THE FATHER."

NUMBER FOUR.

A few more instances will be sufficient Bible evidence in support of the position of the weaker sex, who dare and suffer all opposition to proclaim the truth they love.

The sixteenth of Romans is full of Paul's expressions of affectionate regards, or "greetings." He first refers to a man and his wife, whom he calls "my helpers in Christ Jesus." They were Aquilla and Priscilla, though in the text Paul refers to Priscilla first. They were Hebrews, who had formerly lived in Rome, but had been expelled from there by an edict of Claudius. Paul had lived with them, as they were of the same trade as himself; to wit, "tent makers," and now, in remembrance of the kindness they had bestowed upon him, he calls them his helpers in Christ Jesus. Does he mean that Priscilla helped him "in Christ Jesus" by providing for his temporal wants, while he lived with them? Doubtless she did so, and her husband also, because the apostle mentions both as having "helped him"; but was that all the "help" he had from them? Was that in the strictest sense helping in Christ? The word sunergous, translated "helpers," is from the verb sunergeo, "to work or labor together"; i. e., as associates. It is as though Paul called this man and his wife his coadjutors, and not in the business of tent-making either, but "in Christ Jesus"; which phrase is only another for "the gospel of Christ."

As a slight intimation of how they did a part of their work, we have only to refer to Acts 18: 26, for they took Apollos and expounded to him the way of God more perfectly. He was "eloquent and mighty in the Scriptures" before he was instructed in the way of the Lord, and "fervent in spirit"; but they became his teachers, and (akribesteron auto exethento) more critically and exactly exposed and revealed to him "the way (hodos) method, or manner, "of God," or which one should exhibit towards God.

This man and his wife were thoroughly acquainted with the gospel, and so qualified to teach it to Apollos; and if to him, then to the public. The two labored together; they were inseparable in their work, and so must be mentioned together. (Query. If Priscilla taught Apollos, did she act in opposition to Paul's rule that a "woman" should not "teach a man"?)

The apostle greets Mary, who he says "bestowed much labor on us." That reads a little differently from the other passages, and gives us the real evidence of the distinction between "laboring in the gospel" and bestowing labor on the Lord's servants. This Mary was like Martha, the sister of the other Mary who did "much serving"; and the apostle extends to her the tokens of his affectionate remembrance of her deeds of christian kindness; while to Tryphena and Tryphosa, who "labored in the Lord," and "Persis, who labored much in the Lord," he sends greetings because of their abundant labor in that capacity.

How many others of the women there were who thus labored we have no mention, but we have already found a "host." In one case the four sisters, in another a man and his wife, and numbers of others of whom honorable mention is made. The Lord was their only dictator, and they spake with the ability which he giveth. They were in his "order," and so honorable mention is made of them. Thus we have sufficient Bible proof of the truth of the matter, and man's opinion is insignificant.

In closing, we will notice a few of the instances of those of a later date who have felt the same influences of the outpoured Spirit as the handmaids of Bible record felt; just to keep the fact in mind that God's providential order is not changed. A large number of interesting incidents might be given, but we have only space for a few.

Several of the so-called evangelical denominations have furnished a small quota. The early Methodists encouraged female labors in whatever capacity they have felt called to work; but at the present day there are but few of the "daughters" prophesying among them, Sr. Palmer being almost alone. Some have been encouraged among the F. W. Baptists. The Friends, or Quakers, always stand ready to see God work in this order. The English church has been an unwilling witness to a few struggling efforts on the part of some of the silenced (except in responses) female members. Others of the sects have known what it has been either to oppose or encourage such efforts. There are a few among those who are looking for the Lord, more than are found any where else, unless it be among the Friends; and among us they seem to find more encouragement than in most places; but here there are even now crushed, groaning hearts, that bleed and sigh in secret places on account of opposition, when they should have help and encouragement; as their burden is naturally heavy enough without a feather's weight being added by those who should be "nursing fathers and mothers."

Among the early Methodists we have the case of the wife of Mr. Fletcher, Vicar of Madley. "As a public speaker," quotes Sr. Palmer, "she was luminous and truly eloquent. Her discourses displayed much good sense, and were fraught with the riches of the gospel. Sometimes her style was vehement, but she did not overstep the modesty of her nature. At other times it was pathetic. She excelled in that eloquence which goes directly to the heart."

Mr. Wesley encouraged these labors. "To his friend Miss Briggs," says Sr. Palmer, "he writes: 'Undoubtedly you and Philothea and Miss Perronet are called to speak for God. In doing so you must expect to meet with many things which are not pleasing to flesh and blood. So much the more will you be conformed to the death of Christ. Suffer and conquer all things.'"

It is well known that Mr. Wesley only yielded his pre-conceived established church notions, and allowed these innovations, when his honest, truth-seeking heart became convinced that the movement was all of the Lord.

Sarah Mallet was another of whom Mr. Wesley writes: "She was a young lady of two or three and twenty, devoted, and of a strong understanding." She at first resisted the impressions of duty, till it was suggested (to her mind), If you do not do it willingly, you shall do it whether you will or not. She fell in a fit. In a year or two she had eighteen. She cried out, Lord, I will obey thee! She did so, and her fits returned no more.

An interesting case is noticed by Sr. Palmer,—that of Mrs. Mary Taft, wife of Dr. Taft. Both before and after her marriage she engaged with her whole soul in this work, and was as abundantly blessed of God as though she had been a man.

The Friends, all know, are favorable to this manner of prophesying. Mr. J. J. Gurney, a widely known and devoted minister among them, says: "We believe we must not 'limit the Holy One of Israel.' We dare not say to the pious, modest female, 'Thou shalt not declare the word of the Lord,' when we believe that from an infinitely higher authority there is issued a directly opposite injunction. There is nothing astonishing in this particular direction of the Holy Spirit, because 'there is no respect of persons with God.'"

But it will be enough for us to glance at this department of the work among ourselves. There are a few who are heeding the call of God. Some are hesitating, and some, because of opposition, despairing. Some oppose honestly, some because they do not think the practice in "good taste"; which means, in a worldly sense, they consider the woman who takes that course as "out of place"; but that, too, is a worldly-wise phrase, for what may be out of place with man, may be exactly in place with God. God's ways are not as our ways.

There are some among the preachers and people who cordially and heartily encourage every handmaiden who feels the burden of responsibility in the matter; and why should not all? Some say that there are those among the sisters that attempt to preach, who have but little talent, and they had better give it up. But are there not those of that class among the brethren as well? Had they better give it up? Beside, is the degree of one's talent, in the intellectual sense, the measure of obligation to improve what is possessed? Should intellect be the standard of greatness, rather than goodness? In these days of degeneracy, when the world cries out, "Intellect is great, and christian character is inferior," it is necessary for christians to watch lest they get to saying with the world that certain are "good, very good, but not great." Beside, if God calls either a son or daughter to prophesy, he knows well about the adaptation to the work; and if it should be supposed that the calling had been mistaken, let the Lord and that soul decide the matter. "If it be of man, it will come to naught."—Gamaliel.

It would be irrelevant to refer to those here who have faced the opposition and dared to take the crucifying position of "female preachers." "Their praise is in the churches" that receive them. They have not, and, as it is truthfully said of the class generally, they do not overstep the bounds of female modesty, but every where, with all the warm entreaties that a tender heart dictates, they cry out in the ears of the people and proclaim the nearness of the judgment and the mercy of God through Jesus; and as the Savior commissioned Mary of Magdalia to go out and preach his resurrection, so they go proclaiming the doctrine of a resurrection to immortality through him, standing in the liberty of the children of God; and it does seem that those who thus go should have all the sympathy and encouragement of the church.

Do we wish to be in "order" as was the primitive church, and in these last days? Are we anxious to be fed with the right sort of meat in due season? Are we willing God should send by whom he will? Then let us hold up the hands of the handmaidens who have devoted themselves to God and have received the gift of prophecy. They do not naturally covet the position. Says one of them: "To go forward is like death"; but then, looking on the brighter aspect of the position, "but, blessed truth! it separates me from the world." Others have similar trials. Some are in darkness and doubt to-day because their timid, sensitive natures are not encouraged, and the cross is made heavier than it should be.

We want all that belongs to the church of God; and it cannot be efficient unless we accept God's instrumentalities. We are close to the judgment. All that can possibly be done to fit us for it should be. We need every help we can get. Let us not refuse even the weakest, certainly not the best, but live on the word, that we may be ready for translation into the everlasting kingdom.

Hatley, C. E. L. C. McKinstry.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

As this subject has been somewhat agitated recently, I will endeavor to present a scriptural investigation of the same. There is a class of religious persons, it seems, who place the pivot of their faith upon the keeping of the seventh day (Saturday) as their Sabbath. Such, I think, in the language of the Apostle Paul, are "doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings," etc.; and they evidently fall under this prohibition: "But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the LAW: for they are unprofitable and vain.—Titus 3: 9; 1 Tim. 6: 3, 4, 5, 20; 2 Tim. 2: 16, 23.

The law was given by Moses, (Ex. 20: 2–17; Deut. 5: 6–21—embracing the ten commandments, and for the law of sacrifices and ordinances consult Exodus, Leviticus, Deuteronomy, etc.,) but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.—John 1: 17.

The law of the Sabbath, according to the letter, has not been binding since the close of the Mosaic dispensation. The Sabbath was a type, or a shadow, (Col. 2: 17; Heb. 8; 35; 10: 1), given to Israel according to the flesh, who were a typical people, and who were only accountable for its observance until the end of that dispensation. Then the Sabbath, together with all the types of the Mosaic law, ceased to be in force, and has not been binding on either Jews or Gentiles since. It was a type of the rest (millenium) that remains for the people of God. Heb. 4: 9.

At his crucifixion Christ "blotted out the handwriting of ordinances" of the old law, "took it out of the way, and nailed it to his cross."—Col. 2: 14. Instead of those he instituted the ordinances of baptism, the Lord's supper, etc. Thus he became the mediator of a new covenant, established upon better promises, and much more acceptable unto God the Father. See Heb. 8: 6–13.

Therefore, under the gospel dispensation, we were not under the law but under grace; being from under the law of types, which shadowed forth the things of the Spirit, and baptized with the Holy Ghost into the body of Christ, and made conformable to his image and the rule of his house, having our fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law."—Rom. 3: 31.

All the commandments of the law of God by Moses were reinculcated and enforced, with the exception of that relating to the Sabbath. On a certain occasion, when Jesus had silenced the Sadducees, who were trying to entangle him, the Pharisees gathered around, and asked him a question, in order to tempt and embarrass him, "saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law?" Jesus replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."—Matt. 22: 34–40; Rom. 13: 9; Jas. 2: 8; Gal. 5: 14. These two commandments embrace everything contained in the law given to Moses, except what relates to the Sabbath.

There is not a passage in the New Testament which commands, makes obligatory, or even advises, the observance of the Jewish Sabbath as a day of entire abstinence from labor; whereas, upon the Israelites it was made strictly obligatory under the penalty of being put to death. Ex. 31: 13, 14.

Christ, our great example, when he and his disciples went through the cornfields on the Sabbath, and began to pluck the ears and to eat, was accosted by the hypocritical Pharisees—those whited sepulchres—(very similar to whom are many of the sectarian church-members of the present day) and told by them that it was not lawful to do so on the Sabbath day. But what answer does he give them? Does he conform or enforce a strict observance of their Sabbath, as the occasion offered for doing so? Not a word to this effect. But he tells them that he is Lord even of the Sabbath. Matt. 12: 1–8; Mark 2: 23–28, etc. There is no reproof given by Christ or his apostles on record, for any violation of the Sabbath, nor any command enjoining its observance.

The disciples and early christians were in the habit of assembling together on the first day of the week for the purpose of worship. Acts 20: 7; 1 Cor. 16: 2; John 20: 1, 19, 26. This they did in celebration of their Lord and Master's resurrection on that day. Hence, it was thenceforth called the Lord's day. Rev. 1: 10. How beautifully appropriate! I approve of scriptural terms and significant names. Therefore I prefer to hear people speak of the Lord's day, or Sunday, instead of Sabbath.

"One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike," etc. Rom. 14: 5; Col. 2: 16. I believe it is very appropriate, and even necessary, to set apart one day in seven as a day of rest for man and beast, for reading the Scriptures, meeting for worship, and hearing the word expounded; but at the same time I do not feel, according to the teaching of the New Testament, that it is wrong or sinful to do any work which may be necessary on that day. Let every one examine the matter fully, and so act according to an enlightened but sensitive conscience. But let us in harmony observe the Lord's day, and not contend for the seventh, as being under the law; for by the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified, (Rom. 3: 20; Acts 13: 38, 39; Gal. 2: 16; 3: 10, 11), but by faith, Rom. 5: 1; 3; 28. Let us strive to honor Christ, our living Head, in all things.

The apostle of the Gentiles testifies that God sent his Son to redeem us from under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons, instead of bond-servants; and then counsels us against turning back to the weak and beggarly elements of the world, as though desiring again to be in bondage unto them; observing days," etc. Gal. 4: 3–10. Read the whole chapter and see what Paul says concerning the bond and the free—those who desire to be under the law, and the children of promise. "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." He that does or observes a part makes himself "a debtor to do the whole law." "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace. For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith." Gal. 5: 1–6; also verses 13, 14, 18, 22–25.

THE RESTITUTION.

Originally God made man upright, pure, holy, good, and gave him dominion over the beasts, birds and fishes. Man was but little lower than the angels, crowned with glory and honor; could walk and talk with his King, and did do so, of whom he was not afraid, while he remained dutiful, obeying his laws. Everything was pleasant around him. The beasts were all harmless, living on herbage. The wolf and lamb fed together; the lion eat herbage like the ox, the leopard, the kid, the calf, and young lion, lay down together, so harmless that a child might lead them; while the calf and the cub played together. The limbs of the trees were bending beneath their fruit, and the fields already were waving with their golden grains, or herbs bearing seed for the use of man.

Thus was the original kingdom prepared from the beginning of the world for man. Then was man made in the image of his King and Creator, made of the dust of the ground; the breath of life was breathed into him, and he became a living soul. This kingdom became tarnished by sin. Man broke God's law, and the penalty was death. This would have been the end of man, had not God in his great mercy provided another way to save him, through Jesus Christ and the resurrection. He devised a plan, infinitely wise it was, that another should come and step into the place of Adam, and obey the law as Adam should have done, and then step into the place of the sinner, and suffer the penalty, which was death, thus magnifying God's law, and satisfying justice.

This plan being proposed and adopted, Jesus was promised, and in due time came; was born of a virgin, according to the promise, lived a holy life, obeyed the laws perfectly, then died the cruel death of the cross; was buried, rose the third day, ascended up to heaven, where he now sits an advocate to plead the sinner's cause; and will come again by-and-by, to raise the sleeping saints, and change the righteous living; and they will rise to meet him in the air, and descend with him to Mount Olives, where the Lord my God (Jesus) and all his saints will come. The land will be turned to a plain, from Geba to Rimmon, south of Jerusalem, lifted up and inhabited, from Benjamin's gate to the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's wine presses, and men shall dwell in it, and in that place there shall be no more utter destruction; but outside of this place, there will still be destruction.

Then Jesus takes his seat on David's throne, and begins to conquer the wicked nations. This will be a work of time, for it will be done by swords, famine, and pestilence, until the slain shall be from end of the earth to the other, not lamented nor buried; and the righteous will go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men, who have transgressed. And the house of Israel shall be seven months burying the dead, and seven years burning weapons (wooden apparatus) of war for fuel.

Then comes the resurrection of the wicked, at the end of the thousand years; when they surround the righteous to conquer them; but fire comes down from heaven and burns them up root and branch.

This closes up Jesus' work, for he must reign until all his enemies are destroyed, and death is the last enemy. The same fire which burns up the wicked, melts the mountains and hills like wax before the fire; they flow down, filling up the valleys. Thus all things are made over new, or restored to their original state, and God's plan is carried out, and the earth abides forever, is given to the children of men, and they dwell in it forever.

THE WORLD TO COME.

When I think of the joys of the bright world to come—
Of the city so bright and so fair;
When I think of the saints in their own happy home,
Oh, then, how I long to be there!

When I think of the songs that angels shall sing,
When no requiem shall float through the air;
When I think how that world with sweet music shall ring,
Oh, then, I would gladly be there!

When I think of the palms and the star-gemmed crowns,
And the robes that the ransomed shall wear;
And oh! when I think of that beautiful throne,
It is then that I long to be there!

Yes, I long to be there where no sorrow can come,
Where nothing can trouble the blest;
Who dwell evermore in that beautiful home,
With Jesus forevermore rest.

THE IMMORTAL SOUL LOCATED.

It has been no small puzzle to the believers in the popular view to determine in what part of the human system that invisible and unimaginable entity called the immortal soul, has its special abode. Most persons, we presume, if requested to designate, as nearly as possible its invisible dwelling-place, would lay their hand upon their breast. But it has been decided that it has fixed its residence "higher up;" namely, in the head, or rather that it is confined there; for the soul itself seems not to be a free agent in this matter. We will listen to Dr. Fitch on the subject. He says:

"The first chamber I will notice, is the skull. This is a dark chamber, remarkable for being the room in which the brain is located; and it is also remarkable for the place where mind and matter meet. In the brain resides that inscrutable and awful being, the human soul. The eye does not see, the ear does not hear; all the senses are only means and instruments that convey knowledge to the soul. The soul is imprisoned in this dark chamber. Its food is knowledge. No man can explain, no man comprehend it. It is an emanation from the Most High; and in control, holds the same relation to man's body that the Almighty does to it. Imprisoned now, it will one day leave its prison-house, and wing its way to immorality."

Fitch's Lectures, pp. 22, 22.

"The eye does not see, the ear does not hear," says our worthy Doctor. Then it is the immortal soul that does all these things; and as a corollary we may add, that wherever there is seeing, hearing, etc., somewhere behind those operations lies an immortal soul. But animals have eyes and ears; therefore we are borne by this theory to the conclusion, that every individual brute, peregrinating on four legs, more or less, bears about an immortal soul shut up in its head! Will immortal-soulists feel flattered by the introduction of this class of associates? Will they any more accuse us of degrading man to a level with the brute, when their own theory brings them to the same level? All we contend for is that Solomon was correct when he declared that in respect to death and its concomitants, man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; and their own theory, prop it up as they will, when legitimately carried out, leads to the same results, and they cannot avoid it; for beasts are endowed more or less with all these attributes, upon which they rely to prove immortality in man.

But we are told that this immortal soul is "imprisoned in this dark chamber," the skull. The question at once arises, what keeps it in this prison? If the soul is of itself en entity distinct from the body, and only clogged and hindered by the body, and vastly freer in its operations without than with it, why does it not leave? What holds it in the body? How is it fastened? Any man who was imprisoned, imprisoned not from any fault of his, and under no obligations which would make it criminal for him to leave, would be considered very foolish, if he did not leave. Are the immortal souls of popular theology such imbecile or stupid things that they cannot act as wisely? Or is the body superior to the soul so that it can hold it in its prison at pleasure; and so that the soul must needs wait till the body is relaxed in death, before, like trembling fugitive, it can slip out!

But we are digressing. These are independent questions having a field of their own, and inviting separate investigation. We only took our pen to congratulate our friends of the popular view, on having settled this much of their theory, that the mysterious inhabitant of their bodies is imprisoned in the skull. Let them take heed, lest at some unlucky moment their prisoner should "break jail," and leave them in the lurch.—Sel.

ESSENTIALS.

Religion is one. The two characteristic traits and strong pillars upon which christianity rests, are love supreme to God, and love sincere to man. If these be wanting, all the parade, prejudice, and passion of heated parties could not keep together the church of God for a quarter of a century. Love lies at the bottom of christianity. Faith, love, and good works, these are the essentials. These enter into every good life. Nothing goes well, counts for the cause, strengthens character, nor tends to the universal good of humanity, that is not actuated by these prominent principles of the gospel.

Individual activity begun at conversion and carried out into noble enterprises, maintaining good works, is the only ground of our acceptance with God. There is not room to write the signature of a lazy christian on the church book; it cannot be pictured; the Bible does not contain it, and it never will be found in the Lamb's book of life. We commence the christian course by repentance and reformation, and it is only by diligence in our profession that we can grow in grace and go on to perfection. They that endure to the end shall be saved. We must labor. That is stern necessity. But it is not enough to work alone. Christian union is requisite to secure the salvation of sinners.

If faith is essential, then hope is indispensable. Faith is the evidence of unseen realities, and hope animates on to secure them as our everlasting reward. We could not work without faith, and faith devoid of hope would falter and faint.

But the centre of all christian elements is love. God is love. This is the fountain. Charity is the stream perpetually flowing. Love is the spirit of life in us, and charity is its bright and beautiful exhibition.

Very few, if any, really thoughtful and intelligent persons question the utility of a good life, or doubt the authenticity of the Scriptures. Repentance, faith, forgiveness, love, and hope—all the great cardinal principles of revelation—are admitted. There is little or no controversy here. The pure in heart shall see God. The christian will, some where, and at some time, receive an everlasting inheritance. There are a thousand topics on which good men may hold different opinions that in no way deprives them of their position, or endangers their influence. It is not so much the theory, or what one believes, on these minor points, as what he is and does. Possessing the spirit of Christ, walking by a firm faith, abounding in good works, given to hospitality, praying always, animated by a well-grounded hope, putting on charity, the crowning virtue,—the christian is based on the broad fundamentals of Bible religion. God grant us a little more common sense to guide us in our course to felicity. Whoever heard a dying man debating over miserable side issues that divide the christian world? Where in all the examples and precepts of the gospel can be found a direction calculated to create contention among the disciples of Jesus? The doctrine there is, all one in Christ Jesus!

Let us aim to see in how many essentials we can unite, and not in what transient things we disagree. In the life of every christian are all the essentials—his errors are only excrescences. Let us learn to discriminate between that which seems and that which demonstrates the pure and vital religion of the Bible.

"TWO LITERAL RESURRECTIONS."

Rev. 20: 4:—"I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them. And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshiped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

An antecedent for the term "they" in the fore part of the above verse, has caused some little confusion in the interpretation of this chapter:—"I saw thrones, and they sat upon them." Christ says to his disciples, "I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that you may eat and drink at my table, in my kingdom, and sit on THRONES, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Now as those spoken of in the verse under consideration are said to sit on THRONES, and judgment is given unto them, what would be more reasonable than to conclude that they are the saints, or disciples of Christ? Leaving it for the consideration of the reader, we will pass to notice the fifth verse:—"But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection."

Here many have stumbled, but we trust "not that they should fall:" "The rest of the dead" live not until the thousand years are finished.—"This" (the rest of the dead) is the first resurrection,—so thought by some. But if this be so, "the saints" spoken of in the fourth verse must rise a thousand years before the first resurrection! But we are not left in the dark on this important point. The sixth verse is a key by which we can unlock the mystery, and settle the point under contemplation beyond all controversy: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

Here the subjects of "the first resurrection" are said to be blessed and holy, beyond the power of the second death, and as reigning with Christ a thousand years; while those in the fourth verse are placed in the same situation, "They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years:" hence are the subjects of "the first resurrection;" and "the rest of the dead," who "lived not again until the thousand years were finished," are none other than "the wicked dead;" and the little word "until" implies that they will live again when the thousand years are finished.

The hour came, after Christ's resurrection, that "many bodies of the saints which slept arose" (Matt. 27: 52); and the hour is coming when they that are his at his coming will come forth; and at the end of the millennium all will come forth. This text only implies all shall have a resurrection, without defining the order of the event; while other portions of the word of God explain that.

Finally, as the doctrine of two resurrections is plainly and definitely taught in Rev. 20th, we do not believe that any other portion of inspiration contradicts it; but, that it is a sound doctrine, and was so called during the best ages of the church; and will stand against all the waves of error that may dash against it.

And may the time soon come, when the banner of millennial glory shall be unfurled over all the earth, and the despotic monarchs, who drench the soil with the blood of millions, be forever and eternally dethroned; and the royal diadem deck the brow of Him who purchased the long-lost dominion with his blood! When God's people shall be gathered home from the four corners of the earth,—then when he shall say to the north, "Give up," and to the south, "Hold not back;" but shall bring his sons from far, and his daughters from the ends of the earth, to hail the glorious jubilee, and rest forever in the presence of their God.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER SEVEN.

Rev. Justin Edwards says the above passages refer to the coming of Christ to judgment. Although there are many who think that Christ comes at death, thus making death the king of life, the Bible, however, in John 11: 25, calls Christ "the resurrection and the life." 'Tis the resurrection that places such a halo of glory around the tomb. The resurrection is a glorious theme for the contemplative mind, especially for those who have lost friends by death. The promise to Rachel was, "Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for they (thy children) shall come again from the land of the enemy," etc.—Jer. 31: 16, 17.

The resurrection speaks in thunder tones that the pale faces of the dead shall come again from the land of the enemy to their own border. The land in which our dead are buried belongs to the enemy, the devil, and when they come or rise from this land at the resurrection, they will then become subjects of the New Earth, their own border.

Some may sing death, in their hymns, as being the gate to everlasting bliss. The Bible calls it an enemy, and the last one that shall be destroyed.—1 Cor. 15: 26. Paul did not comfort those who had lost friends by death, by telling them that they had gone into the spirit land, into the different spheres, as painted by Spiritualists; or of going into beautiful hunting grounds, as Indians believe; or yet of going into Elysian fields, after the belief of Mohammedans. No, no; it was this: "Sorrow not as others which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For the Lord himself (not his spirit) shall descend from heaven with a shout, . . . and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air. And so shall we ever be with the Lord." "Comfort one another with these words."—1 Thess. 4: 13–18. "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." The destruction spoken of is clearly the result of the Lord's coming, as described in the next epistle. 2 Thess. 1: 7–9;—"The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction, . . . when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." Although this language of the apostle was addressed to the brethren then living, it it evident that its special application is to the brethren who should be alive at the time of the Lord's coming; which now, we believe, we now live in.

Paul knew that the Lord would not come until certain events had transpired. The Thessalonians were looking for the coming of the Lord. They were told by the two men in white that He would come again. Paul's first epistle confirmed them in this hope, and raised their expectations to the utmost. They thought of nothing but his appearing. (Now, if some should think of it, they are reckoned fit subjects for lunatic asylums.)

They began to be troubled on account of it, supposing the day of Christ at hand. Some one, belonging either to themselves or to some other church. took advantage of this, and wrote an epistle to them in the name of Paul, proclaiming the immediate coming of Christ. Paul, upon receiving intelligence of their state, wrote them a second epistle, to allay the agitation and correct the error. In correcting the error, he takes it for granted that they were right in waiting for Christ's coming. He never hints they were wrong in expecting it. The second epistle was written because he knew this. He confirms them in their expectations, and at the same time corrects an error into which they had fallen. Their error was that there was to be no interval, no event, between them and the Lord's coming; and that they might be so sure of his immediate appearing as to throw aside their ordinary employments and look up into heaven as if to see him coming.

He tells them that Christ was certainly to come. Thus far they were right. But there was an interval, and it was here they had gone wrong; there was to be an event between them and his coming. But as soon as that event had taken place, then that which they had been looking for would certainly be realized. He tells of but one mighty event that was to mark and fill up the interval before the Lord should come.

Let us mark the character of this event spoken of by Paul, and the manner in which the Lord's coming is spoken of in connection with it. It is the rising of the man of sin of which he speaks—the rise of the Papacy. The prevalence of antichrist was to be the characteristic of the period between the days of the apostles and the coming of the Lord. John says (1 John 2: 18), "And as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now there are many antichrists." This man of sin begun to show himself in the time of Paul, for he says (2 Thess. 2: 7, 8), "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work, only he who now letteth, will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth."

A GOOD TIME COMING.

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."—Rev. 21: 4.

"I shall never die again," said the little girl, when sinking in the waves of the cold river that flows along the shores of the great desert, that a pilgrim company of strangers and sojourners traverse, following the lead of "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," whom diving footsteps have made a line of light across the waste, and on the murky bed of that dread stream that all must ford who would inherit the "incorruptible, undefiled, and unfading inheritance." No breaking, childish heart will ask, "Who will stay with us, now mother is gone?" as asked the little girl, the eldest of a little troop of pauper orphan pilgrims, looking for the last time into the pale face of a deceased mother, placed in her humble coffin, in death's habiliments, upon the chairs in a western door-yard; the father, a wreck of man in the drunkard's tatters, standing by, a drop or two from affection's fountains, that rum's scorching fires had nearly dried, coursing down his cheeks as he looked upon her

"Whose young affections had run to waste,
And watered but the desert."

No disciple's heart will be troubled again hearing Him say, whom they "trusted should have redeemed Israel," "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said to the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you."—Jno. 13: 33. They suspected not that the gory cross and the rock-hewn tomb were so near in the Redeemer's path, and that a vale of tears, "a wilderness, a land of deserts and of pits, a land of drought and of the shadow of death," was to be passed by his followers ere they should ever be together in his kingdom.

No "nations of them which are saved" will be thrown into mourning because war's red scythe reaps off whole fields standing thick with the loved names of father, brother, son. No banded church will gather on the shores of the death-stream, watching the ripples that mark the place where a fellow pilgrim went down. Over on the "evergreen shore" the little girl dies no more. She met the Life-giver, whose word made her one of the ever deathless. Over there bereaved orphanage

"Meets the mother,
And the mother meets the child."

The "twelve" meet the long absent One in the "house of many mansions." The church, having "come through great tribulations," are there "forever with the Lord," who leads them to living fountains of waters, and wipes away all tears from their eyes. "The voice of the trumpet, and the alarm of war" no more disturb the eternal peace that reigns in the green groves and rosy bowers of "the paradise of God."

No wonder that "bowed and broken humanity" has been sighing for an elysium that no longer blooms on earth. "Eden lost" has, in some traditionary sense, been a prophecy of "Eden restored"; and a "coming One" has been dimly discerned in all past ages as the only hope of suffering, dying humanity. The aurora of "the world to come" is almost discernable in the distant horizon. The

"Sweet fields beyond the swelling floods" will soon be present realities. May we all meet there and "never be parted any more."

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The conference at Frankfort Mills, Me., commenced Jan. 12th, at six P. M. Sermon by Bro. L. L. Howard. Text, Eph. 1: 14. Friday morn, conference meeting. Sermon at two, by Bro. Thomas Smith. Text, 2 Pet. 3: 17. Sermon at six, by Bro. L. L. Howard, from John 3: 16.

Saturday morn, conference meeting. Sermon at two, by Bro. I. Damman, from 1 Tim. 4: 2. Sermon at six, by Bro. I. C. Wellcome, from 1 Pet. 1: 13. Sunday morn, prayer and conference meeting. Sermon at ten o'clock, by Bro. Thos. Smith, from Acts 26: 6–8. Sermon at two, by Bro. L. L. Howard, from Heb. 9: 22. Sunday evening, sermon by Bro. I. C. Wellcome, from Rev. 16: 15.

Prior to closing evening service, we enjoyed the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, etc.

At our business meeting, proceeded as follows: chose Bro. I. Damman Chairman, and Bro. M. Young Clerk, for the ensuing year. Voted, the time and place for holding next meeting be left to a committee of two members. Voted, Brn. I. Damman and T. Smith the committee. Voted, we agree to make effective effort in raising means for the distribution of tracts, as recommended at ministerial conference held at Richmond January 3d, 1864.

Our conference meeting was interesting throughout. Bro. L. L. Howard tarried to aid Bro. Baker and others to continue the meeting.

DEATH THE CHRISTIAN'S FRIEND.

I lately listened to a discourse from a prominent orthodox evangelist, in which he made the following statements: "The christian has two special friends. Christ and death—Christ his first,—Death his second. One secured to him his inheritance; the other introduced him to it." "God said what he meant and meant what he said."

To the latter I could respond a hearty amen. In view of both statements I wanted to ask him several questions: first, how, where or when, God had represented death as a friend? Second, how Christ could be his first best friend, when it is affirmed that he came to destroy his second best friend, death? Third, whether, if the devil has the power of death, as affirmed, and death introduces us to the inheritance, it does not follow, that we could not be thus introduced without the agency of the Devil? Fourth, whether, if death, through the agency of the devil, introduces us to the inheritance, we ought not to sing pœans to death and the Devil? Fifth, how, since God says that the last enemy to be destroyed is death, and "says what he means, and means what he says," it can be affirmed that said enemy is a friend?

AN APPROACHING STORM.

"PARIS, Nov. 18, 1864.

"There are those who think that what is passing in the whole religious world to-day, is but the harbinger of a great approaching change; of the dissolution of that system of medieval theocracy, which has exercised for a thousand years so great a power over the minds and consciences of men and the most of nations. Many of the most enlightened minds of this age are filled with a presentiment of an approaching storm; and though we are unable at present to foresee the results of a great ecclesiastical revolution, (of which the fall of the temporal power of the Papacy would probably be the signal) yet it is impossible for the most sanguine, or the most indifferent, to ignore that in every European country a strong religious movement is taking place."

It is very evident that there is about the same evidence that the theological world is about to break up in confusion, as there is of political revolutions. Old and establised points of doctrine are surrounded by doubters and opposers, and but few defenders. Reason is substituted for revelation, and infidelity for faith. Skeptics are multiplying all about us, and growing bolder every day; while professed christians are sleeping and slumbering in the midst of these great perils. A great change is at hand. Those who hold fast to the word of the Lord will have a stronger current of opposing influences, but the grace of God will be sufficient to carry them safely through, if they trust in him. The warfare will be earnest, but gloriously successful for the true christian soldier. It is no time for faint efforts, or half-hearted measures; but a time when good men should throw their whole influence in favor of the cause of Christ. Let there be no hesitation in this matter, if we expect to be ready for coming events. We are hastening to the close of the present dispensation. The glad hour of deliverance is at hand. Praise the Lord.

SEVENTY WEEKS.—Dan. 9: 24.

BRO. GRANT:—As the book of Daniel has long been a subject of deep and absorbing interest to the student of prophecy, and especially so now, as it is claimed that the seal is at length removed, and the vision undestood in its true light; will you please give us something more definite on the "seventy weeks" of the ninth chapter of Daniel?

1st. When did they commence?

2nd. What prominent or important events of prophecy were fulfilled during their continuance?

3d. When did they end?

4th. Are they identical with the sixty-nine weeks, or have they any connection with them? Or do they mark a separate and distinct measurement of time and fulfillment of events, not embraced in the sixty-nine weeks?

Please give us your views in answer to the above or foregoing queries, and you will much oblige and enlighten the mind of an ardent seeker after the truth. Yours, etc., with high esteem and brotherly love, J. M. HACKETT.

Dover, N. H.

1. We are satisfied thot the seventy weeks begin with the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14; and the best light we have, or have ever seen, shows that the 2300 days mark the entire length of the vision of Daniel 8th chapter, which commences with the first event in the vision, which was the "pushing" by the ram "westward, and northward, and southward" against Daniel's people, B. C. 426, in the twelvth year of the reign of Ahasuerus, or Artaxerxes Longimanus. See Esther 3: 5–15.

"And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath. And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had showed him the people of Mordecai; wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai. In the first month, that is, the month Nisan, in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, they cast Pur, that is, the lot, before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelith month, that is, the month Adar. And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws; therefore it is not for the king's profit to suffer them. If it please the king, let it be written that they may be destroyed; and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries. And the king took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' enemy. And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee. Then were the king's scribes called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring.

And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar, and to take the spoil of them for a prey. The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day. The posts went out, being hastened by the king's commandment, and the decree was given in Shusan the palace. And the king and Haman sat down to drink; but the city Sushan was perplexed."

The foregoing was the most terrible decree, we think, ever issued in the history of our world, as it aimed at the entire destruction of all the children of the Lord in the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of the Persian empire.

2. The events which took place during the seventy weeks are specified in Dan. 9: 24.

3. We think the seventy weeks ended at the time the Lord ceased "to restrain the transgression" (margin, Dan. 9: 24), or desolating power, which was let loose upon the Jews about A. D. 65, when the Romans commenced the seven years' war that resulted in the entire destruction of Jerusalem, from which time it has been trodden down by the Gentiles.

4. We do not think the sixty-nine weeks are any part of the seventy, but begin at another time, and are distinctly given to show the distance from "the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," by Cyrus, to the birth of "Messiah the Prince."

GOG AND MAGOG.

QUERIES.

Ques. 1st. Is the "Gog and Magog" of Rev. 20: 8, the same "Gog and Magog" of Ezek. 38: 2? and if so, is the "fire" of Rev. 20: 9, the same as Ezek. 38: 22?

Ques. 2nd. When did "Gog" "come against the land of Israel," after they were "gathered out of the nations" and settled "upon the desolate places"?

Ques. 3d. Is the "Beloved City" of Rev. 20: 9, the same as Ezek. 48: 18?

Ques. 4th. Is the "Beloved City" of either in the past? or is one or both in the future?

Randolph, Pa. O. T. HOBBS.

It is very evident that the Gog and Magog of Rev. 20: 8 perform the work there specified a thousand years after "the first resurrection." At the beginning of the thousand years, those who had not submitted to receive the mark of the beast, nor consented to worship him, and all the other saints, rise from the dead, and live and reign "with Christ a thousand years; but the rest of the dead" do "not" live "again until the thousand years are finished." "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations [who shall be raised at the end of a thousand years] which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them."—Rev 20; 5–9.

It is very clear that Gog and Magog, of Revelation, are the wicked who do not live during the thousand years following the second coming of Christ, but who rise at the end of that period, and are then deceived by Satan, who persuades them to make an effort to take the "beloved city" away from the saints; but they are unsuccessful, because they are "devoured" by fire from heaven.

Touching the Gog and Magog mentioned in Ezek. 38: 2, 22, and in other passages, we would remark that we do not now see good reasons why these Scriptures may not apply to the same events spoken of in Rev. 20: 8.

2. In answer to the second inquiry, we would say, we do not know where it was fulfilled in the past.

3. We think not.

4. It is certain, we think, that "the beloved city" of Rev. 20: 9, is yet in the future; but the one mentioned in Ezek. 48: 19, we believe should be located in the past.

"FRANCE, RUSSIA AND ROME."

It appears that the interview at Nice, between the Emperor Napoleon III. and Alexander the Emperor of Russia, did not terminate in the most friendly manner. In a letter from Rome, dated Nov. 9th, published by the Unita Cattolica, the following may be found:

"In the diplomatic circles of Rome, anything but favorable news has been received of the interview of the two Emperors at Nice. It is said that, in the first visit, things went on smoothly but coldly; but at the second visit the conversation became rather animated, and it is asserted that the Czar went beyond ordinary limits. The sources from which these particulars come are authentic, and therefore I communicate them to you. It is even added that the Czar declined to join Bonaparte in passing the naval review at Toulon; refused to go to Campiegne; refused to travel in his company as far as Lyons; and refused to stay for even a quarter of an hour in Lyons, when he passed again through it to bid a last farewell to his friend Napoleon, who happened to be still in that city. Finally it is added tat the Czar before leaving the soil of France sent off to Petersburg a telegram to order the necessary preparations for an immediate levy of 250,000 men. It such are the fruits of the interview the Paris Officious have good reason not to sing any dythrambles about the joys of the alliance stipulated at Nice."

The same letter says:—"The Pontifical corvette, L'Immaculatta Concezione, which, as you know, is one of the most elegant men-of-war ever built in England, happened to be in the port of Toulon on the day in which Bonaparte passed the naval review. Like the ships of the other nations, the corvette was dressed in flags and displayed the standard of the Holy See. Now would you believe it, His Majesty Napoleon III., Emperor of the French, when he passed before the corvette of Pius IX. took of his hat and made a profound bow to that flag, to the general astonishment of all the ships' crews?"

THE SOUTH IN EARNEST.

As the bloody scenes of the rebellion are revealed from time to time, and future plans are developed, it becomes more and more apparent that the rebels are terribly in earnest, and will spare no effort to accomplish their purposes. The following editorial article from the Richmond Enquirer speaks for itself, and needs no comments. The editor says:—

"If we are prepared to abolish slavery, it will not be necessary to go to European nations for protection. They will give us not only recognition, but follow recognition with such intervention as will secure nationality and liberty.' Whenever we are reduced so low that we cannot maintain the contest, then we can secure liberty and nationality by the sacrifice of slavery; but until we are prepared to make this sacrifice, it is no use to look to Europe for help, either by recognition or by intervention. We must fight through unaided either morally or physically, if we are determined that the cause of nationality shall be coupled with the maintenance of slavery."

The editor of the Enquirer goes on to show that Gen. Lee advocates arming the negroes as an experiment, and says: "For us that is sufficient. Never will we put our prejudices against his deliberate judgment and advice. He is a rash man that does. We hate, detest and despise our enemy far more than we love and admire slavery. If our liberties cannot be gained but by the sacrifice of slavery, we are prepared to make the sacrifice and urge that sacrifice upon our countrymen. We would not return into the Union, if every slave could be retained to his master, and every guaranty that human ingenuity could devise were secured for the protection of the institution. We prefer liberty with free society, rather than union upon the secure base of slavery."

The latest intelligence from the South gives evidence of more earnest war measures than ever; hence we may expect a terrible summer campaign on the battle field. All efforts to establish peace have failed for the present. We must wait the coming issue.

It appears very evident that the slaves are to be set free as the result of the war. This affords cause for much rejoicing among the friends of humanity; for we think the system of slavery, as conducted in the South, has been the most vile ever practised on the earth; for the reason that the two base passions of covetousness and lust have both been fattened by its continuance.

ZERUBBABEL.

Who was Sheshbazzar, Ez. 1: 8? Who was Zerubbabel, in Haggai 1: 1? Were they both one man? BETSEY L. HINES.

Sheshbazzar was the one by whom Cyrus sent to Jerusalem "all the vessels of gold and of silver," at the time he gave "the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," according to the prophecy of Dan. 9: 25.

Zerubbabel was the "governor of Judah," who had the charge of building the city in harmony with the prophecy and commandment of Cyrus. We have no proof that they were both one person.

THE POPE'S ENCYCLICAL.

The following comments on "the Pope's Encyclical," from the Editor of the New York Independent, Feb. 2nd, 1865, are worthy of attention:—

PICKING A BONE WITH THE POPE.

"Already for a fortnight has the Pope's Encyclical been before the American people; and, as an encyclical presupposes a great circle, we presume it has by this time completed the circuit of the globe—leaving a streak of darkness round the earth. Of all the public papers of the present age, this manifesto is the most astounding and pitiful—exhibiting the successor of St. Peter in the act of suspending the rights of mankind, and dictating the stoppage of the world. By the common order of life and death, men's bodies die and their souls yet live; but here is a patriarch whose body is alive in the nineteenth century, yet whose spirit is dead and sepulchered in the twelfth.

The Encyclical, though European in origin, is American in application, inasmuch as, in addressing Catholics throughout the world, it addresses a considerable class of the American people. What, therefore, does it say to all such?

'We have condemned,' says the spiritual father, 'the principal errors of our sad age.' And what, in the Pope's opinion, are these errors? Is Slavery mentioned among them? No. Treason? No. Drunkenness? No. Lust? No. Lying? No. Theft? No. Pride? No. Scandal? No. The common selfishness of the human heart? No. None of these! What, then, are they the guilty things? They are 'progress, LIBERALISM, and MODERN CIVILIZATION!' These are the blots on the nineteenth century, which His Holiness, with encyclical vinegar and sand, seeks to scour and cleanse! Nevertheless, we fancy that the aged Pontiff, rubbing against 'progress, liberalism, and modern civilization,' will himself be soonest rubbed out!

Why has he written this letter? He answers: 'To destroy new opinions.' What are these opinions, so offending as to deserve death? One of them, so erroneous as to be 'hurtful to the safety of the Catholic Church and of souls,' is—what? Nothing less than the long fought-for and hard-won doctrine that 'Liberty of conscience and of worship is the right of every man.' This the Pope repudiates. 'This,' he says, 'was termed delirium by our predecessor Gregory XVI., of excellent memory.' Now, if the Pope regards this doctrine as a delirium, how are Pope-fearing Catholics in this country to regard it? They are in duty bound to hold the same opinion. What follows? 'Liberty of conscience and of worship' is a fundamental law of this Republic. The law-giver of the Catholic Church denounces this as madness. American Catholics, therefore, are enjoined to withhold their assent, and to repudiate the doctrine. What is the practical result? For instance, St. Louis is a Catholic city. Within its borders, a convention, engaged in forming a new constitution, a few days ago decreed that this very doctrine of liberty of conscience should forever form a vital part of the organic law of Missouri. But, in view of the warnings of this Encyclical, no Romanist of that city or state can now swear allegiance to that constitution without heresy against the Church of Rome. The Encyclical summons the Catholics of that state to arm themselves against the new constitution as against the plague. The Roman Pontiff, if obeyed, will make American Catholics traitors to their country—enemies plotting the overthrow of the laws. And this Encyclical is therefore, a covert declaration of war against the American Republic.

Is this pressing our point too far? Not at all. Let us quote other words from the letter Its apostolic writer denounces the heresy that 'Protestantism is another form of the same true religion in which it is possible to be equally pleasing to God as in the Catholic Church.' Now we have no quarrel with the Pope for denying this doctrine; we expect every other Romanist to deny it. Our quarrel with the Pope, and with the followers of the Encyclical, is for denying that 'every man is FREE to embrace and profess the religion he shall believe to be true.' Now, the Pope's argument is not 'The Catholic religion is the true one; therefore let men be persuaded to adopt it:' (which he could not be blamed for maintaining:) but he says, 'As the Catholic religion is the true one, therefore let men be forced to adopt it.' This commands American Catholics to say to American Protestants, 'You have no right to your Protestantism, and we will force you to bend under the yoke of Rome.' This, we repeat, is a pontifical declaration of war against the American people.

Do not Catholics know that, in a Protestant country like ours, they are indebted for their own self-preservation to this very doctrine of religious toleration which the Pope names insanity? Or are our Catholic fellow-citizens, while now in a minority, simply acquiescent, for the time being, in the Protestant doctrine of liberty of conscience, inasmuch as it works temporarily to their own advantage, while they hold themselves ready at any opportune moment to carry out the revolutionary instructions of the Pope, and to destroy the foundations of American religious, and therefore of civil, liberty? Is the Pope a garrulous old man who has let out the secrets of the Vatican before the ripe time? If so, let the American people be on their guard—forewarned and forearmed!

The Pontiff shoots another arrow from his bow. He denounces 'popular schools, open without distinction to all the children of the people, . . . freed from all ecclesiastical authority and interference.' Is not this an exact description of our Common School System? Striking at this system, is he not seeking to destroy another of the foundations of our American institutions? He tells the Catholics of this country that our schools must no longer be open to 'all the children of the people,' and must no longer be 'freed from all ecclesiastscal authority and interference.' But let American Catholics beware how they heed this advice! Indeed! The Catholics, then, must either rule or else ruin the very schools in which, by thousands, their own ignorant children are at this moment being educated at the public expense! One of the noble aims of our freedom is to foster Free Schools. A free government rests its pillars on an educated people. Every word of the Pope's argument against popular intelligence is a blow at the Republic. Are American Catholics to stand with the Pope and against public schools? Are Romish members of our legislatures to attempt the blotting out of the school-system? Is the Catholic press to re-echo the Pope's injunctions and demand that 'the children of the people' shall henceforth be educated by monks and friars?

The Pontiff, moreover, repudiates the American doctrine 'that the church must be separated from the state, and the state from the church.' Here, again, Catholics who obey the Pope are incited to revolt against our fundamental principles of government. When statecraft and priestcraft joined to govern the world, all history groaned under the tyranny. The union of church and state, as this chief Shepherd teaches it to his American sheep, is, that Catholics must govern America. The established church is to be the Romish, and officers of state are to be members of her communion. This is the scheme of the Pontiff for the Republic of the Pilgrims!

Church and state! May God keep them apart while the world stands! For, never yet have they come together except, like the upper and the nether millstone, to grind men to powder! 'Kings and princes,' says the Pontiff, 'are not to be free from the jurisdiction of the church.' How then with presidents, governors, and senators? Are the Catholics of this country, having been thus instructed by their spiritual head, to demand of Abraham Lincoln, on his inauguration, that he shall take an oath of allegiance to the Papal See? And if the state has no right to be independent of the church, if the rulers of the state are thus summoned by the Pope to kiss his toe, how soon are American Catholics to insist on the execution of this behest? Are they already waiting for the budding of an opportunity? Are they setting their trap in secret, to spring it in due time? The Pope's finger writes upon the forehead of every American Catholic the inscription, 'Alien and enemy to the United States.'

The comprehensive lesson from the Encyclical is, that Romanism is incompatible with Republican institutions. Like slavery, it is a hostile element lodged within the nation, gnawing and burning it like a caustic. What is the remedy? If we are asked, 'May not a man, under our American institutions cherish the Catholic faith if he pleases?' we reply, "Certainly." But we ask, in return, "Shall we permit the Index Expurgatorius? Shall we consent to the Inquisition? Shall we suffer the abolition of public schools? Shall we accede to the joining of church and state?" So at last there comes a point, at which we must say, "Thus far and no farther." The Pope's letter will set wise men to drawing the line between the admissible and the inadmissible parts of Romanism under a Republican government. Until the appearance of this Encyclical, many liberal-minded Catholics supposed that, in yielding undivided spiritual allegiance at Rome, they could at the same time yield undivided temporal allegiance to the United States. But the Encyclical warns them of their error. They owe both supreme spiritual, and supreme temporal, allegiance to the Papal See. A Romanist, therefore, must either deny his temporal allegiance to the Pope, in which case he cannot be a good Catholic, or he must deny his temporal allegiance to the United States, in which case he cannot be a loyal citizen. For a man cannot be, at one and the same time, a citizen of two adverse governments: 'Either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and and despise the other.' The Pope's letter makes it the duty of the American Government and people to ascertain at once the true attitude of the Catholic classes in respect to their loyalty or disloyalty. A man is no more disloyal who gives his oath of temporal allegiance to Jefferson Davis than to Pius Ninth. The two cases stand on the same basis—and both are cases of treason. Almost the entire body of Catholics in this country are in full sympathy with slavery, and in half sympathy with the rebellion. Just at present we have only one intimation to make. Borrowing the glove of Napoleon, the Pope has lately laid his hand upon the Government of Mexico; let him beware how he lays even a finger on the Government of the United States!

For the World's Crisis.

TO A CORRESPONDENT.

I will venture to suggest a few of the many possible reasons why "your piece" did not appear in our paper.

First, as the Editor has told you, there is not room enough to insert all that is written "for the Crisis." And he is responsible for his choice, and we trust he chooses wisely, in the fear of GOD.

Second, it may be out of pure kindness to you that the article was omitted. Other writers may have expressed the same views in better style, so that your efforts would suffer in the comparison.

Third, perhaps your article was complete in all points but one,—it was so badly written that the printer could not read it. These are a few of the possible reasons, and if neither of them fits your case, it may be that the true reason may suggest itself to you. Be assured of one thing,—it is not for want of respect for you personally. The Editor cherishes no sentiments at war with love and respect for all his readers.

Bro. Chapman has stated the matter just as it is. We could not have better expressed our own feelings. In his own language, we would say, "Be assured of one thing,"—when your article does not appear, "it is not for want of respect for you personally. VOICES FROM THE POOR.

FROM THE WIDOW AND THE FATHERLESS.

Dear Bro. Grant:—I am sorry that I could not send you enough money this winter to pay for my paper; but I am situated in very trying circumstances. I and my youngest daughter, a girl twelve years old, have to get almost all of our wood in the deep snow, which leaves me but little time to earn anything; and I cannot work away from home much, for I can not leave my idiot boy, who is now ten years of age.

But, oh! I wish I could express to you how rich I feel, amid all my hardships; for I read, and feel, and know, that the Judge of the widow and the fatherless is soon to appear. Then, every wrong will be righted; then, the short lived grandeur of this world will be changed for that which knows no fading. In view of these things, my trials have turned to pleasures, and I only wish to be more worthy of them. The beech limbs which we gather to make our fires, burn with a cheerful glow, and the frost-laden blasts that sweep around our dwelling have lost their desolation. Next summer's flowers will seem brighter and sweeter than ever before; the songs of our favorite wild birds, that have whistled and carolled to us through so many hours, will be blither; the leaves of the dear old trees will whisper, and the breezes murmur, thoughts of peace; contentment and happiness will look up from every grassy slope and beaten way, and pervade all the atmosphere around, because of "The voice of my beloved!

Behold, he cometh leaping upon the mountains,
Skipping upon the hills! * * *
Behold, he standeth behind the wall,
He looketh forth at the windows,
Showing himself through the lattice."
Sol. Songs, ii. 8, 9.

Surely, He is now "nigh, even at the doors." Amen!

LEND YOUR PAPER.

A few more extracts from letters received, showing how much good may be done by lending your paper to your friends. Read them, and go thou and do likewise.

A correspondent writes from Missouri:—

"By some strange accident, a single copy of The World's Crisis has fallen into my hands,—sent, perhaps, by some friend. Though four months old, I found a number of interesting articles in it, and desire to read further on the subject. I have been trying, for twenty years, to live a disciple of Christ; but, as yet, I see but through a glass darkly, and anxiously desire more light. Send me, therefore, The World's Crisis for the enclosed money."

H. A. W.

Another writes from Michigan:—

"I borrowed the World's Crisis of a neighbor a few days ago, it being the first opportunity I had ever had of seeing it, and must confess I think it a most excellent paper. I am very much interested in the truths it contains, and anxious to get all the light I can. I am a firm believer in the speedy personal appearing of Christ, and trust I shall be prepared to meet him in peace when he comes. I enclose $—, for which you will please send me a copy."

E. B. S.

A sister in Ohio writes:—

"My husband has not been an unfaithful steward since you sent those tracts to us. He has been from house to house lending the tracts and the Crisis. Many read them out of respect for his age, for he is sixty-eight years old, when perhaps they would not for a younger person. When they are read, they return them, and he sends them out on another mission; and, in that way, they have been read by a great many. Quite a number are becoming interested, and are searching for the truth; and a few of our neighbors want the Crisis. So we send you three new subscribers, as follows:— . . .

Some of our preachers think we are getting excited about the coming of the Savior. If it is being excited to try to turn sinners to the Lord, I could wish that all the preachers were excited in the same way. We do feel a desire that poor perishing mortals may come to the knowledge of the truth, and be saved."

"SHOULD CHRISTIANS FIGHT?"

This pamphlet is meeting with good success, and some are giving it a hearty approval. A christian brother in Conn., unknown to me, writes: "Bro. Wellcome:—Having read your pamphlet on war, 'Should Christians Fight?' I felt it actually my duty to respond to you, and let you know that the doctrine of our Savior and his apostles, which you have so emphatically, beautifully, and clearly set forth, is that which I have been laboring for fifty years to keep before the world of mankind. I can truly say you have done the subject good justice, and I rejoice to find any one who dare to come out, especially at such a time as this, and hold forth the gospel as you have." J. W.

Another from N. H. writes:—"I sent to Boston and obtained a copy of your pamphlet, 'Should Christians Fight?' read and sold it, and have since sent and obtained $5 worth more. I have sent ten copies to an aged friend of peace in Ill., who has since written me, and expressed much pleasure. He says: 'I have just finished reading, 'Should Christians Fight?' and think the argument first rate, and unanswerable. Would be glad if this pamphlet were circulated to the four winds.' How do you sell them by the 100 copies?"

THE CONVENTION.

DEAR SISTERS:—I have received many letters in reference to our Convention, but as yet there seems to be the greatest desire to have it at Philadelphia, or Salem, N. J. At the last named place they offer us the church and the sisters of that place can accommodate some forty delegates; but I feel I would rather have this convention held East, if possible, among the Yankee women. I want to hear as soon as possible from all our preaching sisters, for it is expected that each delegate shall preach one sermon, at least, through the course of the convention, thereby making full proof of their ministry.

Now, sisters, let me hear from you as soon as convenient. Let me know what subject you will select for that occasion, so that two sisters shall not have the same subject. Remember, this is not a Woman's Rights' convention, nor a Spiritualists' convention, but, vice versa, it is to bring out the women who feel it their duty to labor in the gospel. The themes will be,—The Prophecies, past, present, and future. Are we living in the last days? What is the condition of the church in these times? is she looking for her Lord's return? What is to be the condition of the church when he does return? is she to be holy, and in a waiting position? What is to be the inheritance of the saints? Of what does it consist? and where is it to be situated?

All these questions will be taken up and examined at this convention. Sisters, do you see the great work to be done? Are you ready to take hold of these questions, and divide error from truth?

Let me hear soon what subject you have selected. We wish some to take up practical piety, and some one the subject of holiness, entire sanctification. Whatever is the special message the Lord has given you, my sisters, that is the message for you to bring to this convention. Although the cross is heavy, and you come trembling, the Lord will strengthen you while you talk for Jesus.

I have received thirty letters in a week, but would like to receive a hundred next week. Who wants the convention at their church, or in their town? Be in haste! The Lord is coming!

I have just received a proposition for two conventions: as the expenses of traveling are great, and as none of us have a great deal of this world's goods, some think it would be best to meet in Phila., so that all here could have a chance to attend it, and then adjourn to meet down East. What do you say, sisters? May the Lord bless and sanctify this movement to our good, and to the honor and glory of his holy name.

For the World's Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—A sister-in-law of the deceased requested me to communicate the following to you, she vouching for the truth of it. J. N. BERRY.

THE SPIRITS HUMBUGGED.

It is known, we presume, to many persons in this town, that Mrs. Hiram F. Johnson—(a notice of whose decease will be found in the proper place)—was, for several months previous to her death, under the care of a Miss or Mrs. Ewen, a "medium" who resides at North Leominster. This "medium" never saw Mrs. Johnson, but a lock of her hair was sent, which was all she required in order to enable her, as she said, to fully understand the case of the invalid, and prescribe remedies. This she did by mail, and the letters are now in our possession. Whenever it was thought by the friends of Mrs. J. that she was in need of a new prescription, it was only necessary to enclose seventy-five cents and request the "medium" to "examine and prescribe," and the reply would come by due course of mail.

Before Mrs. Johnson's death her friends began to lose confidence in the "spirits," and four days after her death they again requested the "medium" to "examine and prescribe," and made the usual enclosure. At the proper time the prescription came, and it was evident that the "spirits" had no suspicion that their patient had passed away several days before.

We make these statements of facts at the request of the husband of the deceased, who will be happy to show the correspondence to any one who desires to see it, and for the purpose of opening the eyes of some others who may be laboring under a delusion similar to that which was so effectually dispelled in the case to which we have alluded.—Barre Gazette.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

A preacher, and the principal of an academy at the west, writes thus:

"BRO. HASTINGS:—Though I don't belong to your particular pale—standing with the "Campbellites," so called—I am greatly indebted to the writings of the dear Advent brethren, and not the least to yours. I regard your "Signs" as better calculated to do good than any book of the age. This is my DELIBERATE opinion. Let us ever be brethren. Greet me. Give me, though unseen and unknown, your confidence. My delight is in the excellent of the earth. I wish you would induce your committee to send me a large lot of your tracts for free distribution, and I will sell all I can of them and send back the proceeds for the Tract Fund."

This brother has shown his faith by his works, and has ordered ONE HUNDRED COPIES of The Signs of the Times to scatter among the churches where he labors. If some of our good preachers and brethren, who are such sticklers about their Second Advent given name, which the Lord never gave them, would do half as much to scatter God's truth as this brother is doing, they might be quite as useful, and a good deal more agreeable, than when they den up in corners, and rejoice in their hope and in their sect, while multitudes are perishing for lack of knowledge.

There are a few hundred of Signs of the Times yet on hand, to be had at low rates by addressing H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

For sale also at this office.

DIMINUTION OF CRIME.—It seems that the war has not increased the amount of crime, but, on the contrary, the number of offenses against the laws has fallen off. According to the results of inquiries instituted by the New York Bureau of Military Statistics, the number of crimes committed in that State during the four years of the war was less than that committed the four years preceding. Thus, the number of convictions for criminal offenses from the beginning of 1860 to the end of 1864 was 2916, while the number for the four years previous was 3947. The proportion of the higher crimes, however, is greater during the period of the war than during that preceding it. Reports received also show that pauperism has decreased since the war commenced.

Correspondence.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

Bro. Grant:—Perhaps you would like to hear how the work is prospering here in Gotham. Well, my sister, who labors with me, and I made a raid last week on the enemy's territory. We went to a very wicked place some sixteen miles from New York, in Jersey. The friends had opened a dancing hall for a church. So we took the bar for a pulpit and commenced preaching Christ. We took six workers with us to sing and pray; eight all told was our army. It is said to be the wickedest place in all New Jersey—Hackensack. The people could never raise a protracted meeting there, so we thought we would make a trial and see what the Lord would do for us. We gave out that we would commence on Sunday evening. We beat our drums to a common metre tune—

"And must I be to judgment brought?"

and sure enough the enemy came in rank and file. There were some who had always broken up every protracted effort, by getting up balls, parties, and skating matches, and they took everybody from the meetings. So they came to see what was going on, and what the women were about to do; and as they crowded in we found we could not use long guns, so we brought out our short arms, and opened fire. Many were the killed, wounded, and crippled. The first evening nine came to the altar for prayer, and four were converted. The second night twelve came forward, and five were converted. The third evening one of the ringleaders of all manner of wickedness came forward, and then there was a stir in the enemy's camp. But with it all the work went on. Bless His holy name! he can work and none can hinder.

On the fourth night we took as prisoners one general, one lieutenant, and one captain of the Devil's host, and such a time I never saw. The power of God showed itself in the conversion of these three men. Then the enemy was worse than ever; but the Lord was fully able to do his own work his own way. Through the day we went from house to house, singing, praying, and talking about Jesus. We divided off on picket duty, so as to bring reports for the evening services and be ready for all emergencies.

One family we visited, the wife of the man was sick, and had been for some time. She wished us to come and see her. We went. I asked her what was the matter? She said the doctor did not know. I told her if her doctor did not know what was the matter with the body, I could tell her what was the matter with her soul, for she was sick, and if she did not send for Jesus she never could be cured. She said she knew she was a great sinner, and she was afraid she should die in her sins. So we labored with her as we have with hundreds of others, pointed her to the Son of God who takes away the sin of the world. We sung and prayed with her about two hours, and she found peace in believing in Jesus. Although she had to be assisted to move before that, yet as soon as she felt her sins pardoned, she could jump out of the bed and shout glory to God all around the room, without any assistance. The next morning she got up and went about, doing her own work for her family, and was not sick any more. So she was cured soul and body.

We were all ready then to go forward and face the enemy in the evening. After the sermon fourteen came up to be prayed for, and six of them were converted. Glory to God! Hallelujah! Sinners are coming home.

Thus it was all the time we were there. I should have liked to have stayed there one month, but I could not leave my own field longer. We were there nine evenings, and the Lord gave us thirty-one souls. Praise his name! We left nine mourners behind, still seeking the Savior. When we came away they followed us to the cars, and with tears in their eyes, begged of us to come soon again, and tell them more about Jesus and his soon coming.

Brethren and sisters, let us praise God for what he is doing. He is preparing himself a people, and he is coming to live with them, and the tabernacle of God shall be with men. Will you pray for me, that I may be endowed with the Holy Spirit, that I may be a terror to sinners, and a praise to them that do well. Your sister, looking for Jesus.

From Bro. A. Strauss.

Dear Brother:—I have often thought to send to you a few lines, as I have been alone for several years preaching the Advent doctrine amongst the Germans, until the hour of the Lord come, and the blind got his sight to see him whom the others crucified. Our dear Bro. Hoffman sends brethren aid to publish "The Signs of the Times."

I am a German, from the County of Wurtemburg, laboring in the name and cause of the King of Zion amongst my country people, and as a voice of our Great Master, to prepare the way to the hearts of men, and try to persuade the people to become christians, lead them to the cross of Christ, that by faith and holiness they may have part in the glory of our Lord, and then show the promises fulfilled and not fulfilled. But I have for the last fourteen years always found it necessary to renew the word of the prophet Isaiah—"Who believeth our report?" There is no doctrine which has had to fight its way through, as our belief of the second advent of Christ; and indeed do we not belong to the sect which is everywhere spoken against? My dear brethren, the time is surely at hand, when those that love the appearance of Jesus Christ should be united in faith, spirit and love, but also in theory and practice; it should be one prophetic, apostolic family. Oh! may the Lord bless Zion in these last days, that all the lost power and gifts of the apostolic church may be gained again. Closing, and praying the Lord may bless you and your work, you shall know I am from the house of Abraham, and remain your brother in Christ,

From Bro. M. S. Rogers.

Dear Brethren:—It is with deep sorrow I pen these lines. We are living in perilous times. Satan truly has in his dark devices hoisted his standard of deception to the flock of God, if possible to deceive the very elect. About five months ago I received the first number of the "Day Star." I supposed that the children were gathering to Celesta, and sought to do the Master's will, and sold my home and all but a few valuables and started for the place; I thought to one of superior holiness, but, alas! I have been sorely deceived. It seems rather a place possessed of demons. Babylon, with all its confusion, never had its power to give me such wounds as I have received here. I could not stay in the presence of P. E. Armstrong. The spirit he manifested appeared more like that of Popery.

I was induced to go with Giles Russel and build a house in the wilderness, upon another man's land, the said Giles Russel claiming Gentile times ended, and a right to build where he pleased on unimproved land. But my eyes have been opened, and I sought to convince him of the wrong. But he persisted in his course; and, worse than all, the companion of my bosom is laboring under the influence of Giles Russel, and refused to leave his abode. I hardly know what to do. May the blessed Lord help me in this trying hour. I have sacrificed a portion of my means, but still I can get away if I could induce my wife to come. Brethren, pray that she may be delivered from this device of Satan. You will soon see the most atrocious assumption ever attempted to be palmed off upon the church of God,—Anti-christ developed. Watchmen, sound the alarm, ere the blood of souls be required at your hands!

Celesta, Pa. Moses S. Rogers.

From a Free-will Baptist Brother.

Mr. Miles Grant:—Dear Sir,—I cannot but admire the bold and fearless manner in which you advocate this doctrine of peace and love, which Christ declared was the foundation of all the law and the prophets. It is impossible for me to see how professing christians can go out to kill their fellow men, whom they never saw before, and send them unprepared before their God. Can men professing holiness do these things? Thanks be to God there are a few who stand up for the faith once delivered to the saints, professing themselves to be strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

I admire, also, the way in which you deal with Spiritualism, that snare of the Devil, with which many are led captive at his will. We have an enemy here which we cannot too closely guard against. It is no contemptible foe, but one which, if it were possible, would deceive the very elect. Their cry is, "Lo, here!" and "lo, there!" Believe it not. Flee from it. It may be too powerful for you. I know something about it. There is a strange, unaccountable mystery in it. Truly the Devil has come down in great wrath, knowing that he has but a short time. I. E. P.

Pawtucket, R. I.

From Bro. D. R. Mansfield.

Bro. Grant:—I left home in time to attend the conference here, which convened on the first of February. Mrs. M. could not come with me, owing to sickness occasioned by her fall on the ice about the tenth of January. She is getting better, and we trust will soon be able to resume her labors as usual.

Our meeting commenced under some disappointment, owing to the absence of Mrs. M. But all things work together for good. The second night two sinners came forward with a determination to seek Christ. The interest has been on the increase every night. We now see a general waking up here. Twelve have taken a stand on the Lord's side, and we expect to see more.

Bro. J. Wendell, of Edinboro, Pa., and Bro. Babcock, of Jonesville, Mich., have been laboring with me. We shall continue the meeting as long as sinners will come. Bro. Wendell will tarry with me.

This has been a barren place for many years. Lately God has visited it in mercy, and we are seeing the fruits thereof. May God speed the work. Amen. D. R. Mansfield.

Norwalk, O., Feb. 7th.

From Bro. A. Shields.

Bro. Grant:—The Lord is at work in the town. Bro. Page commenced a meeting at Bro. Ramer's school-house on New Year's day. Bro. Ramer is laboring with him and Bro. Kelley, a Free-will Baptist. A number of backsliders have been reclaimed. About fifteen have resolved to enlist in the army of the Lord, besides others that have risen for prayers. The meeting is still going on, preaching every night. We think it will continue the remainder of the month. May the Lord help us to live in the discharge of our duty. Yours, in hope of the soon coming kingdom. Stephen Shields.

Lizzie S. Cole.

Died in Hartford, Me., Jan. 2d, 1865, of consumption, Mrs. Lizzie S. Cole, aged twenty-one years and nine months.

By the death of our dear sister Lizzie, a large circle of friends are left to mourn, for none knew her but to love her. She bore her sickness without a murmur. She made arrangements for her funeral with the greatest composure, and then said to us, (her friends that stood weeping around her bedside), "I know it is very hard for you to part with me, but I feel that I am all ready to go, and it is but a little while and we shall meet again." She then quietly fell asleep in Jesus. She leaves a husband and child to mourn their loss. May they with us have grace to bear this affliction, and be prepared to meet in paradise restored. The funeral was attended by Bro. L. L. Howard.

"Soon the grave will yield its treasure,
All our loved come forth,
Rise to share unmingled pleasure,—
Rise to reign on earth."

Frances D. Haggett.

Georgiana B. Arnold.

Died in North Kingstown, R. I., Jan. 29th, 1865, Georgiana B., wife of Joseph S. Arnold, aged nineteen years, one month, seven days.

Sister Arnold was an amiable woman, a fond wife, and above all, an humble christian. The writer addressed a large and intelligent congregation, in the Baptist meeting-house, from Isa. 33: 24.

We've laid her form beneath the sod,
Her life is hid with Christ in God;
When Christ our life shall come to reign,
He'll wake her, and she'll live again.

Yes, in that bright and promised morn,
She'll rise in an immortal form;
With songs of triumph o'er the grave,
She then will sing his power to save.

Sweet be her rest till Christ shall come;
He'll raise her then and take her home;
While life shall last, be this our prayer,
Prepare us, Lord, to meet her there.

Edwin R. Wood.

Hannah Messer.

Died in Lowell, Mass., Jan. 14th, 1865, my own dear mother, aged ninety-two years and four months.

At the age of twenty years, she gave her heart to God, united with the C. Baptist church in New London, N. H., of which she was a member until the day of her death. She was a witness of the dark day, May 17th, 1780, and was then eight years of age.

She loved her Bible the best of all books, and next to that, she loved to hear the Crisis read. She had ever feared death, but when it came, she was unconscious of its approach, and has gone down to the grave like a shock of corn fully ripe for harvest.

A portion of Scripture was read by Bro. D. Churchill, (Cor. 15), at the house of my brother, and a prayer was offered, and then we bore her away in the cars to New London, and there saw her safely deposited by the side of my father, in the old churchyard, where sleeps her old pastor and brethren in Christ, awaiting the voice of the archangel and the trump of God.

Funeral services at the house of my brother in New London. Sermon by Eld. Heyden, pastor of the church. Text, Psalms 37: 37.

John P. Wiswell.

Died in East Boston, Feb. 6th, 1865, John P. Wiswell, aged twenty-four years and three months, of that fell destroyer—consumption.

Bro. W. experienced religion about five years since, and was baptized by Eld. J. S. White, and united with the Advent church in East Boston of which he continued a member until his death. The hope of a resurrection to life again afforded him sweet consolation in his last hours.

He has left a mother, sisters, and other relatives to mourn his loss. May God sanctify this dispensation to the good of this mourning circle, and also to the good of the church of which he was a member. Funeral services by the writer.

Sixty Thousand Persons Drowned in India.

Late advices reveal the full extent of the disaster inflicted by the terrible cyclone in India. A Calcutta letter to the London Times, just received, says:

"I see that the news of 12,000 persons having been lost in the cyclone was received with incredulity in England. The estimate was wide of the truth, but only because it vastly underrated the calamity. As every one who knows this country will readily conceive, there is no possibility of ascertaining precisely the loss of life, because hundreds might be swept away and leave no trace behind. But we are not without data for arriving at a conclusion, and it has now been calculated that there cannot be fewer than 60,000 persons drowned or otherwise killed by that fearful storm. In the Island of Sangor alone, before the cyclone, there were 8200 persons. There are now about 1200; nor have any left it to go elsewhere. Seven thousand were carried away by the storm wave. All up the river the population has been swept off, if not in the same proportion, yet in very large numbers. As we all anticipated, disease is raging everywhere—cholera, fever and small pox. The epidemic fever, which I have mentioned in previous letters this year, is depopulating whole districts. A magistrate told me the other day that he had been riding through a village in which there was hardly a grown up person left. They had died without hope of assistance, without medicine, without food—for the crops are rotting on the ground in many parts, where the salt water rushed in. The Bengalese are in a deplorable plight, and the Zemindars increase the general misery by turning the Ryets out of their huts because they are behindhand with their rents. There is money enough here to give relief—such relief as can be got for money. But human means seem quite powerless to stop the awful diseases that are walking through the land, carrying thousands before them. The native feels himself ill, wraps himself in his blanket, says it is fate, and so perishes.

In this enormous population—let it be remembered that here in Bengal alone we have at least forty-five million of people—the few Europeans can only do good here and there, and yet it is solely by Europeans that good is being done. The rich native will not help his countrymen. God gave him his money, and God intended him to keep it. That is pretty much his mode of reasoning. Sometimes the fever strikes him, and then in abject terror he offers English doctors a fee of five hundred rupees to to come and visit him. In a recent case of that sort, the man—who was worth about four millions sterling—had refused to give a piece to the poor after the cyclone. When death was at his throat he altered his mind, and promised large benefactions if he recovered. He was not spared to add falsehood to his cruel service."

DOMESTIC.

Headquarters Army of the Potomac, Feb. 6th, A. M. The result of yesterday's engagement appeared this morning in our advanced lines beyond Hatcher's Run, the capture of about 200 prisoners, a train of wagons and mules with their drivers, and considerable loss inflicted on the rebels in killed and wounded.

New York, Feb 8. The Tribune's correspondence from the battle-field is dated Feb. 7, 8 A. M. It says that just before dark the evening previous our troops gallantly repulsed a desperate charge made by the rebels; that the left of the 5th corps rests on Boydtown plank road, and that our front was being strongly fortified. This correspondent gives no indications of any success whatever on the part of the rebels. Our troops have advanced and bravely hold the ground they have taken.

The Tribune's Washington special dispatch says Jeff. Davis has sent a message to the rebel Congress saying in substance that Lincoln refused an armstice of any length, refused recognition either of the Confederacy or any State composing it, and refused independence, and only conceded the merciful and liberal exercise by himself of the pardoning power. During the conference he communicated the passage by Congress of the amendment to the Constitution abolishing slavery, and declared that the question was wholly removed from his control and placed beyond negotiation.

Washington, Feb. 8. The Secretary of War, in answer to a resolution of the House, encloses a statement of the Provost Marshal General that he knew no instance where boards of enrollment have exempted preachers belonging to churches whose religious tenets do not bring them within the scope of the act of February last for enrolling and calling out the national forces, nor does he know of any privileges having been granted to preachers of any denomination of professing christians which have been denied to others.

New York, Feb. 9. The Herald's Fortress Monroe correspondence states that arrangements have been made by Gen. Grant for a complete exchange of all soldiers, including colored troops. The transfer is to be proceeded with as rapidly as possible until all are exchanged. The exchange is to take place at Aiken's Landing on James river, and boats will run regularly between Annapolis and that place.

New York, Feb. 9. The steamer Moro Castle brings Havana dates of the 4th.

Advices from Mexico show that the Imperial forces are concentrating about Oaxaca, and will probably capture the place. In the meantime nearly the whole State of Jalisco is free from invaders, and has thrown of the yoke of the Imperialists. So other work will be ready for them after the fall of Oaxaca. Indeed, the whole country will have to be conquered and reconquered, and Maximilian's prospects are very dubious. Guerrillas are very troublesome.

Reports of a revolution in the city of Mexico, though denied officially, continue. The Juarists had attacked Toluca and captured it. Artaga has 2500 insurgents in Morelia. The Imperialists Gen. Voga had been defeated and shot at El Fuerte, in Sinaloa. The Imperialists were able to hold the city of Zacattlan only three days.

Washington, Feb. 11, 1865.

Richmond papers received this morning state that the recent secret sessions of the rebel House have been held for the purpose of devising means for meeting a very heavy indebtedness of the government, but recently brought to the attention of the rebel Congress.

The present Secretary of the rebel Treasury, it seems, was led into an error by his predecessors, in stating the amount of the arrears of indebtedness in his last report at $114,000,000. Additional liabilities in the nature of cash transactions have already been ascertained to the amount of nearly $400,000,000.

To provide for the increase of debt, Mr. Trenholm stated that there was no resource but taxation, and he recommended the imposition of one hundred per cent, additional on all subjects of taxation and the withdrawal of the credit for the tax in kind. A variety of propositions had been discussed in the secret sessions, as money appears to be imperatively necessary.

Richmond editors in the face of this financial ruin are clamorous for a more vigorous prosecution of hostilities. The Examiner says: "There is a keen and craving hunger to visit with stern and bloody retribution that hateful generation who has dared to propose that we, the confederates, who have baffled and routed their hosts on so many bloody fields shall crawl to their feet now with halters round our necks and ashes on our heads and crave their mercy and pardon like a gang of thieves smoked out of their dens. The high and keen military spirit of the war's first year flames up again. And that tide is rising which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune."

The Richmond Whig says: "If any citizen of this Confederacy, after the developments of last week, is willing to submit to the Yankees, we venture to say that he has always been a traitor and is fit only to be a slave. Of all such the sooner we rid ourselves the better for them and for us."

The Richmond Sentinel says that Mr. Stephens has left for Georgia to canvass that State for a more vigorous prosecution of the war. The meeting on Thursday evening was expected to be larger than the African church could hold, and a second assemblage was to be organized in Capitol square.

The Richmond Whig gives a sad account of the distress in that city, in which it says: "We fall far short of the mark when we assert that there are now in the city five thousand women and children without meat, without sugar, without fuel.

These are the wives and children of soldiers who are in our armies, or who have been killed and disabled in our service.

We saw a poor woman yesterday who had been obliged to burn her children's chairs to keep her children from freezing."

The Internal Revenue Law.

We have received the following letter from Commissioner Lewis of the Internal Revenue Department, containing recent constructions as to the requirements of certain sections of the Internal Revenue law, which are of interest to all business men:

Treasury Department,
Office of Internal Revenue,
Washington, Jan. 20, 1865.

Sir:—The letter of Merritt & Co. of Dec. 27th, with their letter to you of the same date, in relation to the stamping of receipts, has been received.

The law requires all receipts for the payment of any sum of money, or for the payment of any debt due exceeding twenty dollars, or for the delivery of any property, to be stamped, excepting receipts for the satisfaction of any mortgage, or judgment, or decree of any court, which are exempt.

Receipts for the payment of money, or of a debt due, require to be stamped only when the amount exceeds $20. This includes receipts for salaries, or pay on the pay-rolls of companies, or corporations, or individuals, or for dividends, or interest on the books of banks, or other trust companies on any receipt for the payment of an amount exceeding $20, signed by the party receiving it or by his authority. Such signature may be the full name —christian or sirname—initials, or any mark or character adopted for that purpose, and may be written with ink or pencil, or printed or stamped upon the instrument.

A credit on an account or pass book, or on a bill, without a signature, is not a receipt, and is not subject to stamp duty. A letter acknowledging the payment of money, of a debt due is to all intents and purposes a receipt, and subject to stamp duty as such, but the acknowledgment of the receipt of a note, check, or draft is not a receipt for money, nor yet of property in the ordinary acceptation of that term, and is not subject to stamp duty unless specified to have been received in payment of a debt due exceeding $20.

Receipts for the delivery of any property are subject to stamp duty without regard to the amount or value of such property, and this covers every receipt or acknowledgment of the delivery of any property. If several receipts are given which are afterward taken up and a new one given for the whole, each receipt must be stamped. Where a number of receipts are taken on one sheet or page, such as dividend books, pay rolls, receipt books of savings banks, express companies, or the like, the party paying out the money or delivering the property may affix one or more stamps to each page covering the aggregate amount of stamp duty required on the several receipts upon that page, and the claim of the government would be thereby satisfied; but the question as to the validity of any one of the receipts so stamped is one which such party must settle for himself.

Section 151 of the law imposes the stamp duty upon the party making, signing, or issuing the instrument, or upon the party for whose use the instrument is made; and Section 156 provides that the party using or affixing the stamp shall cancel the same with his initials and the date upon which the same shall be attached or used, thus clearly contemplating that the stamp may be affixed and canceled by either the maker or the party for whose use it was made.

Under the provisions of section 151, the payment of the stamp duty is imposed upon the party for whose use the instrument is made—in just as strong terms as it is upon the party making the instruments, and it is not in the power of the commissioner to say, or prescribe that it means one any more than the other.

If the instrument is made and issued, it must be stamped as required by law. It might have been better that Congress should have made this matter certain by imposing the payment of the stamp duty upon the maker in all cases, but it was not so done. They have, to be sure, imposed a penalty upon the party making, signing or issuing an instrument required by law to be stamped, with intent to evade the law, but if there is no intent to evade the law no penalty attaches to the maker.

Where a party is bound by law or contract to execute and deliver an instrument, he would be bound to deliver a valid and legal instrument, and of course stamp it, if a stamp is required by the law; but where he is not bound to deliver such instrument, he may well enough decline to execute it, unless the party for whose use it is made furnish the stamp.

As the law stands, the Commissioner cannot require one party to pay the stamp duty any more than the other, but if an instrument is made and issued upon which a stamp duty is imposed, the law requires that it should have the proper stamp for denoting that stamp duty affixed and canceled. Very respectfully,

Joseph W. Lewis, Commissioner.

Hon. J. B. Alley, M. C.,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

New York, Feb. 14. The Herald's Washington dispatch says officers from our forces operating against Mobile arrived in Washington last night, and confirm the report of the evacuation of Mobile, and that the city will be surrendered whenever the demand is made.

Minnesota Quarterly Conference.

Our winter quarterly conference will be held in the Ramer school-house, Utica, Winona County, Minn., commencing on Friday, the 24th of Feb., at half past six o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following, day and evening. Preaching by different ministering brethren. All who love God and the salvation of sinners, and desire to know and understand the truth, and be prepared for the day of his coming, are invited to attend. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, but exhort one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching." Pray for God's blessing upon the meeting.

In behalf of the church, Philip Ramer, Sec.

Conference.

The Maine Western Central Quarterly Conference will be holden with the brethren of Wayne and East Livermore, commencing Thursday, March 2d, at half-past six o'clock P. M., at the Wellington school-house, near Strickland's Ferry. Brethren coming by railroad will leave the cars at Strickland's Ferry. Brn. Cyrus Bartlett, Nahum Bishop, H. Gray, and C. F. Roberts, will see that all are provided with suitable accommodations. Ministers and brethren of other quarterly conferences are cordially invited to attend. Come, brethren and sisters, let us meet in the unity and spirit of our blessed Master, endeavoring to be faithful during the few days of pilgrimage that remain to the people of God. D. W. Griffin.

Advent Herald, please copy.

Another Discussion.

A discussion is arranged between John K. Lester, (Universalist), of Providence, R. I., and Augustus Durfee, (Adventist), of Mohegan, R. I., to commence at Lester's Hall, Cranston Street, Providence, R. I., Feb. 15th, 16th, 17th, each session to begin at 7 1-2 P. M., and continue two hours.

Question,—Do reason and revelation teach the final holiness and happiness of all men beyond the grave? J. K. Lester affirms.
A. Durfee denies.

Notice.

There will be a meeting on Centre Hill, at the house of Sister King, near Bro. Slade's. Brethren from the surrounding region are invited to attend.

Wm. J. Ripley.

Notice.

A series of meetings will commence at Manchester, N. H., Thursday, March 2d, and continue over the Lord's day, and as much longer as thought best. Bro. Edwin Burnham is expected to speak the word of life to us. A. J. Mayhew.

Conference.

There will be a conference holden in the Union meeting-house, Round Pond, Me, commencing Feb. 16th, to continue over the following Sabbath.

Maine Second Advent Tract Society.

S. K. Partridge, R. R. York, I. C. Wellcome,
Board of Managers.

I. C. Wellcome, Secretary and Business Agent.

Isaac Wight, Treasurer.

It was voted that all orders for tracts and books for distribution by this Society be addressed to the Agent, I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., who will supply them as fast as the means are furnished.

All our ministers will receive subscriptions for the Tract Fund, and they purpose to raise $200, or more, for free distribution in Maine this year.

I. C. Wellcome, Agent.

Agency for Maine.

Having been solicited to take the agency for Maine of Bro. Himes' "New Chart of Daniel and John," I would say to any and all in Maine who wish it, I am prepared to furnish it at the regular retail price, $5.00, and to preachers (or others who wish them to sell) at a liberal discount. Address orders to I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.

Elder Thomas Smith, Bangor, Me., has on hand for sale H. L. Hastings' "Signs of the Times," with an assortment of his various Tracts; also, the Tracts by Miles Grant, on "The Soul," "The Spirit, and "What is Man?" and other Advent tracts.

Business.

Give your State.

Amos Pugo sends $3.00 for pamphlets and tracts, dates his letter Ligonier, but does not give his State. There is a post-office of that name in Pennsylvania, and also one in Indiana. Not finding his name on our books in either of those States, we know not to which to send the package, and await further directions.

Correspondents, in writing to this office, should be careful always to give their Post-office and State.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 489. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to, is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness before No. 468, charge (at the old rate) four cents; and, for every week of indebtedness since No. 468, charge (at the new rate) five cents,—and you have the amount due the office. (This, however, will give a trifle more than the amount due. To make it exact, deduct four cents for every dollar due before No. 468, and five cents for every dollar due since No. 468.)

VOICES FROM THE CLOUD.

"What dost thou see, lone watcher on the tower?
Is the day breaking? Comes the wished-for hour?
Tell us the signs, and stretch forth thy hand,
If the bright morning dawns upon the land."

"The stars are clear above me; scarcely one
Has dimmed its ray in reverence to the sun;
But yet I see, on the horizon's verge,
Some fair, faint streaks, as if the light would surge."

"Look forth again, O watcher on the tower,—
The people wake, and languish for the hour;
Long have they dwelt in darkness, and they pine
For the full daylight that they know must shine."

"I see not well,—the morn is cloudy still;
There is a radiance on the distant hill;
Even as I watch, the glory seems to grow;
But the stars blink, and the night breezes blow."

"And is that all, O watcher on the tower?
Look forth again; it must be near the hour.
Dost thou not see the snowy mountain copes,
And the green woods beneath them on the slopes?"

"A mist envelopes them; I cannot trace
Their outline; but the day comes on apace.
The clouds roll up in gold and amber flakes,
And all the stars grow dim. The morning breaks."

"We thank thee, lonely watcher on the tower;—
But look again, and tell us, hour by hour,
All thou beholdest; many of us die
Ere the day comes; oh, give them a reply!"

"I see the hill-tops now; and chanticleer
Crows his prophetic carol on mine ear;
I see the distant woods and fields of corn,
And ocean gleaming in the light of morn."

"Again, again, O watcher on the tower—
We thirst for daylight, and we bide the hour.
Patient, but longing. Tell us, shall it be
A bright, calm, glorious daylight for the free?"

"I hope, but can not tell. I hear a song,
Vivid as day itself, and clear and strong,
As of a lark—young prophet of the moon—
Pouring in sunlight his seraphic tune."

"What doth he say, O watcher on the tower?
Is he a prophet? Doth the dawning hour
Inspire his music? Is his chant sublime,
Filled with the glories of the future time?"

"He prophecies—his heart is full—his lay
Tells of the brightness of a peaceful day,—
A day all cloudless, devoid of storm,
Where shadows and night can never come."

"Well done! thou watcher on the lonely tower!
Is the day breaking? dawns the happy hour?
We pine to see it,—tell us, yet again,
If the broad daylight breaks upon the plain?"

"It breaks,—it comes,—the misty shadows fly,—
A rosy radiance gleams upon the sky;
The mountain-tops reflect it calm and clear,
The plain is yet in shade, but day is near."

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE.

NUMBER TWO.

To Annie T——.

My Dear Sister:—It gave me much pleasure to hear from you again, and I hasten to reply. . . . You allude to the "Sketch" given in the "Guide." Little did I think, when scribbling that off for the Editor's private benefit, that he would publish it. If, however, it aids any one in finding the "shorter way," I care not for its publicity.

And now a word or two in regard to your experience. I know not as I rightly understand your position, and if I write on a false supposition, I trust you will bear with me, and not deem me severe. May I probe your heart, just a very little, to see if there is a sore spot there? It is not pleasant to give pain, yet the healing balm cannot always be applied effectively, until the probe first be used. In love I write you. I wish to do you good, yet I am very liable to mistake the best course by which to do it.

Did you ever hear an unconverted person say, when urged to repent and yield to God, "O, I am in the Lord's hands, and he may do with me just as he pleases"? Is this true submission? Is there in this a real abandonment of soul to the will of God, such as is acceptable to him? Or is this done to avoid responsibility, to excuse action? You see at once that there can be no true submission in the case, because the will of God is that we repent and do the commands. True submission involves true obedience. Now the passivity of mind resulting from such a principle is far from being the rest of faith.

I do not mean by this illustration to imply that your position is that of the impenitent sinner, but I have feared from the time of our conversation at L—— that there was a throwing off of responsibility, and a seeking to avoid that direct point of faith, where, by one bold venture, we step off the plank!

I thought the passivity you assumed was not fully the result of vigorous faith, based on this simple fact: "I have dedicated myself wholly to God, and now on the evidence of his promise—'I will receive you,' I reckon myself the Lord's. Whether in joy or sorrow, I am the Lord's." I say that I feared your expressions of indifference as to whether you felt the inward assurance, the fullness of joy or not, were rather an avoidance of that step which requires so much resolution and seeming risk. I decided at the time, if it was as I suspected, instead of increasing in strength and power, you would become weaker, and mourn the lack within. I feared your faith had not reached up and grasped the eternal throne.

It was your duty to give yourself wholly away to Christ, believing that he accepted and saved you. But not always does the soul receive the fulness, even when saved. To be justified, is the first stage of christian experience. Past sins are pardoned, and the individual receives the spirit of adoption. Sanctification is the second stage. The heart becomes purified from evil propensities, the love of sin is eradicated, and a love of purity implanted. The mind is renewed after the image of its Creator. The endowment of power, or baptism of the Holy Spirit, is the third stage. Its effects are very strikingly manifest in the holy life, effective testimony, and prayers full of divine unction. The Christians who attain to this always make their mark for God. They are constrained by the love of Christ to labor for him, and their labors are not in vain. They are full of faith and the Holy Ghost, rejoicing evermore, praying without ceasing, and in everything giving thanks. It is almost invariably connected with entire sanctification. The Holy Spirit fills the heart of the wholly sanctified one. This, I believe, is as essential to the ministry and membership of the present day as it was to the apostles and early church.

Now to stop short of this fulness, to be content without it, when God commands, saying, "Be ye filled with the Spirit," is not true passiveness—not true rest. "Fulness": just take your Concordance and trace it out in Scripture, and see if it is not made your duty, both by precept and promise, to be filled with the fulness. And, think you, if thus filled, would you be destitute of joy, which is one of the fruits of the Spirit? "Ask, and receive, that your joy may be full"! Don't be afraid to be filled with joy. If thus filled, would you be in darkness? "If thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be FULL OF LIGHT." Would you be destitute of love? "He that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him."

Thus you see, my dear sister, that while fearing to ask these fruits, yea, to be filled with them, you have been depriving yourself of that bread which your heavenly Father has in store for you, and that you very much need to make you a strong, efficient, and happy christian.

Just here let me direct you to a blessed promise, especially adapted to your present condition. "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Will you not ask to be "filled with the Spirit," being assured that He who requires you to be filled, will not refuse to bestow it upon you, if you ask believingly? You need to be endowed with power from on high. This is embraced in the "promise of the Father." This promise is unto you; will you claim it by simple faith? Just as those disciples at V— received it, so may you. "Lord, I believe; I claim the blessing mine!" Receiving this "tongue of fire," you will be prepared to pour forth burning words upon those "frozen hearts," and they will bow in penitence before God.

Dear Annie, it is what we need in the church to give it power and efficiency to labor for souls. It is your duty, as an individual member, to possess this power. God has shown you your need, and now presents you with the supply. If you refuse to accept and advance to this higher state, you cannot retain your justification before God. I bear you in my prayers before God, and expect he will teach you clearly the way in which he would have you walk. Write me again very soon. Yours in love, M. D. W.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW LARGE IS THE NEW JERUSALEM?

Many suppose the city will be fifteen hundred miles square, but let us see if we are so to understand the angel. John says the one that talked with him had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates, and the wall. "And he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs." Allowing eight furlongs to a mile, in one hundred furlongs we should get twelve miles and a half. In one thousand furlongs, ten times twelve and a half miles, which would make one hundred twenty-five miles in one thousand furlongs. Now multiply one hundred twenty-five miles by twelve and we get fifteen hundred miles, the distance round the city. The angel seems not to speak as though he measured the gates, but next measured the wall of the city by cubit measure, which he tells us was one hundred forty-four cubits. Allowing a cubit to be one foot and a half, one hundred forty-four cubits would be two hundred sixteen feet, the breadth of the wall. Now he says the length, breadth and height of the city are equal. If so, we will divide the fifteen miles into four equal parts, which will give us three hundred seventy-five miles each way of the city. Now the angel says the city lieth four square, the length, breadth and height are equal; the length and breadth are each three hundred seventy-five miles. It may be said we cannot tell what is meant by the measurement of twelve thousand furlongs. If I should say I will measure the city of Boston, no one would think of my meaning anything but that I would measure around it in order to get the amount of territory within. Just so in measuring a piece of land. I should measure around it to get the number of acres. Now evidently we are to take the same meaning from the angel. He measured around the city and found it fifteen hundred miles, or twelve thousand furlongs. If we divide this fifteen hundred miles into four equal parts, it gives us the whole size of the city, each way, three hundred seventy-five miles. The furlong measure gives the height; so the cubit measure must refer only to the thickness of the wall, two hundred sixteen feet. A city thus proportioned looks more sensible than fifteen hundred miles square, a wall fifteen hundred miles high, and only two hundred sixteen feet thick. This to my mind looks likely to be the plain, simple meaning of the angel.

1. In the type the passover lamb was slain on the fourteenth day of the first month—the passover always falling on a full moon.

2. As the time of the antitype must correspond with the time of the type, and as Pilate remarked at the trial of Jesus, "Ye have a custom that I should release unto you one at the passover," the fact is established that the crucifixion occurred about the time of the passover, or on a full moon. Christ was delivered up to the Jews, by Pilate, to be crucified, on the day of "the preparation of the passover" (John 19: 14,) and "the next day, that followed the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, saying, . . . Command that the sepulchre be made sure" (Matt. 27: 62;) thus there is no escape from the conclusion that Christ was crucified at the time of the passover, and consequently on a full moon. This fact is fortified by John, who, in speaking of the trial of Jesus in the judgment hall, tells us the Jews "went not in lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the passover," (John 18: 28,) which shows that the passover did not precede the Savior's trial: indeed, if Christ is "OUR PASSOVER" Lamb, he must have been slain at the time of the passover, therefore on a full moon.

3. Not only was Christ crucified on a full moon, but also on Thursday, because Jesus was raised on the morning of the "first day" (Sunday morning) on which day the disciples affirmed, "To-day is the THIRD DAY since these things were done" (Luke 24: 21,) referring to the condemnation and crucifixion of Christ. Now if Sunday was the "third day since," Saturday was the second day since, Friday the first day since, and Thursday the very day of the crucifixion. Christ was to be "three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Some part of three days, and some part of "three nights" at least, must be found in measuring back from the resurrection to find the time of the crucifixion. Let us count—Saturday, one; Friday, two; Thursday, three days. Now let us count the "three nights." Saturday night, one; Friday night, two; Thursday night, three. If the crucifixion had occurred on Friday, as some claim, no part of the third night could be found for the Savior to be in the earth, if he arose on the "first day," or Sunday. Saturday night and Friday night are only two.

Did the Savior speak the truth in saying, "Three nights in the heart of the earth?" Then it is truly an invulnerable fact, that the crucifixion took place on Thursday. Then, in order to find the year of the crucifixion, we must look for a full moon that fell on Thursday, as we have shown that Christ was crucified both on Thursday and on a full moon. It has been astronomically determined that the only Paschal full moon that fell on Thursday, for eight years after A. D. 29, was on April 6, A. D. 30, as none would be presumptuous enough to fix upon a date earlier or later than these eight years—as they cover all the contested ground among chronological disputants.

This point being established, the way is paved for the following remarks:

I. Daniel's 62 weeks of years, or 434 years, which measure from the completion of Jerusalem's "wall" to the cutting off of Messiah, fix the chronology of the thirty-second of Artaxerxes, in which year the wall was finished, as being 406 B. C., by allowing the 62 weeks to end half a year before the crucifixion, as the crucifixion was not to be precisely at, but "after" this measurement terminated.

II. This everthrows the claims of the seventh and twentieth of Artaxerxes as a starting point for the 70 weeks. Neither the 70 or 62 weeks could be terminated at the crucifixion if commenced at either epoch. If we commence the 70 weeks in the seventh of Artaxerxes (which we have just proved to be B. C. 431, by showing the thirty-second of Artaxerxes to be B. C. 406,) they would end A. D. 60, just 30 years after the cross, with nothing to mark their end. If we begin the 69 weeks there, they would end A. D. 43, with no event to fulfill the prophecy. If we start the 62 weeks there, they would end A. D. 4, about nine years after the birth of Christ, with no event to fulfill the prophecy—neither his birth, baptism, or crucifixion. But if we commence the 70 weeks in the twentieth of Artaxerxes (which we have shown to be B. C. 418,) they would end A. D. 73, just forty three years after the cross. If we begin the 69 weeks there, they would terminate A. D. 66, about 71 years after Messiah's birth, 40 years after his baptism, and about 36 after his crucifixion. Should we begin the 62 weeks there, they would end A. D. 17, instead of measuring to the crucifixion. Thus it is evident that the weeks of Daniel cannot be commenced in the seventh or twentieth of Artaxerxes' reign, which fact is made apparent by finding the year of the crucifixion, which marked the end of the 62 weeks, which began when Jerusalem's wall was "built," in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes, thereby furnishing us with the true chronology of his reign.

III. Having established the time of the crucifixion, we can now measure back and find the year of Messiah's birth, as he was crucified at the fourth annual passover after his baptism (as all admit, and as the Bible shows,) being about thirty years old at the time of his baptism; therefore, being crucified A. D. 30, he must have been born B. C. 5, being one year old in B. C. 4—thus his thirty years at his baptism, and the four subsequent passovers prove him in his thirty-fourth year at the crucifixion, in A. D. 30.

IV. By thus fixing the date of the death of Christ, and tracing back Heaven's measurement to the building of the "wall" of Jerusalem, in the thirty-second of Artaxerxes, thereby finding the true chronology of his reign, we are prepared to explode all incorrect interpretations or applications of the prophetic weeks. REPENTANCE.

"Repent and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."

It is our duty to repent of our sins, and like every other duty, it becomes a privilege when understood and appreciated. It may be well to observe that it is possible for men to mistake the nature of that repentance which the Scriptures make it our duty to exercise. It is not repentance only to be sorry for the consequences of sin. A man may be the victim of some debasing habit—say intemperance—and may be sorry after he has had a carousal and is publicly disgraced; i. e., he is sorry for his sin because of the disgrace. The culprit may be sorry as the prison doors open to receive him; but he thinks more of the convict's cell than of the crime which sent him there. And so you may pass from one crime to another, and the sorrow may be the same.

But not to multiply words: if sorrow were repentance, then would our world long ago have repented in dust and ashes; for it has been the abode of sorrow, from the time when it was said, "In sorrow shalt thou eat thy bread," to the present time. Now in view of the erroneous sorrow for sin, we would aim to impress on the heart the importance of cherishing that "godly sorrow which worketh repentance unto salvation," which is indeed "repentance toward God." To this end we would inquire into the nature of repentance, and look carefully to the motives which originate and the blessings which attend it.

Repentance, then, is not sorrow merely, but reformation. That man repents who reforms, who ceases to do evil and learns to do well. He who repents, thus influenced, is an humble penitent, and not a boasting Pharisee. He mourns over misspent time, powers debased, and privileges abused. But if he looks upon the past with regret, he looks upon the present with joy, and the future with hope. He sees sin in its true character, and hates it as the enemy of his purity and peace. He sees virtue in her loveliness, and enters into fellowship with godliness. He not only confesses his sins, but forsakes them. A better and happier life opens upon him. Has he blasphemed?—he now learns to regard the name of his God as holy and reverend. Has he been cruel?—he now loves mercy. Has he in any shape polluted himself?—he now preserves his present life from guile. This is repentance, for it is reformation.

We should not lay the flattering unction to our hearts that we can sin and yet enjoy peace and that good which our souls desire. The man who lives in constant disregard of those moral duties which reason and conscience, no less than revelation, make obligatory upon him, must look in vain for those pure pleasures and high enjoyments which the Judge of the earth commands upon the pious and good. Not that these enjoyments are beyond his reach, but they are not within his path. His path is sin, and he must leave it, or, in other words, reform, else he will only labor in vain. To such the admonition is, "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die?" "Repent, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."

Let us often meditate upon the goodness of God, for that leads to repentance. Let us look upon the sad experience of others, for this will give us wisdom. Let us commence with our own hearts, for this will lead to reflection. Let us always remember that repentance is reformation, and that a reformed life is a happy life. See that man with cheerful countenance and happy heart! He was once unhappy. He once sought for joy in the inebriating cup; but he sought it in vain; and not until he dashed it from his lips did he know the blessings of repentance. Look at that happy family. It was the home of strife and ill-will; but a change has come over it, for repentance has visited it with the balmy influence of love and peace; repentance has knit again those bonds in stronger union, and parents and children, brothers and sisters, dwell together in stronger affection; they find "genial joy," for "there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance." Verily, it is written in all kindness to us, that "God commandeth men every where to repent."

Now I will close the subject by a few words of interrogation. Can any one say he has not sinned? Can any one say he liveth and sinneth not? If he has sinned, is there not an essential reason for repentance; not only by being sorry, but by repentance and reform?

THE SOLDIER'S CRY.

Jesus, hear the soldier's cry
Rising through the southern sky;
Midst the carnage and the rout,
Cry of pain and battle shout;
Hear, oh! hear the soldier's cry
Rising to thy throne on high;
Jesus, look with pitying eye,
Savior, hear the soldier's cry!

Though our hearts may stubborn be,
Rough and stormy as the sea;
Yet, by passion tempest tossed,
Cling we to thy saving cross.
Hear, oh! hear the Savior's cry.

Save, oh! save from sin and death,
Ere we draw our parting breath;
Save us from the tempter's power,
While the war clouds darkly lower.
Hear, oh! hear the soldier's cry.

For we feel that Thou canst save,
Though we find a soldier's grave;
For our life is hid in Thee,
Thine our immortality.
Hear, oh! hear the soldier's cry.

Of our home and friends bereft,
Thou art all that we have left;
Let us find a friend in Thee,
Who our hope and home shall be.
Hear, oh! hear the soldier's cry.

When we close our eyes in death,
And thickly comes our laboring breath,
Jesus, still to thee we cry,
Let us not forever die.
Hear, oh! hear the soldier's cry
Rising to thy throne on high;
Jesus, look with pitying eye,
Savior, hear the soldier's cry!

"FOLLOW ME."

"If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be."—Jesus.

In the midst of those who professed to be his Father's children, the Jews had no confidence in Christ, and taunted him as a blasphemer, when he told them who he was; and in view of the crown of thorns, and suffering the ignominious death that was just before him, and the desertion of those who had believed on him, he breaks forth, "Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour." And it is just there that he said, "If any man serve me, let him follow me."

What! he who was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief? He who was betrayed into the hands of his murderers by a kiss of friendship? Father, is this the path which I must follow? If my dear Redeemer shrank therefrom, shall not my poor heart tremble? Is it strange that I sometimes cry, "Father, save me from this hour"? But he said, "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Then let the light shine down, that I may discern the way. Must grief and sorrow be my portion, despised, and rejected as false to my profession, my name cast out as evil, and even what I do judged to be done by Satan's power? Must the poor and lowly be the ones I seek to save? Cannot the rich and popular receive my homage? And by those who profess to love me must I be deserted, when trials deep and bitter break my heart?

Speak, Father; let me hear! "It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord." "Rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." Ah! I see Jesus, "for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame." I see him "for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor." I see him "made perfect through suffering." And I will rejoice that I am "counted worthy to suffer shame for his name, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be glorified together." "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us." Then if he will but permit me to be where he is, to sit down by his side at the marriage supper, and give me a glorified, immortal body, like his own, it is enough.

"O, what are all my sufferings here,
If, Lord, thou count me meet
With that enraptured host to appear,
And worship at thy feet?"

Then no more would I be found "afar off," but so near I shall never deny him, never grieve him; ever keeping my eye fixed upon the mark, I will press forward, remembering that "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

What though some profess to be his followers, yet seek to be honored by the world, and conform thereto; courting and enjoying the society of the rich worldling, rather than that of the humble christian? What though they say, Is not this the carpenter's son? Are they not poor fishermen? What though they speak evil of me because I do not take them for my guide? O my Father, help me to follow Jesus, for—

"My ears have caught the sound
Of notes intensely sweet;
Redemption's hallowed song,
Where myriad voices meet."
"Strong courage, then, when fears annoy,
And night, and toil, and false alarms;
Soon shalt thou know a life whose charms
Shall feast thee with eternal joy,
Safe in thy heavenly Father's arms."

MOTHER'S LAST PRAYER.

The snows of many winters have rested upon her quiet grave; but at times the thought of her last prayer moves me deeply, and thrills my soul as nothing else ever did. Her dying breath went forth in prayer for blessings to rest upon her orphan children. I feel sure that some of her children will meet her in the land of rest. But O, is there one yet out of Christ? How shall I appeal to you to listen to the invitation to enter the ark of safety before the terrible storm bursts upon a guilty world? Think of your poor mother toiling and wearing out her life for you, and then bearing you as with her last breath to the foot of the cross and there pleading for your salvation. Your brothers too are praying for you; and I earnestly beseech you to pray for yourself. And O, ye mothers, to whom this message comes, pray earnestly and constantly for your children, and never cease till you rest in death, or rise to meet your Redeemer.

For the World's Crisis.

THE REASON WHY.

We seldom have any preaching here.

Well, well, that seems to be a sad affair! Has it always been so?

Oh, no! We used to have preaching here frequently, and the Lord blessed us.

What seems to be the cause of this sad state of things now? There is a great change.

Oh, yes! Some have risen up to judge all wrong that do not believe as they do on certain points.

How did that prevent good, wholesome preaching?

It scattered the people, and some went for Paul, and some for Peter.

How did Paul fare?

I do not know, for I do not get to his meeting.

How did Peter fare?

Well, I have been to his meeting a number of times, as long as he came here and held meetings, and I think the Lord, by his Spirit, was in the meetings, and we had a good time; and there seemed to be an interest among the people; but all at once he left us, and I have wondered a great deal about it, and why he has not come since.

Did not the people like him?

Oh, yes!

Did he appear to feel for the people?

Oh, yes! and I wonder how he could leave us so suddenly.

Then you do really think he felt for your interest?

Oh, yes!

Well, did you help him any when he came to your place?

I took him home to my house, and gave him a dinner, and fed his horse well, and prayed for him.

Did you ask him how he was situated at home?

Oh, no!

Did you ask him if he had a good meal bag with him?

No.

Did you give him any money?

No.

How far did he come to preach to you?

Some twenty or twenty-five miles.

What! and did not say one word about his necessities?

No.

Do you know whether any other one did?

I did not hear any one.

Do you think any one did say a word about helping him?

Well, there, I don't know!

Was there nothing said about a contribution for him?

Not a word.

Well, well; I don't wonder the poor preacher did not come any more. Have you ever visited his house?

No.

How does he get a living?

I don't know.

Did you help those preachers that used to come to you when you had a good time formerly?

Oh, yes! we always made it a practice to fill their bags and boxes.

Where is Peter now?

I hear from him once in a while.

How do you enjoy your mind?

Not very well.

Is there not a cause? Verily! D. I.

BUY ONLY WHAT YOU NEED.

If the poor-house has any terror for you, never buy what you do not need. Before you pay three cents for a jewsharp, see if you can't make just as pleasant a noise by whistling, for which nature furnishes the machinery. And before you pay seven dollars for a figured vest, young man, find out whether your lady-love would not be just as glad to see you in a plain one that cost just half the money! If she wouldn't, let her crack her own walnuts and buy her own clothes. When you see a man paying five dollars for a Frenchified toy that a philosophic Yankee baby will pull to pieces in five minutes, the chances are that he will live long enough to realize how many cents there are in a dollar; and if he don't, he is sure to bequeath that privilege to his widow. When a man asks you to buy that for which you have no use, no matter how cheap it is, don't say yes until you are sure some one else wants it at an advance. Money burns in some people's pockets, and makes such a hole, that everything that is put in, drops through past finding.

Giving.—I have been young and now I am old, and as I stand before God to-night, I declare that nothing I have ever given in charity is regretted. O no! it is the riches we keep that perish; that which is given away abides with us forever; it impresses itself on our character, and tells on our eternal destiny; for the habit of charity for this life will accompany us to the next. The bud which begins to open here will blossom in full expansion hereafter, to delight the eye of angels and beautify the paradise of God. Let us, then, now and on every occasion hereafter, practice that liberality which in death we shall approve, and reprobate the parsimony which we shall then condemn.

Be Short.—Observation and considerable experience in writing for about thirty years has proven beyond a doubt that, as a general rule, correspondents of papers will secure an admission of their articles, and an early admission, and have them read and read with benefit, if they will condense. Come right to the point; give true ideas, in clear, forcible language, and in as few words as possible. Try it; by all means try it.

How to make Hens Lay.—For several years past I have spent a few weeks of the latter part of August on the Kennebec river in Maine. The lady with whom I stopped is a highly accomplished and intelligent housewife. She supports a "hennery," and from her I derived my information in this matter. She told me that for many years she had been in the habit of administering to her hens with their common food at the rate of a teaspoonful of Cayenne pepper each alternate day to a dozen of her fowls. Last season when I was with her, each morning she brought in twelve or fourteen eggs, having but sixteen hens in all. She again and again experimented in the matter by omitting to feed with the Cayenne for two or three days. The consequence invariably was that her product of eggs fell off to five or six per day. The same effect of using Cayenne is produced in winter as in summer.—Cor. Boston Transcript.

Gravel and Lime for Fowls.—It should be borne in mind that gravel should by all means be provided for fowls in winter, if they are shut up where they cannot obtain it, and especially when the earth is covered with snow. Their health greatly depends upon it. Lime, or old mortar, is also necessary for laying hens. There cannot be eggs without shells, nor shells without the material is supplied for them.

Spreading Manure in the Fall.—An old and experienced farmer writes to the Genesee Farmer, that he thinks one load of manure, hauled out and spread at any time between the 20th of September and winter, is worth more than two loads applied at any other season.

TABLE RULES FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

In silence I must take my seat,
And give God thanks before I eat;
Must for my food in patience wait,
Till I am asked to hand my plate;
I must not scold, nor whine, nor pout,
Nor move my chair nor plate about;
With knife, or fork, or napkin ring,
I must not play, nor must I sing.
I must not speak a useless word,
For children must be seen—not heard;
I must not talk about my food,
Nor fret, if I don't think it good;
I must not cry for this or that,
Nor murmur if my meat is fat;
My mouth with food I must not crowd,
Nor while I'm eating speak aloud;
Must turn my head to cough or sneeze,
And when I ask, say, "If you please;"
The table cloth I must not spoil,
Nor with my food my fingers soil;
Must keep my seat when I have done,
Nor round the table sport or run;
When told to rise, then I must put
My chair away with noiseless foot;
And lift my head to God above,
In praise for all his wondrous love.

HARRY, THE HONEST BOY.

BY MINNIE AT HOME.

Every one that knows little Harry, loves him. Not because he has such bright, beautiful eyes, such a fair brow, and such a rosy cheeked face, but because—here the secret lies—he is an honest boy. At home, in school, wherever he is, all are willing to trust him, and his word is never doubted. In all his little dealings with his schoolmates, in his intercourse with his parents and superiors elsewhere, he is ever upright, frank and truthful. His beautiful character has already gained for him a fair and lasting name, and many a one points to Harry, and says, "There is an honest boy;" many a one speaks of him in terms of endearment, because he is so good, so honest. I will give my young readers three examples of Harry's honesty, that they may admire him, as well as others. First, I shall speak of his honesty at home.

It was a chilly, bleak day in November. Harry's parents and his little sister had gone from home to spend the day, leaving Harry and his eldest sister Delia to keep house. Harry had a bad cold, had taken a sweat the day before, and his mother told him he must not go out to play while they were gone. During the absence of the parents two little friends of Harry and Delia came in to spend awhile with them, named Olin and Florence. Delia brought a new and splendid doll down from the chamber—a present to her little sister—to show to her friend, and Harry a new book to show to Olin. Both were much admired. The girls then ran up stairs for some playthings, and laid the doll on a stool until their return. Meanwhile the boys were having an exciting chase around the cook stove, in that large, old-fashioned kitchen, when Harry suddenly stopped, saying, "O, dear, that's too bad!" Just then the girls entered, and saw the doll lying on the floor broken.

"Who broke it?" was the girl's inquiry.

"I don't know," said Olin, looking as though fearful he had done the deed.

"It was I," said Harry. "What will poor Effie say?"

A shadow dimmed the spirits of Harry and Delia after the accident, and their young friends soon left.

"What made you say you broke the doll?" asked Delia of Harry. "I wouldn't tell our folks, anyhow!"

"I must tell the truth," was the reply. "I don't want Olin should be blamed for anything that I have done, for that would be very wrong."

And he did tell the truth; and though Effie cried and felt very bad, and her parents pitied her, seeing her grief, they could not help admiring Harry's honesty, and readily forgave him for the accident.

Now I will tell you of Harry's honesty in school.

A class of bright-eyed boys and girls stand before the recitation bench, spelling. The teacher puts out a word to the boy at the head. It is missed. The next tries, and the next, but in vain. Down the word goes, from lip to lip, till it is Harry's turn to try, standing at the foot. He is the smallest boy in the class, but one of its best scholars.

"Spell ptyalism."

Harry scratched his head, and looked puzzled. A boy sitting near him spelt the word, in a whispered tone, for Harry's especial benefit. Harry heard him, spelt it correctly, and with a flushed face passed by the long row of boys and girls, and stood at the head of the class. But before the teacher had time to put out another word, Harry standing uneasily, raised his hand.

"What's wanting, Harry?" asked the teacher.

Harry hesitated a moment, and then said:

"I don't think I have any right to be at the head, because Johnny Crane told me how to spell the word, and that wasn't like spelling it alone. I had rather go back to my own place."

And Harry, with the light of a noble spirit on his brow, unwilling to wear honors which he did not merit, gladly retraced his steps, and like a little hero, stood upright in his proper place.

Then the teacher spoke in praise of Harry's conduct, said it was much better for him to be at the foot than to occupy a higher place when he did not deserve it, reproved Johnny, and said he hoped Harry's example would not be lost upon the other scholars; and when school was dismissed, she kissed Harry, and stroking his dark hair, said she loved good honest boys like him.

Lastly, I will speak of what I shall term Harry's honesty in the street.

One morning Harry was sent to the store, situated about half a mile from his home, to purchase two or three little articles. His mother gave him a one dollar greenback, telling him to pay for the articles, and bring back the change. On his way he met Olin, of whom we have before spoken.

"See what I've got," said he, displaying a roll of lozenges. "What do you think I gave for them? Some of this kind of money," showing some coppers, one one side of which was written, "Not One Cent."

"Where did you get them?" asked Harry.

"O, father gave them to me," was the reply. "He said they were good for nothing, but I found they would buy what I wanted. You may have these two. Lay them on the counter, on this side, and Scott won't examine them; he won't know but what they are good pennies."

"But that would be cheating," said Harry; "don't you know it? No, I don't care about them. I shouldn't use them if I had them!"

"O, pshaw!" ejaculated Olin; you are too particular;" and the boys passed on their separate ways.

Harry purchased the required articles at the store, and then started for home. On his way he met a boy named Frank Hurlburt, who hailed him with—

"Hallo! where going Fourth of July? or are you going to stay at home?"

"I guess I shall stay at home. Father can't leave very well, but he said I might have some spending money. I'm going to ask mother if I can't have what's in this pocket-book," Harry said, drawing out the article from his pocket and opening it. She said there was about twenty-five cents left. Look here!" he suddenly exclaimed; "is not that twenty-five? and that fifty? Mr. Scott must have made a mistake."

"What of it!" queried his companion; "only here is good luck for you. You can use the fifty cents, and nobody will be the wiser."

"But that wouldn't be honest, you know. I must go back and tell Mr. Scott about it, and give him what belongs to him; so good bye."

And Harry hastened back to the store, and told the merchant about the mistake. He thanked him kindly, said "'honesty was the best policy,' and when Harry got old enough, he guessed he'd be just the one we would like for a clerk.

How Harry's eyes sparkled when the storekeeper took down the full candy jar from the high shelf, and told him to help himself! How light and joyous beat his heart on his homeward walk! How sweet his mother's kiss when he told her all about it! His father's approving look, how pleasant!

I would like to tell you more about Harry, the Honest Boy, but it is almost dark, and perhaps you are weary. Do you not, little reader, admire Harry's beautiful trait of character? If so, be like him, and God, man, and your own conscience will smile upon you. An honest boy will make an honest man! An honest man is the noblest work of God!—Zion's Herald.

GOD BLESS YOU, KIND GIRLS!

A friend of mine saw, a short distance before him, an old man walking with great difficulty, and very tired. He seemed at a loss which way to go. Between my friend and the old man two little girls, eight or ten years of age, were walking, and talking about the old man.

"How tired he looks!" says one.

Just then a young man passed by, of whom the old man asked his way to No. 16 —— street. A hasty answer, not at all clear, was the only reply. In his bewilderment, the old man struck against a post, and his staff fell from his hand. The larger girl sprang forward to support him, while the other handed him his staff, saying, "Here it is, sir."

"Thank you, my kind girls," said the old man: "can you direct me to No. 16 —— street? I came to the city to-day to visit my son. Wishing to surprise him, I did not send him word that I was coming. I am a stranger here, and have been walking a long time to no purpose."

"Oh! we will go with you, sir: mother said we might walk for an hour, and we can as well walk that way as any other."

"God bless you, my kind girls!" said the old man. "I am sorry to trouble you."

"Oh!" replied the little girls, "it is not the least trouble: we love old folks, and love to do them a favor."

They at length brought the old man opposite the house which he sought, and he was dismissing them; but they said, "We must run across the street with you, lest the carriages run over you."

What a delightful body-guard were these kind children! As they separated, the old man said, "If you ever visit my country, come to the house of John B——, and you shall have as hearty a welcome, and as good entertainment, as a farm-house can afford."—Mother's Magazine.

LOVE YOUR PARENTS.

Do you, little folks? How much? How do you manifest this love? By obedience, kind, prompt, active, cheerful, instantaneous? The very instant the word is given, do you speed, fly on the wings of love, to duty? That's it,—what we mean by love.

Children should never delay obeying their parents because they are busily doing something which they desire to finish. How very naughty to say, "Wait, mother, I will come directly;" or "I will do it pretty soon!"

This is self-will, which is entirely contrary to the teachings of the Bible. You must honor your father and mother, if you would live long and be happy.

Many children have been cut down, and laid in an untimely grave, merely from a single act of disobedience. We very often see accounts of boys being drowned, particularly on the Sabbath, from going skating or fishing, contrary to the commands of their parents.

Little girls are often burned to death, or injured in some other way, from the same cause.

Is it not a beautiful sight to behold a well-trained family of children, all willing and anxious to render that obedience which God's Holy Book requires, and which nature itself teaches us is right?—Golden Rule.

LIGHT AHEAD.

Black clouds may gather, winds may blow,
And darkness settle o'er the deep;
The waters mightily may flow,
Yet we our course may safely keep.
The surging billows, rolling high,
May roar and mingle with the wail;
But we will through them quickly fly,
For lo! a light beyond the gale.

The lightning's vivid flash may dart,
And thunders roll along the sky;
It may strike terror to the heart,
But we will anchor by and by.
The waves may beat in fury wild,
The floods in mighty torrents pour;
But through the distance can be seen
The light upon the other shore;

It glimmers forth into the night,
And guides amid the dashing foam;
It cheers the heart, incites the soul,
To know that we are almost home.
We'll steer our barque upon the tide,
Though tempests wilder yet may roar;
Soon all of them we shall outride,
And anchor on the further shore.

THE RESURRECTION.

Some affirm that "in the resurrection christians come forth mortal." I am forced to believe that such were taught at the feet of some other than our blessed Savior, and in this little article, I trust I may be able, by the grace of God, to present a simple yet powerful argument from the Scriptures, to show that the righteous are raised from the dead incorruptible.

TWO RESURRECTIONS.

It is generally conceded by our people that there will be two distinct, literal resurrections, and some believe that the interval between the two will be a thousand years. These two resurrections are designated by the phrases "resurrection of the just;" "resurrection of life;" "the first resurrection;" "the resurrection of damnation," etc. It is believed by the majority that all who love Jesus will be in the first resurrection, and those who do not love him, in the second, as the term first implies that there may be another, or more than one.

THE FIRST RESURRECTION.

Nothing is more plainly taught in the Scriptures, than the fact that the wicked will not be raised at the same time that the righteous are. Thus Paul says, "If by any means, I might attain unto the resurrection (ex-anastasis) of the dead;" or more properly, out from among the dead. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection." It is universally believed by all who expect two resurrections, that none but those who are disciples of Jesus will have part in the first.

THE ARGUMENT.

My argument to prove that the righteous rise from the dead immortal, is based upon the fact that they are raised before the wicked are, or in other words, because they have part in the first resurrection.

If they are to be raised for trial, before they can be rewarded, then one universal resurrection of good and bad, as held by some, yea many, is the most rational view, and in that case, all may be raised mortal; for it would be as useless to raise a man immortal, and then try him to see whether he deserved it, as the old theory of going to heaven at death, and coming out again at the judgment to be tried, and then return to heaven again.

The Scriptures teach that the righteous are judged in this life, and this fact is made plain by the following texts of Scripture. "He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not, is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotton Son of God." This verse plainly teaches that judgment is now going on; else why condemn and acquit? Is not the prince of this world now judged? because "now is the judgment of this world." "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are IN Christ Jesus, for the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Thus God has set free the believer, who has now a "hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began." "And this is the record. That God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life." He hath it by promise.

Here are stubborn facts, Bible truths, which declare the righteous are now worthy of eternal life. As God decides the matter in this life, and not after the judgment, he raises them at the last day, and the rest of the dead are left behind. Hence there is no necessity for their coming out of their graves mortal. God is able to bring them up immortal, he has promised to do it; hence he will do it.

Paul says, "But some man will say, 'How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?'" He answers, "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." Paul has given an analogical argument showing in it that if a man sows wheat, he will raise wheat; wheat comes up. So the body is sown, or planted, as in baptism, and it then is raised, or comes up, from that which is sown. This raising has no reference to going up into the air, any more than the raising of the wheat signifies that it leaves this mundane sphere for others above us, and no more than the raising of Christ where it is written, "Him God raised up the third day." Christ declared, "The third day I shall be perfected." Hence when we read that the dead shall be "raised incorruptible," we expect that will take place in the resurrection, and those who have not fallen asleep IN Jesus, and remain unto his coming, shall be made perfect at that time with us, for inspiration says, they "shall be changed." Christ is the sample, and therefore we, yea I, expect to be in the likeness of his resurrection. It will be that which has been promised.

Such is my argument. May we all so live that we shall be "accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead." Yours, searching the Scriptures, Philadelphia. F. H. BURBANK.

THE 70 WEEKS AND 2300 DAYS.

All who admit that the seventy weeks are a part of the 2300 days, must frankly confess that if we can show where the seventy weeks terminate, we can also find the epoch for the end of the 2300 days,—for 70 weeks of years, being 490 years, when "cut off" from 2300 years, leave only 1810 years. This is too plain to be overlooked. But can we find out when the 70 weeks terminated? We think the language of the prophecy is explicit: "Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city—equivalent to saying, this measurement of time is assigned to your people and your city, Jerusalem, before they shall again be driven into the whirlpool of ruin. So much time was allotted them before a future visitation of wrath upon them. Then, when did the visitation of "wrath on this people" and city commence, which was to mark the end of the time assigned them? Stern historic facts answer. In A. D. 65. At the end of this allotted time, (490 years), the Roman "Prince"—the rod of Jehovah's anger against that people—was to be "one week" of years in inflicting upon them the threatened "curses of the covenant," which they had incurred by transgression, but which could not be visited upon them till their allotted time had expired, without infringing upon and cutting short the time assigned them: "And the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the WAR desolations are determined. And he [the Roman "Prince"] shall confirm the covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease."—Dan. 9: 26, 27.

A certain "Prince" was to "come" from some quarter with his "people" to "destroy the city" Jerusalem, in a certain "war" to continue "one week," or seven years, "in the midst" of which the "sacrifice" should "cease;" all of which was fulfilled by the Roman "Prince" from A. D. 65 to A. D. 72. As this stroke of wrath must be subsequent to the time assigned to the Jews (70 weeks—490 years,) it follows that the 70 weeks ended in A. D. 65, when this stroke of exterminating wrath began to fall upon that rebellious nation and their city, thus signally marking the close of the time of trial assigned them,—from which epoch the remaining 1810 of the 2300 years reach to 1875, when the "Sanctuary" is "cleansed." As this measurement reaches to the "end of the indignation," and as the resurrected saints are to be "caught up" to their "chambers" "till the indignation be overpast," it follows that the Lord's coming precedes the cleansing of the sanctuary; and other measurements prove that he will appear in the Jubilee years 1868, just 1335 years from the setting up of the Papal abomination in 533, when Daniel will stand in his lot. Amen.

"BUY THE TRUTH AND SELL IT NOT."—Prov. 23: 23.

In carefully searching the words of inspiration, we find that part of the great truths therein contained are freely given to mankind, while a part (and this part, too, is very essential to their salvation) they will have to buy if they ever have it. And for proof of this assertion let me call the attention of the reader to three parables given by Christ; one in Luke 19: 12, and onward, the other two in Matt. 25. Here we find that after our Lord had given the signs that were to precede his coming, in chapter twenty-fourth, he begins with a parable to show the effect those signs will produce, by calling out a people to meet their long absent Lord with their lamps, which is the word of God; so says David, (Ps. 119: 105). A part took oil (which is the Spirit of God; for it was that which first caused the light to shine through the lamp, it being given by inspiration); in their vessels (their bodies; for we have this treasure in earthen vessels, 2 Cor. 4: 7), with their lamps. The other part went without any oil to add any new light to that they then already had; hence we find them asking for oil when it is too late, and are sent to those that sell to buy for themselves.

Now, dear reader, let us keep in mind the idea of buying and selling, as here expressed, for we shall have need of it when we come to talk about the other two parables, one of which the Master gave to further illustrate the time of his coming being known. In Matt. 25: 14, he says, "The kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods; and unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every one according to his several ability."

In Luke 19: 12, this same thing is brought to view, and what the nobleman gave his servants was called pounds, and told them to occupy until he came. What did he give them? Says one, their property,—such as houses, lands, money, and such like. Well, then, it follows that those that manage to get five or ten times as much property as they had to start with, are those that will hear it said to them, "Well, done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." We think that would please the natural heart pretty well. But, says another, it is an ability to well express our ideas. Paul said his speech and preaching was not with enticing words of men's wisdom; yet I think Paul put his money out at usury, and will hear those blessed words, "Well done," when the Nobleman returns to see how much his servants have gained by trading.

Being satisfied that those ideas are erroneous, we still ask what were the goods the Master gave to his servants? We answer, the BIBLE, the word of God. It is his promise to an eternal weight of glory, and tells us all about how we can get it, and all that have common abilities, and can read, can understand a great deal that is therein written; some more, some less, according to their ability, as it was thus he gave it to them. So much of the truth all have freely. But those that put it out at usury are those that go and trade with the SAME. Mark, it is the same that they have received. Verse 27. Blessed exchange! to trade away sins for the Holy Spirit; and yet how few are willing to trade; thus to part with their darling hypocrisy, falsehood, covetousness, and man-worship, and every other sin; for all sin will grieve the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of truth, which guides us into all truth, if we have enough of it. The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he KNOW them, because they are spiritually discerned."—1 Cor. 2: 14.

Thus we see the time of the Bridegroom's coming will only be known but by buying the truth and selling it not; and when those that put their money out at usury until they get truth enough so the "watchman see eye to eye," and there is a "unity of faith," then will the wife have made herself ready, with her beautiful garments all on.

Dear reader, you see here is something for you to do. "The wife hath made herself ready." Do not wait, thinking the Bridegroom is going to make you ready, without your efforts. You know we are "workers together." Let us do all we can, by making a full and entire consecration to God; then shall we have oil in our vessels with our lamps; then our lamps will give light, and we shall know just where in the stream of time we are, and shall not walk in darkness. If this gospel is hid it is hid to those that are lost, because they have not bought the eye-salve, which they are counseled to buy, and it is not bought with a few lazy wishes; the whole soul and affections must enter into the work. The eye must be single; then will the whole body be full of light.

THE PRECIOUS SAVIOR.

Am I without God and without hope in the world? "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, . . . that the world through him might be saved."—John 3: 16, 17.

Am I lost in the wilderness of sin and folly? Jesus says, "I came to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke 19: 10.

Am I burdened on account of my heavy load of guilt? Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Matt. 11: 28.

Am I proud, and vain, and worldly-minded? Jesus says, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls."—Matt. 11: 29.

Am I overwhelmned because I feel that I am so great a sinner? Jesus says, "Wherefore I say unto thee, her sins, which are many, are forgiven."—Luke 7: 47.

Am I without his Holy Spirit to sanctify and lead me to Christ? Jesus says, "If ye, then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him."—Luke 11: 13.

Am I in distress because of my poverty? Jesus says, "Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?" Matt. 6: 26.

Am I compassed about with enemies, and those that hate me and speak evil of me? Jesus says, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."—Matt. 5: 44.

Am I lonely, and no one seems to care for me or love me, or keep me company? Jesus says, "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him."—John 14: 23.

Am I almost ready to give up my hope because I feel I am so weak and sinful, so impatient and fretful, and my trials are more than I can bear? Jesus says, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."—John 16: 33.

Am I weighed down with sorrow, and my heart almost broken because death has robbed me of some loved one? Jesus says, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."—John 11: 25.

Am I looking for the return of my Lord, and does my heart cry out, O, how long wilt Thou remain away? Jesus says, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."—John 14: 3.

Am I looking for the darkened sun, the falling stars, the angry nations,—signs that speak Him near? Jesus says, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."—Luke 21: 28.

MEMORIAM.

AIR.—"Araby's Daughter."

O, why am I lonely? why this bitter weeping?
This anguish of mind that near freezes my soul?
Why all this deep frenzy its close vigils keeping
Low down in my bosom, that nought can console?
Why twangs on my ear-drum the harshest of measure
That's beaten by time in its swift-glancing flight?
Why seems now as dross to me earth's dearest treasure,
Appears now the world as a long, dreary night?

I once thought the earth and its pleasures were real;
I had not a care while in youth I might stay,
But pleasure I've found is a matter ideal,
And man with his wisdom the worm of a day.
His feeble ambition seeks glory and power,
The glory of earth, and the chains of a slave;
He seeks but to fall, and the child of an hour
Soon silently rests with the poor in the grave.

Of earth I am weary, nor hail the bright morning;
Not evening or day can my sorrow assuage;
Alike the broad glare and the soft twilight scorning,
I would anxiously wait for the darkness of age;
Deep darkness befitting my soul's deepest sorrow,
For sin has surrounded my heart's inmost core;
I pray, "God, forgive! and on thy bless'd morrow
Oh! grant me a heart to give praise evermore."

We have here our trials, our losses; temptations
Surround us just now, but the time is at hand,
When the Lord in his glory shall come, and rude nations
Shall bow at his presence, he'll purge out the land
From all evil and death;—who can stand in his anger?
The earth will be cleansed, and the opening sod
Proclaim the dear saint to be free from all danger,
And so shall they ever be then with their Lord.

FASTING.

I do not know how my brethren regard this subject; but I know that there are those who think our Savior abolished the ordinance of fasting. But let us hear him for ourselves. Luke 5: 33, 34;—"And they said unto him, Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink? And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bride-chamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?" It will be seen by referring to Matt. 9: 14, that it was John's disciples that came to Christ at this time. There seems to be a query in their minds concerning this thing, hence they inquire of the Master why these things are so. Or perhaps they had malice and hatred in their heart. (The latter seems the most probable to me.) Hence they judged (as the wicked always have in every age, even to this time) others for not following their pernicious ways. But the blessed Savior justifies his disciples by saying, "Can ye make the children of the bridechamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?" Had they whom our Savior thus answered fully understood these blessed words, they might have seen a beauty in it, and embraced the truth, and rejoiced in his presence with his disciples.

Thus far our Lord has been speaking of his disciples. While he remained with them they could not fast. He has not said, thus far, how it should be when he should be taken from them. Let us hear him in regard to this also. 35th verse;—"But the days will come when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days." It seems to me that language could not more plainly assert that our Savior deemed we ought to fast.

Let us see if the apostles showed by their life, after their Lord was taken away from them, that they believed what he here told them. Acts 13: 23;—"As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. And when they had fasted and prayed and laid their hands on them, they sent them away." Acts 14: 23;—"And when they had ordained them elders in every church and had prayed, with fasting, they commended them to the Lord on whom they believed." See also 1 Cor. 7: 5; 2 Cor. 6: 5; 11: 27. Paul says he was "in fastings oft."

If it was the duty of the early disciples to fast, as soon as their Master was taken away from them, is it not duty for all the children to fast until he again shall come to bless them? Please read the fifty-eighth chapter of Isaiah. There is much that might be said on this subject, and I hope that some one more competent will do it justice.

Stow, Me. E. JOHNSON.

For the World's Crisis.

DO YE WELL TO BE UNITED WITH THE WORLD?

"Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."—2 Cor. 6: 17, 18.

I have long been much interested in the truth contained in the above Scripture, and write a few words, praying that some abler contributor may feel it duty to wield the pen in defense of this very important truth.

The people of God in all ages have been blest whenever they have complied with this command to keep themselves "separate from the world." Surely there is enough in ourselves and in the way we travel to retard our progress in the divine life, without exposing ourselves unnecessarily to the opposition or diversions of the world. God saw it necessary, in order that his people should not be contaminated by needless exposure to the world, to counsel them to a separation; and we must remember that it is not advice, but the command of the Almighty.

We shall find by examining the Old Testament on this subject, that the blessing of the Lord was upon those who observed this command; while his curse rested upon those who were disobedient. It is on account of a departure from this law that the churches have fallen; they have allowed the world to lead them away from God, by conforming to its customs and fashions.

Over twenty years ago, a people who were looking for the coming of Christ, came out and separated themselves. Where are they now? Some have fallen asleep, a few are still striving to be ready; but many are slumbering and sleeping; not for lack of evidence that the Lord is near, but because the god of this world has blinded their eyes, and they have become overcharged with the cares of this life,—intent on accumulating property,—have lost an interest in the blessed hope, and when the alarm shall sound, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" they will look in vain for oil; and it will be too late; for they have been living without faith; have not obeyed the command of the Lord, to keep separate from the world: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."—1 John 2: 15.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us ask ourselves a few questions. Are we striving with all the power we have, to keep ourselves and families unspotted from the world? Do we despise its vanities and fashions? Are we teaching our children that we are living in the last days, that soon the judgment will sit and bring to a close all the vain pleasures of the world? Let us remember that as parents our precept and example will have more influence over our children than all the preaching and Sabbath school instruction they may hear. Are we striving to prepare them to appear well in the world; or is it the desire of our hearts that they may be ready to stand before the Son of man in peace?

Alas! how few consider the great responsibility resting upon them in these perilous times. O that we may be careful not to grieve the kind invitations of the tender Spirit of God, while warning us to wake out of sleep! We know that those who are sleeping are averse to hearing anything that will disturb them; but, my dear friends, better that we should see our condition now, than wait until the last trump shall sound, when al. will be over. It will not seem so pleasant then to find that we are left in company with the world; but this will certainly be our case unless we separate from all that is worldly now.

O how sad to think of the present state of things in the churches! There seems to be so very little of the power of godliness; and even among those who profess to be looking for the coming of the Lord, how very little genuine piety! and all in consequence of a conformity to the present evil world and its policy. Let us all give heed to the inspired passage, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord." May we all prepare our hearts to receive the light that may shine on the prophetic word,—watch and pray, lest we be found naked, or destitute of Christ's righteousness.

SIGHING FOR HOME.

How wearily do the hours pass as I wait to greet my blessed Savior and

"Dwell with him at home."

My heart is sick of earth and everything earthly. There is not one bright ray but in the hope of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him; for that I do most earnestly pray, and long to see the day when all things shall be made to bloom in more than Eden-like beauty. Here the dear cords of love are rent in twain by the relentless hand of death, and we mourn, weep and sigh for deliverance. How my heart yearns to catch one glimpse of my Savior's face, and the loved ones that now are sweetly reposing beneath the cold, damp ground. When will weeping come to a perpetual end, and Thy saints be safely at rest in the Eden of love? I want to be like Jesus, free from toils, trials, cares, and sorrowing scenes. I am truly sighing for "home, sweet home." Lord, let thy kingdom come; let thy glory fill the whole earth as the waters fill the sea. Let the weeping bride be gathered home.

How cold, dark and dreary this poor old world looks. Nothing here but one perfect scene of commotion and sorrow. Scarce a single person but that is bathed in tears for the loss of some near and dear one. Sighing for home. Then why should we not earnestly pray for our Deliverer to come and take his exiles to himself? I often break forth in my song,

"O land of rest, for thee I sigh!"

Come, O my Savior, hasten thy chariot wheels; make no delay. Let the sleepers awake and sing. My heart grows joyful at the thought of soon seeing Jesus, and to know that

"Sorrow and sighing will soon flee away."

Blessed day! hasten it, Lord.

Why should we not sigh for home, when we shall meet those who are near and dear as life to us and dwell with them for ever, never fearing the cold hand of the cruel tyrant, death? And we shall be with our best and dearest friend—Jesus. My heart is full, my cup runs o'er. Although afflictions press heavily upon me, the love of God to-day fills my entire being, as I lie here and write. With a body full of pain, my heart is filled with the praises of God. Thank God for a bright hope beyond the narrow confines of the lonely tomb. Light is breaking in yonder horizon, and eagerly do I catch each ray as it gleams upon the sky. How eagerly would I gaze upon my dear Savior's face, who has borne my sorrows and carried all my griefs.

One word to the dear suffering ones in Christ. I have a heart full of deep sympathy for you all. It is hard to be afflicted, and still there is a beauty in it after all. Be patient a little while longer, and all will be over. And to you who are upon beds of suffering and pain, I would say that has been my place for almost ten years past. It seems hard at times, yet in all my affliction I have never been left to murmur or repine at the dealings of a wise God. Cheer up, lonely ones; be faithful; and soon we will not be sighing for home, but it will be a reality. Let us be good. LUTHERA B. WEAVER.

BIRTH-DAY MEDITATIONS.

I am this day eighty-eight years of age, and in the series of those years, I have passed through many happy days and many days of sorrow and grief. I have meditated upon things existingly strange, and upon many things that were essential and instructive. I have meditated much upon the prophecies of Daniel and John, and upon many other passages of Scripture; upon the fall of man, its cause and effect, and the signs and wonders that have taken place; also upon the rise and fall of nations; which has given me a great and good lesson, not to put my trust in the arm of flesh, but in that Almighty arm of God which is able to save us from all impending dangers. "He that puts his trust in God need fear no evil."

In the course of those years I have seen the dark day that transpired in the year 1780. Although so young then, I am not able now to portray its darkness; but I have been informed since, by older persons, that the day was so dark that men could not see to perform their labors and had to quit their work. And the night following, (although the moon was in its full), was so dark that they could not even discern a white sheet of paper, although it was held up before their eyes. I have also seen the meteors, (called stars by the ancients), fall from the heavens as numerous as the snow-flakes driven by the wind. I have read of nations and kingdoms rising to great magnificence and splendor, and by reason of sin and transgression to have fallen even to penury and want.

I have read the biography of our own nation, and have experienced in some measure its former prosperity. And I find that no nation on earth was ever built up in so short a time in opulence and splendor as ours has been. There was a union of feeling in those former days existing; almost a total union throughout this republican land, and who can doubt but this union was the means, under the guidance of Divine Providence, of facilitating our prosperity?

But how does it stand with us now? We see it going down with the tide of oppression as fast as the wheels of time can carry it. We are divided in sentiment—in almost everything that pertains to our peace. And by that means such sedition, malignity and strife has taken place among us, as to cause that destruction of human life and property (seemingly) as never was known in any nation whatever. And I doubt if it has ever been known even among the most savage tribes of the wilderness. Thousands and thousands of our fellow-men have been cut off by the appendages of this present cruel war; and millions and millions of property have been destroyed by the arrogance and superstition of those overbearing and blood-thirsty impenitents. And anon they have caused, without any feeling of regret, the blood of our fellow-men to flow, even so as to cover the battle-fields with gore. And what is yet to follow God only knows.

Now taking in view the overruling hand of Divine Providence concerning these wars, signs and wonders, who can doubt but they are omens of some great event shortly to take place here on the earth, such as never has been known since the creation of the world? Many Biblical students, taking in view the prophecies of the Old Testament writers, and later still the teaching of Christ and his apostles as to what is to take place in the latter day, have computed these wars, signs and wonders to foreshadow the speedy coming of Christ to judge the earth; and who can say their views are not correct?

Now if their views are correct, and we expect Christ to come shortly, what a preparation we should be making to meet our Lord in peace, for according to the declaration of Scripture, when Christ shall come, he will sift the tares from the wheat, and gather the wheat into his garner. Or, in other words, he will preserve the righteous and destroy the wicked. Here let me say again, those meditations have given me a great and good lesson, not to put my trust in the arm of flesh, but in God, whose almighty arm is able to save us from all these conflicts that surround us. By all means let us put our trust in God, and then all fear will be banished from our minds; no dark forebodings of the future will be crowding upon us, no gloomy thoughts, no repining at the reverse of fortune, no horror at the thoughts of death. We shall be entirely given up to God and entirely resigned to his will. We shall feel that we are his children. And if we but love God as we ought to love him, and keep his commandments, he will finally save us in his glorious kingdom, where there will be everlasting joy, glory and happiness.

In closing my theme I will rehearse a few passages of Scripture to illustrate my subject more clearly: "And behold (saith Christ) I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be."—Rev. 22: 12. Again, "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you who fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings, and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall; and you shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet."

"Blest are the undefiled in heart,
Whose ways are right and clean;
Who never from thy law depart,
But fly from every sin.
But haughty sinners God will hate,
The proud shall die accurst;
The sons of falsehood and deceit
Are trodden to the dust."

MIND A RESULT OF ORGANIZATION.

An Essay delivered at the State Normal School, Ypsilanti, Dec. 23, 1864.

The opinions among men as to the nature and destiny of mankind are various. The doctrine held by the greater class, is, that mind is an immortal, immaterial, independent existence, constituting the man-proper, entombed for some mysterious purpose in a clay tabernacle, which fetters its power, misleads its researches and cramps its energies generally, and that only when this fetter falls off it first assumes its full measure of existence.

Of the many creeds uniting in this general belief, the only one consistent with itself is that of the Mormons, who hold that mind is not only immortal but eternal, and as often as a new tabernacle is created below, a mind is sent down ready made to inhabit it.

Opposed to this fanciful theory is one, which, coming in the united strength of reason and revelation, is fast gaining ground among those who have sufficient independence to break loose from the bonds of old theology, and act and think for themselves.

It teaches that man is a unit; that every element of his being is necessary to make him a man; that mind is simply a result of organization, inseparable from matter, and that death means death, and is to man what it is to other creatures—a complete cessation of existence. This position is abundantly proven by all the phenomena of life and death. The mind, in infancy small and feeble, is dependent on the body for its existence and development. If the latter is permitted to become stunted and unhealthful, the former will remain weak and imbecile, and in proportion as the latter is strengthened and developed, so will be the growth of the latter. Reaching the acme of its strength at about the same time as the corporeal frame, it treads the down hill side of life, growing weaker with the decline of the body, until in extreme old age, its light becomes dim, and frequently expires before the extinction of animal life.

The mind is dependent on the physical senses for all its knowledge. This clearly proves the inseparable connection of mind and matter, for if the mind possesses an independent existence, it must certainly possess independent sources of knowledge; whereas, we find it dependent on the external organs not only for its perceptions of physical objects, but through association and relative suggestion for its most abstract thoughts and ideas. Each sense is the medium of a system of thought and knowledge, which the mind can obtain from no other source, and without which its existence would be imperfect. Neither can perform the office of another, and if either be wanting or destroyed, the mind goes blindly and feebly through life, destitute of all that class of ideas which it was the especial province of that sense to furnish. How, then, is it possible, I ask, for the mind to exist, know and feel, when deprived of them all?

The phenomenon of sleep is another evidence of the mortal nature of mind. Physiologists tell us that sleep is a provision of nature for the reproduction of the brain, and the restoration of the nervous and mental power lost through its daily wasting. If a person be long deprived of sleep, the mind becomes weakened and dull, and after a time, insanity and death ensue. Now it is an immutable law of nature that whatever is liable to waste and decay, must sometime cease to exist; and if the mind may become so exhausted as to require a frequent resuscitation by sleep, the conclusion is inevitable that it is like the body, mortal.

There are persons (as the idiot) in whom the mind never existed, or has been destroyed. Now we are told by the teachers of the immortal-soul theory, that a man does not die; that what is called death, is merely a separation of mind and body, the latter being left to its natural dissolution, while the former, without a moment's loss of consciousness, enters at once upon a more perfect state of existence, so that all that is necessary to kill a man is to remove the mind or soul, which they hold to be the same. Hence, we must suppose an idiot to possess either an immortal soul, (which is an absurdity) or a living body without a soul, which, according to the above-named theory, is impossible.

Again, if the mind were immortal, it could not be deprived of consciousness; yet we see it in numerous instances subjected to days, weeks, months, and even years of unconsciousness, through some accidental derangement of the physical system. Medical journals relate the case of a man whose skull was so fractured by a blow, that a small portion of it pressed upon the brain, and as a result, he lay for fourteen years in a state of total insensibility, until his physician, discovering the difficulty, removed it, and his conscious existence commenced where it had ceased, fourteen years previous.

Now if theology be correct, here was an immortal soul cheated of fourteen years of life by a simple pressure on the brain. Nor will it remove the difficulty to say that in such cases the mind exists elsewhere, for if it exists, it must have a consciousness, and memory of its existence, which is never the case.

But it will be asked, "Is death, then, the end of man, and is there no hope of a future life?" The cold grave to which we go, is not more silent than is the voice of nature on the subject of man's future destiny. As far as we can glean one ray of light from natural science, man dies like the beast, and the grave covers his last hope. But if we turn to the Volume of Inspiration for a solution of the problem, we find the answer clear and plain on every page of the Divine Record, harmonizing alike with itself and nature,—man under the penalty of death for sin, a redemption provided through a resurrection of the body; and not one promise or hope of future life to any son or daughter of Adam, except through this resurrection, or a "change," which will be equal to it, for those "living" when Christ shall come.—WM. THE ARMIES OF THE BIBLE.

Few persons are aware of the immense numbers composing the armies of the warlike ancient nations mentioned in the Scriptures, or of the almost incredible multitudes slain in their battles. Indeed it is scarcely equalled by anything recorded in profane history. The slaughter of thousands by Saul, and ten thousands by David, was celebrated in song. 1 Sam. 18: 7. The destruction of twenty-five thousand (Judges 20: 35), thirty thousand (1 Sam. 4: 10) men in battle in the ranks of but one of the fiercely contending forces, was of common occurrence. Even this number exceeded the number killed in any one fight thus far during the whole war for the Union of these States. And yet our losses and carnage has seemed frightful. And what a bloody strife when the victorious army of David slew of the Syrians "forty thousand horsemen" (2 Sam. 10: 18), or it may be "forty thousand" footmen 1 Chron. 19: 18. In one battle there fell of the Ephraimites forty-two thousand (Judg. 12: 6). At another time the Jews slew of their enemies seventy-five thousand (Es. 9: 16), a number equal to the whole army of General Sherman. In one day in a bloody battle fought between Israel led on by Ahab, and the hosts of Syria under Ben-hadad and thirty-two kings with him, the former slew of the latter one hundred thousand armed men. 1 Kings 20: 29. The host was equal to the entire army of Gen. Meade at the sanguinary battle of Gettysburg. It was also equal to the slain at Waterloo. See, too, Judges 8: 10, which records the destruction of "one hundred and twenty thousand men that drew the sword," by the hand of the warrrior Gideon. Observe also 2 Chron. 28: 6, where it is stated an equal number of Judah were put to death in a single day, every one of them "valient men."

But what shall we say of the standing army of Jehosaphat the lofty king of Israel, whose armed hosts numbered over one million one hundred and sixty thousand souls? 2 Chron. 17. Need we wonder that all the surrounding kingdoms feared Israel and Israel's God? What nation now on earth, save it be our own, has another such an army? Three hundred thousand was a very common number of the armed men of the ancient Jews (Num. 31: 36; 1 Sam. 11: 8; 2 Chron. 17: 14 and 25: 5, etc.), and yet this is a number nearly equal to the whole population of the State of Vermont. At one time in the days of the Judges 20: 2) four hundred thousand footmen that drew sword went out to fight against Benjamin. David's "valient men that drew the sword" even exceeded the armed hosts of Jehosaphat. We are told in 2 Sam. 24, that with Israel and Judah combined it amounted to one million three hundred thousand, while another account in 1 Chron. 21: 5 makes one million five hundred and seventy thousand. What a host of warriors! Zerah, king of Ethiopia, on one occasion came out against Asa the pious king of Judah with an army at his heels consisting of one million of men and three hundred chariots. 2 Chron. 14. To oppose this great multitude, king Asa had but five hundred and eighty thousand men of valor. But Asa "cried unto the Lord his God," and then, though his foes were two to one, set himself in battle array, and achieved a great victory, the Ethiopians being utterly overthrown. "The Lord is a man of war"!

But of all ancient battles, that which took place B. C. 957, between Judah and Israel, as recorded in 2 Chron. 13, exceeds all others in carnage. The armed hosts went out under their respective kings with four hundred thousand and eight hundred thousand on a side. Twelve hundred thousand men on one field of battle, engaged in close, mortal combat! The slaughter seems almost past belief. But thus reads the oracles: "There fell down slain of Israel (500,000) five hundred thousand men." This vast number probably equals the entire male population of the greatest city on this continent, viz: New York. It exceeds the number slain by Julius Cæsar, who killed at one time 400,000 Usipetes, and at another time in one battle 430,000 Germans; and this last mentioned battle exceeds in the multitudes slain any other I can find recorded in profane history. Still the battle of the Hebrews I have last named outnumbers it in the list of its dead! What a wonderful book is the Bible!

It is a terrible thing for men and nations to go to war. "For the indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies: he hath uttterly destroyed them; he hath delivered them to the slaughter."—Isa. 24: 2. The time is just at hand when the Lord God will "make wars to cease unto the end of the earth." Ps. 46: 9. Merciful Father in heaven, speed on the day!

> Then shall wars and tumults cease,
> Then be banished grief and pain,
> Righteousness and joy and peace
> Undisturbed shall ever reign.

INTEREST IN MAINE.

Bro. Grant:—I have been proclaiming the Advent at hand for the past twenty years, and I have never seen the people manifest such an interest to hear as they do at the present time. Those that have never been accustomed to attend any meeting come out to hear, and listen with interest, and many are receiving the truth. It really seems like the last command of the Savior in the supper call—"Go ye into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be full."

I spent some thirteen days the last of January in Carthage and Welds, in company with Bro. Wheeler. The reformation in Carthage that commenced under the labors of Bro. Wheeler in December, is still progressing. We held meetings five days at Weld's Corner. This is a new field of labor; an increasing interest was manifest daily, and many backsliders were reclaimed, and sinners manifested a desire for religion. We left Bro. Wheeler and Bro. J. Whitman to labor among them. We expect much good will result from the meetings. Our numbers in Maine have more than doubled during the past three years, and are still on the rise.

I have been much interested in the chronology of Bro. Thurman. It seems to be new light. We read in Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." And as he has appointed a day in which he will judge the world, the time must have been revealed to Daniel. I believe we are now in the time of the end when the sealed book of Daniel's was to be opened. Let us give the trumpet a certain sound, for what is to be done must be done quickly.

THE PROVIDENCE DISCUSSION.

Our discussion in Providence, with Mr. J. G. Fish, of Ganges, Mich., was one of much interest. It commenced Tuesday evening, Feb. 14th, and continued four evenings before very large and intelligent audiences. Mr. Fish was formerly a Baptist minister for seven years, but is now a bold and able defender of Spiritualism. He is an interesting speaker, and well versed in heathen mythology, but utterly rejects the Bible and the God of the Bible, so far as their being of any authority to guide the actions of men. He made an earnest effort to impeach the Bible and its authors.

We discussed the following resolution: "Resolved, That man has a spirit which exists after the death of the body, in a conscious state, and communicates to the inhabitants of earth."

Mr. Fish admitted the Bible does not teach the immortality of man; and claimed that the only reliable proof of the doctrine is the testimony of the spirits.

We endeavored to show that all who claimed to be departed human spirits, are lying ones; hence his only witnesses were of no value to prove his case. Inasmuch as the Bible does not teach the affirmative of the question, and his witnesses were found to be all liars, it was very evident that the truth was not on the side of our opponent.

The following are some of his sayings: "My highest conception of Divinity is one who is finite." "The Bible is a human production, as much as the Providence Post." "The God of the Jews was a finite Spirit." "The Jehovah of the Old Testament was a departed human spirit." "The reason that Jesus' flesh did not see corruption was because he was embalmed." He denied that he was ever raised from the dead. He doubted whether he was ever crucified. He would not believe the prophet Isaiah sooner than he would the word of the writer of this report.

Mr. Fish said he saw a spirit come out of a dying person. For a time the dying one had four hands, four eyes, four ears, four feet, two heads and two bodies. After awhile the etherial body left the other, and went to the spirit-land. We thought it must have been a strange performance.

He was very severe in his remarks against the Bible and the God of the Bible, and tried to show that the Jews got their religion from the Persians. Our discussion was one of great interest, largely attended by men and women who could appreciate our argument, and passed off very pleasantly. We are much pleased with the result. We felt the blessing of the Lord in our endeavors to defend his truth.

THE SEVENTY WEEKS OF DAN. 9: 24.

We wish to call attention to one word in Dan. 9: 24,—the word "finish." "Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression."

The word rendered "finish" is kahlah, and occurs eighteen times in the Hebrew scriptures. It is defined, 1, "to shut up, to confine." 2. "To withhold, to retain, to restrain . . . from doing any thing. . . . Dan. 9: 24."—Gesenius.

The word is not rendered finish in any other place except in Dan. 9: 24. The following are all the passages where the word occurs:—"And the rain from heaven was restrained."—Gen. 8: 2. "None of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre."—Gen. 23: 6. "So the people were restrained from bringing."—Ex. 36: 6. "My lord Moses forbid them."—Num. 11: 28. "And shut up their calves at home."—1 Sam. 6: 10. "Blessed be thou which hast kept me this day from coming to shed blood."—1 Sam. 25: 33. "I have not refrained my lips."—Ps. 40: 9. "Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me."—Ps. 40: 11. "I am shut up, and cannot come forth."—Ps. 88: 8. "I have refrained my feet from every evil way."—Ps. 119: 101. "There is no man that hath power over the spirit, to retain the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death."—Eccl. 8: 8. "I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back."—Isa. 43: 6. "And Jeremiah the prophet was shut up in the court."—Jer. 32: 2. "Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up."—Jer. 32: 3. "And the great waters were stayed."—Ezk. 31: 15. "Therefore the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit."—Hagai 1: 10.

These are all the examples except the one in Dan. 9: 24, where the word is rendered to finish in the text, but in the margin, to restrain, which is evidently the correct rendering; for we see the word is not used in any other passage to signify a finishing of a thing, but the withholding or restraining of some thing.

The meaning of the word in Daniel appears to be that the "seventy weeks" were "determined [cut off] upon" his "people, and upon" the "holy city." For what purpose? "To restrain the transgression"; that is, to hold it back until the end of the seventy weeks; then the transgression, or desolating power of the Romans will be withholden no more.

It appears from the foregoing, that the seventy weeks, end when the restraint is taken from the enemies of the Jews, and they commence the work of desolating Jerusalem, which continued about seven years, in which time "the sacrifice and the oblation" was caused "to cease" by the destruction of the city by the Romans.

CALCULATION OF ECLIPSES.

Since the publication of Bro. Thurman's work on Bible chronology, a new interest has been awakened upon the subject of the eclipses used to confirm historic dates; especially those referred to by Ptolemy. The Bible student is anxious to know what weight to give the astronomical calculations of Ptolemy, and his arrangement of the kings of Babylon and of the Medo-Persian empire. It appears that the canon of Ptolemy has hardly been called in question, till Bro. Thurman showed that all the eclipses mentioned by him could not be made by any set of astronomical tables; neither could his dates resulting from his calculations be made to harmonize with the Bible. We think these facts are very clearly shown in Bro. T.'s work on chronology.

Ptolemy lived in the second century of the christian era, being born A. D. 138. He was a heathen astronomer, who lived at Alexandria in Africa. He made out a list of the kings of Babylon, Media and Persia, and Grecia, commencing B. C. 747, and extending down to A. D. 137. Of course he was as dependent on history for his knowledge of the events before Christ, as we are, and was not as competent to calculate eclipses as the astronomers of the present day, because the science of astronomy was not understood then as it is now.

It is a little remarkable, we think, that such implicit confidence should have been placed in the canon of Ptolemy for sixteen centuries; and were it not for the fact that the prophetic words of Daniel, concerning the periods, were to be "closed up and sealed till the time of the end," we should have much occasion for wonder, now that Ptolemy's error is so clearly proved by Bro. Thurman and others.

As "the words" were to be "sealed till the time of the end," then it is certain that all expositions of the "sealed" portion which might be given before "the time of the end" must result in a failure, as the history of the past most clearly shows; but this does not prove that we shall never have the seal broken so that we may understand those sealed periods. Indeed, it is positively stated in Dan. 12: 10, "the wise shall understand." Understand what? That which was to be "closed up and sealed till the time of the end." This point is so plainly set forth, that we see no chance for coming to any other conclusion.

The question now arises, how was the matter sealed?—By giving wrong dates to past events, according to Ptolemy's canon, who made the first year of Cyrus 536 B. C. instead of 488. Had he made no mistakes, and been as closely followed when right as when wrong, then of course the prophetic dates would not have been "sealed," and the scripture would have been "broken" which affirms that this portion should be "closed up" to "the time of the end."

We think there can be no doubt but that we are in "the time of the end; hence where we may expect to have the seal removed. How may we expect it to be accomplished. How can Ptolemy's canon be corrected if wrong? As the strength of his system of dates was based on certain eclipses, we might expect an error to be pointed out in their application This has been clearly shown by Bro. Thurman in his work on chronology.

It should be observed that no set of astronomical tables will make all of the eclipses according to Ptolemy; hence astronomers have taken different tables from different astronomers, varying from each other, and by a system of patchwork, have endeavored to sustain Ptolemy's canon; but while doing so, the seal on the periods of Daniel was unbroken.

Some have formed the idea from what has been published on the subject, that Bro. Thurman's chronological arrangement is based on astronomical calculations. Those who have such a view of the subject have misapprehended the matter. His chronology was made out before he calculated eclipses. His is emphatically a Bible chronology. After it was arranged, he received a copy of Bro. Bliss' "Sacred Chronology," in which he found that Ptolemy's canon was the basis for obtaining the dates during the reigns of the kings of Persia; and that he made the first year of Cyrus, when "the commandment" went forth according to Dan. 9: 25, "to restore and build Jerusalem," B. C. 536; whereas the prophecy would not allow so much by 48 years. After seeing this difference between Ptolemy and the Bible, he resolved not to rest till the matter was carefully examined.

It was then that he commenced his work of astronomical calculations. He applied Ferguson's tables, and found they would not make all the ancient eclipses, as given by Ptolemy and others, and that the same was true of other tables. He then so adjusted his tables as to make all the undisputed eclipses, found in the history of the past, and besides these he calculated a very large number of other eclipses to test his tables, until he feels perfectly satisfied that some of the eclipses on which Ptolemy relied were not seen at the time where he applied them; and on this account, all who have endeavored to harmonize the "weeks" of Daniel, and the 2300 days with Ptolemy, and the prophets, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and the sacred historian, have utterly failed. We think the subject is now very plain.

It has been objected to Bro. T. that he is not a noted astronomer, therefore not reliable in his calculations of eclipses. This objection falls to the ground at once when it is known that there have been but few who have constructed or originated astronomical tables for calculating eclipses. Sir Isaac Newton was one of this class. Mr. Pearce, at Harvard, Mass., is another of our own day and country. But after these noted mathematicians have made the tables, any one of common mathematical knowledge, can work by them, and have very little difficulty in calculating eclipses, after receiving a little instruction.

In the appendix to the third edition of Bro. Thurman's "Sealed Book of Daniel opened," he proposes to supply "tables arranged on a plan so simple that any school-boy that understands simple addition and multiplication, can in a few days learn to calculate any eclipse of the sun or moon that has occurred within the limits of the last six thousand years." The foregoing statement is pronounced by one who calculates eclipses, as "ridiculous." It may sound so to many, and yet we are disposed to believe that it is farther removed from the "ridiculous" than the one supposed who made the remark.

We have before us a work entitled a "New System of Practical Astronomy, made plain and easy to those who have not studied mathematics," by Thomas Spofford. The work contains only 72 octavo pp. In the preface the author says:—

"A knowledge of Algebra, conic sections and several other branches of mathematics, has generally been considered indispensable for any one who would know anything of Astronomy; but the following treatise is designed to render the science perfectly intelligible, and easy to be understood by those who have no further knowledge of mathematics than the simple rules of arithmetic; and it is believed that the problems may all be readily solved by any person of common intellect without the aid of a teacher. Many of the rules of the tables are entirely new; those for the calculation of eclipses save more than nine tenths of the time and trouble required to solve the problem in the usual tedious and intricate way of calculating by parallaxes, and are sufficiently accurate for common purposes. For the last seven years the author has used no other rules or tables in making the calculations for his almanack, and for several of the most popular registers and almanacs in the United States and the British Colonies. By these rules and tables he has calculated all the eclipses that will happen for one hundred years; which could hardly be done by the old method (parallaxes) in the lifetime of a man, should he live to that age."

From a hasty examination of the work, we are satisfied that his statement is not "ridiculous" but truthful, and sustained by facts.

SPIRITS IN PRISON.

Bro. Grant:—Yours of the 7th inst. is at hand. The subject concerning the "sleep of the dead" has caused many thoughts to arise in my mind. At first, I would not even listen to it, so absurd did it seem; but more careful reflections have changed my mind, at least somewhat. The Scripture seems to become easier to understand, if we adopt this idea; but still, there are some points which seem to conflict, or else I don't understand them. I will mention a few of this class:—1 Peter 3: 19, etc. Peter says, when speaking about Christ's suffering, that he was "put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit; by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison," etc. If there are no spirits in an intermediate state, to what kind of beings did Christ preach when descended.

A brother told me the other day that he examined your doctrine of the sleep of the dead, and he says that you only intend to take an easier way; that the subject above cited plainly shows the fallacy of your doctrine, hence the inquiry. He threw your pamphlet away that treated on this subject. What did Stephen mean when he said, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit"? Acts 8: 59.

The foregoing are a few points of this kind. I would like to hear from you further on this subject. This doctrine is entirely new in our neighborhood. Many would not at all allow such a doctrine to be preached. How few can examine the word of God. Custom has blinded the minds of thousands of professors. May God open our eyes to understand the word as it is. Yours in love, Isaac Kulp.

Skippack, Pa.

We are glad to lend a helping hand to our brother in the gospel ministry, and pray the Lord to fill his path with light, and his heart with joy and peace in believing. The passages referred to have been frequently noticed in the columns of "our paper;" but as we are continually receiving new subscribers, it seems necessary to give line upon line, and precept upon precept, in order that all may understand the word of the Lord.

The passage in 1 Peter 3: 18–20, reads as follows:—"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit; by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."

It will be observed that the Spirit which "quickened" Jesus, or raised him from the dead, that is the Holy Spirit, was the same that aided in the preaching; and in verse 20, we learn that the preaching was to the Antediluvians "while the ark was a preparing," in the days of Noah, not while Jesus was dead and in the tomb. But who did the preaching to the generation before the flood? Noah. He needed the same Holy Spirit to aid him that we do now, and this we understand to be the application of the passage in Peter.

The Antediluvians, who had rejected all the offers of salvation, and were so wicked that the Lord destroyed them all, were the last class to be preached to by the Savior, provided he could preach to any one while he was dead. He would not preach to them unless they were on probation; but their probation run out "in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing," and the flood came and destroyed them all. After that it would be impossible to preach to them again till after they have a resurrection from the dead. They are now "reserved" in the prison house of death, where they must remain till the time arrives to raise them up for judgment, after the second coming of Christ.

Griesbach, one of the ablest translators, and a most thorough critic, gives the following rendering of 1 Pet. 3: 19; "By which Spirit he went and preached to those who are now in prison." This rendering appears to give the obvious meaning of the passage.

The case of Stephen demands our attention next. The passage referred to reads as follows:—"And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit. And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep. And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him."—Acts 7: 59–60, 8: 2.

The word pneuma, rendered "spirit" in this passage, is used in four senses in the Bible: 1, to represent the Holy Spirit; 2, a being; 3d, a state of mind; 4th, the breath of life, without which no one can live. It will be observed that Stephen does not say receive me, but "my spirit," and after the spirit was taken away, "he fell asleep," or died; and then "devout men carried Stephen to his burial." It was Stephen that they buried, not the house he lived in. They "made great lamentation over him," not a prison in which he had been confined. Job says, "the Spirit of God is in my nostrils."—Job 27: 3. In Isa. 2; 22, we read, "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils;" and in Ps. 104: 29, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away thy breath, they die, and return to their dust;" and in Ps. 146: 4, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." The Greek word rendered "spirit," applied to Stephen, is the one corresponding with the Hebrew in Job 27: 3, Ps. 104: 29, and 146: 4. These passages show that there is one spirit in a man's nostrils, which is taken away by the Lord at death. But one cannot die till the spirit, or "breath of life" is taken away. The wise man says, "there is no man that hath power over the spirit [or breath] to retain the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death," Eccl. 8: 8. In the case of Stephen, the mob were determined to stone him till he was dead; consequently, the longer the breath of life, or spirit, remained in him, the longer he must suffer; hence he prays to the Lord to take away his breath, that he might die; but we find no proof in the Bible that Stephen or any other one lived a moment after "the breath of life" was taken away.

We have the same use of the word in Luke 8: 54, 55.—"And he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, arise. And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway; and he commanded to give her meat." The word here rendered "spirit," is translated breath by Wakefield, Thompson, in the Improved version and Emphatic Diaglott.

The same word occurs in James 2: 26; "For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also." The margin reads breath. Wakefield, Griesbach, and the Emphatic Diaglott, render the word breath.

We find no proof in the Bible that any thing else leaves man at death but "the breath of life" in his nostrils.

"I AND MY FATHER ARE ONE."

Mr. Editor:—Will you or some one through the Crisis please inform me, if Christ's words are true in St. John 10: 30, and the words of John the Baptist in John 1: 1, 10, if the universe was not without a God for three days and three nights, if the doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead is true? How could God raise himself, if he was dead? Can God die? An Inquirer.

There is no "if" about the truth of the words of Jesus or of John the Baptist; but, no doubt, men sometimes put a wrong construction upon them. The passage at the head of this article is the one referred to in John 10: 30. When Jesus says, "I and my Father are one," he does not say one person, but one in purpose. Paul says, in 1 Cor. 3: 8, "Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one." Does he mean one person, or one in purpose? In John 17: 21, 22, when Jesus was praying to his Father for his children, he expresses himself as follows:—"that they may be one, even as we are one." Here we have the matter made very plain. Of course he does not mean that the whole church should become one individual; but all should have one spirit and purpose; just as in the case with Jesus and his Father.

We turn now to John 1: 1, 10; "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." "He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not." Verse 14 reads, "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." Was the Father made flesh? It is very clear that the "Word" which "was with God," was not the God with whom the Word was associated. The word dia, rendered by in verse 10, may be properly rendered for,—"the world was made for him"; that is, he is to receive it as his kingdom, in company with the saints who are to be his joint-heirs.

If the Son of God was "the very and eternal God," as some have taught, then it would follow that when the Son died, God the Father died, and the world would, in that case, be without a living God, so long as he remained dead. Of course such an idea has only to be named to be rejected as error. But the Son of God might die, and the Father still live, which is what the Bible teaches. We find no proof that Christ raised himself. Such an idea is absurd. The Scriptures affirm many times that God raised Jesus from the dead. Jesus says in his last revelation to man, as recorded in Rev. 1: 18, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore." How could he say in truth, "I am he that was dead," if he never died? If he never died, he could not be raised from the dead.

Paul says, when speaking on this subject, that we are "to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." 1 Thess. 1: 10. Peter says to the Jews, "Ye . . . killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses."—Acts 3: 15. Let us believe the witnesses.

THE EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT.

The valuable translation of the New Testament, entitled the "Emphatic Diaglott," is now completed, and may be obtained at our office. For prices see book list. Every Bible student should have a copy of this work. We have about thirty translations, but we prize the Diaglott above every other one. It is published by Benjamin Wilson, Geneva, Ill., of whom it may be obtained.

A WAY TO DO GOOD.

Have you a friend or an acquaintance whom you desire to see and embrace the truth? No doubt you have; and no doubt he is willing and would be glad to read your paper, if it fell into his hands, but he is not yet enough interested and convinced to subscribe for it himself. A continual dropping, you know, will wear away stones; and the weekly visits of the Crisis to his fireside, for a year, or more, bringing the truth repeatedly and continually before him, might be the means of removing much prejudice, and of saving a soul from error and from death. Suppose you send it to him, if you have the means to spare; the Lord, no doubt, will pay it back to you, four-fold. It may enlighten and save not only him, but, through him, others; and through them, how many more, the judgment only will tell.

A good brother writes:—"There are two men of my acqumtance, members of the Congregational church, whom I am anxious should see the truth. They are men of influence, and are getting their eyes open. I have asked them several times to subscribe for the Crisis, but as they have not thus far felt quite ready to do so, I told them, a few days ago, that I would pay for it for them, for six months, provided they would continue to take it after that, if they liked it. They agreed to the conditions. You will therefore, for the money enclosed, send a copy to each of them."

Are there not others who are able and willing to let their light shine in the same way? W. B. H.

Our Volunteer Agents.

Report for week ending February 18.

Whole number of new subscribers in the week, 52. By the efforts of the following brethren, 39:—

One each—By J. A. Best, J. Blain, W. R. Boyker, S. Case, S. P. Clark, P. C. Covey, Julia M. Howard, J. Harmon, H. H. Janes, S. Kamerling, I. K. Lombard, W. A. Munroe, L. A. Moore, L. Pine, J. Sawyer.
Two each—By H. K. Flagg, A. C. Knowlton, A. Loomis, J. G. Smith, G. A. Streeter, Jos. Whitman.
Three—By Ellen L. Crumb, M. Grant, S. Kail, R. Williams.

☞ Bro. D. T. Taylor desires a copy of the World's Crisis for Sept. 1, 1863. We have not one left. Some brother who has one to spare, will confer a favor by mailing one, postpaid, to his address, Rouses Point, N. Y.

Bro. E. A. Manning, Manchester, Iowa, writes that preachers are much wanted in that part of the field,—those who are well posted, and can go into the whole subject of the Second Advent. The people are perishing for lack of knowledge.

Change of Price.

The prices of the following works, for sale at this office, have been advanced by the publishers as follows:—

Bible Student's Library (for the set),
By mail—cloth, $5.00; paper, $2.50.
By express—cloth, $4.00; paper, $2.00.
Debt and Grace, post paid, $1.50.
Christ our Life, post paid, cloth, 75c; paper, 45c.
Hudson's Tracts, 6 cents each, postage 2 cts.
Christian Lyre, 80c; by mail, 85c.
Social Hymns, 15 cts; eight for $1.00.
Cook Book, 15 cts; postage 2c.
Diphtheria, 10 cts; postage 2c.

Before ordering books, in these times of changing prices, it will be well to look at our latest price list, in the book column, and remit accordingly.

For the World's Crisis.

LESSONS IN ASTRONOMY.

I expect to show, in due course, 1, That the eclipses of Ptolemy's Canon were actually observed, recorded, and dated, and were no mere result of Ptolemy's calculations. 2, That accomplished modern astronomers, employing the best modern appliances, do find these ancient eclipses, as nearly according to the record of them as any other ancient eclipses are found. 3, That, from the obsolete authorities on which Mr. Thurman relies, and from the actual errors of his astronomical statements,—whether errors of the pen or of the press,—[They have been shown to be errors of the press.—Ed.] his failure to find all the eclipses of Ptolemy's Canon is no proof that they did not occur according to the record.*

Mr. T. announces, p. 301, "astronomical tables arranged on a plan so simple that any school boy that understands simple addition and multiplication can in a few days learn to calculate any eclipse of the sun or moon that has occurred within the limits of the last six thousand years." This statement is pronounced "ridiculous" by an accomplished practical astronomer of my acquaintance. Such a verdict may be decisive with some readers of the Crisis, against the astronomical claims of Mr. T.'s book. But some may think that professional astronomers are willing to magnify their office by exaggerating the real difficulties of computing distant eclipses, thus giving out that they can do things very hard to be done. And others still may be slow to take anything upon their bare authority. I only hope that persons have considered how much they do accept on the simple authority of Eld. T.

It may be best, on the whole, that I should tell the readers of the Crisis some things about astronomy; things that can be learned by any one who knows the use of books and who has access to the latest and best books on the subject, though himself no astronomer. A few words, then, for the present, on a single point.

I find that astronomers have at least supposed very ancient eclipses were difficult to compute, on account of an acceleration of the moon's motion, the rate of which was not yet settled. Mr. T. alludes to this opinion, quoting the words of a "Mr. Smith" who concludes as follows: "For it seems confirmed by undeniable proof, that the moon now finishes her period in less time than formerly." (P. 36.)

Mr. T. wholly discards this doctrine. He thinks this "opinion of astronomers finds foundation alone in the errors into which Ptolemy has fallen," and thinks he can "prove it to be incorrect." (P. 36.) He also seems to think, if I do not misunderstand him, that such a doctrine is opposed to the Bible. He says, on p. 34, "those who wish to see Bible truth triumph over error, are here [I think he has the same question in mind] exceedingly fortunate; for God, who has given the moon 'to serve in her season for a declaration of time and a sign of the world,' has so arranged her motion as to enable us to settle this decisively."

Now I do not see that this passage (Ecclesiasticus xliii. 6), even if it were Bible and not Apocrapha, settles or even touches the question of the moon's acceleration. The moon is sometimes nearer to the earth than at others, or in its "perigee," and then it moves faster. So the earth moves faster in its "perehelion," or when nearest the sun, than in its "aphelion," or when farthest from the sun. Eld. T. doubtless well knows this. And astronomers now understand this variable speed so well that it does not spoil their computations of eclipses. The railroad company knows how to adapt its "time-tables" to long up grades" and "down grades." And those who carefully observe the movement of earth and moon in their "up grades" and "down grades," can find what time tables the Great Architect has constructed for them.

But where is the proof that the moon has no up grade or down grade reaching through long centuries? The text in Ecclesiasticus gives no such proof, unless it equally proves that the moon has neither perigee nor apogee. And if one says that there can be no such acceleration of the moon's rate, because that might perplex our astronomy, I reply, "Science made easy" is not God's method, though the way of salvation be so plain. Astronomers have been puzzled for nearly two hundred years about this supposed acceleration—many of them as accomplished, and as devout, too, as Mr. T. can wish any of his readers to be. Have they been pursuing a "will o' the wisp" all this while? I am not sure that Mr. T. even knows the history of opinion on this subject. It is at least interesting, and it may be instructive.

I find that Dr. Halley appears to have been the first astronomer who was acquainted with the fact of the acceleration of the moon's mean* motion." This was in 1695, in a paper stating that in a certain case he "could pronounce in what proportion the moon's motion does accelerate, and should (God willing) one day make it appear to the public." The next important paper on the subject was by the Rev. Richard Dunthorne, in 1749, and in this the amount of the acceleration was given with some approach to exactness. I find also referred to a paper of La Place, on the subject, in 1800, with "the results of comparison with twenty-seven ancient eclipses," compared with the tables by M. Bouvard.

As soon as the acceleration was generally credited, astronomers began to inquire into its opinion was that there must be an ether diffused through space, a resisting medium, impeding the motion of moon, earth, and all the planets, dashing them at some distant future upon each other and upon the sun, in a general ruin. This was the opinion of the non-eternity of the universe, which Mr. T. cites on p. 36. Many readers will wonder how a resisting medium could make the moon travel faster round the earth. It certainly is not an animal, or a god, as the myth would have it, which might be worried and provoked by obstacles to push the barrier and gain speed because its way was disputed. Yet the astronomers were all agreed that in a resisting medium it must get round the earth sooner. How? Simply thus:—Resisted in its onward course, the moon must fall nearer to the earth. Its journey round the earth is then shortened; and when nearer to the earth,—by a well known law of planetary motion,—it moves "faster in proportion" than it is nearer, though really not so fast as when further from the earth.

But after a while the most careful observation, united with the most profound mathematical science, suggested another cause of the acceleration, which might spare the universe the catastrophe that had been feared. The moon's orbit is not an exact circle, but an ellipse. It is this ellipse that makes all the talk about perigee and apogee. But the moon does not move through precisely the same ellipse in every revolution round the earth. I. e., it does not come to its perigee at just the same point now as before. The effect is, that the ellipse itself is veering round, very slowly indeed, yet to some purpose. And the ellipse is also becoming more nearly like a circle. And for this reason, by a well proven law of motion, it makes its circuit in less time. It is also proven that if the present economy continues, the ellipse will finally become an exact circle,—or rather, the moon will for an instant move circularly; then the ellipse will assert itself again, and after another long series of ages become as unlike a circle—as much flattened or elongated—as ever. And in this new process, the moon will not be accelerated, but retarded. It will then not move faster, but slower. This cycle of acceleration and retardation is one of the longest known to astronomers. I do not know that they have estimated how long it is,—how many thousands or millions of years it will occupy. But an eloquent astronomer has attempted some illustration of the idea of eternity by supposing that the moon, as a pendulum, is in this way slowly—sluggishly past

* I have found this week a copy of Ptolemy's astronomical work, in the Cambridge Library,—the edition of 1558, folio. I had supposed, that Ptolemy's first or original use of the old eclipses was for astronomical purposes, and that his chronological table was an after thought. But I now find that he only employed them for astronomical purposes, and could have had no chronological design or bias. But the historical character of the eclipses, as reliably reported to Ptolemy, is even more evident from his book than from the meager extracts I had before seen.

I hope to show this by copious translations, as my argument proceeds.

* The moon's mean or medium motion is its average rate of motion round the earth.

computation—ticking off the SECONDS of duration without end.

And shall any one say, if the moon travels faster than it did two thousand years ago, that then God's chronometer does not keep good time, or is out of repair?

Respecting the fact of the moon's secular* acceleration, all practical astronomers—all who are not mere theorists or speculators—are agreed. They only differ respecting its amount. The latest estimate I have seen reckons that the moon has gained about fifty minutes in 2500 years, or one minute in fifty years. That is a fraction over one second in a year.

And now, what chronometer of man's invention could measure certainly and accurately this gain of about a second in three hundred days? I have here only told the results of about two hundred years observing, and guessing, and studying, and ciphering, by the astronomers of Christendom. In my next article I wish to show why they must labor so long, to prove changes so slight, yet so important. For a difference of fifty minutes in 2500 years Eld. Thurman is ready to deny the occurrence of an eclipse supposed to have been seen at Babylon. That old question about the "burden of proof" here takes this form: Who has labored most diligently and carefully to prove his case,—Eld. T., or the whole astronomical faculty? C. F. H.

Correspondence.

From S. & L. W. Bragg.

To the dear saints scattered abroad:—We can say the Lord is a present help in time of need. He changes not, but is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, true to his precious promise, "I am with you alway, even to the end of the world." Though in a distant land, and far from those we love in the truth, we are not alone, for the Lord does meet with us, and help by his Spirit in presenting the law of life through Christ, the only Life-giver to a people truly perishing for the lack of knowledge. Though darkness has covered their minds, we find a warm reception with many of the common people. Have held meetings in the open air with hundreds of hearers and good attention. Since the weather has become too cold for out-door meetings, we hold them in barns, with large gatherings, and some inquiring, What is truth? Some have decided this is truth, and have made a start for the kingdom; while others are much perplexed and troubled, and speak evil of this way.

Truly the world is ripening for destruction. As it was in the days of Noah and Lot, so it is now. Solemn thought! that probation's hour is nearly past, and the wrath of God will soon be poured out without mixture of mercy upon those who love not the Lord nor obey his gospel. The Lord help us to preach the truth as it is in Jesus, accompanied with the power of the Holy Ghost; for an empty theory will never save one soul from the wrath to come.

Dear pilgrims that have access to the throne of grace, do help by prayer, that the word of God may have free course and be glorified, and accomplish the thing whereunto it is sent. We are longing for the time to come when our warfare will be past, and we meet with the dear saints of God to part no more. How cheering is the gospel hope to us pilgrims, in this land where we are nearly deprived of the company of the saints. Only now and then one that is mourning over the darkness and death that prevails in the land. Nearly all are wedded to the world and their idols. We feel the need of much heavenly wisdom and sustaining grace. We shall return in the spring, if the Lord will.

Yours in the gospel hope and love,

BRO. GRANT:—I am surprised to see the opposition in some quarters to the present light on the time of our Savior's coming. Is it because of the weakness of the EVIDENCE, or for the want of faith in Bible testimony? I hope not the latter, although I fear it may be true, at least, in some cases. In reference to the former, although some may regard the evidence as weak, to my mind it is strong and convincing. And I believe God has raised up Bro. Thurman, as his honored instrument, to give the church light on this deeply interesting and important subject. I have been thrown upon my back (so to speak) in uncertainty and darkness, the past twenty-one years, on definite time, but believing God would give his church light on the time of the advent before the Savior should come, I have been waiting for it to break forth; now I hail its dawning with joy and gratitude.

Some believe before the Lord shall come the church will know the time of his coming, yet they are opposed to the present light on the subject. If (as many have expressed themselves) it has been a mystery how so much time could have elapsed since '43 till now, with the supposed former light on the prophetic periods, should we not expect now after so much time has elapsed, we must be very near their end? If it is not time now to look for something definite as to our "whereabouts" in prophetic chronology, when shall we?

Some think there will be prophecies fulfilled of so striking and manifest character, that their fulfillment will throw such light on the prophetic periods, that the church will know their exact termination. While there may be no doubt that future developments in the progress of events may strengthen our faith in the nearness of the advent, yet, it appears to me, the exact termination of the prophetic periods must be known from some correct data, where we must start from, in their computation. In other words, if we have no reliable years in the past, as a starting point, we cannot know when the periods will end. But I believe we have now data from which to compute the prophetic periods far superior to anything we have had in the past; but if we shut our eyes to it, or refuse to see, we may grope in darkness, as blind men at noon-day.

If God in his providence gives us light, and we turn it into darkness, we shall be left in a lamentable condition. In giving an explanation for the passing of the time in '43 and '44, we said it resulted from following in the track of learned men, by believing historians and authors that were merely fallible; and we told the truth in the matter, for we commenced the "2300 years of Dan. 8: 14, 457 years B. C., (the date given by those who followed "Ptolemy's Canon,") in the seventh of Artaxerxes, king of Persia," supposing the "commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," Dan. 9: 25, was to be reckoned from that date, when in fact there was no commandment given in that year to restore and build Jerusalem. For it was to go forth just 483 years, UNTO Messiah, the Prince, that is, unto his BIRTH. And we know that Cyrus, king of Persia, was the only man that acted by divine authority in using THE commandment to restore and build Jerusalem. And, moreover, no other man ever issued any commandment to restore and build Jerusalem but Cyrus; neither Darius, nor Artaxerxes, originated any commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, but acted in what they did by virtue of what king Cyrus had done BEFORE in the first year of his reign. These facts may be seen by reference to Isa. 44: 28, and 45: 13; Ezra first chapter and onward; Josephus, book 11, chapters 1, 2, 3 and 4; also in 1 Esdras, second chapter.

Now, as we have seen, the commandment of the God of heaven went forth, through the instrumentality of king Cyrus, for the restoration of the Jews from the seventy years captivity in Babylon and to restore and build Jerusalem; and as it was to be just 483 years to the birth of Christ, we are on our feet again, and may understand our "whereabouts" in prophetic chronology, and learn the reason of the past failure in definite time for the second advent.

For one, I am determined to follow the light that we now have, praising the Lord for it, and humbly relying upon him for an increase as we may need it. Yours, etc.,

Newton Falls. L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

P. S. I thank the Lord that we have one paper in the East, and one in the West, that will give the household meat in due season; that value God's word more than reputation, or anything else. May the Lord keep them from error, and increase them in light and knowledge of the truth, for the benefit of the household of faith. L. T. C.

BRO. GRANT:—The meetings still continue here. We have held them two weeks every evening except one. The few last meetings have continued from half past six until ten o'clock and even later. Large hall and crowded. The interest increases instead of growing less. Twenty new ones were forward on the anxious seat last evening, beside others who rose in their seats, confessing their sins and backslidings, requesting prayers. A good number have given their hearts to God, both sinners and backsliders. I have not witnessed so much of God's Spirit and power for years. Old grey-haired fathers yield to its strivings. Parents and children seem to be in earnest in preparing for the coming judgment, so near. We preach a coming King ere the close of 1868. And God has thus shown his favor. The interest is spreading. We expect, the Lord willing, to commence a protracted meeting at River Point, Sunday, Feb. 26th. We are on our journey home. Glory, Hallelujah! Pray for us, ye praying ones.

Natick, R. I. H. K. FLAGG.

From a German Baptist.

A correspondent in Harleyville, Pennsylvania, writes:—"I have been a reader of the Scriptures from my youth; am a member of that branch of the church of God usually called "Dunkkards," or German Baptists, and of late a convert to the doctrine of the personal coming and visible reign of Christ on earth. I have a great desire to read some of your books and tracts on these subjects, and therefore enclose $—, for which please send me the Voice of the Church on the Second Coming of Christ, etc., etc." A. Obituaries.

ARTHUR MCNEIL.

Died in Chapinville, Ct., Jan. 27th, of brain disease, Arthur D., only child of Harry C. and Mary H. McNeil, aged two months and seven days.

The parents with the child left home about twelve o'clock on Jan. 27th, to visit the parents of Sister McNeil. The child appeared to be in good health when they left home, but before they had arrived at their journey's end they discovered that the child was dead.

The funeral sermon was preached Feb. 5th, at Bro. Ackerman's, Sharon, Ct., by Bro. Chas. Goodrich. STEPHEN DUVALL.

HANNAH JACKSON.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in East Wallingford, Feb. 5th, 1865, Hannah Jackson, wife of Sanford Jackson, aged thirty-nine years.

We have the evidence that she died the death of the righteous. By request of the deceased, Eld. D. Bosworth spoke words of comfort to the mourners on the funeral occasion. WM. JACKSON.

LOAMMI WILBER HAMILTON.

Died at Springville, Wis., Jan. 24th, 1865, Loammi Wilber Hamilton, only child of Seth and Catharine Hamilton, aged one year and nine months.

May God bless this affliction to their spiritual and eternal good. S. K. GIBSON.

FRANKLIN THOMAS.

Died in Fairhaven, Mass., Feb. 15th, 1865, Frankie S. Thomas, only son of Mrs. H. Annie Thomas, aged thirteen years, six months, eight days. H. A. THOMAS.

Victor Emmanuel was on a visit to Florence and had an enthusiastic reception.

The Italian Senate had adjourned sine die.

A ministerial crisis had been reported, but it was over.

Turin was considerably excited, but there was no disturbance.

Southampton, Feb. 8th.

Parliament was opened Feb. 7 by Royal Commission. The speech said her Majesty remained steadfastly neutral between the contending parties in America and would rejoice at a friendly reconciliation. The Queen has had great satisfaction in giving her sanction to a conference meeting of delegates from Canada assembled at Quebec. Resolutions were adopted for a closer union of those provinces under a central government. If they are approved by the Provincial Legislature a bill will be laid before Parliament for carrying this important measure into effect.

The Moniteur says: "All reports in reference to the cession made to France by Mexico of Sonora and other provinces are absolute fabrications."

The abolition of capital punishment has been proposed in Italy.

The King of Italy will visit Milan.

The eruption of Etna continues regularly, without damaging the villages.

☞ A company of forty-three women recently attempted to flee from the bonds of Mormonism in Utah, but they were overtaken and carried back to their masters. It is said that the females in Utah are becoming so determined to escape from their degrading bondage, that a crisis in Mormon affairs will necessarily come soon.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Feb. 15. The Tribune's Savannah correspondent called attention to the painful fact that there are 2500 of Sherman's army in the hospitals of that city, weak, racked and wrecked, suffering and dying from fever, and wounds, and chronic diarrhœa, piteously begging their surgeons to supply them with something they can eat. But their surgeons are unable to supply them, and report that 50 per cent. of the many deaths are due to a want of proper kinds of nourishment. What makes the matter worse, is that these poor fellows have heard that shiploads of fresh and varied provisions have been sent from the North to those who have brought them to the condition they are in. The agents of the Sanitary Commission have been applied to as being likely to have the kinds of food and nourishment needed, and all the satisfaction obtained was that, though the Commission had plenty, transportation could not be secured to send it to Savannah. Yet speculators without number have been able to secure all the transportation they needed to bring their goods to Savannah and sell them at exorbitant prices.

New York, Feb. 16. Gen. Terry and Admiral Porter threatened Wilmington on Saturday morning; our troops advanced from Fort Fisher. The colored troops under Payne led the advance. The rebels were driven into the main works, and we gained a few miles more in ground. The rebels lost 100 prisoners. Union loss 60 or 70.

Admiral Porter co-operated and gave Fort Anderson a most vigorous shelling, which was but feebly responded to.

Additional evidence of the evacuation of Mobile has been received by the transport Continental. It was evacuated on the 14th of January. An order was given to fire the city and some 15,000 bales of cotton on appearance of the Yankees, but the order will not be obeyed.

Advices from the South state that our forces have made a lodgment within two miles of Charleston, and Gen. Howard is advancing along the Savannah Railroad. He has captured a strong line of works on the Salkehatchie, and his right wing was moving on the interior. The Edisto River had been crossed by Slocum, and Orangeburg and Branchville flanked. Beauregard and the remnant of Hardee's army is said to be opposing Sherman.

New York, Feb. 16. The World's special Washington dispatch says a bearer of dispatches from Gen. Sherman, who was ten miles from Branchville, reports that he was overcoming all obstacles.

On Friday last Gen. Schimelfinning crossed from Folly Island with a small force and captured some rifle pits and many prisoners.

Gen. Gilmore has succeeded Gen. Foster, the latter being disabled by a wound.

New York, Feb. 16. The World's correspondence shows that Howard's corps, in its advance, was obliged to pass through 40 miles of swamps of a most dismal character against Hardee's army, which they constantly pressed back by vigorous charges. These charges the chivalry could not stand. The losses on either side were small. The country was found to be depopulated, excepting of old and helpless negroes who were starving. The first stand of the rebels was at Salkahatchie River on the opposite side, who showed themselves in force. Aided by a flanking movement our troops with fixed bayonets charged across the stream, five feet deep, in the face of a heavy fire, and wrested the position from the rebels, who fled in disorder toward Branchville, leaving their guns unspiked. We lost 150 killed and wounded.

Philadelphia, Feb. 16. A special dispatch to the Bulletin from Washington to-day says: "Richmond papers of the 15th indicate that Sherman's advanced cavalry is actually as far north as Florence, the second important railroad junction on the borders of North Carolina. They also announce that all telegraphic and railroad communication with Charleston is destroyed, thus showing that Sherman's left column must have struck the Northeastern Railroad, running from Florence to Charleston.

Richmond papers of the 14th, received to-day, show that the question of arming the slaves has been temporarily laid aside for the present."

New York, Feb. 17. The advance of Shermen's left wing was seventeen miles north of Branchville and fifty miles from Columbia. The whole right wing was in the immediate front of Charleston, two miles distant.

Richmond papers of the 14th say Sherman's cavalry had reached the Northeastern Railroad and severed the last link betwween Richmond and Charleston. His troops are also believed to be near Florence.

New York, Feb. 17. Late rebel papers show that their new currency is considered of less value than the old. There is no money even of this worthless character in the Treasury to settle the immense outstanding accounts, and the taxes are believed to be as heavy as the people can stand.

The papers also have accounts of rebel military movements in North Carolina, and of preparations to oppose Sherman.

The Dispatch of the 14th says all communication with Charleston and Augusta is cut off, and nothing is known of the situation of those places.

The Enquirer of the 14th says Grant appears to be preparing to push forward his lines still further, having by his recent movement advanced them three miles west of Petersburg.

War Department, Washington, Feb. 18, 1865.

To Maj. Gen. Dix:

The announcement of the occupation of Columbia, S. C., by Gen. Sherman, and the probable evacuation of Charleston, has been communicated to the Department in the following telegrams just received from Gen. Grant:

E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

City Point, Va. Feb. 18, 4.45 P. M.

To Hon. E. M. Stanton, War Department:

The Richmond Dispatch of this morning says Gen. Sherman entered Columbia, S. C., yesterday morning, and its fall necessitates, it presumes, the fall of Charleston, which, it thinks, is already being evacuated.

(Signed) U. S. GRANT, Lieut. General.

City Point, Va., Feb. 18, 1865.

To Hon. E. M. Stanton:

The following is taken from to-day's Richmond Dispatch:

"The Fall of Columbia.

Columbia has fallen. Sherman marched into and took possession of the city yesterday morning. The intelligence was communicated yesterday by Gen. Beauregard in an official dispatch. Columbia is situated on the north bank of the Congaree River, just below the confluence of the Saluda and Broad Rivers. From Gen. Beauregard's dispatch it appears that on Thursday evening the enemy approached the south bank of the Congaree and threw a number of shells into the city. During the night they moved up the river, and yesterday morning forded the Saluda and Broad Rivers. While they were crossing the rivers, our troops, under Beauregard, evacuated Columbia. The enemy soon after took possession.

Through private sources we learn that two days ago, when it was decided not to attempt a defense of the city, a large quantity of medical stores, which it was thought impossible to remove, were destroyed. The female employees in the Treasury Department had been previously sent off to Charlotte, N. C. We presume the Treasury lithographic establishment was also removed, although as to this we have no information.

The fall of Columbia necessitates, we presume, the evacuation of Charleston, which we think likely is already in process of evacuation. It is impossible to say where next Sherman will direct his columns. The general opinion is that he will go to Charleston and establish a base there, but we confess we do not see what need he has of a base. It is to be presumed that he is subsisting on the country, and he has had no battles to exhaust his ammunition. Before leaving Savannah he declared his intention to march to Columbia, thence to Augusta and to Charleston. This was uttered as a boast and to hide his designs. We are disposed to believe that he will next strike Charlotte, which is 100 miles north of Columbia, on the Charlotte and Columbia Railroad, or at Florence, S. C., the junction of the Columbia and Wilmington Railroad, some 90 miles east of Columbia.

There was a report yesterday that Augusta had also been taken by the enemy. This we do not believe. We have reason to feel assured that nearly the whole of Sherman's army is at Columbia and that the report that Schofield was advancing on Augusta was untrue."

"The Charleston Mercury of Saturday announces a brief suspension of that paper, with a view to its temporary removal to another point. This is rendered necessary by the progress of military events, cutting it off from the mail facilities for distributing its paper to a large portion of its subscribers, while the lack of transportation renders its supply of paper precarious.

Semmes has been made Rear Admiral and will take command of the James river squadron."

(Signed) U. S. GRANT, Lieut. General.

The Herald's Fort Fisher correspondence says a courier from Sherman arrived at Smithville on the 12th, announcing the capture of Branchville after three days' severe fighting. The courier came across the country. Wilmington papers of the 9th confirm the statement.

CITY POINT, Feb. 20, '65.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

The following paragraphs are extracted from the Richmond papers of to-day.

"We now know that Charleston was evacuated on Tuesday last, and that on Friday the enemy took possession of Columbia. It is reported that our forces under Beauregard are moving in the direction of Charlotte."

There is much suffering in Richmond among the poorer classes, they being unable to pay the exorbitant prices asked for the necessary articles of life. Flour brings $700 per barrel, and sugar is worth $20 per pound Confederate money. Many of the working men who get but seven dollars and fifty cents per day are unable to pay for boarding, and are compelled to rely upon the soup houses for something to eat.

CHARLESTON, Feb. 20, 12.40 P. M.

To Major General Dix:

The evacuation of Charleston by the rebels is announced in the following telegram just received from General Grant: E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

CITY POINT, Feb. 20.

Hon. Edwin M. Stanton:

The following dispatch has just been received.

U. S. GRANT, Lieut. General.

The Richmond Examiner of to-day, just received, says Charleston was evacuated on Tuesday last. (Signed) G. WEITZEL, Major General.

Washington, Feb. 20. The following dispatch was received at the Navy Department:

"Flagship Harvest Moon, Rebellion Roads, Charleston Harbor, Feb. 18, 1865, via. Fortress Monroe, Feb. 20, 7 P. M.

To Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy:

Sir: Charleston was abandoned this morning by the rebels. I am now on my way to the city.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant, JOHN A. DAHLGREN, Rear Admiral."

New York, Feb. 14. The steamer Eagle brings Havana dates of the 11th:

Private letters from Mexico say that Gen. Bazaine has been defeated three several times at Oaxaca with heavy loss. On one occasion he found himself almost surrounded by masked batteries, which did fearful execution upon his army. Gen. Diaz has 12,000 men, and 100 pieces of artillery. His force is constantly increasing. It was reported at Vera Cruz that Bazaine is seriously wounded, and that 700 of the Foreign Legion had gone over to the Liberals.

The Liberals are increasing in strength, and, it is said, now number 60,000. They have the entire State of Jaliso. Indeed, the empire consists only of Matamoras, Tuspan, Tampico, Vera Cruz, Alvarado and the city of Mexico. Authority is maintained in these places only by frequent executions of innocent Mexicans. The Mexicans had gained a victory at Soquite.

The cidevant Duke Gwin has left Havana for Europe.

New York, Feb. 18. Details of the Mexican news show active fighting in the interior between the Juarists and Imperialists. The Juarists kill all the French troops caught by them. Several towns are threatened by the Juarists, and the campaign into Oaxaca by the French General Bazaine gives rise to much anxiety, his advance guard having been defeated. The Mexican treasury deficit is twenty million dollars. The Pope's encyclical letter has not been circulated in Mexico.

THE FIRE IN PHILADELPHIA.—The fire originated in Blackburn & Co.'s sheds for storing refined oil in bond. Two thousand barrels have been destroyed. It was insured mostly in New York. Forty-seven dwellings, mostly three story, were burned. Six bodies have been recovered; others are still missing.

The oil that escaped from the burning barrels poured into North street and down to Federal, filling the entire street with a lake of fire, and igniting the houses upon both sides of North street for two squares, and carrying devastation into Washington, Ellsworth and Federal streets, both above and below 9th street.

Fully five squares of houses were on fire at once. The scene was one to make the stoutest heart quail. Men, women and children were literally roasted alive in the streets.

Capt. Joseph H. Ware, five daughters and two sons met with a sad misfortune. They all succeeded in getting into the street from their house just as they left their bed, but found themselves in a river of fire. The family became scattered. Mrs. Ware had her youngest child in her arms and was endeavoring to escape, when she fell, and both herself, the child and another daughter, fifteen of age, was burned to death in the street.

Capt. Ware and his two sons escaped, but three other daughters are missing. One of the bodies recovered is supposed to be that of James Gibbons. It is thought that several other persons besides the six taken out, have perished, and are still under the ruins.

GOLD.—At the evening exchange in New York last night (Feb. 20th), gold sold after call at 198 1-2, the demand being weak.

ITEMS.

☞ An order has lately been issued from the Sublime Porte to widen and pave the streets of Jerusalem. The decree is accepted by the Jews as a sign of their Messiah's coming, fulfilling the prophetic command to make broad the ways, and gather up the stones.

☞ A Cleveland, Ohio, paper says that eleven boys were turned out of one of the district schools in the city for being drunk. Inquiry showed that nearly half the boys at school, between the years of ten and eighteen, were in the regular habit of frequenting the low groggeries in the city.

☞ A grand scheme of a lottery for the salvation of souls has just been got up in Mexico. The price of a ticket is two and a half pence—half a real—and the fortunate winner of prizes becomes the possessor of masses which will expedite his own soul to heaven.

☞ It takes over a week for the mails to travel from Richmond to Charleston, two weeks from Richmond to Montgomery, Ala., fifteen days from Richmond to Mobile—a longer period than it takes for a letter to go from New York or Boston to London.

☞ Two hundred and thirty-four years ago, England was declared a Republic by an act of Parliament passed 21st May, 1640. The act has never been repealed, but still remains on the statute book of England to this day.

☞ One hundred years, nearly, having transpired since American Methodism began, that denomination is taking measures for an impressive celebration of the event.

☞ It is said that the severe weather of the present winter has killed nearly all the peach buds in New England.

☞ Charles Benson found, by actual measurement, that the ice in Lake Erie was 31 inches in thickness.

☞ A tunnel is to be dug under the Severn River at Bristol, at an estimated cost of £750,000.

☞ Meade's army now stretches along a line twenty-three miles long.

Minnesota Quarterly Conference.

Our winter quarterly conference will be held in the Ramer school-house, Utica, Winona County, Minn., commencing on Friday, the 24th of Feb., at half past six o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath following, day and evening. Preaching by different ministering brethren. All who love God and the salvation of sinners, and desire to know and understand the truth, and be prepared for the day of his coming, are invited to attend. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, but exhort one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching." Pray for God's blessing upon the meeting.

In behalf of the church, PHILIP RAMER, Sec.

Conference.

The Maine Western Central Quarterly Conference will be holden with the brethren of Wayne and East Livermore, commencing Thursday, March 2d, at half-past six o'clock P. M., at the Wellington school-house, near Strickland's Ferry. Brethren coming by railroad will leave the cars at Strickland's Ferry. Brn. Cyrus Bartlett, Nahum Bishop, H. Gray, and C. F. Roberts, will see that all are provided with suitable accommodations. Ministers and brethren of other quarterly conferences are cordially invited to attend. Come, brethren and sisters, let us meet in the unity and spirit of our blessed Master, endeavoring to be faithful during the few days of pilgrimage that remain to the people of God. D. W. GRIFFIN.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The second quarterly session of the New Hampshire State Conference will be held in Concord, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, March 16th, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see a large gathering, both of preachers belonging to this conference, and of brethren and sisters. Come in the spirit and meekness of Christ, prepared to labor for the salvation of souls, that great good may be done. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Notice.

Meetings are held regularly every Sunday at West Winsted, Ct., in Camp's Block.

Protracted Meeting at River Point, R. I.

A protracted meeting will commence at River Point, R. I., Sunday, Feb. 26th, and continue Sundays and evenings as long as the interest demands. Let all who love God, and all who want to love him, come and participate in the blessings of the meeting. H. K. FLAGG. E. BELLOWS.

Meetings in Burlington, Vt.

I expect to hold religious meetings in the old Baptist church, at Burlington, Vt., commencing Tuesday evening, Feb. 28th, and continuing over the following Sunday; it may be longer. Brethren in the vicinity of B., come and hear and help.

D. T. TAYLOR.

Meetings in Burlington, Me.

Conference meetings will be held on the 4th Saturday in each month at Burlington, Me., Folsom's Ridge. Preaching brethren and others are invited to attend. SAMUEL HAMMONS.

Notice.

A series of meetings will commence at Manchester, N. H., Thursday, March 2d, and continue over the Lord's day, and as much longer as thought best. Bro. Edwin Burnham is expected to speak the word of life to us. A. J. MAYHEW.

Conference.

There will be a conference holden in the Union meeting-house, Round Pond, Me., commencing Feb. 16th, to continue over the following Sabbath. STEPHEN HARDING.

Maine Second Advent Tract Society.

S. K. PARTRIDGE, R. R. YORK, I. C. WELLCOME, Board of Managers.

I. C. WELLCOME, Secretary and Business Agent.

ISAAC WIGHT, Treasurer.

It was voted that all orders for tracts and books for distribution by this Society be addressed to the Agent, I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me., who will supply them as fast as the means are furnished.

All our ministers will receive subscriptions for the Tract Fund, and they purpose to raise $200, or more, for free distribution in Maine this year.

I. C. WELLCOME, Agent.

Agency for Maine.

Having been solicited to take the agency for Maine of Bro. Himes' "New Chart of Daniel and John," I would say to any and all in Maine who wish it, I am prepared to furnish it at the regular retail price, $5.00, and to preachers (or others who wish them to sell) at a liberal discount. Address orders to I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.

Elder Thomas Smith, Bangor, Me., has on hand for sale H. L. Hastings' "Signs of the Times," with an assortment of his various Tracts; also, the Tracts by Miles Grant, on "The Soul," "The Spirit, and "What is Man?" and other Advent tracts.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

THE PHENOMENON IN GREENBRIER CO., VA.

From behind the hills slow rose the sun,
To welcome the bashful day,
Lifting the purple mists that hung
O'er valleys that low beneath them lay.

When lo! o'er the vales' soft velvet green,
Came trooping a mighty throng
Of airy forms; like men they seem,
Nor fife, nor drum, nor trumpet song.

Silent and swift their movements are;
To the north, to the north, they haste;
Their orderly ranks no tired ones mar,
Not a moment in rest they waste.

In softest robes, both white and fine,
Is this strangest army drest;
In their downcast hands no weapons shine,
On their heads no warrior's crest.

Lo! mothers, sisters, wives—all ye,
The light of whose homes has fled,
Do not your eyes some loved one see,
Whom you and our country mourn dead?

With joyful hearts behold your own
In spotless pureness clad;
Behold, in bitter tears you've sown;
Now reap, rejoice, be glad.

No more the weary march for them,
No more the hateful camp;
On wave, or mount, or noisome fen,
No more the painful tramp.

But peaceful comes this loyal band,
A noble, heavenly host;
To look again on northern homes,
The homes they love the most.

NUMBER EIGHTEEN.

Passing the Jordan.

The hosts of Israel were encamped upon the banks of Jordan, whose waters, swollen by the rains and the melting snows of the distant Lebanon, went surging by with a wild, tumultuous roar. This swollen stream was the last bulwark that shut the expectant tribes from out the Canaan that had so long haunted all their dreams of the future. Forty years of wandering in the desert had passed since that sublime exodus from the slavery of Pharaoh; but of all those men who marched from bondage into freedom, and walked through the wave-walled path of the Red Sea. two only survived. Of all that host of men Caleb and Joshua alone were destined to pass the river waves of Jordan. They had proved true in every emergency. They only brought back a goodly report of the promised land, among the spies who went out to view it. As they gathered the delicious fruits of the valley of Eschol, they felt that the promise was sure, and that they were able to go up and possess the land. They trusted, too, that the God of Abraham would guide them to the inheritance of those beautiful hills and valleys they had discovered, even if they were guarded by the stalwart sons of Anak, and the mighty giants of the hills.

All the men who had sinned and murmured in the long years of passage, had fallen in the way, while their children had grown up and taken their places, and were marshalled at last upon the borders of the pleasant inheritance promised to the faithful.

They who had groaned in bondage and rejoiced in freedom; they who had traversed the desert sands and trembled before the thunders of Sinai, when Jehovah shook the earth with his voice,—all were slumbering in the graves of the wilderness, or had fallen victims of transgression. Even Aaron, the high priest, who had officiated before the mercy-seat so long; and Miriam, the prophetess, who led the Hebrew maidens in the triumphant song of deliverance,—had died before entering the land.

And, last of all, Moses, the life-long leader, was only allowed to view the landscape from afar on the towering crags of Nebo's highest hill, and then had been buried by Heaven's unseen messengers far from the eyes of mortals. Another leader had been consecrated as captain of the hosts to drive out the wicked nations. The mantle of Moses had fallen upon Joshua.

At last the weary journey was over; the barren wilds of the sandy wastes were no more to meet the eye; but new scenes of plenty, sweet valleys filled with fruit, and the murmur of streams, hills clothed with verdant pastures for the flocks of the shepherd, were soon to fill the vision and cheer the heart. The note of preparation was sounded, and the priests bore the ark of the covenant before the people. When their feet touched the water, the swelling flood of Jordan was stopped in its swift career, and heaped its waters on high, leaving its further course to the sea of the plains a dry channel. There in the dry water course, where the flood had so lately surged along, rested the ark of God, while the people passed on to the plains beyond. Twelve stones were placed in the spot where the ark rested, and the same number in the camp, to remind future generations of the marvelous doings of the Lord for Israel.

When all had passed, and the ark had been moved to its new position, the pent-up flood moved majestically onward over the pathway of the people, as if its flow had never been suspended. Gilgal was made the camp of the tribes, from whence they were to go forth to conquer. There they began to subsist on the bread and fruit of Canaan; the manna, that mysterious bread of heaven, no longer fell around their camp; they no longer had need of it, for a bounteous land smiled around them.

They had entered upon a new scene; the Lord was about to display his power in the overthrow of their enemies. There in the camp of Gilgal Joshua paused, and on the threshold of coming events he sanctified the people and celebrated the passover—that terrible souvenir of the last night in Egypt.

THE BREAD OF LIFE.

The food which is taken into the system becomes, through the processes of digestion and nutrition, a part of the system itself. And we could not live without food. The Bread that came down from heaven must be so received as to be in us as really as our natural food. We cannot have eternal life without eating of that bread. It seems useless to explain what is meant by eating the flesh, and drinking the blood of the Redeemer, for all christians know by experience more about it than language can express. We are in Christ, and he is in us; and the more we grow in grace, the brighter grows the evidence of this fact. Bro. C. B., of Carthage, desires an exposition of those passages in the sixth chapter of John, from the 47th verse onward, that speak of the Bread, and the effect of receiving it—eternal life. I shall be glad to read such an exposition from some one of the able writers for the Crisis.

For the World's Crisis.

A DONATION VISIT.

We read, "Be not conformed to this world"; also, "Be not overcharged with surfeiting,"—eating and drinking with the drunken. That the church is rapidly conforming to the spirit, pleasures and fashions of the world, no one can deny. I report one among many that I have witnessed. I might fill volumes. Reader, I speak what I do know, and testify what I have seen of these religious sprees and church frolics. The most alarming feature is that the most prominent of all denominations lead the way.

I was lecturing in the village of C——. A public invitation was given for all, both rich and poor, to attend this so-called religious festival; "and if you have nothing to bring, come and enjoy the feast with us." To make it more interesting, the old people were to attend in the afternoon and the young people in the evening. I went into the public hall in the afternoon. As I entered I was asked my business by the circuit minister. I told him I had come to see and hear, not to feast with them; when he told me very abruptly that I had no business there, and took me by the shoulders and marched me out of the house. I thought of what Christ said would take place just previous to his coming,—"smite his fellow servant, and to eat and drink with the drunken."

I went directly to as poor a man as there was in the village, told him of the entertainment, and wished him to attend, not telling him how they had used me. I told him that, according to the notice, he could get his dinner, and perhaps get something for his hungry children, at least some of the fragments.

I tried to get in again in the evening, but the door-keeper told me I could not be admitted, for I was one that troubled Israel. The door-keeper would not keep me there, nor at his own dwelling. I went directly to the hotel, asked the landlord if he would entertain a stranger without pay, which he willingly did. In the morning, after thanking the gentleman for his kindness, I went to this man's house and asked him for my breakfast, "for I was six miles from home." (I go the old-fashioned way, Bunyan-like.) While at breakfast, his wife asked him if he admired the large fleshy woman (one of the guests at the spree)? "She weighs over two hundred." "Is n't she a cracker?" the man said jokingly in reply. I reproved him as well as I could in Bro. Paul's words, and after praying with them I left. When I have come near that place since, I have wept over it in seeing that inscription shining out in the whited synagogues, their large bells and high steeples—"To the unknown God."

I meet with considerable opposition among all orthodox church members; but I have not gone to the right or left of what I consider the path of duty. In conclusion, I believe these festivals are wrong in principle, unscriptural, and contrary to gospel purity and sobriety. "To the law and testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Nothing is more contrary to the spirit of the gospel than levity. This building up churches on wit and humor is not gospel. It may succeed for a time, but, depend upon it, by and by God will blow upon it, and there will be a howling among the hirelings and shepherds and principals of the flock.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling,
To be living is sublime."

For the World's Crisis.

A BETTER REFUGE THAN THAT OF "CELESTA."

Jesus, the only and true head of "the general assembly and church of the first born, which are written in heaven," has given her the only and true refuge in these her last-day perils. "Hear him": "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

This is his closing up exhortation after having given the signs that were to precede his second coming, as recorded in the thrilling narrative of "Luke, the beloved physician," in his twenty-first chapter. Can any thing be more to the point than this exhortation, at this time, to the saints of God? Here is a literal "Thus saith the Lord," that insures a worthiness "to stand before the Son of man." Is not this what we all want? Do we want any thing more? Can we have any thing more? If the Judge tells us what to do, to stand in the day of trial, will it not be safe to follow his advice and risk all with him? To me, this is safe and wise. I have made up my mind to do it.

I will now make my confession to the dear saints of God and ask their prayers. The apostle says, "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed."

A few months ago I unwittingly slid from this rock—a plain "Thus saith the Lord"—and fell into the quicksands on the subject of God's everlasting kingdom upon the earth. This was done, not in carelessness, nor in prayerlessness; for I can say in truth that I never sought the Lord in greater earnestness nor constancy than I did to know the truth on this point. I also searched the Scriptures with all diligence in prayers and fastings, night and day, with tears. Notwithstanding all this, I sank deeper and deeper in the yielding sands.

The secret was this. I listened to a theory whose basis stood upon a sheer hypothesis. The fair superstructure, in the distance, which "lends enchantment to the view," so dazzled my vision that I forgot to scrutinize its foundation. Faithful watchmen raised the alarm, but my eyes were so "holden" that I could see no danger. By and by signs of crumbling at the base showed themselves even to me.

A few daring souls stepped upon it to try its strength, while hundreds were looking on to see the result. To our astonished eyes it proved a failure. It sunk beneath them. It could not sustain the weight of half a score, much less the promised "hundred and forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads." Then it was that I could see, for the first time, that not one "Thus saith the Lord" was underneath the whole foundation. One great assumption was its only basis.

This setting up a theory based upon the imagination of man's heart, and then building the word of the Lord around it, is the fruitful source of all the mischief in the religious world. It is fatal ground. It is to be where prayers and tears will not avail us, unless our eyes are open to come up on the rock—the plain word of God. It is the ground once occupied by the tempter in Eden's bowers. It is the ground from which has sprung the great hypothesis of Christendom—the immortality of the soul, out of which has arisen the hydra of modern Spiritualism, before which modern Christendom is melting away as wax before the fire.

But I am happy to state, through grace, that I am again upon the rock; and it is written, Let the inhabitant of the rock sing. My heart does sing for joy at its deliverance.

The plain word of the Lord on which my faith now rests for the ushering in of the times of restitution is this: "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—Acts 3: 20, 21. No restitution until the Restorer comes. O how firm is the footing here! It forever cuts off this world of mysticism that threatens to deceive, if it were possible, the very elect.

I wish now, by this epistle, to forever take my influence from the side of mysticism in every shape and form. I think it due, however, to myself, and to the grace of God toward me, to state here, that all I ever wrote on that side was written weeks and months before it appeared in the public print, "owing to unavoidable delays"; and all except a bare note of a few lines came out weeks and even months after my own eyes were open to see its fallacy; and I am inclined to think this to be the case with very much that has filled the two last issues.

Private letters have been made public to the very great mortification of others as well as in my own case. But drowning men will catch at straws, and so it has been in this case; every thing has been seized upon, and made to sustain a sinking cause.

To such straits are persons driven who leave the plain word of the Lord. I pity them, for I know how honestly it may be done.

Speak kindly to the erring, brethren, "considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted."

In much christian love to all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and in truth, I remain as ever your unworthy sister in Christ,

"STRAIGHT PATHS."

Editors Pacific:—May not the following explain why it is that so many of the children of "pious parents" are not christians?

The waning light of a Sabbath evening fell on the open leaves of a large, old Bible. Young fingers had turned over the leaves, and those same young fingers had grown old, and bony, and withered, and turned them over then. Young eyes had spelled the words, and those same eyes had peered dimly through spectacles to read its blessed truths. Glad young hearts had felt the preciousness of its reading, and hearts that had found earth's promises to fail, had found here a resting place.

There were young eyes that were bending over it now, and a young heart that was seeking to know the will of Jesus concerning her life.

The young girl sat pondering these words—they were marked faintly with a pencil-line; "And make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way."

"I have been turned out of the way often and often, and by such little things. Mother is a christian, and it was only this morning I enjoyed the sermon so much, and when we were coming out of church mother said it was so long, and the minister's voice so unpleasant, that it took away all the good; and last week, after I had read about Mr. Muller's giving up all for God and trusting in him, I wanted to wear my old muslin and give the five dollars father gave me to old Mrs. Howe, to buy wine and jelly for her; but father said, 'That man is a fanatic—he can't expect everybody to have the faith that he has;' and that froze my heart right up, and that isn't half that everybody does. I don't know of any body that makes 'straight paths,' and sometimes I think I won't try either. It's only the good books and papers that keep me on; and perhaps the very people that write, walk crookedly too."

A boy's form emerged from the shrubbery, and a boy of fourteen years ran up the steps and sat down beside his sister.

"How beautiful everything is in the quiet and starlight!"

"Yes, it is beautiful," said the boy. "Are you glad you are a christian?" Charlie looked up into his sister's face. He did not need words.

"It seems to me a blessed thing—something everybody longs for; but no one ever becomes a real, Bible christian. I don't believe there is such a thing. There might have been when Christ was on the earth, but seeing is believing, and I shan't believe until I do see. If father really believes I'm going to be lost, why don't he tell me so? He never said I must trust in Jesus to be saved. He says so in prayer-meeting," Charlie went on, "but I might talk in prayer-meeting as well as he does, or anybody else. I wish I could, and I'd make the ears of the hypocrites tingle. Why don't he tell me so—and mother too? When I was little, she used to say at night, 'Don't forget to say your prayers,' and now I'm getting big, I believe she's ashamed; ain't that true, now, Lucy? Did she ever ask you to be a christian?"

"No," said Lucy, sadly.

"And then as to Sunday-school teachers—I never had one that did me a bit of good; they talk in a cold, hard-set way. Why don't they say, 'Jesus died for you, Charlie; He loves you!' Why don't people act and talk as if religion was alive?—they act as if the Bible was a story-book, and God was dead."

"But Charlie, you and I needn't."

"I don't know why we should keep straighter than other people. I'm just discouraged. I don't see why I should sign the pledge when the minister drinks cider and makes currant wine. That's a beginning of evil; now, isn't it?"

"Yes, that isn't keeping in the straight path."

"And when I try to keep from swearing I hear christians swear every day. O no, it's nothing to say 'What under the heavens,' and 'heaven knows,' and 'confounded!' instead of what boys say. Now, what is the difference?" asked Charlie, excitedly.

"I don't believe God sees any difference."

"I think it is a great deal better to swear outright. I should think Satan would be ashamed of such followers. Father told me not to whistle 'Dixie,' and he was reading the Sunday Herald at the time. He's a christian!"

"I know it Charlie. This morning I was trying to think Sunday thoughts, and mother called me to button her glove, and all the time she was talking about bonnet strings, and the color of my gloves. Then aunt Mary talked about the dust all the way to church, and the new church stair carpet all the way home."

"And mother takes the Atlantic, but she can't take the Guardian; so she takes the Messenger, because it's cheap, and wants to have one religious paper in the house; and she asked me to read it, and I won't; it don't do her any good to read it, and of course it wouldn't me.

"And aunt Mary went to the theatre last night, and taught in Sunday-school to-day."

"I'd either give up one or the other. And she was reading Miss Edgeworth's tales this afternoon, and she'll read a chapter in the Bible before she goes to bed. O, christians! christians!

"And she and mother never go to the weekly prayer-meeting—they have to sew or are too tired."

"I don't see how they can expect us to do right. It's the christians that keep us out of the way; we don't expect anything from other people."

"What is a christian, Charlie?"

"One who loves God better than he loves the world, the flesh, or the devil."

"No one loves the devil," said Lucy, smiling.

"Well, they serve him—a good many christians do. I guess he sets christians in the way to keep us out."

"But, Charlie, if our eyes are opened, we needn't follow them. The Bible can be a real Bible to us."

"But, Lucy, is it right for christians to look all around the church in prayer-time? I've seen one of the oldest do it. And is it right for father to smoke ten cent cigars and put five cents on the plate?"

"But, Charlie—"

"Yes, 'but Charlie.' We boys talk it over; we've got our eyes open. You can be a real christian, and if you are, perhaps I'll try it." And Charlie jumped up and ran around the corner of the house, whistling 'Dixie.'"

The sister's head was bowed on the old book. She was asking God to help her to make "straight paths" for Charlie's lame feet.

"O, dear!" said their father, in his arm-chair, just inside the hall-door; "these horrid mosquitos won't let me sleep at all."—Advocate and Guardian.

IMPROPRIETIES IN CHURCHES.

It is highly improper to go late to church when it can possibly be avoided. This interrupts the service, confuses the congregation, distracts the attention, and is a sure indication of slothfulness, or something worse, on the part of those wilfully and habitually guilty of this sin.

No indecorum can be more palpable than standing about church doors during service, or whilst the people are assembling. A truly polite person will not do this. And yet we have seen members who thought themselves in good and regular standing, and even church officials, place themselves at the door of the sanctuary and gape at the people as they entered, just as if they were the regularly appointed inspectors of all church-goers. This impropriety may be the result of "thoughtlessness," but it is very little the less culpable on that account. And when young men are guilty of it through a spirit of curiosity, it is exceedingly offensive to all well-mannered people, and always meets and merits their heartfelt reprobation.

Talking, laughing, whispering, giggling, and all vocal or visible manifestations of social greetings when in the house of God, either before, during, or after service, indicate ill-breeding in all so acting. Politeness, to say nothing of piety, avoids all such indulgences. Still we have seen young lads and lasses, who fancy they move in the most decorous circles of social life, come into church with a giddy grin on their countenance that never left it until they had made many bows, gestures, and sundry other eye and head manipulations to those around them, to the utter disgust of all lovers of true politeness.

Some church members never try to furnish strangers seats. This is a breach of politeness totally inexcusable, and a real indignity offered to the person neglected. It is almost as much an index of bad manners, as not to offer a friend a chair when calling upon us at our houses.

Feet shuffling, sleeping, inattention, reading books, amusing children, spread-eagling, with the arms akimbo on the seat in front of us, are vulgarities in church that no person of cultivated manners will either indulge or excuse. The use of tobacco, (not only objectionable, but inexcusable at all times and in all places,) in the sanctuary of God, is such an intolerable nuisance, that it is truly wonderful that any lover of decency can for a moment so far forget himself, as boldly to pollute the floor and furniture of the building with the abomination.

Persons given to politeness always conform to the rules of the church in which they may happen to be. Whether kneeling or standing be the posture of prayer, they gracefully assume it. In all these things they act decorously, ever remembering who and what they are. In fine, you must go to church if you wish to learn who the real lady or gentleman is, and not the ball-room, the dancing-school, or the gay party. Politeness there may be formal, stiff, and up to the Chesterfield rule, but it is cold, heartless, superficial, and often false.

Indeed, if a person be ill-mannered at church, he will be good mannered nowhere—our behavior there is the exponent of our deportment everywhere. Reader, are you ever guilty of any of these, or of similar improprieties at church? Say?—Cor. Presb. Banner.

A LAWYER ON PREACHING.

I have been a listener to sermons for fifty years, and either I have changed or there has been a great change for the worse in the delivery of the gospel message. There is less earnestness, less directness, less logical power, and less study, than there was thirty years ago; and, as a necessary consequence, the general style of sermons has become diffuse, if not superficial, and the result less efficient. If I am right in this, we have an important fact to be dealt with, and it ought to be removed or greatly modified, and that immediately!

What is the remedy? Let the ministers of the gospel review their past history, and return, as soon as it is possible, to the good old paths of their fathers, and preach the Bible in all its simplicity and grandeur!

No pulpit orator can hope to create much interest in his audience unless he follows his text closely, and he must advance nothing that does not tend directly to illustrate his main proposition; and, when his argument is finished, he should not spend half an hour, more or less, in re-stating his propositions.

Many ministers deliver finely-written, and even classical discourses, on very solemn subjects, but they are essays merely; and their effect is to lower the standard of christian character and the dignity and glory of the ministry.

Let no one think I am disparaging the ministers of salvation; far from it. During the time I have mentioned the bar has also greatly changed. The eloquence and much of its glory has passed away, but the bar has, in the change, become eminently practical and business-like; its success is greater than it ever was in the higher courts. In fact, the bar has become the theatre of pure intellectual power.

In the pulpit, the stimulus for the exercise of the mental powers is the love of men's souls and of fame, common to the race. At the bar, the mental powers are wonderfully excited by a powerful antagonist,—whereas the minister must get his inspiration from a higher and unseen source.

But another cause of the partial failure of the ministry, consists in the omission, by some of its members, to preach the Bible. Some preach literature, some governmental policies, and some pure politics! The effect of this mode of preaching is not confined to the churches where this is practised, but it insensibly pervades all other churches and communities; hence, the long catalogue of spiritualism, infidelity, and transcendentalism, and all the dreadful isms of the day.

Conclusion! Let every christian minister rise up to the full measure of his duty and his power of doing good, and we shall find a change for the better.—N. Y. Observer.

WORDS OF CHEER.

Be firm and be faithful,
Desert not the right:
The brave become bolder
The darker the night.
Then up and be doing,
Though cowards may fail,
Thy duty pursuing,
Dare all and prevail!

If scorn be thy portion,
If hatred and loss,
If stripes, and if prison,
Remember the cross!
God watches above thee,
And he will requite;
Desert those that love thee,
But never the right.

SPEAKING WELL OF OTHERS.

If the disposition to speak well of others were universally prevalent, the world would become a comparative paradise. The opposite disposition is the Pandora-box, which, when opened, fills every house and every neighborhood with pain and sorrow. How many enmities and heart-burnings flow from this source! How much happiness is interrupted and destroyed! Envy, jealousy and the malignant spirit of evil, when they find vent by the lips, go forth on their mission like foul fiends, to blast the reputation and peace of others. Every one has his imperfections; and in the conduct of the best there will be occasional faults which might seem to justify animadversion. It is a good rule, however, when there is occasion for fault-finding, to do it privately to the erring one. This may prove salutary. It is a proof of interest in the individual, which will generally be taken kindly, if the manner of doing it is not offensive. The common and unchristian rule, on the contrary, is to proclaim the failings of others to all but themselves. This is unchristian, and shows a despicable heart.

Peace.—Peace is better than joy. Joy is an uneasy guest and always on tip-toe to depart. It tires and wears us out, and yet keeps us ever fearing that the next moment it will be gone. Peace is not so—it comes more quietly and stays more contentedly, and it never exhausts our strength, nor gives us one anxious forecasting thought. Therefore let us pray for peace. It is the gift of God—promised to all his children; and if we have it in our hearts we shall not pine for joy, though its bright wings never touch us while we tarry in the world.

A Sign of Greatness.—If we were asked to say what we consider a sign of true greatness, we should point to those who, instead of waiting for some great opportunity to do something noble, avail themselves of every day occasions and carefully improve the most ordinary opportunities of doing good. These are the truly great. No occasion is too insignificant for them to dignify by improving.

HYGIENE.—NO. 5.

BY IRA A. THAYER, M. D.

Obstructed Respiration

Is another frequent cause of disease. It may be produced in two ways; 1st, by sudden changes of temperature; 2nd, by want of cleanliness. That we may more thoroughly understand the subject, we will examine the perspiratory organs and function of the perspiration.

The perspiratory glands of the skin are situated everywhere throughout the integument, being most abundant in the anterior portions of the body. They consist each of a slender tube about 1-400 of an inch in diameter, which penetrates nearly the entire thickness of the skin, and terminates below in a globular coil. A network of capillaries envelops the coil, and supplies the gland with the material necessary to its secretion.

According to Krause, the whole number of perspiratory glands is not less than 2,300,000; and the length of each tubular coil, when unraveled, is about 1-15 of an inch. The entire length of the glandular tubing must therefore be not less than 153,000 inches, or about 2 1-2 miles.

It will be easy to understand, therefore, that a very large quantity of fluid may be supplied by so extensive a glandular apparatus. This secretion contains water and the inorganic salts of the blood; and is furthermore distinguished by the presence of a peculiar animal substance which does not exist in the blood, but which is produced by the secreting action of the gland. As the blood circulates through the capillaries of the gland, its watery and saline constituents transude in certain quantities, and are discharged into the secretory duct. The perspiration is usually so slowly secreted that it evaporates as fast as it is poured out; but under the influence of unusual bodily exercise and mental excitement, it is secreted much faster than it can evaporate, and the whole integument becomes covered with moisture. But the average quantity of fluid lost by cutaneous perspiration during twenty-four hours is about two pounds.

The office of cutaneous perspiration is principally to regulate the temperature of the body. Heat excites these glands to unusual activity, and they pour out a large quantity of fluid upon the skin. This fluid immediately evaporates, and, in assuming a gaseous form, causes so much heat to become latent that the cutaneous surfaces are cooled down to their natural temperature. So long as the air is dry, so that evaporation goes on rapidly, a very elevated temperature can be borne with impunity. But if the air is saturated with moisture, and evaporation in this way retarded, the body soon becomes unnaturally warm.

The mucous membrane of the lungs and air passages, and alimentary canal, is but a continuation of the skin, and is supplied with a similar set of glands which perform a similar function.

From the foregoing it will be easy to understand the nature of a "cold." Heat excites the glands to secretion, while, on the contrary, cold checks their activity. Hence, when a sudden change takes place in temperature, when cold is applied while the glands are in full activity and the skin moist with perspiration, the action of the glands is suspended; the heat generated in the body is retained there; the blood becomes surcharged with perspiratory matter, and fever and inflammation is the result. Or the mucous membrane is excited to increased activity, and diarrhea, or cough with expectoration and a discharge from the nose, result.

It will be seen, then, how important it is to maintain an even temperature, or, when changing it, to have the change gradual, that the perspiratory glands may gradually become accustomed to the temperature, that they may not be paralyzed by the shock which a sudden change produces.

After active exercise, or exposure to a high temperature, there should be an additional amount of clothing worn, and moderate exercise continued for a short time.

A uniform temperature of all parts of the body should be maintained. Sitting in a draught of air, or exposing any part of the body to a draught of cold air coursing through an aperture in a window, door, or ceiling, is far more deleterious than exposing the whole body, from the fact that it not only checks the perspiration, but destroys the equilibrium of the circulation. Continued cold applied to a part causes a contraction of the capillary blood-vessels, and a recession of the blood, and an engorgement of some other portion.

In close connection with the above, as a cause of perspiratory obstruction, is the want of cleanliness. Few persons appreciate the value of cleanliness in preserving health and securing comfort. A large amount of excrementitious matter is being thrown from the system constantly. This matter is of such a nature that it effectually glues up the pores of the skin, and thus retards perspiration. Not only that, but there is a constant absorption from the surface inwardly, and if allowed to remain is again carried into the blood.

Hence the importance of frequent ablutions. The entire surface should be thoroughly bathed at least every alternate day—better to bathe every day. This, after one becomes accustomed to it, is not unpleasant; on the contrary it is very pleasant and highly invigorating. The reaction following the slight shock which the water produces creates a warm, healthful glow all over the system; and besides removing the excrementitious matter from the pores of the skin, tones that organ, and is the greatest preventative to "colds" that a person can possibly use. Where the skin becomes loaded with filth, the perspiratory glands are rendered torpid, the skin becomes dry, husky, and diseased. If you would have a clear, velvety skin, keep it clean.

The bathing which is necessary to keep the pores unobstructed is also a great means of equalizing the circulation and nervous forces, and is a most thorough means of preventing cutaneous diseases. It has been estimated by some author of respectability (I cannot now give his name), that three-fourths of all the matter that passes from the system passes out through the pores of the skin. If this be true (and the calculation is very nearly correct), it would seem to be a matter of no ordinary importance that the surface upon which this substance is thrown should be frequently cleansed. This matter is thrown off in minute particles, but is continually appearing at the surface from 2,300,000 different openings, and thus during twenty-four hours amounts to a large quantity. If people properly understood this subject, I apprehend there would be a vast amount of washing done in a very short space of time; especially by those who wash but once or twice during a year.

In daily ablutions, it is not necessary to use a large quantity of water—a pint is sufficient. Use pure soft water; and if not accustomed to it, warm the water slightly to commence with, gradually cooling it until you use it in its natural temperature. Wet a towel, or sponge, and rub the surface thoroughly, then take a dry crash towel and rub the skin briskly, until there is a fine warm glow and a red color; then put on your clothing and get out into the open air.

If these simple precepts should seem trifling to the reader, let me say to you, try them for a few weeks, and report the effects; and if every part of your physical system, and every faculty of the mind does not feel clearer, more active and vigorous, then discontinue the practise.

Bristolville, O., Jan., 1865.

To the Afflicted.

"A Sufferer" asks for a cure for nails growing into the flesh. I know of a simple remedy, that has been tried in many cases, and seldom fails. Just cut a notch like the letter V in the middle of the end of the nail, and repeat the operation every time you cut your nails, and I think you will experience a complete cure. One who has tried it. F. H. C.

Another Remedy.—Take a sharp knife, and scrape the centre of the toe nail very thin. In a short time it will not trouble those afflicted with the nail of the toe growing into the flesh. One who has proved it. B. F. B.

Phthisic Herb.—To the many who are interested, I will say I have at last obtained a small quantity, and shall send to all who have applied, especially those who have the greatest claims. If any do not hear from me, they will please write again, as the letters may be lost before they reach here. My delay to supply calls for it was occasioned for want of the herb. Peter S. W. Deyo.

COLD FEET—HOT HEAD.

HOW TO REGULATE THEM.

Action is life; inaction is death. Life in the human body is warm. Death is cold. Vigorous bodily action causes the blood to circulate throughout every part of the body. The want of action causes it, so to speak, to stand still. The blood goes most freely to those parts of the body or brain most exercised. If we swing the sledge-hammer, like the blacksmith, or climb the ropes like the sailor, we get large and strong arms and hands. If we row a boat or swing the scythe, it is the same. But if we use the brain chiefly to the exclusion of the muscles, we may have more active minds but weaker bodies. The better condition in which the entire being—the body and brain—is symmetrically developed, requires the harmonious exercise of all the parts, in which case there will be a happy equilibrium, with no excess, no deficiency—no hot headache, no cold feet. Headache is usually caused by a pressure of blood on the brain; cold feet by a limited circulation of blood in those extremities.

There is an old adage which says; "Keep the feet warm and the head cool," which was, no doubt intended to counteract a tendency the other way. Certain it is that those who suffer with hot heads usually have cold feet.

One cause of cold feet is wearing tight garters, which interrupt the free circulation of the blood. Another is, the wearing of tight stockings and tight shoes. Still another cause is, using the lower limbs so little that there is not enough blood in circulation in those parts to keep them warm.

How to keep the feet warm.—1st. Wear loose stockings, fastened to the drawers with buttons and loops—not with strings or garters. Wear easy, well-fitting leather shoes—such as are made on the Plumer Last, with soles not too thick nor too thin—such as will turn water and keep the feet dry.

2d. Should this suffice, take a brisk walk, a dance, or a trot—all in your own room, if you must, or swing the feet, one at a time, backward and forward, hard as you can for five or ten minutes, and you will soon pump the warm blood into them.

3d. On retiring at night, take the feet in hand, one at a time, and give them a thorough rubbing, wringing and squeezing. Continue this till they cry enough, when you may go to bed with warm feet. Repeat this exercise after washing all over in cold water before dressing in the morning, adding a vigorous spatting of the feet with the naked hand.

4th. Never retire with cold feet. Manage somehow to get them warm. If too ill to go through the exercises, as above, fill a quart bottle with warm or hot water, and place it at the feet in bed. Better do this than lie awake and suffer, for there will be no sleeping till the feet get warm.

5th. Keep away from the fire, the furnace and the stove as much as possible, and obtain the necessary warmth by proper clothing and the necessary exercise. This will draw the blood from the brain, send it to the lower limbs, keep the feet warm, and in most cases, prevent the headache.

6th. Bathing. We consider it not only essential to good health, but a real luxury, to take a daily bath. Not a shower, a douche, a plunge, nor a souse, but simply a quick and gentle hand bath; and a pint of soft cold water is enough—the face, neck, arms, shoulders and chest first. Then wipe dry with a soft towel. Then wash the body and the lower limbs—simply wetting the skin is enough. Take another towel and wipe dry; then serve the feet in the same way. After this, with the hand, rub the whole surface briskly till the skin comes to a glow. The entire process should not exceed five minutes. Then dress, and you are ready for a short walk, or for breakfast. The gymnastic exercises which this practice gives is equivalent to so much hard though pleasant work; and when accustomed to it, no one would willingly forego the luxury. Timid and tender persons will shrink from the thought of touching cold water—but will sit all day over a hot stove, shivering and suffering for the want of this very thing. A little resolution to start would give them courage to go through. It would also prepare them for other duties, and fortify them against "taking cold" when they go out, and of resisting disease when attending in the sick room.

Headache is sometimes caused by over-eating, producing a foul stomach, impairing digestion, and clogging up the system. The remedy for this is abstinence and a Turkish bath; or let "Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet, and Dr. Merryman," prescribe a period of rest for both body and brain.

In conclusion, keep the bowels open and free by proper diet, the skin clean, and the pores open by proper bathing, the feet warm by being properly clad, by exercise and the free circulation of the blood; the head cool, free from aches and pains, by keeping the other parts in action and health.—American Phrenological Journal.

CHECKING PERSPIRATION.

A suggestion to the wise is enough. The following extract merits consideration:—

"A merchant, in 'lending a hand' on board of one of his ships on a windy day, found himself at the end of an hour and a half pretty well exhausted, and perspiring freely. He sat down to rest. The cool wind from the sea was delightful, and, engaging in conversation, time passed faster than he was aware of. In attempting to rise, he found he was unable to do so without assistance. He was taken home and put to bed, where he remained for two years; and for a long time afterwards, he could only hobble about with the aid of a crutch. Less exposures than this have, in constitutions not so vigorous, resulted in inflammation of the lungs (pneumonia) ending in death in less than a week, or causing tedious rheumatisms, to be a source of torture for a life-time. Multitudes of lives would be saved every year, and an incalculable amount of human suffering would be prevented, if parents would begin to explain to their children at the age of three or four years, the danger which attends cooling off too quickly after exercise, and the importance of not standing still after exercise, or work, or play, or of remaining exposed to a wind, or of sitting at an open window or door, or of pulling off any garment, even the hat or bonnet, while in a heat. It should be remembered by all that a cold never comes without a cause, and that, in four times out of five, it is the result of leaving off exercise too suddenly, or of remaining still in the wind, or in a cooler atmosphere than that in which the exercise has been taken."

☞ A lady whose girls were all misshapen, consulted the celebrated anatomist and lecturer, Dr. Hebbard, on a prevention. "Loose dresses and plenty of air, just like the boys," was the excellent reply of this gentleman.

☞ A modern French writer says, "A physician prescribing to a sick man always reminds me of a child snuffing a candle; it is ten to one but he snuffs it out."

Walking.—Those who walk most are generally the healthiest; the road of perfect health is too narrow for wheels.

THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

A GRAND OLD POEM.

Who shall judge a man from manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings—
Satin vests could do no more.

There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever welling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden,
Hidden, crushed, and overgrown;
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest,
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man, upraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters, rulers, lords, remember
That your meanest hinds are men!
Men by labor, men by feeling,
Men by thought, and men by fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine,
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little weed-clad rills,
There are feeble, inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills;
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me;
For, to Him, all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth or fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same;
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifted up its voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light,
Secret wrongs shall never prosper,
While there is a sunny right;
God, whose world-heard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles,
As the pebbles in the sea.

THE VOICE OF HISTORIANS.

"The Lord's Day"—The True Christian Sabbath.

From Ancient Christianity Exemplified, by Coleman, p. 5.

NUMBER ONE.

"OF THE FESTIVALS OF THE CHURCH.

"1. Preliminary Remarks.

"Sacred seasons are an institution, not of Christ and his apostles, but of the church. No authority for their observance is derived from the canon of the New Testament; neither do they belong to the apostolical age of the church. The churches established by the apostles, in imitation of our Lord and his disciples, observed the times and seasons of the Jews; but it was particularly the office of the Gentiles to admonish the infant church that such observances are not an essential part of religion. He resisted the attempts to impose the yoke of Mosaic ceremonies on Gentile converts. From Jewish converts he removed the oppressive and useless burden of their festivals, and discountenanced the observance of their sacred days.

"But in common with the other apostles, this minister of the Gentiles sanctioned the observance of the first day of the week, instead of the seventh, as the christian Sabbath. This, in obedience to the great command of the Decalogue, was consecrated as holy time; and is in reality the only sacred season of the christian church. All other times and seasons are carnal ordinances, having no Divine authority. The Christian Sabbath, therefore, ought to have the first, the last, the only place in the calendar of the church. Such is its place in the sacred canon. There it stands apart, separate, distinct from all other days, as holy unto the Lord; and there it should stand fast for ever, in the mild majesty with which Heaven has invested the solemn day. It has no affinity or connection with the innumerable holy days, fasts, and festivals, movable and immovable, with which pious usage and papal superstition has crowded the calendar of the church, and by which this sacred day of the Lord was overlaid and lost for many centuries, until brought forth to light and again restored to its original sanctity by the Puritans of the sixteenth century.

"2. OF THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

"The primitive church observed both the Jewish and the Christian Sabbath. The Jewish converts considered the abrogation of the ceremonial law to relate only to their exemption from its burdensome rites; and continued religiously to observe the Sabbath as holy. Converts from Paganism, on the contrary, contemplated christianity as a dispensation altogether new, and the religion of the Jews as totally abrogated. The resurrection of Christ was to them a fixed point, the beginning of this new dispensation, the new passover from bondage to freedom, from death to life. This great event they refused to commemorate on the same day which the Jews observed for another end, and for this purpose they selected the first day of the week. The import of the christian Sabbath they accounted more significant and important than this of the Jewish. The one commemorated the completion of the work of creation; the other the beginning of a nobler work by the great Creator himself, who was light and life to all.

'Twas great—to speak the world from naught;
'Twas greater—to redeem.

The early christian converts, whether Pagan or Jewish, seem not to have been conscious when or where or how the ancient economy was abrogated, and the gospel dispensation introduced. But, in process of time, the one was gradually discontinued and fulfilled in the other. The observance of the Lord's day as the first day of the week was at first introduced as a separate institution. Both this and the Jewish Sabbath were kept for some time; then the Christian began to take precedence of the Jewish Sabbath; finally, the latter passed wholly over into the former, which now took the place of the ancient Sabbath of the Israelites. But their Sabbath, the last day of the week, was strictly kept in connection with that of the first day, for a long time after the overthrow of the temple and its worship. Down even to the fifth century the observance of the Jewish Sabbath was continued in the christian church, but with a rigor and solemnity gradually diminishing until it was wholly discontinued.

"No historical record, sacred or profane, has informed us of the first celebration of the Lord's day, the first day of the week, as the christian Sabbath. It doubtless was very early; probably from the first communication of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. The first day of the week had been signalized by the resurrection and the ascension of our Lord; and now again in the fulfillment of his promise in the miraculous shedding forth of the Holy Ghost upon his disciples while, in joyful expectation of the event, they were all assembled in one place for the worship of their ascended Savior. From this time, it is to be presumed, that they continued to meet on this day, for ever memorable by these remarkable events. No law was requisite for this purpose. The impulse of their own hearts was enough to bring them together on each return of this eventful day.

When Paul was at Troas, the disciples came together, apparently according to established custom, on the first day of the week, to break bread; on which occasion the apostle preached to them. The apostle also directs the Corinthians, on the first day of the week, to lay aside for charitable purposes a certain sum, according as the Lord had prospered them. Here we have, at least, a distinct notice of the reckoning by weeks. What directed the apostle to specify the first day of the week rather than the seventh?

"John, in Patmos, was in the Spirit on the Lord's day. Whence this early and familiar use of the expression to denote a specific day? It is an appellation descriptive of a certain day, given without explanation, as if well understood and in common use. Here is a fair presumption, if not a conclusive inference, that the day was already known by this name because observed as the Sabbath of the christian church. These are all the passages in the New Testament upon which any reliance can be placed as evidence of the religious observance of the Lord's day by the apostolical churches.

"Soon after the age of the apostles, the evidence becomes clear and full that the Sabbath was solemnized in the christian church for religious worship, and kept as holy unto the Lord. Just after the conclusion of the sacred canon, and the death of John the apostle, a persecution was instituted against the christians in Bithynia, in Asia Minor. Pliny the younger, in reporting to the emperor the persecutions that had been held against them, mentions that they were accustomed to meet on a certain stated day, stato die, before it was light, for the worship of Christ as God. This statement is evidence that these christians kept a day as holy time, but whether it was the last, or the first day of the week, does not appear.

"Justin Martyr, who lived about forty years later, says that they (christians) neither celebrated the Jewish festivals, nor observed their Sabbaths, nor practised circumcision. In another place he says that they, both those who lived in the city and they who lived in the country, were all accustomed to meet on the day which is denominated Sunday, for the reading of the Scriptures, prayer, exhortation, and communion. The assembly meet on Sunday, because this is the first day on which God, having changed the darkness, and the elements, created the world; and because Jesus our Lord on this day arose from the dead.

"This sacred day was usually denominated dies Dominicus—the Lord's day; but sometimes, also, Sunday, diem solis, in compliance with the common phraseology, and when it was necessary to distinguish the day in addressing the heathen. During the early ages of the church it was never entitled 'the Sabbath'; this word being confined to the seventh day of the week—the Jewish Sabbath, which, as we have already said, continued to be observed for several centuries by the converts to christianity.

"The author of the epistle of St. Barnabas introduces the Lord as saying, 'The Sabbaths which you now keep are not acceptable to me; but those which I have made, when, resting from all things, I shall begin the eighth day, that is, the beginning of the other world.' 'For which cause,' he adds, 'we observe the eighth day with gladness, in which Jesus rose from the dead, and having manifested himself to his disciples, ascended into heaven.' Tertullian, at the close of the second century, says, 'We celebrate Sunday, (diem solis) as a joyful day.' 'On the Lord's day (die Dominico) we think it wrong to fast or to kneel in prayer.'

"'A true christian,' says Clement of Alexandria, contemporary with Tertullian, 'according to the commands of the gospel, observes the Lord's day by casting out all bad thoughts, and cherishing all goodness, honoring the resurrection of the Lord, which took place on that day.'

"Dionysius, of Corinth, of the same age, in a letter to the church of Rome, preserved by Eusebius, mentions their faithful observance of the Lord's day, and their reading of the Scriptures on the occasion. These authorities are sufficient to show that the Lord's day was observed by christians of the second century for religious worship. The use of the term by those writers may fairly be assumed as explanatory of the same expression in Rev. 1: 10, which, in connection with 1 Cor. 16: 2, and Acts 20: 7, and illustrated by usage of the church in the age following, justifies the belief that, from the beginning, the Lord's day has been observed in the christian church. At first, and for several centuries, it was kept in connection with the Jewish Sabbath; but by degrees the observance of the latter fell into disuse, and the former has ever since continued to be the sacred day of the Christian church." DEFINITE TIME AND ITS DANGERS.

"There's a lion in the way."—PROV. 26: 13.

The question of knowing the times and seasons is no new theme with us; nor is a belief in the time an untried experience. So we do not venture on an "unknown sea" in indulging an interest in time, and I am persuaded that but very few, who have believed time in the past, will report their experience as either turbid or dangerous. I had thought that we were well agreed, as a people, that the time was revealed, and would therefore be understood and become a light to the church; and that those who had forsaken the world and its follies, to wait for the Bridegroom, had found it a blessed experience, having no evil report to bring, though they were disappointed. But the views and feelings of brethren now seem considerably "mixed" on these points. If there are some maintaining the even tenor of their way, who rejoice at the prospect of harmonizing past disarrangements, correcting past errors, and thus restoring past confidence in the clear and manifest fulfillment of every prophecy—prophetic periods not excepted; there are others who are virtually throwing dust in the eyes of those who would search for this desirable light by raising the cry, "There's a lion in the way," either in a thousand imaginary difficulties in getting at the true time, even though it is 1868, or in the supposed ruinous results likely to follow if '68 should not prove to be the true time.

I have never believed the '68 time, nor investigated it with attention, for the reason that I have thought (perhaps incorrectly) that more time would be required to fulfill the predictions concerning Spiritualism than this time allows. But I dare not doubt the fulfillment of every prophecy—a clear, evident fulfillment, understood and believed by the church. The opposing view, and the only one that can be taken by any professed believer of the Bible is, that their application is so obscure that we cannot discern it, or so uncertain that we cannot rely upon it; either of which is derogatory to God, and unworthy any believer of the Bible! And yet this is the common way of disposing of prophecy, both by the professed church and the world. It is well expressed by a D. D., who said, "If God will forgive me for what time I have spent in studying the prophecies, I will never study them any more." If he had said this in reference to studying "the Bible" instead of "prophecy," all would pronounce it infidelity; but it is no less so when said of a large part of the Bible, and especially that part which is expressly declared to be, "not by the will of man," but by "holy men of God, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." The real danger, and that which we ought most to fear, is this danger of unbelief, whether it relates to the whole, or a part of the Bible; to the whole, or a part of prophecy. The prophetic periods must be of service to the church, and must therefore be understood; otherwise they were given in vain. It cannot be said that they are necessary to show when we are near the end, for events abundantly show that without them. Besides, if the periods are reliable measurements, they are definite measurements, reaching from a given starting point to the end.

But if I could suppose any prophecies God has given us would not be fulfilled, or fulfilled but not understood, I could allow such abuse of divine wisdom in relation to any other prophecies rather than those which relate to the period immediately preceding the coming of Christ. It might be said of almost any other prophecies that they could be of service, though not understood till after their fulfillment. But not so with these. As the prophetic periods do not end till the Lord comes, they will be of no service unless understood before he comes. Hence I would not dare believe that the Lord will come till they are correctly understood and applied. And as the light of prophecy is not for a few believers, but for the church, the light on these things will not be to the few who are learned, but to the church.

Again, we should not forget that the last times are to be the most perilous. And as a consequence, those christians who wait for the Lord amidst these greatest perils to the church need more than usual supports to their faith; they can not bear up with less. And hence, if every previous age of the church has had its "present truth," maintaining the prophetic chain complete to the eye of the church till now, 'tis a fearful thought to suppose it broken to the eye of the church at this last critical moment, while Satan's hosts, both men and devils, supplied with all the enginery and skill of their leader, attack in bold defiance every sentence of the Bible. Hence the church needs the light of prophecy now more than in any preceding age. And if it is an impeachment of God's wisdom to suppose his prophecies to fail of a fulfillment, it is equally an impeachment of his faithfulness to suppose the prophetic chain to seemingly break at this critical period for the church! But the chain is seemingly broken already, our opponents themselves being judges. For they admonish us not to rest our faith on any calculation of the prophetic periods for the future, on the ground that we have failed in all calculations in the past. This is virtually doing away with the periods altogether, as either obscure or uncertain. And however "dangerous" it may be to preach and believe definite time, it is far more dangerous to make God's time thus indefinite and uncertain. Since, then, the mind of the church is in a state of suspense approaching distrust with regard to the prophetic periods, we ought to welcome every indication of relief for this suspense. We ought to hail with glad hearts every prospect of a true application of them, when the fault of past mistakes will appear wholly in our miscalculation of them where it belongs. I believe that all the rays of light will concentrate around the true arrangement, and that the wise will search, understand, believe, and wait accordingly. I intend to investigate the '68 argument, willing to be disappointed "seventy times seven times" rather than reject the true time.

And as to the ruinous results of the time movements, a majority of the best brethren among us have passed through one or both of them, and have no regrets for their experience, nor dread of another time movement as ruinous. I would not justify any one in accepting without inquiry, or believing without good reason. But I would admonish every one of the danger of treating God's word as though it were the word of man, or declining to believe or obey it for fear of consequences. As a people, we have never been in a worse state than we are to-day. But as we have never believed time without making us better, and as our best days were when we were believing time, I see no good ground to dread as ruinous the indulgence of a hope that the Lord will come in 1868. I. K. LOMBARD.

THINGS REQUISITE.

Have a tear for the wretched; a smile for the glad;
For the worthy, applause; an excuse for the bad;
Some help for the needy; some pity for those
Who stray from the path where true happiness flows.

Have a hope in thy sorrow; a calm in thy joy;
Have a work that is worthy thy life to employ;
And oh! above all things on this side of the sod,
Have peace with thy conscience, and peace with thy God.

For the World's Crisis.

THURMAN'S ASTRONOMY.

We have for some time past been taught that Mr. Thurman, "by the truth-testing powers of astronomy" had demolished Ptolemy's Canon, upset all previous systems of reckoning, and demonstrated that the Lord would delay his coming for several years certainly, and would finally come in A. D. 1868. This claim as to his astronomical verification of his chronological calculations, has been put forth with great confidence and positiveness. His system has been declared correct, his arrangement all plain, his light clear, and as to his book, it has been said that every person who had a Bible should possess one,—all of which no doubt has been pleasing to the author and publisher of "The Sealed Book of Daniel Opened."

It has also been intimated that Ptolemy's Canon had sealed up the book of Daniel, and that no interpretation previous to about 1820 could have been correct, and that now for the first time it is unsealed "by the truth testing powers of astronomy," and so we are invited to accept the offered light and learn the truth thus revealed to us through this chosen instrument, Eld. William C. Thurman.

I do not see how Ptolemy's Canon could have sealed up the book of Daniel, for the words were closed up and sealed in Daniel's own time, or some five or six hundred years before Ptolemy was born. As to no possible interpretation being correct if it was offered before 1820 or thereabouts it may be true, but if so it overturns the whole "year day" system, the connection of the 70 weeks and 2300 days, the termination of the periods about 1868, and in fact almost all that is asserted on the prophecies, excepting some few points so foolish that none of the abler prophetic students would assert them,—for I think that all these times respecting the book of Daniel were held and published long before 1820, and so by this argument that the right interpretation could not have been given till then, this present theory in many respects, at least, is proved to be wrong. And especially in connection with its times and dates.

But we have been told that astronomy has finally settled the whole matter, and brought order out of chaos, and though I am not at all certain that the correctness of Mr. Thurman's Astronomy would prove the correctness of his theory, yet by his own admissions its incorrectness would subvert the chronology, or impair its reliability. I have therefore been willing to have this matter examined, and since Mr. Thurman appeals to astronomy to astronomy let him go. I am not an astronomer. To ask me to investigate this matter would be just as foolish as to accept the assertions of others who perhaps may be equally ignorant of it, who say that it is all plain and clear. I know that we have been promised that if one hundred persons would subscribe a dollar each they should have published copies of Mr. Thurman's astronomical tables, and by these any man who understands simple mathematics could calculate eclipses, and see for himself whether Mr. Thurman was right or wrong. This may be all correct, but I am unable to view it in that light. I am not much of a mathematician; and I fear should hardly be able to correctly compute eclipses two thousand years distant, even with the aid of these notable tables costing one dollar a copy; others might be more confident. Some persons study many years on such matters, and then are quite ignorant on this vast subject. Mr. Thurman may be able to teach what he knows of astronomy in a little while. I have known persons who could teach all I know about it in half the time, but I fear my pupils would not get through Paris creditably on the strength of it.

But there are men who understand astronomy, and who have investigated the very points which Mr. Thurman has treated upon. Prof. Hudson will probably present the readers of the Crisis with some facts which they record that may bear upon the subject. To get these ancient eclipses recalculated by the ablest astronomers would probably cost thousands of dollars, even if money could purchase it at all. And even then if all Mr. Thurman's astronomy were proved correct it by no means proves his whole theory true, for he may have mistaken or misapplied Scripture, and so be faulty in other directions. But while the investigation goes on, I shall be glad to be apprised of any substantial progress which is being made. I said last fall that it would take at least seven months for any competent person to so investigate Mr. Thurman's theory they could give any reliable opinion as to its entire correctness. We shall see whether it is proved true in less time than that.

When the Bible class at Lowell Street Chapel was arranged, after the close of Thurman's and Stevenson's discussion in Boston, Prof. Hudson requested of an influential elder and editor, and one who is most fully acquainted with Mr. Thurman, the privilege of meeting Mr. Thurman at the class, and of occupying thirty or forty-five minutes in examining him on the subject of his astronomy. This he was not permitted to do, but was offered instead the privilege of a private interview. This Prof. Hudson declined, as he wished what he might say to come before the people interested in the matter. In the course of the conversation, the elder referred to said to Prof. Hudson, in my hearing, in words substantially as follows: "You may not be aware that Mr. Thurman's positions have been submitted to persons who know more about astronomy than you and I both, and that MR. THURMAN IS SUSTAINED." As I am interested in this matter, and as I desire to know the facts in the case, and as I, while President of the Christian Publication Society, by which the "World's Crisis" is issued, desire that it may publish all the truth it can to the world, I ask, as I then did, that the statement of those astronomers who have sustained Mr. Thurman, in their own writing, and over their own signatures, may be published to the world, in the columns of the Crisis. I wish upon these points the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

If fifty dollars have been paid to a man who has computed eclipses for forty years, that he might verify Mr. Thurman's astronomical calculations, and thereby establish his chronology, I want his report published in the Crisis. If he sustains Mr. Thurman, I want to know it. Thurman's chronology is interlinked with his astronomy. They cannot be separated. If by the truth-testing powers of astronomy, Ptolemy's Canon is overthrown, let us have the same tests applied to "The Sealed Book of Daniel opened," by Wm. C. Thurman.

I know that we are now told that the chronology can be settled without astronomy, by the Bible, if we will only admit that Christ was born about the year B. C. 5. But there is the rub—the Bible says no such thing, and it has to be proved by history, astronomy, interpretation, etc., and chronologers, many of them, deny that he was born B. C. 5, and disagree as to the date of his birth. In such an argument as this, we cannot for a moment allow any such begging of the question. If it is true, PROVE IT; and if you cannot, do not ask candid men to believe it.

In view of all these facts, and also of the importance of this subject, I would like to be informed by those who know, as to several matters, such as these.:

1. What proof have we that Wm. Thurman is a competent astronomer? What books has he studied? What observations has he made? What acquaintance has he with logarithms and those higher forms of mathematical computation commonly used in prosecuting astronomical inquiries?

2. By what authority he has altered Ferguson's astronomical tables, which he has used in making his calculations, and whether those tables were correct enough either before or since his alterations, to accurately compute eclipses, occurring at such remote periods, that an error of a minute in a century would overturn the whole arrangement?

3. Whether Ferguson's little tables, (of which I believe I have a copy), made more than a century ago, in the days of pod augurs and wooden ploughs, are not entirely superseded by other tables more accurate, more reliable, and more than an hundred times larger than those of Ferguson? And whether any competent astronomer would, for a moment, think of using those tables, made long before a large portion of our own solar system was ever discovered, to guide him through the vast and intricate researches needful to estimate eclipses occurring so many hundred years ago?

4. Whether astronomical tables of twenty-five or thirty pages, which can be published in the columns of a weekly newspaper, and understood by studious boys in the common schools, would answer for data upon which to fix a matter of so much importance as that day which God hath appointed, in which he will judge the world in righteousness by Jesus Christ our Lord?

5. Whether all the eclipses mentioned by Mr. Thurman can be found by other astronomers, using these newer and an hundred times larger tables, made by men whose lives have been given to this science; or whether it requires Ferguson's old tables, with Thurman's alterations, to find the eclipses mentioned in history, and then they prove to be at a distance of six months from the time when the historian quoted says the eclipse occurred? Or in other words, whether it is necessary to use old tables altered, and then to alter the history by six months to make the altered tables and altered history agree, and thus produce a "beautiful harmony," unsealing the book of Daniel, overturning Ptolemy's Canon, and establishing the new theory of prophetic interpretation "by the truth testing powers of astronomy."

I have no theory to serve in this matter. I care not a copper for Ptolemy's Canon, or Thurman's Chronology, further than they may present the truth. I have long had copies of Ptolemy's Tables of dates of Kings' reign among my chronological books. I believe there are differences in the copies that have come down to us, and whether Mr. Thurman's copy, clipped from an old Advent Herald, is correct, I presume, neither he or I can tell just at present. Ptolemy's Canon itself—his Almagest, I never saw till the other day, when Prof. Hudson brought it to my office, and I lost no time in giving Mr. Thurman his first look at the famous book he had been so long debating about. Unfortunately he could not read a line of it, as it is in the blindest kind of Greek, you ever need to see in print.

I listened with interest to the discussion between Messrs. Thurman and Stevenson. But upon some of the vital points which Mr. Stevenson introduced, concerning the evidence of ancient monuments, public records upon enduring marbles, and old inscriptions still existing; Mr. Thurman was entirely uninformed, and hence could not discuss those matters at all, as he knew nothing about them. Mr. Thurman's Theory of the Jubilees is thought to be vital to his system. But so long as the plain record says: "Ye shall hallow the FIFTIETH YEAR, . . . a jubilee shall that FIFTIETH YEAR be unto you," (Lev. 25), I am unable to see how he can make two cycles, or jubilee periods, cover only NINETY-EIGHT YEARS, or only FORTY-NINE YEARS, to each jubilee period. Upon other points too numerous to note, the arguments were not entirely satisfactory, and I am unable to acknowledge myself a convert to the opinions of either of these brethren upon the great question.

As to evidence on the coming of the Lord in 1866, or 1868, it does not depend solely upon either of these theories or arrangements; because men have believed and preached both times before either of these systems were known. Till further evidence is produced, I cannot admit that Mr. Thurman's astronomy, his history, his interpretation of Scripture, or his chronology, are entirely satisfactory or reliable to my own mind. The astronomy has been a great point. I want to know whether Mr. Thurman is sustained in this, and whether he is sustained where he differs from other authorities. We want the plain, open facts in the case, as we wish the matter candidly and thoroughly examined in the light of ALL these facts.

With present light, I cannot follow Mr. Thurman, and say "My Lord delayeth his coming" even till 1868, nor could I smite a fellow-servant who thought he would come in 1866, though I am yet unconvinced upon that point. I want all the light I can have. I am glad to have persons investigate the matter. But for persons to suppose that reading Mr. Thurman's book, or looking at Mr. Stevenson's splendid chart of nearly 250 feet in length, is investigating either, is a grave mistake. It would probably take Mr. Stevenson three years to copy his chart on cloth. Eighteen years' study has produced it. If a man just out of a saw mill, or shoe shop, who cannot read a word of any tongue but English, and who has never read a thousand pages of chronology in his life, thinks he can investigate this subject in a week, and be off preaching it in a fortnight, he needs several more disappointments to teach him that it would take a good deal bigger book to contain what he doesn't know, than it would to hold what he does.

I do not pretend to have thoroughly investigated Mr. Thurman's chronology. I have read some, and heard some. I am not satisfied with it. I respect his diligence and zeal. I admire the splendid chart, the fruit of Mr. Stevenson's life-long labor. I shall never be able to devote time enough to test or examine it all. I thank both these gentlemen for what they have done. And if they are content with credit for what they have done, I freely give it. But if either of them, or their adherents, should set up a claim for infallibility, then they would share the fate of others, who in claiming too much have lost even the honor that they really deserve, by reason of the criticism which is demanded to refute their too confident pretensions.

It is well to investigate these things. But all cannot investigate. There is work to be done, and if either of these men are right, or within ten years of being right, there is something to be done more important than disputing about the matter. If I were employed in editorial duties from week to week, I could perhaps devote time to writing more fully on such subjects. But I have other work. The care of the Young Pilgrim, the publication of books, and the incessant labors resting upon me, as an evangelist, far away from books and home, leave no choice in the matter. I must do my work! And while on the Canadian frontier, with snows four feet deep, and the thermometer thirty degrees below zero, I am enabled to preach about twice a day to the people who will travel from five to fifteen miles to hear the word of God, and who rejoice to embrace his truth and seek salvation through Christ, I must of course leave such investigations to others who have more time or less work to do. With wearied head, and aching lungs, I have written thus much upon this subject. Statements that have been refuted from history again and again, will no doubt still be repeated and reaffirmed by men whose zeal does not allow them to view this subject in any other light. God will however care for his people. Some men need disappointment, and only learn caution in a dear school. Others will more candidly examine, and will both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord.

Of one thing I feel confident, that unless there is more vital godliness among many who boast of being "Adventists," the Lord will be here before they are ready to see him, and some of them may find themselves unable to give a good account with joy and not with grief, of all the time, and talents, and money God has committed to their charge. I pray God that we may all be found faithful whenever that day may come; and that we may wait, not for years and days, but for Christ to come; not for '68 or '66, but for the SON OF GOD FROM HEAVEN. Our waiting time will not be long, and if the days glide slowly, hard work, serving God, will make them move swifter. Busy men never have much waiting to do. Idlers think that sundown is a great ways off. Let us awake and go to work, and work all the time. We do not need nor want a spasmodic "time move," a sudden jump, that will snap chains and whiffletrees, and leave the load out in the gutter; but a steady, long, and strong, and united pull, which will bring the car onward to its destination. May God help us to work while the day lasts, for the night cometh, wherein no work can be done.

Pray for me, my brethren, that God who has counted me faithful, putting me into the service, may keep me amid the perils of these last and solemn days. I hail with joy untold the signs of redemption at hand. But my heart yearns over the perishing and the lost, and I cry, "Lord, send me," wherever souls can be saved, and work done, and where I can best labor in the vineyard of our common Lord. Grace be with you all, now and evermore. Your brother in Christ Jesus,

CHRIST'S COMING A NECESSITY.

There are multitudes of theologians who admit Christ will literally return to earth, and raise the dead saints from their graves, at some future time; but while they concede this fact, they can see no necessity for such a work, because they have imbibed a theory which supersedes this arrangement, and is utterly subversive of this plan,—a theory which claims that endless life, eternal felicity, a perpetual paradise, and a world of immortal pleasures can be gained without this event. Thus the importance of the Savior's coming is thrown into the shade, and the need of the resurrection is absolutely invalidated.

If the bliss of futurity and the realm of repose can be secured without the Lord's coming, and prior to his coming, if he ever comes, then what need of his coming? If we can live forever without it, live with Christ without it, live with angels without it, and forever reign in a happy kingdom without it, the coming of Christ would be but a random mission to earth.

If saints go to Christ at death, and dwell with him in glory, why need he come to earth? If we enter a celestial kingdom at death, what need of setting up one on earth in the future? If death extracts an angel-man from the body-man, and transports it to the home of the angels, is it not well enough off without the coming of Christ? And will the coming of Christ make the saints more than "equal to the angels"? If death places the saint on an equality with angels, and Christ's coming can not elevate above that position, why need he come? But the Savior tells us when we are to be made "equal to the angels,"—not at death, but at the resurrection: "They that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead . . . are equal to the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Luke 20: 36.

The necessity of Christ's coming is made apparent by his promise—"If I go away . . . I will come again and receive you unto myself." If he receives the saints unto himself before he comes again, it would supersede this promise. Would Christ invalidate his own promise? When he affirms, "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me," would he reward them prior to and independent of his coming, which would be to preach one thing and practice another? If he is to "judge the quick and the dead at his appearing," will he give them a home in glory before they are judged? Was not Paul correct in affirming, "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory"? Did not the Savior utter the truth in saying, "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just"?

When Christ comes, it will not be to bring live men out of heaven to earth, but to bring dead men out of their graves, to meet him in the air; it will not be to take men out of their reward to be judged, but to give reward to those who have long been in the prison of death; it will not be to bring a multitude of live saints out of glory and imprison them in clogs of clay; but to cause dead saints to live again, that they may be rewarded.

SIX IMPORTANT RULES.—1. Never lose any time. 2. Never err the least in truth. 3. Never say any ill of a person when thou canst say a good thing of him. 4. Not only speak charitably, but feel so. 5. Never indulge in luxuries not necessary. 6. Do all things with consideration; and when thy path to act right is most difficult, feel confidence in that Power alone which is able to assist thee, and exert thy own powers as far as they go.

A GRAND OLD POEM.

Who shall judge a man from manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings—
Satin vests could do no more.

There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever welling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden,
Hidden, crushed, and overgrown;
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest,
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man, upraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters, rulers, lords, remember
That your meanest hinds are men!
Men by labor, men by feeling,
Men by thought, and men by fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine,
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little weed-clad rills,
There are feeble, inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills;
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me;
For, to Him, all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth or fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same;
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifted up its voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light,
Secret wrongs shall never prosper,
While there is a sunny right;
God, whose world-heard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles,
As the pebbles in the sea.

THE VOICE OF HISTORIANS.

"The Lord's Day"—The True Christian Sabbath.

From Ancient Christianity Exemplified, by Coleman, p. 5.

NUMBER ONE.

"OF THE FESTIVALS OF THE CHURCH.

"1. Preliminary Remarks.

"Sacred seasons are an institution, not of Christ and his apostles, but of the church. No authority for their observance is derived from the canon of the New Testament; neither do they belong to the apostolical age of the church. The churches established by the apostles, in imitation of our Lord and his disciples, observed the times and seasons of the Jews; but it was particularly the office of the Gentiles to admonish the infant church that such observances are not an essential part of religion. He resisted the attempts to impose the yoke of Mosaic ceremonies on Gentile converts. From Jewish converts he removed the oppressive and useless burden of their festivals, and discountenanced the observance of their sacred days.

"But in common with the other apostles, this minister of the Gentiles sanctioned the observance of the first day of the week, instead of the seventh, as the christian Sabbath. This, in obedience to the great command of the Decalogue, was consecrated as holy time; and is in reality the only sacred season of the christian church. All other times and seasons are carnal ordinances, having no Divine authority. The Christian Sabbath, therefore, ought to have the first, the last, the only place in the calendar of the church. Such is its place in the sacred canon. There it stands apart, separate, distinct from all other days, as holy unto the Lord; and there it should stand fast for ever, in the mild majesty with which Heaven has invested the solemn day. It has no affinity or connection with the innumerable holy days, fasts, and festivals, movable and immovable, with which pious usage and papal superstition has crowded the calendar of the church, and by which this sacred day of the Lord was overlaid and lost for many centuries, until brought forth to light and again restored to its original sanctity by the Puritans of the sixteenth century.

"2. OF THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

"The primitive church observed both the Jewish and the Christian Sabbath. The Jewish converts considered the abrogation of the ceremonial law to relate only to their exemption from its burdensome rites; and continued religiously to observe the Sabbath as holy. Converts from Paganism, on the contrary, contemplated christianity as a dispensation altogether new, and the religion of the Jews as totally abrogated. The resurrection of Christ was to them a fixed point, the beginning of this new dispensation, the new passover from bondage to freedom, from death to life. This great event they refused to commemorate on the same day which the Jews observed for another end, and for this purpose they selected the first day of the week. The import of the christian Sabbath they accounted more significant and important than this of the Jewish. The one commemorated the completion of the work of creation; the other the beginning of a nobler work by the great Creator himself, who was light and life to all.

'Twas great—to speak the world from naught;
'Twas greater—to redeem.

The early christian converts, whether Pagan or Jewish, seem not to have been conscious when or where or how the ancient economy was abrogated, and the gospel dispensation introduced. But, in process of time, the one was gradually discontinued and fulfilled in the other. The observance of the Lord's day as the first day of the week was at first introduced as a separate institution. Both this and the Jewish Sabbath were kept for some time; then the Christian began to take precedence of the Jewish Sabbath; finally, the latter passed wholly over into the former, which now took the place of the ancient Sabbath of the Israelites. But their Sabbath, the last day of the week, was strictly kept in connection with that of the first day, for a long time after the overthrow of the temple and its worship. Down even to the fifth century the observance of the Jewish Sabbath was continued in the christian church, but with a rigor and solemnity gradually diminishing until it was wholly discontinued.

"No historical record, sacred or profane, has informed us of the first celebration of the Lord's day, the first day of the week, as the christian Sabbath. It doubtless was very early; probably from the first communication of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. The first day of the week had been signalized by the resurrection and the ascension of our Lord; and now again in the fulfillment of his promise in the miraculous shedding forth of the Holy Ghost upon his disciples while, in joyful expectation of the event, they were all assembled in one place for the worship of their ascended Savior. From this time, it is to be presumed, that they continued to meet on this day, for ever memorable by these remarkable events. No law was requisite for this purpose. The impulse of their own hearts was enough to bring them together on each return of this eventful day.

When Paul was at Troas, the disciples came together, apparently according to established custom, on the first day of the week, to break bread; on which occasion the apostle preached to them. The apostle also directs the Corinthians, on the first day of the week, to lay aside for charitable purposes a certain sum, according as the Lord had prospered them. Here we have, at least, a distinct notice of the reckoning by weeks. What directed the apostle to specify the first day of the week rather than the seventh?

"John, in Patmos, was in the Spirit on the Lord's day. Whence this early and familiar use of the expression to denote a specific day? It is an appellation descriptive of a certain day, given without explanation, as if well understood and in common use. Here is a fair presumption, if not a conclusive inference, that the day was already known by this name because observed as the Sabbath of the christian church. These are all the passages in the New Testament upon which any reliance can be placed as evidence of the religious observance of the Lord's day by the apostolical churches.

"Soon after the age of the apostles, the evidence becomes clear and full that the Sabbath was solemnized in the christian church for religious worship, and kept as holy unto the Lord. Just after the conclusion of the sacred canon, and the death of John the apostle, a persecution was instituted against the christians in Bithynia, in Asia Minor. Pliny the younger, in reporting to the emperor the persecutions that had been held against them, mentions that they were accustomed to meet on a certain stated day, stato die, before it was light, for the worship of Christ as God. This statement is evidence that these christians kept a day as holy time, but whether it was the last, or the first day of the week, does not appear.

"Justin Martyr, who lived about forty years later, says that they (christians) neither celebrated the Jewish festivals, nor observed their Sabbaths, nor practised circumcision. In another place he says that they, both those who lived in the city and they who lived in the country, were all accustomed to meet on the day which is denominated Sunday, for the reading of the Scriptures, prayer, exhortation, and communion. The assembly meet on Sunday, because this is the first day on which God, having changed the darkness, and the elements, created the world; and because Jesus our Lord on this day arose from the dead.

"This sacred day was usually denominated dies Dominicus—the Lord's day; but sometimes, also, Sunday, diem solis, in compliance with the common phraseology, and when it was necessary to distinguish the day in addressing the heathen. During the early ages of the church it was never entitled 'the Sabbath'; this word being confined to the seventh day of the week—the Jewish Sabbath, which, as we have already said, continued to be observed for several centuries by the converts to christianity.

"The author of the epistle of St. Barnabas introduces the Lord as saying, 'The Sabbaths which you now keep are not acceptable to me; but those which I have made, when, resting from all things, I shall begin the eighth day, that is, the beginning of the other world.' 'For which cause,' he adds, 'we observe the eighth day with gladness, in which Jesus rose from the dead, and having manifested himself to his disciples, ascended into heaven.' Tertullian, at the close of the second century, says, 'We celebrate Sunday, (diem solis) as a joyful day.' 'On the Lord's day (die Dominico) we think it wrong to fast or to kneel in prayer.'

"'A true christian,' says Clement of Alexandria, contemporary with Tertullian, 'according to the commands of the gospel, observes the Lord's day by casting out all bad thoughts, and cherishing all goodness, honoring the resurrection of the Lord, which took place on that day.'

"Dionysius, of Corinth, of the same age, in a letter to the church of Rome, preserved by Eusebius, mentions their faithful observance of the Lord's day, and their reading of the Scriptures on the occasion. These authorities are sufficient to show that the Lord's day was observed by christians of the second century for religious worship. The use of the term by those writers may fairly be assumed as explanatory of the same expression in Rev. 1: 10, which, in connection with 1 Cor. 16: 2, and Acts 20: 7, and illustrated by usage of the church in the age following, justifies the belief that, from the beginning, the Lord's day has been observed in the christian church. At first, and for several centuries, it was kept in connection with the Jewish Sabbath; but by degrees the observance of the latter fell into disuse, and the former has ever since continued to be the sacred day of the Christian church." DEFINITE TIME AND ITS DANGERS.

"There's a lion in the way."—PROV. 26: 13.

The question of knowing the times and seasons is no new theme with us; nor is a belief in the time an untried experience. So we do not venture on an "unknown sea" in indulging an interest in time, and I am persuaded that but very few, who have believed time in the past, will report their experience as either turbid or dangerous. I had thought that we were well agreed, as a people, that the time was revealed, and would therefore be understood and become a light to the church; and that those who had forsaken the world and its follies, to wait for the Bridegroom, had found it a blessed experience, having no evil report to bring, though they were disappointed. But the views and feelings of brethren now seem considerably "mixed" on these points. If there are some maintaining the even tenor of their way, who rejoice at the prospect of harmonizing past disarrangements, correcting past errors, and thus restoring past confidence in the clear and manifest fulfillment of every prophecy—prophetic periods not excepted; there are others who are virtually throwing dust in the eyes of those who would search for this desirable light by raising the cry, "There's a lion in the way," either in a thousand imaginary difficulties in getting at the true time, even though it is 1868, or in the supposed ruinous results likely to follow if '68 should not prove to be the true time.

I have never believed the '68 time, nor investigated it with attention, for the reason that I have thought (perhaps incorrectly) that more time would be required to fulfill the predictions concerning Spiritualism than this time allows. But I dare not doubt the fulfillment of every prophecy—a clear, evident fulfillment, understood and believed by the church. The opposing view, and the only one that can be taken by any professed believer of the Bible is, that their application is so obscure that we cannot discern it, or so uncertain that we cannot rely upon it; either of which is derogatory to God, and unworthy any believer of the Bible! And yet this is the common way of disposing of prophecy, both by the professed church and the world. It is well expressed by a D. D., who said, "If God will forgive me for what time I have spent in studying the prophecies, I will never study them any more." If he had said this in reference to studying "the Bible" instead of "prophecy," all would pronounce it infidelity; but it is no less so when said of a large part of the Bible, and especially that part which is expressly declared to be, "not by the will of man," but by "holy men of God, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." The real danger, and that which we ought most to fear, is this danger of unbelief, whether it relates to the whole, or a part of the Bible; to the whole, or a part of prophecy. The prophetic periods must be of service to the church, and must therefore be understood; otherwise they were given in vain. It cannot be said that they are necessary to show when we are near the end, for events abundantly show that without them. Besides, if the periods are reliable measurements, they are definite measurements, reaching from a given starting point to the end.

But if I could suppose any prophecies God has given us would not be fulfilled, or fulfilled but not understood, I could allow such abuse of divine wisdom in relation to any other prophecies rather than those which relate to the period immediately preceding the coming of Christ. It might be said of almost any other prophecies that they could be of service, though not understood till after their fulfillment. But not so with these. As the prophetic periods do not end till the Lord comes, they will be of no service unless understood before he comes. Hence I would not dare believe that the Lord will come till they are correctly understood and applied. And as the light of prophecy is not for a few believers, but for the church, the light on these things will not be to the few who are learned, but to the church.

Again, we should not forget that the last times are to be the most perilous. And as a consequence, those christians who wait for the Lord amidst these greatest perils to the church need more than usual supports to their faith; they can not bear up with less. And hence, if every previous age of the church has had its "present truth," maintaining the prophetic chain complete to the eye of the church till now, 'tis a fearful thought to suppose it broken to the eye of the church at this last critical moment, while Satan's hosts, both men and devils, supplied with all the enginery and skill of their leader, attack in bold defiance every sentence of the Bible. Hence the church needs the light of prophecy now more than in any preceding age. And if it is an impeachment of God's wisdom to suppose his prophecies to fail of a fulfillment, it is equally an impeachment of his faithfulness to suppose the prophetic chain to seemingly break at this critical period for the church! But the chain is seemingly broken already, our opponents themselves being judges. For they admonish us not to rest our faith on any calculation of the prophetic periods for the future, on the ground that we have failed in all calculations in the past. This is virtually doing away with the periods altogether, as either obscure or uncertain. And however "dangerous" it may be to preach and believe definite time, it is far more dangerous to make God's time thus indefinite and uncertain. Since, then, the mind of the church is in a state of suspense approaching distrust with regard to the prophetic periods, we ought to welcome every indication of relief for this suspense. We ought to hail with glad hearts every prospect of a true application of them, when the fault of past mistakes will appear wholly in our miscalculation of them where it belongs. I believe that all the rays of light will concentrate around the true arrangement, and that the wise will search, understand, believe, and wait accordingly. I intend to investigate the '68 argument, willing to be disappointed "seventy times seven times" rather than reject the true time.

And as to the ruinous results of the time movements, a majority of the best brethren among us have passed through one or both of them, and have no regrets for their experience, nor dread of another time movement as ruinous. I would not justify any one in accepting without inquiry, or believing without good reason. But I would admonish every one of the danger of treating God's word as though it were the word of man, or declining to believe or obey it for fear of consequences. As a people, we have never been in a worse state than we are to-day. But as we have never believed time without making us better, and as our best days were when we were believing time, I see no good ground to dread as ruinous the indulgence of a hope that the Lord will come in 1868. I. K. LOMBARD.

THINGS REQUISITE.

Have a tear for the wretched; a smile for the glad;
For the worthy, applause; an excuse for the bad;
Some help for the needy; some pity for those
Who stray from the path where true happiness flows.

Have a hope in thy sorrow; a calm in thy joy;
Have a work that is worthy thy life to employ;
And oh! above all things on this side of the sod,
Have peace with thy conscience, and peace with thy God.

For the World's Crisis.

THURMAN'S ASTRONOMY.

We have for some time past been taught that Mr. Thurman, "by the truth-testing powers of astronomy" had demolished Ptolemy's Canon, upset all previous systems of reckoning, and demonstrated that the Lord would delay his coming for several years certainly, and would finally come in A. D. 1868. This claim as to his astronomical verification of his chronological calculations, has been put forth with great confidence and positiveness. His system has been declared correct, his arrangement all plain, his light clear, and as to his book, it has been said that every person who had a Bible should possess one,—all of which no doubt has been pleasing to the author and publisher of "The Sealed Book of Daniel Opened."

It has also been intimated that Ptolemy's Canon had sealed up the book of Daniel, and that no interpretation previous to about 1820 could have been correct, and that now for the first time it is unsealed "by the truth testing powers of astronomy," and so we are invited to accept the offered light and learn the truth thus revealed to us through this chosen instrument, Eld. William C. Thurman.

I do not see how Ptolemy's Canon could have sealed up the book of Daniel, for the words were closed up and sealed in Daniel's own time, or some five or six hundred years before Ptolemy was born. As to no possible interpretation being correct if it was offered before 1820 or thereabouts it may be true, but if so it overturns the whole "year day" system, the connection of the 70 weeks and 2300 days, the termination of the periods about 1868, and in fact almost all that is asserted on the prophecies, excepting some few points so foolish that none of the abler prophetic students would assert them,—for I think that all these times respecting the book of Daniel were held and published long before 1820, and so by this argument that the right interpretation could not have been given till then, this present theory in many respects, at least, is proved to be wrong. And especially in connection with its times and dates.

But we have been told that astronomy has finally settled the whole matter, and brought order out of chaos, and though I am not at all certain that the correctness of Mr. Thurman's Astronomy would prove the correctness of his theory, yet by his own admissions its incorrectness would subvert the chronology, or impair its reliability. I have therefore been willing to have this matter examined, and since Mr. Thurman appeals to astronomy to astronomy let him go. I am not an astronomer. To ask me to investigate this matter would be just as foolish as to accept the assertions of others who perhaps may be equally ignorant of it, who say that it is all plain and clear. I know that we have been promised that if one hundred persons would subscribe a dollar each they should have published copies of Mr. Thurman's astronomical tables, and by these any man who understands simple mathematics could calculate eclipses, and see for himself whether Mr. Thurman was right or wrong. This may be all correct, but I am unable to view it in that light. I am not much of a mathematician; and I fear should hardly be able to correctly compute eclipses two thousand years distant, even with the aid of these notable tables costing one dollar a copy; others might be more confident. Some persons study many years on such matters, and then are quite ignorant on this vast subject. Mr. Thurman may be able to teach what he knows of astronomy in a little while. I have known persons who could teach all I know about it in half the time, but I fear my pupils would not get through Paris creditably on the strength of it.

But there are men who understand astronomy, and who have investigated the very points which Mr. Thurman has treated upon. Prof. Hudson will probably present the readers of the Crisis with some facts which they record that may bear upon the subject. To get these ancient eclipses recalculated by the ablest astronomers would probably cost thousands of dollars, even if money could purchase it at all. And even then if all Mr. Thurman's astronomy were proved correct it by no means proves his whole theory true, for he may have mistaken or misapplied Scripture, and so be faulty in other directions. But while the investigation goes on, I shall be glad to be apprised of any substantial progress which is being made. I said last fall that it would take at least seven months for any competent person to so investigate Mr. Thurman's theory they could give any reliable opinion as to its entire correctness. We shall see whether it is proved true in less time than that.

When the Bible class at Lowell Street Chapel was arranged, after the close of Thurman's and Stevenson's discussion in Boston, Prof. Hudson requested of an influential elder and editor, and one who is most fully acquainted with Mr. Thurman, the privilege of meeting Mr. Thurman at the class, and of occupying thirty or forty-five minutes in examining him on the subject of his astronomy. This he was not permitted to do, but was offered instead the privilege of a private interview. This Prof. Hudson declined, as he wished what he might say to come before the people interested in the matter. In the course of the conversation, the elder referred to said to Prof. Hudson, in my hearing, in words substantially as follows: "You may not be aware that Mr. Thurman's positions have been submitted to persons who know more about astronomy than you and I both, and that MR. THURMAN IS SUSTAINED." As I am interested in this matter, and as I desire to know the facts in the case, and as I, while President of the Christian Publication Society, by which the "World's Crisis" is issued, desire that it may publish all the truth it can to the world, I ask, as I then did, that the statement of those astronomers who have sustained Mr. Thurman, in their own writing, and over their own signatures, may be published to the world, in the columns of the Crisis. I wish upon these points the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

If fifty dollars have been paid to a man who has computed eclipses for forty years, that he might verify Mr. Thurman's astronomical calculations, and thereby establish his chronology, I want his report published in the Crisis. If he sustains Mr. Thurman, I want to know it. Thurman's chronology is interlinked with his astronomy. They cannot be separated. If by the truth-testing powers of astronomy, Ptolemy's Canon is overthrown, let us have the same tests applied to "The Sealed Book of Daniel opened," by Wm. C. Thurman.

I know that we are now told that the chronology can be settled without astronomy, by the Bible, if we will only admit that Christ was born about the year B. C. 5. But there is the rub—the Bible says no such thing, and it has to be proved by history, astronomy, interpretation, etc., and chronologers, many of them, deny that he was born B. C. 5, and disagree as to the date of his birth. In such an argument as this, we cannot for a moment allow any such begging of the question. If it is true, PROVE IT; and if you cannot, do not ask candid men to believe it.

In view of all these facts, and also of the importance of this subject, I would like to be informed by those who know, as to several matters, such as these.:

1. What proof have we that Wm. Thurman is a competent astronomer? What books has he studied? What observations has he made? What acquaintance has he with logarithms and those higher forms of mathematical computation commonly used in prosecuting astronomical inquiries?

2. By what authority he has altered Ferguson's astronomical tables, which he has used in making his calculations, and whether those tables were correct enough either before or since his alterations, to accurately compute eclipses, occurring at such remote periods, that an error of a minute in a century would overturn the whole arrangement?

3. Whether Ferguson's little tables, (of which I believe I have a copy), made more than a century ago, in the days of pod augurs and wooden ploughs, are not entirely superseded by other tables more accurate, more reliable, and more than an hundred times larger than those of Ferguson? And whether any competent astronomer would, for a moment, think of using those tables, made long before a large portion of our own solar system was ever discovered, to guide him through the vast and intricate researches needful to estimate eclipses occurring so many hundred years ago?

4. Whether astronomical tables of twenty-five or thirty pages, which can be published in the columns of a weekly newspaper, and understood by studious boys in the common schools, would answer for data, upon which to fix a matter of so much importance as that day which God hath appointed, in which he will judge the world in righteousness, by Jesus Christ our Lord?

5. Whether all the eclipses mentioned by Mr. Thurman can be found by other astronomers, using these newer and an hundred times larger tables, made by men whose lives have been given to this science; or whether it requires Ferguson's old tables, with Thurman's alterations, to find the eclipses mentioned in history, and then they prove to be at a distance of six months from the time when the historian quoted says the eclipse occurred? Or in other words, whether it is necessary to use old tables altered, and then to alter the history by six months to make the altered tables and altered history agree, and thus produce a "beautiful harmony," unsealing the book of Daniel, overturning Ptolemy's Canon, and establishing the new theory of prophetic interpretation "by the truth testing powers of astronomy."

I have no theory to serve in this matter. I care not a copper for Ptolemy's Canon, or Thurman's Chronology, further than they may present the truth. I have long had copies of Ptolemy's Tables of dates of Kings' reign among my chronological books. I believe there are differences in the copies that have come down to us, and whether Mr. Thurman's copy, clipped from an old Advent Herald, is correct, I presume, neither he or I can tell just at present. Ptolemy's Canon itself—his Almagest, I never saw till the other day, when Prof. Hudson brought it to my office, and I lost no time in giving Mr. Thurman his first look at the famous book he had been so long debating about. Unfortunately he could not read a line of it, as it is in the blindest kind of Greek, you ever need to see in print.

I listened with interest to the discussion between Messrs. Thurman and Stevenson. But upon some of the vital points which Mr. Stevenson introduced, concerning the evidence of ancient monuments, public records upon enduring marbles, and old inscriptions still existing; Mr. Thurman was entirely uninformed, and hence could not discuss those matters at all, as he knew nothing about them. Mr. Thurman's Theory of the Jubilees is thought to be vital to his system. But so long as the plain record says: "Ye shall hallow the FIFTIETH YEAR, . . . a jubilee shall that FIFTIETH YEAR be unto YOU," (Lev. 25), I am unable to see how he can make two cycles, or jubilee periods, cover only NINETY-EIGHT YEARS, or only FORTY-NINE YEARS, to each jubilee period. Upon other points too numerous to note, the arguments were not entirely satisfactory, and I am unable to acknowledge myself a convert to the opinions of either of these brethren upon the great question.

As to evidence on the coming of the Lord in 1866, or 1868, it does not depend solely upon either of these theories or arrangements; because men have believed and preached both times before either of these systems were known. Till further evidence is produced, I cannot admit that Mr. Thurman's astronomy, his history, his interpretation of Scripture, or his chronology, are entirely satisfactory or reliable to my own mind. The astronomy has been a great point. I want to know whether Mr. Thurman is sustained in this, and whether he is sustained where he differs from other authorities. We want the plain, open facts in the case, as we wish the matter candidly and thoroughly examined in the light of ALL these facts.

With present light, I cannot follow Mr. Thurman, and say "My Lord delayeth his coming" even till 1868, nor could I smite a fellow-servant who thought he would come in 1866, though I am yet unconvinced upon that point. I want all the light I can have. I am glad to have persons investigate the matter. But for persons to suppose that reading Mr. Thurman's book, or looking at Mr. Stevenson's splendid chart of nearly 250 feet in length, is investigating either, is a grave mistake. It would probably take Mr. Stevenson three years to copy his chart on cloth. Eighteen years' study has produced it. If a man just out of a saw mill, or shoe shop, who cannot read a word of any tongue but English, and who has never read a thousand pages of chronology in his life, thinks he can investigate this subject in a week, and be off preaching it in a fortnight, he needs several more disappointments to teach him that it would take a good deal bigger book to contain what he doesn't know, than it would to hold what he does.

I do not pretend to have thoroughly investigated Mr. Thurman's chronology. I have read some, and heard some. I am not satisfied with it. I respect his diligence and zeal. I admire the splendid chart, the fruit of Mr. Stevenson's life-long labor. I shall never be able to devote time enough to test or examine it all. I thank both these gentlemen for what they have done. And if they are content with credit for what they have done, I freely give it. But if either of them, or their adherents, should set up a claim for infallibility, then they would share the fate of others, who in claiming too much have lost even the honor that they really deserve, by reason of the criticism which is demanded to refute their too confident pretensions.

It is well to investigate these things. But all cannot investigate. There is work to be done, and if either of these men are right, or within ten years of being right, there is something to be done more important than disputing about the matter. If I were employed in editorial duties from week to week, I could perhaps devote time to writing more fully on such subjects. But I have other work. The care of the Young Pilgrim, the publication of books, and the incessant labors resting upon me, as an evangelist, far away from books and home, leave no choice in the matter. I must do my work! And while on the Canadian frontier, with snows four feet deep, and the thermometer thirty degrees below zero, I am enabled to preach about twice a day to the people who will travel from five to fifteen miles to hear the word of God, and who rejoice to embrace his truth and seek salvation through Christ, I must of course leave such investigations to others who have more time or less work to do. With wearied head, and aching lungs, I have written thus much upon this subject. Statements that have been refuted from history again and again, will no doubt still be repeated and reaffirmed by men whose zeal does not allow them to view this subject in any other light. God will however care for his people. Some men need disappointment, and only learn caution in a dear school. Others will more candidly examine, and will both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord.

Of one thing I feel confident, that unless there is more vital godliness among many who boast of being "Adventists," the Lord will be here before they are ready to see him, and some of them may find themselves unable to give a good account with joy and not with grief, of all the time, and talents, and money God has committed to their charge. I pray God that we may all be found faithful whenever that day may come; and that we may wait, not for years and days, but for Christ to come; not for '68 or '66, but for the SON OF GOD FROM HEAVEN. Our waiting time will not be long, and if the days glide slowly, hard work, serving God, will make them move swifter. Busy men never have much waiting to do. Idlers think that sundown is a great ways off. Let us awake and go to work, and work all the time. We do not need nor want a spasmodic "time move," a sudden jump, that will snap chains and whiffletrees, and leave the load out in the gutter; but a steady, long, and strong, and united pull, which will bring the car onward to its destination. May God help us to work while the day lasts, for the night cometh, wherein no work can be done.

Pray for me, my brethren, that God who has counted me faithful, putting me into the service, may keep me amid the perils of these last and solemn days. I hail with joy untold the signs of redemption at hand. But my heart yearns over the perishing and the lost, and I cry, "Lord, send me," wherever souls can be saved, and work done, and where I can best labor in the vineyard of our common Lord. Grace be with you all, now and evermore. Your brother in Christ Jesus,

For the World's Crisis.

CHRIST'S COMING A NECESSITY.

There are multitudes of theologians who admit Christ will literally return to earth, and raise the dead saints from their graves, at some future time; but while they concede this fact, they can see no necessity for such a work, because they have imbibed a theory which supersedes this arrangement, and is utterly subversive of this plan,—a theory which claims that endless life, eternal felicity, a perpetual paradise, and a world of immortal pleasures can be gained without this event. Thus the importance of the Savior's coming is thrown into the shade, and the need of the resurrection is absolutely invalidated.

If the bliss of futurity and the realm of repose can be secured without the Lord's coming, and prior to his coming, if he ever comes, then what need of his coming? If we can live forever without it, live with Christ without it, live with angels without it, and forever reign in a happy kingdom without it, the coming of Christ would be but a random mission to earth.

If saints go to Christ at death, and dwell with him in glory, why need he come to earth? If we enter a celestial kingdom at death, what need of setting up one on earth in the future? If death extracts an angel-man from the body-man, and transports it to the home of the angels, is it not well enough off without the coming of Christ? And will the coming of Christ make the saints more than "equal to the angels"? If death places the saint on an equality with angels, and Christ's coming can not elevate above that position, why need he come? But the Savior tells us when we are to be made "equal to the angels,"—not at death, but at the resurrection: "They that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead . . . are equal to the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Luke 20: 36.

The necessity of Christ's coming is made apparent by his promise—"If I go away . . . I will come again and receive you unto myself." If he receives the saints unto himself before he comes again, it would supersede this promise. Would Christ invalidate his own promise? When he affirms, "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me," would he reward them prior to and independent of his coming, which would be to preach one thing and practice another? If he is to "judge the quick and the dead at his appearing," will he give them a home in glory before they are judged? Was not Paul correct in affirming, "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory"? Did not the Savior utter the truth in saying, "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just"?

When Christ comes, it will not be to bring live men out of heaven to earth, but to bring dead men out of their graves, to meet him in the air; it will not be to take men out of their reward to be judged, but to give reward to those who have long been in the prison of death; it will not be to bring a multitude of live saints out of glory and imprison them in clogs of clay; but to cause dead saints to live again, that they may be rewarded.

SIX IMPORTANT RULES.—1. Never lose any time. 2. Never err the least in truth. 3. Never say any ill of a person when thou canst say a good thing of him. 4. Not only speak charitably, but feel so. 5. Never indulge in luxuries not necessary. 6. Do all things with consideration; and when thy path to act right is most difficult, feel confidence in that Power alone which is able to assist thee, and exert thy own powers as far as they go.

AN EPISTLE TO THE SAINTS.

"Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth."—LUKE 12: 33.

That we are living in the days of perplexity of nations, none can doubt who have the spirit of prophecy; and it is equally true that we are living in the last day perils; and while the living church sees the danger of rejecting light and truth, a spirit of investigation is awakened in every honest heart, and the inquiry to know what is truth is often heard. Many in their eagerness to know and do all that God requires, have overreached the mark; while many others refuse to come up to the Bible standard. May the Lord by his Spirit lead us into all truth and save us from error and its spirit.

Some have been, some are still, perplexed to understand what Jesus meant when he spoke those words, "Sell that ye have, and give alms." Some honestly believe he meant all that a man, or the little flock, (which constitutes the church) has in their possession must be sold and given away,—houses, lands, the dear old homestead, and all, in order to obey the command. Now if this be the case, it will come pretty close home; for if we have two garments, we must sell them; if we have a house for our family to live in, we must sell it; if we have a horse and carriage to carry us to meeting, it must be sold, and the family must walk, or stay at home. If a man owns a shop, and a set of tools by which he earns daily bread for wife and children, they must be sold, and alms given. If a house is furnished with suitable materials for a family, such as beds, tables, chairs, dishes, stoves, and all other household furniture convenient for family use, they must be sold, and the proceeds given away. And then what? why, turned into the street, or hire of Cæsar; cannot hire of the brethren, for they must have nothing to rent. O consistency! thou art a jewel.

Our Savior requires nothing of us that will perplex the mind or distress the body. But he means just what he said. You that have of this world's goods in abundance, and have houses and lands you do not need, sell, and give alms to the poor. "Buy not up for yourselves treasures on the earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal."—Matt. 6: 19. Query. Is owning a house to live in, a treasure on earth? Is owning a shop to work in, a treasure on earth? Is owning a horse and carriage to go to the house of worship, or a little chapel to worship God in, a treasure on earth? Is owning a piece of land large enough to support a family, a treasure upon earth? If so, I have not so learned Christ.

The Savior told the young man to sell all that he had, and follow him, and he should have a treasure in heaven. But he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved; for he had great possessions. Mark 10: 21, 22. Jesus loved the young man, and wanted to save him. He had treasure on earth, and his heart was upon it, and that he must give up; he must take up his cross and follow Jesus. Thus only could he be saved. Undoubtedly Jesus wanted him to preach the Gospel, and if he had obeyed he would need no earthly treasure or home; for they that preach the gospel, the apostle Paul tells us, must live of the gospel, and this our Savior very well knew. It is quite probable the young man had no family, and he would find homes among the brethren as he traveled to preach the gospel.

While Jesus had been speaking of the impossibility of a rich man entering into the kingdom of heaven, especially if his heart was set upon riches, Peter heard and felt assured he was all right, for he exclaims, "Lo! we have left all and, have followed thee." Verse 28. Then Jesus said, "There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the gospel, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecution; and in the world to come life eternal." Verses 29, 20. Here the Savior refers us to the laborers in his vineyard.

I have proved the faithfulness of his blessed word, and I never fully understood them until God gave me my commission to go forth and preach the gospel. And how could I have houses, and lands, and homes, if my brethren had none? To the praise of Him that hath sent me, I have houses and lands in the State of Maine, and in New Hampshire houses and lands, in Massachusetts and Connecticut houses and lands, in New York, New Jersey, and Rhode Island, and how could I find them if my brethren did not have them, pray, tell me? I find brethren, and sisters, and fathers, and brothers, that bid me welcome to their homes,—who tell me to make myself at home, for it is mine, while I stay.

I left my children in the hands of the Lord, and went out to preach Jesus to the children of other mothers, and to the glory of God my Father, he has given me, as a portion of my reward in this present time, some spiritual children. To his name be all the glory. The other part of the legacy of the laborer I hope and trust I have been willing to share, namely, persecution, which is promised to all that will live godly in Christ Jesus.

It may be said our Master had no home he could call his own. True, but did he not find houses and homes among his brethren? Did he not find a place of rest in Bethany, with Lazarus, Mary, and Martha? and did they not bid him welcome? Yes, and they were glad to entertain such a guest; and so are all God's dear children glad to entertain pilgrims at their homes; for they know inasmuch as they do it to one of these of Jesus' brethren, they do it unto him. Precious privilege! I have known something of its blessings in former times.

A sister wrote me (in her perplexed state of mind about the selling message) inquiring, What shall we do? we have just got us a little cottage we can call home, for our little family, a place of rest; is it our duty to sell it and give it back to those who gave it us? What is a treasure on this earth? Is it not adding farm to farm, and house to house? Yes, dear sister, it is hoarding up this world's goods, and seeing the poor suffer for daily bread, and shutting up our bowels of compassion against them. How dwelleth the love of God in such a heart? "Sell that ye have, and give alms." "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, . . . that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." 1 Tim. 6: 17, 18, 19.

Do not be alarmed, my sister, if you have a little cottage home. Thank God for the blessing, and the kind donors who helped you after a godly sort. Prepare a little prophet's chamber for me on the wall, or in the roof of the house, that when I come that way I may turn in and rest, like the good prophet Elisha; then I can say, I have a home in N. S.

Thank God for the promises. May He guide us into all truth, prepare us for his coming, and save us in his kingdom. From thy fellow-laborer in the vineyard of the Master,

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, Feb. 28, 1865.

DISCUSSION IN BOSTON.

The undersigned have agreed to hold a public oral debate in East Hall, Boston, on the following question:—"Do THE SCRIPTURES TEACH THE NON-RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED?" The invitation to debate originated with Bro. W. Wendell, who takes the affirmative. The discussion has been arranged to commence on Monday evening, March 13th. Six evenings have been definitely arranged for, and two more evenings conditionally. On the fifth evening the audience shall decide by vote whether there shall be a seventh evening; and on the sixth evening (in case it does not conclude the discussion) it shall in like manner be decided whether there shall be an eighth. The debate will occupy two hours each evening, and the speeches are to be twenty minutes in length. J. F. PICKERING, Esq., has consented to act as Moderator.

RUFUS WENDELL,
MILES GRANT.

PTOLEMY'S CANON.

As the modern systems of chronology are based on Ptolemy's canon, it is a matter of considerable consequence to the Bible student to ascertain whether the foundation is sure or not. There seems to be a difference of opinion about this matter, hence there is cause for investigation. We presume Ptolemy is sufficiently introduced to our readers by this time, so that we need not say more about the man; but many wish to know more about the correctness of his chronological, historical, and astronomical works.

It will be recollected that his canon, or list of kings, extends from B. C. 747, to A. D. 137. We believe there is little or no dispute about the correctness of his canon from B. C. 431 to its termination, which covers a period of 567 years. The dispute is on the first 316 years of his canon. This covers the time when Dániel lived, beginning some time before and ending several years after.

If it be found that Ptolemy's dates conflict with the Bible, which shall we defend? Of course all who have confidence in the Bible will give but one answer,—"THE BIBLE." We trust every reader of this will say AMEN! Ptolemy would be more likely to make a mistake in arranging the dates and length of the reigns of kings from profane authors, who lived six and seven hundred years before he did, than would the Spirit of the Lord, in instructing the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Daniel, who lived at the time those kings reigned.

We think the Scripture prophecy and history is very plain on this point. Let us look at it for a few moments: "Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto the Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks; the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times."—Dan. 9: 25. If we can find who issued the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem," after it was desolated by the Babylonians, then we may know that "sixty-nine weeks," or 483 years, will reach from that point "unto the Messiah the Prince; or if we can tell when Christ was born, we may "know" that if we run back sixty nine weeks, we must strike the point where the commandment went forth "to restore and to build Jerusalem." We cannot vary from this and be right.

Let us now look for the fulfillment of Dan. 9: 25, and ascertain who issued the commandment, and by whose authority. "That saith of Cyrus, he is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure; even saying to Jerusalem, thou shalt be built; and to the temple, thy foundation shall be laid."—Isa. 44: 28. None but Cyrus can fulfill this passage of Scripture. If a dozen others issue commandments to build Jerusalem, they will not fulfill this prophecy of Isaiah. Again we read, "Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut." "I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct all his ways: he shall build my city, and he shall let go my captives, not for price nor reward, saith the Lord of hosts."—Isa. 25: 1, 13. According to Josephus, the prophecy just quoted was given one hundred and forty years before the birth of Cyrus.

Turn now to Ezra 1: 1–5, and we have therecord of the fulfillment of Dan. 9: 25.

"Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying, thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and he hath charged me to build him a house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people, his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the Lord God of Israel, (he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem. And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, besides the free-will offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem. Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit God had raised, to go up to build the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem."—Ezra 1: 1–5.

The foregoing is very plain. What was "the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah," that was to be fulfilled by the commandment of Cyrus? "And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years. And it shall come to pass when the seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the Lord, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, and will make it perpetual desolations."—Jer. 25: 11–12. "For thus saith the Lord, That after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place."—Jer. 29: 10. Here we have "the word of the Lord" to Jeremiah that Cyrus "fulfilled" when he issued his proclamation for the rebuilding of Jerusalem.

All can see that no one but Cyrus can ever fulfill these prophecies, because it is expressly stated that he shall do it. We do not see how the subject can be more clearly defined. If Cyrus does not do it, then the Scripture must be broken; but we have just read the Bible history which declares he did do it; and observe, this commandment must go forth 483 years, or "sixty-nine weeks" before "the Messiah the Prince." It cannot be more or less and fulfill the prophecy in Dan. 9: 25. But according to Ptolemy's canon the decree of Cyrus went forth 536 years B. C., which is forty-eight years too soon; or, in other words, according to Ptolemy's canon, the sixty-nine weeks, if commenced at the decree of Cyrus, would not reach "to the Messiah the Prince" into forty-eight years; but according to Bro. Thurman's arrangement of the kings of Babylon, and Medo-Persia, it is just sixty-nine weeks from the commandment of Cyrus to "Messiah the Prince." Which is in harmony with the Bible? Let us believe the word of the Lord, if it makes every man a liar.

DEATH OF HEROD.

The death of Herod the Great has been dated B. C. 4, by standard writers on chronology. This date has been claimed on account of an eclipse, mentioned by Josephus, in his Ant. B. 17, C. 6, S. 3. He does not give the year of the eclipse, but it has been thought that he referred to a small one which was seen March 13th, B. C. 4. If this were the eclipse, it does not allow time for all the events named by Josephus, which took place after the eclipse, and before the passover of that year, which was April 12th This would be only a month from the eclipse to the passover. But when that passover arrived Herod was dead and buried. But after the eclipse recorded by Josephus, Herod "sent for physicians, and did not refuse to follow what they prescribed for his assistance, and went beyond Jordan, and bathed himself in the warm baths that were at Callirrhoe, which, besides their other general virtues, were also fit to drink; which water runs into the lake called Asphallitis."—Josephus' Ant. B. 17, C. 6, S. 5.

After trying the warm baths satisfactorily, which, it would seem would require a month or more; Josephus says he "came again to Jericho, where he grew so choleric, that it brought him to do all things like a madman." Some time after this he died, and then great preparations were made for his funeral, which was "very sumptuous." A "golden bier" was prepared, "embroidered with very precious stones of great variety." Such a bier would require some considerable time for its construction. After all things were ready for the funeral, he was carried to "Herodium," a distance "of 200 furlongs," at the rate of "eight furlongs" a day, which would have taken twenty-five days. See Josephus' Ant. B. 17, C. 8, S. 3, and Wars, B. 1, Ch. 33, S. 9.

After the funeral, mourning was continued "till the seventh day," then Archelaus, his son, gave "a treat to the multitude, and left off his mourning."

Then "some of the Jews got together; . . . and lamented Matthias, and those that were slain with him by Herod, who had not any respect paid them by a funeral mourning, out of the fear men were in of that man." Josephus says:—"Herod deprived this Matthias of the high priesthood, and burnt the other Matthias who had raised the sedition, with his companions, alive. And that very night there was an eclipse of the moon." B. 17, C. 6, S. 4, C. 8, S. 4; C. 9, S. 1. It should be remembered that all the events we have been considering took place after the eclipse and before the passover, to which we have not yet arrived in the order of the events; and yet there is but one month for all these events, if we take the small eclipse of March 13, B. C. 4.

Next in order after the foregoing, Josephus says:—"Now upon the approach of that feast of unleavened bread, which the law of their fathers had appointed for the Jews at this time, which feast is called the passover, . . . the seditions lamented Judas and Matthias." Josephus B. 17, C. 9, S. 3.

Thus it will be seen if we take the eclipse of March 13th, B. C. 4, and have Herod's death in that year, we have only a month for all the foregoing events, which were completed before the passover.

We will now introduce the reader to an article in the Voice of the West, Feb. 7th, as follows:—

THE YEAR OF THE DEATH OF HEROD.

It is remarkable that so many of the objections urged against Eld. Thurman's system of chronology are in connection with those points where he followed standard writers, supposing there was no dispute in the matter. Thurman's chronology, verified and adjusted by himself, extends to the year B. C. 405. After this period there being, apparently, no contradiction of the Scriptures in the commonly received chronology, he contented himself with verifying those astronomical calculations already made, without special investigation of the adjustment of historic facts.

The eclipse of three digits always seemed small, but as there appeared to be no dispute but that it was the eclipse mentioned by the historian, there seemed to be no call to search for another. We have other means for ascertaining the year of Herod's death than astronomical calculation: and if the facts of history are verified by astronomy, and, what is of more importance, are in harmony with the word of God, we may feel that we have evidence on which we can depend. The historical record fixes the death of Herod B. C. 4 by two undisputed eras,—the Olympiads and Seleucidæ. It is also fixed by the Consular record of Rome. We give the following historical data for fixing the time of Herod's death.

I. In the 184th Olympiad, Herod was confirmed as King by the Roman Senate (Josephus Ant. B. 14, C. 14,) from which period he reigned thirty-seven years. The last year of this Olympiad was B. C. 40: consequently, this is the latest date from which these thirty-seven years can be reckoned.

II. From the taking of Jerusalem he reigned thirty-four years, as Josephus twice affirms. The evidence fixing this year appears to us irrefragible.

1. The city was taken in the 185th Olympiad, which ended B. C. 36.

2. The city was taken in a Sabbatic year. (Ant. B. 15, C. 1.) We find that the third year of this Olympiad—B. C. 37—was a Sabbatic year. Twenty-seven years to a day, previous to the capture of the city by Herod, it was taken by Pompey. Counting back twenty-seven years brings us to the first year of the 179th Olympiad, when, according to Josephus, that event took place. (Ant. B. 14, C, 4, S. 3.)

Again: The death of Antigonus at this time ended the one hundred and twenty-six years' rule (Ant. B. 14, C. 16) of the Asamonians, or Maccabees, which was set up in the 154th Olympiad. One hundred and twenty-six years carries us back to the second year of this Olympiad.

The Asamoneans came in possession of Jerusalem in the 148th year of the Seleucidæ, which answers to B. C. 163. They continued in power one hundred and twenty-six years, which added to B. C. 163 gives B. C. 37 as the time of Antigonus' death; and the thirty-four years of Herod's reign added to this fixes his death B. C. 4.

III. Herod's seventh year synchronizes with the year of the battle of Actium (Wars B. 3, C. 19, S. 3,) which occurred B. C. 31. Hence, Herod's first year must have been B. C. 37.

IV. Archelaus, succeeding his father, Herod, was deposed in his tenth year, which was the thirty-seventh from the battle of Actium. Thirty-seven years added to B. C. 31, brings us to A. D. 7, from which take the ten years of Archelaus' reign, and we have B. C. 4 for Herod's death.

V. Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus A. D. 70. From this point we reckon back to the death of Herod by the reigns of the Roman emperors seventy-three years. The city was taken in the second year of Vespasian. Galba and others reigned about one year; Nero, fourteen; Caius Caligula, four; Claudius, fourteen; Tiberius, twenty-two; and as the first of Augustus synchronizes with the eighth of Herod, his twenty-seventh must also synchronize with Herod's thirty-fourth—the year of his death; hence, we add sixteen years, complete, (seventeen current) of the reign of Augustus, which gives us seventy-three years, reckoning backward, from the destruction of Jerusalem to the year of Herod's death, B. C. 4.

ASTRONOMICAL PROOFS.

I. The date of the battle of Actium, from which Augustus' reign is reckoned, is fixed by an eclipse recorded by Dio, as occurring about sunset, twelve days before the battle. This eclipse of 11 1–2 digits occurred Aug. 20, B. C. 31.

II. An eclipse of the moon is mentioned by Dio and Tacitus, as occurring the year before the destruction of Jerusalem. This eclipse of nine digits occurred at Rome, Oct. 18, A. D. 69.

III. The only other eclipse we shall note in this connection is that mentioned by Josephus. We are satisfied that the eclipse of March 13, B. C. 4, is not the one mentioned by Josephus. We find, by calculation, that there was a total eclipse of the moon at Jerusalem March 23, B. C. 5, which began about fifteen minutes after seven o'clock in the evening—soon after sunset. The moon was totally obscured for more than two hours and a half; the middle of the eclipse being near nine o'clock in the evening. This eclipse gives time for the lingering illness of Herod, and the accomplishment of all that is written by Josephus.

It has been said that Matthias was burned on "the fast," in the seventh month, and therefore we must find this eclipse in August. This view is incorrect. The careful reader will notice that there are two persons of the name Matthias, mentioned by Josephus in Ant. B. 17, C, 6. One was the raiser of the sedition, the other the high-priest; of whom it is said that on one occasion, during the time of his priesthood, another person officiated in his stead "for one day" only—the day of the fast of expiation. But at the time of the burning of the other Matthias and his companions, he was "deprived of the high-priesthood," not for a day, but was deposed, and another high-priest appointed in his stead.

If we take the total eclipse of March 23d, B. C. 5, as calculated by Bro. Thurman, all seems to be harmonious; and as Josephus does not say the eclipse took place in the spring during which Herod died, and as that eclipse was quite a small one, the evidence appears to be very strong in favor of the one B. C. 5, which does not alter the time of Herod's death in B. C. 4.

PREACHING WANTED.

The Superintendent of the Sacramento Mills, East Killingly, Ct., is anxious, in company with others, to have some of our preachers visit that place, and he will see that they are cared for. The people are anxious to hear, and begin to feel like making an effort to obtain the truth. Who will go? Please correspond with Thomas Pray, Jun., Sacramento Mills, East Killingly, Ct.

☞ We hope all will carefully read the article by Bro. I. K. Lombard, headed "Definite Time."

Sow the Seed.

"I wish you to send me some tracts that will do good to a God-forsaken people in a backwood's country, where they drink whiskey, work Sunday, chop wood, play checkers, and are addicted to many other vices which attend whiskey drinking. $1.00 enclosed. I will see what effect they have, and may send for more." W. S. R.

Send it to your Friends.

A brother in Illinois, who sent us thirteen new subscribers in 1864, writes:—

"I am trying to do a little good, and have been sending the Crisis to several of my friends, without their knowing who sent them. I had the pleasure, the other week, of hearing from one of them in Ohio. He belongs to the United Brethren, and writes that the Crisis is "the best paper he ever read in his life." I feel so much encouraged that I enclose in this $1.25 more to send him the paper another six months. Also, the names of two others, with $1.25 for each, to whom you will send the paper, without their knowing from whom it comes. One of them is a Methodist preacher." S. K.

A subscriber writes from Vermont:—

"Please send the Crisis, for six months, to ——. He is a Baptist clergyman, and knows not that we have ordered the paper for him. We desire that all may see the light. (Enclosed $1.25.)" P. C. C.

A subscriber in New York writes:

"I take two copies of the Crisis, one to lend or send away, the other for myself and family. We appreciate it much ourselves, and think it pays well to take another for the good of others." M. F. D.

Enlighten Others.

Sr. M. H. A. writes:—"How can I give up the precious Crisis? I am obliged to live with those that oppose, or do not love the coming of our dear Jesus. With very many others I can say, I love the Crisis better than ever,—love it next to my Bible. I lend it to all who will read it, and some would be glad to take it, but cannot pay for it. I trust that my Crisis has enlightened many, and comforted others. Thank the Lord. Brother, I sometimes fear you will become weary of hearing the same story so often; and then I pray that God would give you patience with the poor of the flock. A few short years ago, I little thought the time would ever come that I could not pay two dollars a year for a paper.

Dear brother, do you not hope Jesus is coming, and coming soon? Yes, I know you do. O how glad I am that I ever heard the joyful sound,—Jesus is coming! Our dear, crucified, risen Lord is coming again. Only think, brother, we shall see him for ourselves. To-day I stand upon his precious word, and am trying to claim all the promises. The language of my heart is,

"Nearer, my God, to thee,
Nearer to thee."

God bless you, dear brother, as a watchman, and bless you as an editor. Let us wait patiently, pray fervently, believe firmly, that we may go in to the marriage of the Lamb."

MORE GOLD RINGS.

Two more gold rings have been sent in from a subscriber in Rockingham County, N. H., with the following note:—

"I saw your article on the wearing of gold rings, and it reminded me of some which I have. I take the liberty of sending them to you. Please sell them both; send me the Social Hymns, and put the rest into the Poor Fund. If I had more, I would send them all to you. I was once a professor of religion. I am not now. I am just as far in the dark as I ever was. Yet I hope, sometime, to be a christian again." MRS. A.

Why not now? His Spirit will not always strive. Resisted, grieved away, he may never return. You are not sure of to-morrow; and to-morrow may be too late. The Judge is at the door! Now is the accepted time. "Be wise to-day; 'tis madness to defer."

Here comes another from a sister in Middlesex county, Mass.:—

"I send you the only article of jewelry worn by me for many years,—my wedding ring. Twelve years ago, it was put on my finger by my husband, with a request that I would never take it off. But now, with his consent and approval, I send it, though it had to be filed from my finger. It is not without a struggle that I part with it, for I prize it very highly, not as an ornament, but, as a token of affection; yet, having felt for some years that it was not right for christians to wear such things, I give it willingly to the Lord, that it may do somebody some real good. Please put it into the Bank of the Lord's Poor; and may the blessing of the Holy One go with it, to the comfort and joy of some one of his humble waiting ones." MRS. H.

It will. But, alas, how many there are, even among those who profess to be looking for the Lord, who bring upon themselves leanness, and spiritual alienation and death, by a love for these things. The spirit of the world is creeping in, and the spirit of Christ going out. "Not every one that SAITH unto me, 'Lord! Lord!' shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that DOETH THE WILL of my Father which is in heaven." What is his will, with regard to external ornaments?

"I will . . . that the women adorn themselves in (chaste) apparel, with (modesty) and sobriety; NOT with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but, which becometh women professing godliness, with good works." 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10. (The parentheses as in the Syriac.)

"And (1 Pet., Syriac, 3: 3, 4) adorn not yourselves with the external ornaments of curls of the hair, or of golden trinkets, or of costly garments. But adorn yourselves in the hidden person of the heart, with a mild and unexcited spirit, an ornament that is precious before God."

Would you enjoy the favor of God, gentle reader? Do his will. Then shall thy peace be like a river, and his love and grace like an unfailing stream. W. B. H.

BRO. GRANT:—Through our heavenly Father's care and kindness we live to see the close of another month, with strength still to labor in his vineyard, and with a hopeful heart that the seed which we sow in weakness will with the aid of his Spirit bring forth fruit to his glory. We feel the magnitude of the trust committed to us, and are striving, in the strength of Him who has promised all needed help to his children, to perform it faithfully. During the past month, I have delivered twenty-five lectures and have preached very plainly upon the importance of becoming dead to sin, and also of the burial which the Scriptures teach us should follow this death. But to the Vaudois of the present day, the plain Bible doctrine of believers' baptism by immersion is not palatable; they having entered the church in infancy by christening. Furthermore, none but those who have been subjects of this ordinance of man's device have a right to burial in their consecrated cemeteries (?). But though it will be very hard for them to leave their time-honored traditions for the doctrines and ordinances of the gospel, yet deep in the hearts of many of them is a reverence for the word of God which will, I trust, in many cases prove stronger than their veneration for their church, in which the doctrines of men are, in many respects, substituted for the faith of the gospel. There are some who have already decided to bear this heavy cross, but though I consider it my duty to present the truth on this subject and leave it to their consciences, I feel in no haste in regard to the matter. First of all, I desire to see those to whom I preach, living, active christians.

Another subject I am trying to impress upon their minds is, the importance of improving upon the talents which God has entrusted them, of being faithful stewards of God. You, my dear brethren and sisters, who are accustomed to use a part of your means for the support of the gospel, and the spread of its glorious light among those who are in darkness, to respond to the many calls for aid for this and that object of benevolence, can hardly realize the state of things here, where societies for the spread of the gospel are unknown. Rather this church, which claims to be the oldest christian church, looks abroad for help; instead of giving, it expects to receive. We ought, however, to be charitable as possible in our judgment of them, and consider that for centuries they were ground down by the most cruel despotism and persecution, and that God preserved them from being exterminated by their persecutors by means of the protection and pecuniary aid of Protestant Europe; by this assistance their churches were rebuilt, schools established, their preachers supported, this persecuted people were sadly in need of such assistance. Thus it became a habit to receive, and habit, we know, is "second nature." Through this foreign assistance they have not only lost much of the simplicity of the gospel, but have contracted the habit of mendicants. Still there are many excellent people among them who seem to desire and aim to do the will of God; but they have been very badly conducted. Many of them have ability to do much for the spread of the gospel, and I hope that by degrees their hearts will be enlarged, and that they will with willing hearts make the sacrifices that are required of them, and their feet will occupy a larger place.

The two young men whom I mentioned in my last report, who are preparing to become evangelists, are making good progress in knowledge of Bible truth, and seem to be consecrated in heart to the great work in which they purpose to spend their lives. I hope soon to have some assistance from them in this extensive field of labor. My time is so entirely occupied in missionary labor that I have no time at present to do anything for the support of my large family. For two months past we have been under the necessity of living mostly on credit. Please to send us help immediately. M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

ERRATUM.—In last week's "Lessons in Astronomy" the last line of the first column is dislocated, as sometimes happens in "making up" the form for the paper. It should be the third line in the paragraph beginning, "As soon as the acceleration," etc., near the middle of the next column.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

One thing I notice in my winter campaign, —the preaching on the signs of these times is blessed of the Lord. There is a disposition to hear and believe the truth, when properly set forth. I have seen in every instance a conviction rest down upon the congregation.

Without taking up each place separately I will say, in nearly every place I find the churches coming up on higher ground, and letting alone those little bones of contention that have led to so much evil surmising, which only scatter the flock and destroy the weak. Amid all the difficulties and trials caused by the unwise and unworthy getting in with us for selfish purposes, God has kept some at work to sustain our identity as a prophetic people that came out on the light we had then, and ate the "little book," which was meat in due season, and tasted sweet then, but, according to scripture, soon became bitter; and we have been fasting three full weeks (twenty-one years), longing for more of the same kind of food, i. e., good evidence of the Lord's soon coming; while others have gone back into Egypt, and are living on leeks and onions, almost ashamed to own what they once believed. But some, thank God, have kept the word of his patience, and he has promised to keep them in the hour of temptation that is coming on all the world. See Rev. 3: 10–12. This is now being fulfilled.

There is another time coming when the "little book" must be eaten again, after the tarrying time, and while the evil servants are trying to prove the Lord delayeth his coming. See Jesus in Matt. 24: 48–51, and Peter's scoffers that were to contradict some one that was giving meat in due season, i. e., preaching the signs of the Lord's soon coming. These evil servants or aristocratic, genteel priests, have done their part in fulfilling prophecy, that was to give character to the last days, and have done their smiting, as Jesus said they would. See Matt. 24: 48. Now they are eating and drinking with the drunken in every sense of the word; and as the old backslidden Jews permitted their house of prayer to be turned into trading or gambling shops, just before the Lord came to drive them out, so now the aristocracy of the second house, the Gentiles, have done their scoffing, and God has left them to go into the world, and it has become popular to take the houses of prayer for trading and gambling shops, eating and drinking with the drunken,—with the cares of this world, as Jesus has said, if nothing more. But as they have had three weeks (twenty-one years) feasting, we have had the same time waiting and fasting, and God is about giving us more of that time meat that tasted so sweet. It never is to be bitter but once after eating. These popular feast days are to be turned into mourning soon.

I had great liberty in preaching this in Portsmouth. God set it home with power, and many came out and acknowledged it. Others will, I know. This is the truth for this time. H. MUNGER.

For the World's Crisis.

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER EIGHT.

This has been fulfilled from the time of Luther down to 1793 and 1798, when the Pope was taken prisoner by Gen. Berthier by order of Bonaparte, in which state he died in France. Since which time the man of sin has not only lost both his ecclesiastical, spiritual, and temporal power (virtually), but in 1848 he lost his possessions. At that time he dressed himself up in the garb of a menial and fled from his own subjects to a place near Gaeta, called Hell. On his approaching, an earthquake shook the place, and hell opened, which caused the man of sin to retrace his steps. He then went to Naples.

Dr. Cumming, remarking on the event, in his Lectures on Daniel, says: "And as if the very elements were sustaining men in their efforts to destroy him, not the man, Pius IX., but the personation—the head—the representative of Babylon,—we find no sooner was he settled in his recent place of retirement than the earthquake rocked the soil, and Vesuvius burst out with preternatural fury; and the Pope himself, who fled from his people, was flying from the burning element as if the foretokens of the predicted downfall of Babylon were accumulating and thickening every day.

Mr. Elliot, the great commentator, speaking of it, says, "That which nothing else has been able to effect, the eruption of Vesuvius has effected,—the flight, or rather the removal, of the Pope.

A host of others believe that that gigantic despotism is to be literally burned with fire, and that there are volcanic elements enough in Italy, not only to account for, but to lead us to expect, so terrible and so consuming a catastrophe." The Pope may not think so, for in 1860 he said that the "ceasing of his temporal power would be the death of all society. But God will not allow the Popes to be overthrown. I pray that the Almighty may remove the storm which threatens the whole of society. The Pope would fain make the world believe that he is the mainstay. But the three mitred beast inwardly knows that his end is near. Else why his reply to the French officer, "God has decreed my downfall"? Yes, he knew that from the time the word "mystery" was discovered written on his forehead (on the front of his mitre) by Martin Luther and the Reformers (as affirmed by Scaliger), his power would diminish. When the Reformers read the seventeenth chapter and fifth verse,—"And upon her forehead was a name written, "Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth." John Wesley also affirms that this very word, Mystery, was on the mitre; and certain it is, that from that day to this the word mystery has never been on the mitre,—a sure token of identity and guilt. "'Tis the thief that fears each bush an officer." "For what hath innocence to do with fear?"

One word here on the origin of the mitre, and I pass on. In the seventh chapter of Daniel, eighth verse, it reads, "I considered the horns, and behold there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots; and behold in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things,"—professing to sit in the place of God; having or claiming complete power to forgive all sin, however bad it may be, sending mankind either to hell—purgatory or heaven, as the case may be with respect to each. Catholic Bishops wish to be received in all churches as Christ himself. The twenty-first verse reads that this horn (Papacy) shall make war with the saints of the Most High. And history, too, truly affirms that from fifty to one hundred millions of saints have been put to the most horrid deaths by this blasphemous and cruel power. The three horns, or kingly powers, uprooted by the little horn (out of the ten kingdoms which were formed out of the Roman empire, about the latter end of the fifth century, or beginning of the sixth) were the Vandals, the Ostrogoths, and the Lombards; these three were absorbed by the Pope, and formed at this time the three estates of the (Papal) church, represented by the Pope's mitre, or triple crown, which he wears on his head at this very time as a tiara, or three-crowned cap, to denote the three kingdoms or horns which he rooted up, and over which he now governs.

And is this not another positive proof that the Pope, or the Papacy, is mentioned in the Scriptures of truth? For at every time when the Roman empire has been divided into ten parts, or kingdoms—instance about the year 900, 1214, and 1700—the three estates have always been with Rome, although it may be said that the Pope now governs it only by foreign (or French) power; pretty much like the sick man of Turkey. And even this power will not sustain him long; for by a recent treaty of Sept. 15th, 1864, between Louis Napoleon and Victor Emmanuel, king of Italy, the French troops have to leave Rome before Sept. 15th, 1866; when the Pope may exclaim in the language of Cardinal Wolsey, "Farewell, farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness." JOHN TAYLOR.

Belshazzar's Feast!

Respectfully commended to those who may patronize, or approve of the "INAUGURATION BALL," to come off in Washington, on the evening of the 4th of March, 1865.

BY HUMANITAS.

The King had met a thousand of his lords,
To pass the night in revelry and mirth:
All went on gaily, till those fearful words
Upon the wall to saddening thoughts gave birth.
BELSHAZZAR, when he saw the hand that wrote,
Declaring near his kingdom's overthrow,—
Alarmed, "his knees against each other smote,"
Till he did fearful signs of terror show.
So, even now, men high in place are found,
The voice of God in judgment will not hear;
Who'll dance and revel at the viol's sound,
When signs betoken sorer judgments near:
"O that they knew the things which make for peace,"
Then would such wickedness and folly cease.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

BRO. GRANT:—May grace, mercy, and peace be multiplied to you and the readers of the Crisis, and to all who love Jesus and his coming.

Since my last, I visited Hartford, and attended two social meetings. Found some good souls, with the spirit of kindness, of hospitality and liberality. Called at Bristol, expecting to stop over Sunday, but found an appointment prior to mine; so I made my way to Prospect on foot. Although I am sixty-five years old, I still keep on in the old pilgrim way, and find it a very cheap and economical, as well as healthy, mode of traveling, and can recommend it to my brethren in the ministry. I feel quite satisfied with the brethren where I go; never have had an occasion to complain, for I never go expecting to receive anything. I go out of a sense of duty, looking to my Master for my support and reward. I do believe it is the duty, yes, and privilege, of those who are taught, to communicate to those who teach in all good things.

At Prospect met the brethren at Bro. Mix's. We had a meeting Saturday evening, and Sunday three discourses. We divided the time. The good Spirit was present to bless. We noticed, however, a disposition to make light, to treat with contempt and ridicule, the children of God, and the doctrine of God's word. I have seldom seen so much boldness in wickedness, as was there manifested; and by boys, too. The next day, the ringleader of the gang was taken for theft, and committed to durance vile. The brethren and sisters in Prospect are strong in faith, rooted, grounded and settled in the truth.

I then made my way to Yalesville, where God is reviving his work, and several have just come to the knowledge of the truth, and yielded their hearts to God. Others are inquiring what they shall do to be saved.

At Wallingford there is a band of good brethren, well engaged, waiting for, and expecting, the coming King and his kingdom. They have a neat chapel, and an interesting audience. In all my travels, I have never received so liberal a contribution. I rejoice and praise God; not that I desire a gift, but I desire fruit that may abound to their account. Yours, affectionately,

Cheshire, Ct. B. SPAULDING.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

Dear Sisters scattered abroad:—I have received some eighty letters in reference to our Convention, but have not been able to answer but one of them. Will the sisters pardon me and have patience and write me again. I have been preaching every afternoon and evening for the last eighteen weeks, and cannot get an opportunity to write only what I send to the Crisis. Sometimes I come in from visiting the sick and dying, and I am so weary I do not know what to do with myself; but I find three or four letters to read from my dear sisters of the same precious faith, and it rests me and renews my strength. God bless you, sisters.

I am now very sick, from a cold and cough that I received on our raid to Hackensack. We have made our second raid on that place, and took nineteen souls as prisoners of hope. Bless the Lord! You see I can afford to get a cold, or anything else, when the Lord does such a work as this. While I am sick in body I praise God with all my soul that he is preparing himself a people to meet him at his coming. O what a mighty army there will be in that day! I do not wonder that John thought no man could number them. Glory to God for the prospect of seeing that great number, and seeing Him who redeemed them! I praise the Lord for a religion we can feel in the soul. Sick or well, all the way along, it is Jesus. Sisters, will you pray for me, that I may soon be well if it is our dear Father's will, that I may still work for him.

Please write, sisters, what subjects you will select for the Convention. I have had but one response, and that sister selected the Inheritance of the Saints; "what it was, what it is, and what it will be."

I go next week to Philadelphia to see what are the arrangements for the Convention. Sisters, pray that God may order every step for his own glory. Waiting for redemption,

A. E. SMITH.

P. S. As I close this letter, I receive an invitation from the church at Poultney, Vt., to hold the Convention there, with a promise of accommodations for the delegates. Thank you, friends. I will hold up both hands for that place. A. E. S.

From Bro. W. McClellan.

BRO. GRANT:—I suppose you and the readers of the Crisis are always pleased to hear from brethren in Canada as well as from your own countrymen holding views similar to yours.

About three years ago I came out and began to preach what some suppose to be new doctrines, viz.: the mortality of man, the second coming of Christ and the resurrection the christian's hope,—but which in reality are the old doctrines of the Bible.

Having been a Baptist over thirty years, and a minister for fourteen years, I found the task a hard one, and was expelled (from the church that I loved and had labored with twelve years), only five or six voting for my expulsion. All so-called Orthodox, chapels were closed against me. Since that time my labors have been principally confined to the village, a hall being rented and meetings held there, no other place being open for preaching in the village. The friends are poor, and the congregation small; but, worse than all, divided in opinion. No spirit but the word, non-resurrection of the wicked, etc., and but few in number, and these cold and lukewarm. I became discouraged, and ready to give up preaching.

Just at this time Bro. Henry Stevens, of Fonthill, C. W., in compliance with a request, made us a visit about the last of December, 1864, and remained preaching nearly every evening for some twenty-five days, having the best attendance of any Advent preacher that had visited this place. Quite an interest was felt during the meetings. Very few of the Orthodox attended. No minister of the place was seen at the meetings. One was baptized. Several lectures were given on the time question, which were new to many in this place.

This brother is a sound theologian, and a good reasoner. He advanced his views in a clear manner. If his expositions are correct, 1868 will bring the good time to the faithful christian. I feel to say, Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly! The friends here are more united, and quite revived, and if they are faithful, others may be baptized soon.

Now, dear brother, I do not regret the stand I have taken, for I love God's blessed truths. If the truth causes expulsion and persecution, let them come. The Savior whom we love will soon come and reward his followers. Pray for us, that the Lord will keep us from error and guide us into all truth. Yours, looking for Christ, W. MCCLELLAN.

Norwichville, C. W.

From Bro. Henry Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—I find a greater desire to hear and read concerning the things which are coming, than formerly. People that once would not be seen with the Crisis in hand are now anxious to peruse its contents, and sanction its teachings publicly; and the general response is, "I believe a terrible scene is before us."

Mr. P. P. Stewart, of stove notoriety, Troy, N. Y., says, "I don't entirely endorse your views, but I believe all the wicked will be swept off in this struggle. Dea. Jones, of the Baptist church, South Adams, says (after listening to a lecture on the 17th of Rev.), "We have no right to be ignorant of prophecy. I have been for a long time interested in the events of prophecy, and am watching with interest the judgment on Papacy." An influential Methodist brother says, "The Crisis is the best religious paper in the country."

I can hardly repress my gratitude to God for his wonderful goodness in opening my eyes to behold the approaching judgment. Yes, along with the evidence of hundreds of authors that the periods of Daniel and John terminate in 66–'68, many who wrote nearly a century ago, comes the accumulating signs in heaven, earth, and sea.

Unmistakably are men's hearts failing them for fear of coming events. "Distress of nations, with perplexity." How truthfully fulfilled before our eyes. Hear what the Independent says, after showing the condition and unsettled state of the nations: "Thus a glance all around the world to-day shows us a singularly extended state of war, rebellion, disorganization, DISTRESS, and UNEASINESS." What causes uneasiness more than perplexity? Men feel it, men realize it; would to God that men understood it. H. PRATT.

Wales, Mass.

From Bro. Wm. E. Moss.

BRO. GRANT:—It is almost ten years since I left Connecticut and came West. I have often thought of the precious seasons I once enjoyed with you and many other dear brethren in Litchfield and vicinity. How often I have been fed with the bread of life as I sat under your preaching. Since then I have passed through many trials and afflictions. I have buried one little boy and my kind companion, who died a year ago last August, happy in a Savior's love.

It is sad to be thus isolated from the dear brethren. I have not had the privilege of listening to a sermon from the people of my choice since I came West. I had almost made up my mind I should never hear any more the sweet sound of Jesus near coming, and that tender, loving spirit of Christ. How it used to melt our hearts together when we spake often one to another. Did not our hearts burn within us? I have not forgotten it all, thank God, and have never been ashamed of my hope.

God, in his mercy, at last has permitted Sr. Henry to visit us, Jan. 30th. She spoke three evenings to a crowded house. Sr. Henry has also been preaching in Alden a week or more with good success.

Obituaries.

N. CHAMBERLIN.

Killed in the battle before Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 16th, 1864, Napoleon, son of Nathan and Martha Chamberlin, aged twenty-six years and eleven months.

Napoleon was a kind and affectionate child, possessed with a cheerful and lively disposition. We were looking forward with great anxiety for his return, as he had only eight months more to serve. We had hoped to have him for our staff and support in our declining years, but our hopes are blasted. He was the oldest of six sons. Four we laid away some years ago in the dreamless sleep of death; our only remaining child is in the service of his country, with two years more to serve, which renders our grief double. Yet we sorrow not like those without hope, for we believe our dear son sleeps in Jesus. He professed religion a few years ago. He has often spoken in his letters of the uncertainty of his returning; said if he never returned, he was trying so to live that he could meet us in a fairer clime. Blessed hope! when this dark night of sorrow is over, earth's parted friends will meet, where the alarm of war will not be given, nor the sound of cannon again be heard. He has left an affectionate companion, who deeply mourns with us in our affliction.

MARTHA CHAMBERLIN.

ELD. CHARLES L. PAGE.

Died in Utica, Winona Co., Minn., Jan., 1865, of congestion of the liver, Eld. Charles L. Page, aged forty-four years and two months.

Another disciple of the blessed Lord has been laid away to rest awhile from the toil and strife of this world of sorrow and care; but he sleeps in Jesus, and will surely awake at the sound of the voice of the Son of God when he speaks to life the dead.

Bro. Page lived a christian life for many years, during which time, by his consistent course, he secured the confidence of those who knew him, not only as a christian, but also as a faithful minister of the WORD. He died in the faith of the soon coming of Jesus, and being made like him when he comes. The physician, his dear companion, son, and others, had the privilege of seeing and conversing with him (during his short illness of four days and away from his home) a short time previous to his death, and although he desired to live and do good, yet, said he, "The will of the Lord be done." To his dear companion (while embracing her in his arms) he said, "Weep not, for all is well with me." The church has lost a valuable member, a faithful sentinel, who died at his post; the wife an excellent husband, and the children a kind and affectionate father; yet they are not hopelessly mourning, but joyously anticipating the day when they shall meet brother, husband, and father to part no more forever.

Our sister has not only been called to lay aside her loving companion, but also a little son of some five or six years old, some two months before; which makes her home desolate; but the presence of Jesus will scatter all the gloom, and make all our future prospects bright and glorious. May His presence ever abide with thee, my dear sister, supporting thee, not only in this thy deep affliction, but in all the trials through which thou mayest be called to pass ere thou reachest the happy Eden home.

The funeral was attended by the writer at the Dudley school-house, on Sunday, Jan. 29th, where a large circle of friends assembled to sympathize with the bereaved. PHILIP RAMER.

DANIEL YOUNG, JUN.

Died in Woburn Centre, Mass., Jan. 17th, 1865, Mr. Daniel Young, Jr., son of Daniel and Betsy Young, of Wakefield, N. H., aged thirty-nine years.

He professed faith in Christ in 1842, and maintained his character until the day of his death, when between the hours of eleven and twelve, A. M., he took his own life. From the first of December up to the time of his death, he complained of distress in mind and body. Often said to his beloved companion, "I will not worry about the shop so much." He was a patent leather dresser by trade, and doing a good business, and we can give no reasons whatever for his committing the rash act.

We have many reasons to think he was not in his right mind. He was a firm believer in the second coming of Christ, and the sleep of the dead, and literal resurrection. We have had many sweet seasons with him in prayer and conference meeting. We commend his afflicted wife and numerous friends to the Lord, who has said cast thy burdens upon the Lord, for he careth for you.

BETSY JONES.

Died in West Thompson, May 12th, 1864, after a short illness of diphtheria, Betsey Jones, aged sixty-nine.

She was a person rich in faith, not only in Christ as a great Savior, but in the providence of God, of which she had often seen striking manifestations. She was among those that truly loved the blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God, our Savior, and was often found where this great truth was proclaimed. She always took one or more Advent papers.

Her sickness was very short. About an hour before she died, she said, "I must die soon," disposed of her things, told where she would be buried, and said, "Now pray that I may go quick and easy," and died, with an angelic smile on her countenance, believing that those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Quietly sleep, beloved one;
Rest from thy toil, thy labor is done;
Rest till the trump from the opening skies
Bid thee from dust to glory arise.

E. A. TALBOT.

M. KETZEBACK.

Died in Utica, Minn., Sept. 11th, 1864, Mary R., wife of Henry Ketzeback, aged fifty-six years, eleven months, and seven days.

Thus death has laid its cold and icy hand upon a kind companion and indulgent mother. Her sickness was very severe, which she bore with great patience. Two days previous to her death she called her husband and children around her bed, gave them good advice, and urged them to prepare to meet her in the kingdom of God. With great calmness and composure she made all necessary arrangements for her departure; selected her burial place, likewise the text, then calmly fell asleep in Jesus to await the trump of God. She has left a companion and eight children to mourn her loss. Words of comfort were spoken by C. L. Page, from Jer. 9: 21. M. CHAMBERLIN.

ALFRED CHURCHILL.

Died in Wolcott, Ct., Oct. 31st, 1864, of heart disease and paralysis, Alfred Churchill, aged sixty years.

For three months he was unable to labor. At first he hoped to recover, but no medicine checked the disease; and as he found himself failing, he made up his mind he must die. When he talked with me about it, he said he did not have that assurance he wished, but knew that he loved the Savior. At the last he suffered very much, but bore all with patience. I think my dear husband sleeps in Jesus, and will come up in the morning of the resurrection. He was a firm believer in the doctrine of the Advent near. S. CHURCHILL.

JOSIAH CRAWFORD.

Died in Athol, Mass., Feb. 1st, 1865, Josiah Crawford, aged twenty-five years.

Bro. Crawford embraced the blessed hope about two years since, and was an active and consistent christian. Though dead he yet lives in the memories of the little church at Athol.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool Feb. 9th, Queenstown 10th.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says when the French Minister (M. Mercier) was recalled from Washington, the Americans were led to understand that no new agent would be accredited until President Lincoln should have recognized the Emperor of Mexico. This recognition has not been forthcoming, and there is no French Minister at Washington, and it is believed that Mr. Bigelow will continue to act as United States Charge in Paris for some time.

The Times observes that as there is time for reflection, it can hardly doubt that the bearing of both the British and Canadian Governments will convince the Americans that they have no cause of offense, and that the policy of retaliation will be as unjust as it is unwise.

Gen. McClellan's arrival in England produced some press encomiums, but he left Liverpool too speedily for any demonstration in his honor.

AUSTRIA.

The Minister of Police, at a sitting of the Finance Committee, declared that at the end of February all Poles confined in Austrian towns would be released and provided with twenty-five florins each for the the expenses of their journey out of Austria.

DOMESTIC.

The Evacuation of Charleston.

The following interesting particulars respecting matters at Charleston were brought to New York by the steamer Fulton:

"The departure of the rebels from Fort Sumter and Moultrie was, it is understood, seen from our picket-boats which reconnoiter the harbor at night; and the operations of the rebel garrisons began about twelve hours before the evacuation was completed—namely, at ten o'clock on the evening of the 17th.

Early in the morning of the 18th, two terrific explosions in Charleston were observed from our fleet. Fire, smoke and burning fragments filled the air for a great distance; and the shock was severely felt by all our vessels.

Soon afterward, and before daylight, fires were set in other places, and extended throughout the upper part of the city. It has since been ascertained that many thousand bales of cotton were burned in consequence of the explosions of the warehouses and other public buildings that were fired by the rebels.

It appears that the rebels who remained to the last were not well organized, and a majority of them were thieves, whose object in staying was plunder. It is reported by the inhabitants of the city that these men were guilty of many disgraceful acts. They had little difficulty in effecting their escape with their booty.

Several hundred rebel deserters were concealed in the houses in Charleston, and when our troops entered they surrendered, declaring that they were tired of the rebellion, and would no longer fight for it. They were received as prisoners.

Crowds of negroes met our troops, and made many demonstrations of joy. There were men, women and children. They wanted food; many of them said they would be glad to work; some proposed to take up arms against their masters.

The population of Charleston consisted entirely of the poorer classes, who were unable to get away; the rich had for several days been removing. The persons who remained were in want; they had nothing to eat, and no means of obtaining anything. Their situation is described as much worse than that of the inhabitants of Savannah after the capture of that city.

The lower part of the city within reach of our guns was in effect a ruin, and was almost uninhabited. Comparatively few persons dared to remain there. Some of the houses were knocked down; bricks and timbers were laying everywhere, and the streets in particular were strewn with the fragments, in many places entirely obstructing travel. Shells were lying among the ruins. The appearance of the city—the lower part uninhabitable and the upper part in flames—is described as dreary and desolate in the extreme.

There is information that the evacuation of Charleston began nearly three weeks ago. A rebel officer, who deserted and was examined at Port Royal, gave some of the details, but they were not then believed. Since that time the rebels have been at work removing stores, though all the heavy supplies were left. The only information in regard to the rebels is, that the direction taken by them in their flight was northward, and that their number was about fourteen thousand. An expedition of Union troops to Bull's Bay a short time before the evacuation was, it is understood, intended to cut the railroad north of the city; but, if successful, it could have prevented the escape of only a few of the rebels.

Capture of Fort Anderson.

Washington, Feb. 23. Gen. Schofield makes the following report of Fort Anderson:

Fort Anderson, Feb. 19,
via Fortress Monroe, Feb. 23, 1865.

To Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant, City Point, Va.:

General:—I have the honor to report the success of our operations against Fort Anderson and the adjacent works on both sides of Cape Fear River.

Yesterday, while the guns maintained a heavy fire upon Fort Anderson, I pressed the enemy on both sides of the river, and sent a force under Gen. Cox about sixteen miles around a swamp, to turn the enemy's right. This force made its way along a narrow defile between two swamps, and completely turned the enemy's position. As soon as the movement became known to the enemy he abandoned his works and retreated toward Wilmington. We captured ten guns (uninjured) and a considerable amount of ammunition. We have about fifty prisoners. The loss in killed and wounded is small on either side. The troops are pursuing the enemy, and the gunboats are moving up the river.

Fort Anderson and its collateral works are very strong and rendered almost inaccessible by swamps. A small force could have held them until their supplies were exhausted.

My information is that the rebels have a line of defenses beyond Tom Creek, where they propose to make a stand. If so, it can probably only be a short one. I am, General, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. SCHOFIELD.,
Major-General Commanding.

Washington, Feb. 24—9.45, A. M.

To Maj. Gen. Dix:

Dispatches just received announce that Wilmington is in possession of our troops.

E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

Washington, Feb. 24. The Navy Department has just received the following:

"U. S. Flagship Malvern,
Cape Fear River, Feb. 22,
via Fortress Monroe, Feb. 24—9 A. M.

To Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy:

I have the honor to inform you that Wilmington is in the possession of our troops.

(Signed) DAVID D. PORTER,
Rear Admiral."

New York, Feb. 22. The Tribune's dispatch says: Though it is not positively known that Wilmington has been evacuated, still it is believed that it soon will be, and the rebel force there sent to Beauregard, with the endeavor to check Gen. Sherman's advance.

A high official expresses the opinion that Lee cannot remain in Richmond thirty days, and must either raise the siege or fall back to Lynchburg, the only line of retreat now open.

Baltimore, Feb. 22. Fort Anderson was captured on Sunday by Gen. Schofield and Admiral Porter. Most of the garrison escaped toward Wilmington, though the fort and all the guns were left in good condition. The army was following on toward Wilmington, accompanied by two monitors, and it was expected by the messenger that Wilmington would be in our possession on Monday.

The Transcript has the following dispatch from Washington: Richmond papers of Saturday state that Gen. Sherman is sweeping through the Carolinas like an avalanch, overwhelming all opposition.

These papers do not state the whereabouts of Sherman's force. Probably they are no more in the dark than the rebel War Department.

General Sherman has captured one hundred thousand bales of cotton, according to the same authority.

New York, Feb. 22. Advices from the northern States of Mexico show that the people are determined to resist Maximilian. The States of Chihuahua, Sonora and Sinaloa are entirely clear of imperialists, except a few at Mazatlan.

RAILROAD IN PALESTINE.—A letter from Constantinople, dated Dec. 29th, says:

"I alluded, some months ago, to a Dr. Zimple, who was seeking here the permission to build a railway from Jaffa to Jerusalem and the Jordan, and also a good port at Jaffa, with special reference to the return of the Jews to Palestine, which he believes is to take place within a few years. This old gentleman has won the respect and admiration of those who do not sympathize with his millennarian views, but he has been badly treated by the Porte, and after wearing himself out in vain endeavors to obtain honest and definite replies, he left here some weeks since to preach a crusade in Europe against the Turks. He announced his intention to go, first of all, to the Emperor Napoleon. Fuad Pasha heard of his departure and his object, and seems to have been so thoroughly alarmed by it, that he instantly determined to grant the concession, and requested the American Embassy to telegraph to Dr. Zimple to return at once. It remains to be seen whether his promises will be fulfilled. If the work is accomplished, whether the Jews come back to Palestine or not, it will be an unspeakable advantage to the country and to the crowds of pilgrims who annually resort to Jerusalem, but if the Jews don't come back the road will hardly pay very heavy dividends on the proposed capital of $2,500,000.

☞ There is a soldier at the Chesnut Hill Military Hospital, Philadelphia, who has not slept for a single moment for fourteen years and six months. This may seem incredible, but nevertheless, it is true, and can be verified by numbers of persons. The individual is an intelligent man naturally, and has the benefit of a moderate education. His name is C. C. Saunders, Orderly Sergeant of Co. G., Thirteenth Virginia Volunteers.

Notices.

Notice of Eld. J. V. Himes.

I wish to say to my many friends that I have complied with all the invitations for preaching, in my visit East, that was in my power. Duties now call me to the Western field, and I return as soon as practicable. Many thanks to friends for sympathy and aid for the cause in the West. We wish still to be remembered in our good enterprise West.

I preach in Westboro', Mass., March 4th.

Albany, N. Y., (as Bro. Nichols shall arrange), Friday evening, March 10th.

Troy, (as Bro. Barenger shall arrange), Saturday evening, March 11th, and Sabbath all day. Let all in the vicinity come. Let us have a good gathering of the faithful.

For the World's Crisis.

COME, GO TO THE SHOW.

[illegible]
[illegible]
The streets are lined! just see them go!
[illegible] let's go to the show.
I must forbear, I can't go there,
Though all the town attend the fair;
'Tis worldly pleasure, pomp and show,
A snare of Satan, I dare not go.

"You go to the fair, nought you compare
With the splendid sights they offer there;
Such things indeed, all ought to know,
Come, don't be a fogy, let's go to the show."

Those splendid views, so rich and fair,
Will vanish soon like empty air,
With all who feast on such vain show,
There's danger there, I dare not go.

"Come, go to the fair, the priest goes there,
And meets with smiles and special care;
Besides, near all his flock will go,
Why scruple then, let's go to the show."

The priest is there; but will he dare
To say this world is false, though fair?
If so, and still persists to go,
He's caught in the snare, and bound to woe.

"Come, go to the fair, how can you dare
To think that you're so good and rare;
When preacher, deacon, and church can go,
Are you too good to go to the show?"

Through grace, I would be good and rare,
And ever live for another fair,
Where all the world in tears will go;
Say, are you ready for this solemn show?

Are you ready to meet that fearful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away?
For ready or not, you'll have to go,
And you'd better prepare for that solemn show.

I. K. LOMBARD.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE.

NUMBER THREE.

To BRO. B——:—Your note was duly received, and I find therein a few expressions to which I take the liberty of replying. You remark, "But when he begins to say, 'I am fully free from sin,' that act is sin, he is self-deceived, he is backslidden." Again: "When we become fully sanctified, we become immortal, soul and body," etc. Now I am not going to bring these sentiments to the test of Bro. M.'s views, but to the Word itself, because that is the only true touchstone of doctrine—not the opinion of fallible men. If we can find there that God requires us to be free from sin in this life, we ought at once to admit that a person may arrive at such a state of purity, for He would not require of us an impossibility; and if we can also find that provision has been made through Jesus Christ for our being thus saved, we are left without excuse, and it becomes our duty to attain unto this grace.

Ques. 1st. Does God require us to be saved from sin in this present life? "Be ye holy, for I am holy."—1 Pet. 1: 16. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." This language was addressed to christians; they were "dearly beloved"; their sins had been pardoned, but not wholly sanctified; "all filthiness" had not been removed. Paul does not say to them, "Wait until the hour of death for this entire cleansing of the flesh and spirit, but stirs them up by the promises he had just given them, that by these they might be stimulated to "become partakers of the divine nature," and perfect holiness in the fear of God. They were partially holy, he would have the work perfected.

"Follow peace with all men, and holiness," etc. "Yes," you say, perhaps, "we are to follow it, but it will ever be an object ahead; we cannot overtake it until death."

Let me refer you to Phil. 2: 14, 15; 1 Thess. 4: 3; Heb. 6: 1; 2 Cor. 13; 11; Jas. 1: 4. Have I not given you sufficient testimony from the Word, to convince you that the question must be answered in the affirmative?

Ques. 2nd. Has God made provision for the accomplishment of this salvation? 1 Pet. 1: 2. Is this "sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ," to be enjoyed in this present state? Eph. 5: 25–27. Christ gave himself for the church, "that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish." John 17: 17 and Titus 2: 13, 14 agree with the same, and make it apparent that here the church is to be sanctified, here redeemed from all iniquity, and become a peculiar people, zealous of good works. The grace of God brings this salvation to us, that we should live (not die) "soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world." Heb. 13: 12, 20, 21. Sanctified "through good works," etc. 1 Pet. 2: 24; 1 John 1: 7. These scriptures clearly teach that provision has been made by the atonement of Jesus Christ for the salvation of men from sin in this life.

Ques. 3d. Was holiness, or entire sanctification, prayed for and experienced by the apostles? 1 Thess. 5: 23, 24. Did the apostle pray in accordance with the will of God? Did he mean for them to be sanctified wholly when dying? Why pray that their whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, if it was impossible for them to be made free from sin in a state of mortality? 2 Cor. 13: 9. "This also we wish, even your perfection." Did the apostle wish for them to die?

It is said of John the Baptist, "he was a just man, and a holy," and of Zacharias and Elizabeth, "they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless." Were they not saved from sin? Paul says to the Thessalonians, "Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe." Again to the Corinthians, "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." "But now being made free from sin, ye have your fruit unto holiness," etc. Does not this evince an experience of present salvation from sin? How could the apostle thus speak of the fruit of holiness, if holiness was unattainable till death? John, in his first epistle, is very explicit on this point. Whosoever abideth in Him, sinneth not." "He that committeth sin is of the devil." "In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil," etc.

Thus we have clearly demonstrated from the Word of God that entire sanctification, holiness, freedom from sin, was required, provided for, prayed for, experienced, and professed by Bro. B——, you say, "I am now fully free from sin," [illegible] and with such an array of scripture before you (and much more might be given) surely you will see that it is not [illegible] with me you, when you deny the possibility of being "wholly sanctified until we become immortal, soul and body." What virtue is there in death to cleanse from sin? Has the blood of Jesus Christ greater power in the hour of dissolution? It is not your experience, it is not mine, that is to decide this case, but the word of God.

If to profess to be saved from sin is in itself sinful, then to profess to be a sinner is proof of christianity, and the more we accuse ourselves, the greater the evidence afforded of our humility and justification.

Christ offers himself as our sanctifier. His name is called Jesus, because he saves his people from their sins. By an acceptance of him, he effects in the heart of the believer the work of righteousness. The purity of Christ is transmitted to his own nature. Where is boasting, then? It is excluded. "Can the axe boast itself against him that heweth therewith?" There is, however, a voluntary humility which strikes at the very root of Christ's power to redeem, and there is a true humility which leads its possessor to make his "boast in the Lord," and to say, "In him have I righteousness and strength." The soul that truly feels its own utter helplessness and demerit, will go out of itself into Christ, knowing that without him it isnothing, but through him it can do all things required.

See that branch richly laden with fruit! From whence does it derive its vitality? "From the root," say you. Separate it from the tree, and how quickly do its leaves begin to fade, and its fruit to wither. Thus it is with the christian. It is only by a union with Christ, and the vitality derived through him, that they can have their fruit unto holiness. When the wild olive is grafted into the good olive tree, is it consistent to call it a wild olive still? We must be careful and not "call that which God hath cleansed common, nor unclean." It would have been no virtue in Naaman, after dipping seven times in Jordan, to say, "I am a miserable leper still." It would not have been humility in the blind man, after washing in Siloam's pool, to say, "I am blind still." Such a confession would not only have been untrue, but it would have detracted from the glory of the Savior. If, through the skill of a physician, we are completely cured of some dire disease, would it be boasting for us to proclaim the fact, or humility for us to refrain? Which would result in the greatest honor to the physician, or benefit to others?

Far from me the thought that we arrive at a state where there is no further progress. The perfect child may grow up to full stature. The perfect sapling may enlarge to the sturdy oak. The perfect christian may grow up into Christ in all things. Christ was perfectly holy when a child, yet he increased in wisdom and in favor with God and man.

Respectfully yours, M. D. W.

MY EXPERIENCE.

In the year 1842, I was awakened to see my lost condition out of Christ, and led, as I humbly trust, to seek a pardon of all my sins, and thereby obtain a good hope in Christ. Then I began to live for God, and learn to do his will; one important item of which was, to be buried with Christ by baptism into death, in order to walk in newness of life. I cheerfully obeyed and joined the Christian church in Albion, Maine. About that time the doctrine of the immediate coming of Christ was preached, in which I became deeply interested, and labored with all my might for the salvation of souls. When the time had passed, I labored on, occasionally hearing of the Adventists, but having no opportunities of associating with them.

I lived on in this way eleven years, feeling at times, woe is me if I preach not the gospel. The inquiry would come up, Lord, what shall I preach? God alone knew the ordeal through which I passed, before the decision was fully made. Not feeling quite satisfied with the theology of the Christian denomination, my greatest anxiety was to know the truth. I studied the Bible as I never had before. Just prior to this time, Eld. Z. Manter became pastor of the church, and from him the church received more good instruction than they ever did before, or have since. I saw at once that he did not preach as others had been wont to do, and soon learned, by his preaching and conversation, that he neither believed or preached that men had immortal souls, or that they received their reward or punishment at death, but at the resurrection. I was encouraged and strengthened by him to enter the ministry.

About ten years ago, I commenced the work tremblingly, with a very deep sense of the responsibility resting upon me. In a few months, quite a number requested baptism, and I was accordingly set apart by the laying on of hands, and joined the ministerial conference. My Bible and Concordance were my only companions. I could find no eternal life out of Christ. As I was preaching to the Christian church in Cornville, about four years ago, Spiritualism came up among us, and spread to some extent. After a great trial in my mind, I decided it was my duty to come out more fully on the truth relating to the unconscious state of the dead and the destruction of the wicked, for which I have received much persecution from the ministry and membership. It was rather hard at the time, but at the present I can look back and count it all joy. Bless the Lord.

A year ago last June, I went as usual to the yearly conference. When the time arrived for the business meeting to commence, I soon found that the most important business they had to attend to was myself. Accordingly, I was arraigned before the conference without any previous notice, and one false charge after another brought against me, till my spirits were nearly crushed. Things I never heard or thought of were laid to my charge. However, none of them were sustained but that of believing and preaching the unconscious state of the dead and the destruction of the wicked. They all acknowledged it to be a christian. It was evident they were in a sad dilemma, and did not know how to get out. They had not taken one Bible step. At length they voted a committee to converse with me, which they did not previously belonged to, and he helped them out. After giving me a little time to talk, my case was taken before a committee and examined very thoroughly. The conference then voted to give me a letter of dismission, but I felt disposed to let them have their own way. After a good deal of trouble, they voted to give me a letter of dismission and recommend, and the letter, and had it recorded. I waited one year, and did not receive the letter. I called in at the next yearly meeting and asked for my letter. But as they [illegible] timely help, deliberately said the conference were voted to give me a letter.

My dear brethren, I am searching for light and truth with all my heart. I want it at the expense of everything else. I am trying to be a faithful under shepherd, so that when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, I may have a crown of life, with all the ransomed ones, in the kingdom, when the night of our trials have passed away, and the joy of the morning has come. HOLINESS OF HEART AND LIFE.

Of late, I have often thought on this subject, and contrasted my own life with that of the Holy Savior's. I seem to see and feel more and more, the necessity of that divine attribute in my character, especially when I contemplate the desert of wickedness lying all around me, and view its wastes of woe, and the hideousness of iniquity and sin, with the extreme vileness and grovelling nature of humanity. O, what a world is this! I often exclaim; why was it ordained to be rendered so desolate by sin's dark pollution, that once was so fair, so pure and blushing in its transcending loveliness, that God pronounced upon it his benediction?

But it was needful that evil should appear, that sin should blight this fair dominion, and temptation should assail man, for this reason; that strength and virtue might be engrafted into his character, which before was all innocence and purity, yet weak and lacking will or determination. And God, who desired to educe the highest style of life for the human race, selected from his infinite resources, evil as a means to make the most of man, and thus accomplish his purpose.

Ah! our Heavenly Father knoweth just what is best, and I am content to be led just as he wills. I long for purity of heart, and to live in a state where I shall feel no condemnation; where I shall be wholly sanctified by his grace, for I think it is our privilege thus to live. We must be holy in body and spirit, that we may present ourselves unto God as entirely his, wholly purified, renovated and sanctified. How consistent must be our daily life; how watchful must we be, lest by giving place to our evil passions, we grieve the Holy Spirit. Circumspectly, conscientiously, diligently, we must walk as "children of the light," reproving the works of darkness. And as we tread through this vale of tears, it must be our endeavor to cheer, comfort, and strengthen the weary ones; bearing "one another's burdens"; sending forth beams of light through the gloom around us. Here and there dropping our precious seed, watering it with our tears, and praying with childfaith for a plentiful harvest. Carefully watching our footsteps, but keeping hold of Father's hand, all the while, lest we should become bewildered, and wander into a wrong path. Having our hearts full of love and meekness, may we lean with confidence on the arm of our "Beloved," and he will gently lead us on till the city of rest appears; then into its radiant light; on, on to the "great white throne," mid the dazzling throng of angels fair, to the Father, the "Almighty One"; and present us unto him as his bride, who so tremblingly have journeyed on, through this wilderness state below; though oft tearfully, fearfully, prayerfully, yet hopefully. And now as the Father receives us, the whole celestial sphere resounds with the grand anthem, "Alleluia: salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, be unto the Lord our God forever and ever." Yours, in hope,

SELFISHNESS.

Let us look on which hand we may, or which way we will, we see more or less selfishness; and, I am sorry to say, we see it in a great measure among those who pretend to preach the gospel. We can name no one sect but what is guilty, in some measure, of this enormous wickedness.

Selfishness has caused no small amount of suffering in the world. It has been the means of keeping the poor and needy thus bound down in galling chains of poverty and suffering. It has caused the rich man to withhold his hand from helping the needy,—yea more, it has caused him to lay his greedy hands upon the little earthly goods that remained to the poor man, and then leave him to pine away under his load of sufferings. And not only is it an injury to others, but also to the individual in whom it dwells.

Christianity requires of us better things. It requires us to make use of our substance to secure others' welfare as well as that of our own. "Give to him that asketh of thee, (saith the Scriptures), and of him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away." Again, "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over."—Luke 6: 38.

Here let me say for your investigation, man is not an isolated being. He is not so constituted as to maintain a comfortable subsistence within his own means, independent of the aid of his fellow-men. How muchsoever he may boast of his independence; how muchsoever he may refuse to lend a helping hand to his needy brother man, the time comes sooner or later (yet, it is nearly always sure to), when he needs assistance from some one himself.

Does the selfish man imagine himself strong? Is he so deluded as to suppose that he will be able to procure all things necessary for his comfort in the present world? If he does he needs to be corrected of his delusion. When disease preys upon him, when sickness, pain, suffering, and anguish fasten upon his mortal system,—when the lingering consumption, or the burning fever are wearing away his constitution, then he feels that his great strength is but human weakness. Then, like the rich man in the parable, he calls upon those whom in his better days he refused to assist, to come and administer a cup of water to his parched lips,—then does he learn that his human strength is but weakness.

Dear brethren and sisters, let not selfishness be so much as named among us, but look candidly and seriously to these things, and keep ourselves unspotted from the world, devoid of selfishness, and all other enormous sins, that we may become heirs of the kingdom of our blessed Lord and Master Jesus Christ, where peace and joy shall ever abide.

[illegible]

suffering of them, and to him who would forgive of them, cast out thou away. Let us be guided by the spirit of wisdom, and turn to the oracles of eternal truth for instruction, which teacheth us to love our neighbors as ourselves. Here let me say, we should express this love not in word and profession alone, but in deed and in truth, and endeavor to make all those around us happy, that we may be accounted heirs of the kingdom of our blessed Lord, which shall never fail nor pass away; where joy and peace shall ever remain.

Finally, brethren and sisters, let us be charitable, faithful, and liberal in giving to the poor and needy of our substance, and also to those who are laboring at the press and in other places fervently and affectionately to strengthen the cause of Zion, and more especially to those who are unfortunately destitute of the good things of this life, that it may be said to us at the close of life, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

PRAYERS NOT PLEASANT TO HEAR.

I do not like to hear him pray,
On bended knee about an hour,
For grace to spend aright each day,
Who knows his neighbor has no flour.

I'd rather see him go to mill,
And buy his luckless neighbor bread,
And see his children eat their fill,
And laugh beneath their humble shed.

I do not like to hear him pray,
"Let blessings on the widow be,"
Who never seeks her home to say,
"If want o'ertake you, come to me."

I hate the prayer so loud and long,
That's uttered for the orphan's weal,
By him who sees them crushed by wrong,
And only with the lips can feel.

I do not like to hear her pray,
With jeweled ears and silken dress,
Whose washer-woman toils all day,
And then is asked to work for less.

Such pious shavers I despise,
With folded hands and air demure;
They lift to heaven their holy eyes,
Then steal the earnings of the poor.

I do not like such soulless prayers;
If wrong, I hope to be forgiven;
No angel wing them upward bears,
They're lost a million miles from heaven.

A PLEA FOR THE POOR.

"Plead the cause of the poor and needy."—Prov. 31: 9.

Who has ears to hear the cry of the poor? By all your hopes of immortality, by all your love for the brethren, by all the motives either of hope or fear that can be brought to bear upon you, I entreat you to lend a listening ear. It is a somewhat stale proverb that "charity begins at home." Our home, at present, my friends, is with the READERS OF THE CRISIS. With that great congregation we sit down every week to a feast of love and truth. Do you not see at least one thousand suffering poor in this home of ours? We call them all brethren; are we ready to act towards them a brother's part? You see plainly that your brother has need; now if you shut up "your bowels of compassion" from him, "how dwelleth the love of GOD in you?" Many of the poor have opened wide their hand, and of their penury have given freely to their fellow-sufferers. Some give nearly all; others give one-half the money at their command for this purpose. Have you done as much, reader? Or will you do it? Do you see the way to do it? Do you value the precious truth that comes to you every week in the Crisis? Now have you the spirit of a man, and of a christian, and can you stand back and let the burden of feeding this great multitude fall upon the publishers of the Crisis alone, with the little help they receive from the poor themselves? Look around upon your comfortable home, your well-clad children, your carpeted floors, your well-filled libraries; then think of those who are suffering for want of all things; and yet they prize the Crisis tenfold more than you do. I do not curse you, but he that hideth his eyes "hath many a curse." I only ask once more, if you do no not give, "how dwelleth the love of GOD in you? F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

"THOUGHTS AND APOTHEGMS."

Selected from Archbishop Whately.

Whately was Archbishop of Dublin; a believer in the non-immortality of the soul; the leading mind of the age. His works on Logic are the text books on that subject throughout England and America. F. H. BURBANK.

The question, What is true? ought to stand on the threshold of every religious inquiry.

"The christian religion made its appearance as the common disturber of the peace of the world, because it put an end to the tranquil influence of custom, authority, credulity, sentiment, and imagination; forced men upon the disagreeable task of examining evidence, searching records, and proving all things; and arrayed in opposite opinions, children against their parents, subjects against their princes, and the people against the priest."

"The Heathen Mythology not only was not true, but was not even supported as true; it not only deserved no faith, but it demanded none. The very pretension to truth—the very demand of faith—were characteristic distinctions of christianity."

"To believe in christianity without knowing why we believe it, is not christian faith, but blind credulity."

"He who professes adherence to the national religion of England, on the ground that 'it is the religion of his fathers,' forgets, as do the hearers who applaud the sentiment, that, on this principle, the worship of Thor and Woden would claim precedence."

"In these our days, there are an immense number of persons, who, professing faith for the gospel, and zeal for its support, yet as sure us that inquirers into its evidences are likely to lead to infidelity. What would such a person say of some professed friend coming forward as his advocate, and saying, 'My friend here is a veracious and worthy man, and there is no foundation for the charges brought against him; and his integrity is fully believed in by persons who thoroughly trust him, and who have never thought of reason or inquiring about his character at all; but of all things, do not make any investigation, for the more you inquire and examine, the less likely most people will be to believe in his integrity!' Surely a man so defended would exclaim, 'Deliver me from my friends, and I fear not my enemies.'"

GOOD AND BAD.—Bad men are never completely happy, although possessed of everything that this world can give; and good men are never completely miserable, although deprived of everything that the world can take away.

THE PENALTY OF THE LAW OF GOD.

1. It is not dying. A man is not dead until he ceases dying. Death commences where dying terminates.

2. Dying is not a part of the penalty. If the penalty is death, then dying cannot be a part of it; because, as have demonstrated, a man ceases dying before he is dead.

3. The condition in which death places man is not the penalty. Death and the condition consequent upon death, sustain the relation to each other of cause and effect. Death being the cause, and the consequence of death being the effect.

4. The duration in which a man shall remain under the dominion of death, is not necessarily involved in the death penalty. To be included some term expressive of duration must be used to qualify death.

If, as all the Bible writers affirm, the penalty of the law is death, then when the sinner is dead he has suffered the penalty. If, subsequently to having suffered the penalty of the law, any power in heaven or earth should raise him from the dead, the law would have no further claims upon him. All the law demands is the infliction of the penalty, without regard to the consequence of such infliction. The criminal's condition subsequently to the infliction of the penalty, is no part of the penalty. After the penalty is inflicted according to the law, the law is satisfied. It can have no further claims upon the criminal. His resurrection, therefore, the next moment, would be no infringement of the law; that is, unless the law demands something more than simple death. Whatever in such a case is superadded, should be clearly and unequivocally expressed. We should never be left to infer the nature of the penalty all incorrigible sinners must suffer.

I will back up the foregoing positions with a few texts of Scripture. God informed Adam if he should eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, he should "surely die." "All the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years, and he died."—Gen. 5: 5. This is a faithful record of the execution of the penalty of the Adamic law. It has no demands beyond the life of Adam. When Adam had lost his life, therefore, he met the complete and entire demands of the law. And,

1. Had God chosen to have raised him from the dead the next moment after the last spark of life had become extinct, the penalty of that law would have had no more claims upon him than if he had never transgressed. This is the case with all capital law. When the criminal is dead, the demands of the law are satisfied.

2. The Adamic law having met the end for which it was given, ceased, and no man has since been amenable to the Adamic law. It follows as an absolute necessity, that no one has or can suffer the penalty of that law.

To speak of Adam's posterity suffering the penalty of their father's transgressions, involves the following consequences, viz:

1. That Adam only suffered a part of the penalty, and left the remainder to be suffered by his posterity. Or

2. That God has been guilty of the injustice of inflicting the penalty of an obsolete law upon millions of men, who never have or could transgress this law, because they were not amenable to it. Or

3. God has been guilty of the more palpable injustice of punishing the innocent with the guilty, for the same transgression. Or

4. Those who take the position that the death the whole family of Adam suffer is the penalty of either Adam's transgression or their own transgression, have egregiously erred, not having discriminated between the penalty of Adam's sin, and the necessary consequence of having inherited Adam's nature. All mankind die because they are mortal and therefore subject to death; and all mankind are mortal because their great progenitor was mortal, and not because he transgressed. For had Adam obeyed the law of God, he evidently would not have been permitted to have eaten of the tree of life until after his last son and daughter had been born. Or if he had been permitted to have eaten of that tree, as the Divine pledge of eternal access thereto, still he would not have been changed from mortality to immortality, until after having transmitted his own mortal nature to his entire offspring; because then his children would have inherited unconditional immortality. This would not only be in direct contrariety with the whole revealed plan of God, in reference to angels and men, but having placed immortal beings upon probation for eternal rewards or punishment, would necessarily involve the monstrous doctrine of an eternity of woe; for that which is immortal cannot die. The only antithetical destiny therefore of the obedient and the disobedient, must have been happiness or misery, not life or death. Adam's posterity, as a necessary consequence, inherit their father's nature. Had Adam been immortal at the time he generated his species, his offspring would have inherited immortality, not as a reward for personal obedience, or their father's obedience, but as a necessary consequence. Adam's mortal nature was not conferred upon him as a penalty for transgression, for he was mortal before he transgressed; otherwise he could not have been amenable to a law whose penalty was death. Nor would immortality have presented a motive to obedience, or have been a reward for obedience, had not Adam been a mortal man. Adam was not any more responsible for his nature than I am for mine. He was mortal by virtue of his creation, and I am mortal by virtue of natural generation. This nature is just as much a penalty for personal transgression in my case, as it was in Adam's case. I know it will be objected, that if Adam was naturally immortal, then,

1. Even in case of obedience he must have died, for one definition of mortality is "subject to death." True, but another definition is "susceptible of death." A man may be susceptible of death, and yet never be "subjected to death." Take Enoch, Elijah, and all the righteous living when Christ comes, as examples.

Had Adam's first act been that of obedience, the dealings of God toward him would have been reversed. In that case the tree of knowledge of good and evil would have been guarded, so that Adam could not have been the subject of the promise and the penalty at the same time. Had Adam obeyed, he would have been changed from mortality to immortality without experiencing death, as Enoch and Elijah were; and as all the pious living when our Savior returns will be. And were those, and will not these be mortal? Most assuredly!

2. If Adam had been mortal, then the infliction of death could not have been a penalty, because being mortal, he must have died even though the penalty had not been inflicted. "To pass sentence against a dying man," says the objector, "is no penalty at all."

ANS.—1. A man may be mortal and yet not dying. Such is the fact with every man in a state of health; or even when under the influence of a disease from which he may recover. I am not dying to-day, and yet I am mortal.

2. If to execute judicially a mortal man is not a penalty, then no capital penalty has ever been inflicted, or ever can be; for no other nature is susceptible of death.

Was not the death penalty of the law of God inflicted in hundreds of instances under the administration of the Judges of Israel? And were not all these men mortal? Could not the death penalty for treason be inflicted upon Jefferson Davis? And is not he a mortal man? In my next article, I propose investigating the relation Adam's posterity sustains to the penalty of the law of God, for their own individual transgressions.—Herald.

A BAD PRACTICE.—Many persons take the kerosene lamps up in the habit when going to bed, or leaving a room for a short time, and turning the wick down low in order to save a trifle of the consumption of oil. The consequence is that the air of the room soon becomes vitiated by the unconsumed oil vapors, by the gas produced by combustion, and also by the minute particles of smoke and soot which are thrown off. Air thus poisoned is deadly in its effects, and the wonder is that more persons are not immediately and fatally injured by breathing it. Irritation and inflammation of the throat and lungs, headache, dizziness and nausea are among its effects.

WATER-PROOF BOOT SOLES.—If hot tar is applied to boot soles, it will make them water-proof. Let it be as hot as the leather will bear without injuring it, applying it with a swab, and drying it in by the fire. It makes the surface of the leather quite hard, so that it wears longer as well as keeps out the water. It is a good plan to provide boots for winter during summer, and prepare the soles by tarring, as they will then become, before they are wanted to wear, almost as firm as horn, and will wear twice as long as those unprepared.—Prairie Farmer.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

KEEP THEM BUSY.

"A little child may do good,
If he will do all he can,
And boys and girls must work and toil,
As surely as the man."

Parents, do you wish to keep your little sons and daughters from mischief, from contaminating influences? Keep their little hands busy in something useful. "An idle pate is the devil's workshop." An excellent author says:—

"The man who is obliged to earn necessities of life and support his family, knows not the unhappiness he prays for when he desires wealth and idleness. To be constantly busy is to be always happy. Persons who have suddenly acquired wealth, broken up their active pursuits, and begun to live at their ease, waste away, and die in a very short time. Thousands would have been blessings to the world, and added to the common stock of happiness, if they had been content to remain in an humble sphere, and earned every mouthful of food that nourished their bodies. Persons who are always employed, go cheerfully to their daily tasks, are the least disturbed by the fluctuations of business, and at night sleep with perfect composure.

Earn your own bread, and see how sweet it will be! Work, and see how well you will be! Work, and see how cheerful you will be! Work, and see how independent you will be! Work, and see how happy your family will be! Work, and see how religious you will be! for, before you know where you are, instead of repining at Providence, you will find yourself offering up thanks for all the numerous blessings you enjoy.

Employment! Employment! Oh, that is enjoyment!
There's nothing like 'something to do;'
Good heart-occupation is health and salvation,
A secret that's known to but few.

Then up, man and woman! Be godlike, be human—
To self and to nature be true!
Employment! Employment! Oh, that is enjoyment!
There's nothing like 'something to do!'"

—Home Thrusts.

"THAT'S THE DIFFERENCE."

A little boy, less than six years of age, who had for a long time been striving to be a good boy, but who had so often failed as to be nearly discouraged in the effort, at length took his place in the family circle one morning, with a noticeable sweetness of manner, and a very agreeable deference to the wishes of all about him, including a great forbearance towards a little sister whom he was usually inclined to tease and capriciously order about.

Nothing, however, was said of his appearance, though he frequently cast wistful looks at his mother, as if doubtful whether she observed his new grace. Towards noon he went and laid his hand upon his mother's arm, and, lifting his glistening eyes to hers, said, in subdued, earnest tones,—

"Mother, don't you think I've been a good boy to-day?"

"Yes, my son, very good; how happy we should be if you could always behave so well!"

"Do you know, mother, how it is? I know! God has done it! For last night, after I had got into my little crib, I felt sorry I had been naughty so many times yesterday, and I prayed to God to make me a real good boy. So I know it's he that's done it!"

"But I thought you prayed every night, my son, that God would make you a good boy!"

"Well, so I do; but you know I pray it just as I pray 'now I lay me down to sleep,' and it doesn't seem as it does when I pray real hard, all alone in my crib, that God would make me real good; and that's the difference!"

This is just the reply to discouraged christians who wonder that their prayers are not answered; who have never practically learned "the difference," but who go on praying partly from force of habit, and partly from a sense of duty, with only a kind of vague wishing for what they ask, forgetful that they cut themselves off from all claims to receiving by the manner of their asking; who experimentally know nothing more of what our little friend calls "real hard" prayer which expects an answer, than though they bowed to a huge idol, instead of a loving Father who yearns to give good gifts to those who really ask him?—Tract Journal.

POLITE CHILDREN.

It is particularly pleasing to meet with polite children. We like their soft "Please," cordial "Thank you," and hearty "Yes, sir." We like to see them pick up mamma's glove, hand papa's hat and cane, and jump to open open the door for half blind grandma, who is feeling with shaking hands after the knob.

Their politeness is, perhaps, the more agreeable because we do not always expect it. We expect grown people to be polite; but knowing how forgetful, careless, and inattentive children are, we are not surprised, and do not condemn them, if they do not always exhibit this most agreeable quality; but, when they do, we always notice it, and remember it with pleasure.

I happened to be traveling a little distance one of those freezing days last winter, and entered the ladies' room at a depot, shivering with cold; for, in my anxiety to keep the baby warm, a pin in my shawl had escaped its fastening, and I wanted to replace it. (But my pin-ball was in the depth of my pocket, covered with toys and bon-bons (we had "been to Christmas,") and what with bundled-up baby, gloves, and cold fingers, was altogether inaccessible. So if bab at my side had not got one, I must do as I could without it. No; his pin-ball was in another pocket.

There were only three little girls in the room (perhaps ten years old), sitting opposite to us; and as I drew my shawl closely around me, and moved a little nearer the glowing [illegible], thinking of the value of a bit of sharpened and headed wire, I saw the little girls consult together in whispers, examine their dresses, look at each other, and shake their heads. The next moment, one of them stepped across, and handed me a pin (she must have taken it from a needed place,) saying, in a very low tone, "Here is one, if you please."

"Thank you, dear," I cordially replied, accepting it; and, as she resumed her seat, the three looked equally pleased; for the same kindly emotion swayed each little heart.

It was a very trifling act; but, whenever I recall the politeness of those little stranger girls, I think of the beautiful definition that somebody gives of politeness. It is this: "True politeness consists in doing the kindest thing in the very kindest way."—Morning Star.

ROSALIE AND HER CAKE.

A company of merry school girls were sitting, according to custom, under the shade of the maples on the playground, eating their dinners, and chatting gaily together as school girls will. A young miss, showily dressed, had finished her dinner, and instead of replacing in the little white basket a square of sponge cake left over, she threw it into the gravel path.

"I do not see why mother puts up so much for me. She might know I could not eat it all; and it is a trouble to bring more than I need."

"I would not throw it away, if I did not wish it," said a quiet, lady-like girl, who leaned against the trunk of a big maple, and slowly disposed of her sandwiches.

"Do you suppose I care for a piece of cake?" said Rosalie, with a contemptuous toss of the head. "I hope my father can afford such a loss as that."

"Still it might have done good to somebody, while now it is good for nothing."

"Perhaps you would have liked it yourself," continued the ill-bred girl, with a scornful laugh.

"No, I thank you," said the other, with perfect composure. "I am well supplied; but my mother teaches me that it is sinful, as well as ill-bred, to be wasteful."

More than one wistful pair of eyes followed that bit of cake, but no one had courage to pick it up.

Miss Arthur, the little girl's teacher, had heard the conversation, as she was arranging the boquet of flowers for her desk; so she took pains, at a convenient opportunity, to give them a little instruction on the subject of economy, as she did on many other excellent subjects. She could speak freely, as she was not supposed to know anything about the cake.

"You will often meet with people who think it a mark of gentility to be very lavish and wasteful of what they possess, and to show a disregard of expense, as if their riches were boundless. But remember, my dears, that well-bred people always set down such display as proving bad breeding in early years, as showing the head to be shallow and uninformed, and the person a stranger in good society. If for appearance sake merely, I would caution you against cultivating such a disposition, or even suffering yourselves to affect such manners. It will certainly be set down to vulgarity and ignorance of refinement. But there is a far higher consideration I wish you to keep before your minds. Remember that we are all only stewards of God's bounty, and when we needlessly destroy anything that might be of use, we are wasting God's property, and he will call us to give an account for it at the judgment day."—Presbyterian.

PRIDE OF DRESS.

A little boy and girl were once seated on a flowery bank, and talking proudly about their dress.

"See," said the boy, "what a beautiful new hat I have got; what a fine blue jacket and trousers; and what a nice pair of shoes; it is not every one who is dressed as finely as I am."

"Indeed," said the little girl, "I think I am dressed finer than you, for I have on a silk hat and pelisse, and a fine feather in my hat. I know that my dress cost a great deal of money."

"Not so much as mine," said the boy, "I know."

"Hold your peace!" said a caterpillar, crawling near in the hedge; "you have neither of you any reason to be so proud of your clothes, for they are only second-hand; and have all been worn by some creature or other, of which you think but meanly, before they were put upon you. Why, the silk in that first wrapped up such a worm as I."

"There, what do you say to that?" said the boy.

"And the feather," exclaimed a bird, perched upon a tree, "was stolen from, or cast off by one of my race."

"What do you say to that?" repeated the boy. "Well, my clothes were worn neither by birds nor worms."

"True," said a sheep, grazing close by, "but they were worn on the back of some of my family before they were yours; and as for your hat, I know that the beavers have supplied the fur for that article; and my friends, the calves and cows in that field, will be killed, not merely to get their flesh to eat, but also to get their skins to make your shoes."

See the folly of being proud of our clothes, since we are indebted to the meanest creatures for them; and even then we could not use them if God did not give us the wisdom to contrive the best way of making them fit to wear, and the means of procuring them for our comfort.—Cobbin.

PARAPHRASE OF ISAIAH THIRTY-FIFTH.

The wilderness shall blossom
As blooms the rose of spring,
And flowers of rarest beauty
The deserts forth shall bring;
With notes of joy and gladness
The valleys shall resound,
And rising o'er the hilltops
Re-echo earth around.

Fair flowers in rich abundance
The desert blooming o'er,
While strains of glad rejoicing
Resound from shore to shore;
The glorious light of Lebanon
Shall grace the world below,
While Carmel too, and Sharon,
Their excellence bestow.

Secure from sin and sorrow,
God's glory earth shall see,
Rejoicing in his presence,
From all commotions free.
Then strengthen ye the fainting,
The feeble hands uphold,
And gently soothe their spirits,
With tender love enfold.

Say to the fearful, trembling,
Fear not, your God will come,
With righteous vengeance to bestow,
And seal the sinner's doom;
Yet with a recompense for those
Who, trusting in his power,
Have leaned upon his gracious arm
In dark temptation's hour;

Safe from the storms of life to rest,
On those fair healthful plains,
Where tear drops never dim the eye,
And gladness ever reigns.
Then shall the sightless orbs be ope'd
To view the rapturous scene;
Fair earth in bridal robes arrayed,
And beauteous evergreen.

Then shall the ears that never list
To catch melodious sound,
Be ope'd to hear the songs of praise
Re-echoing all around;
Then shall the lame man leap for joy,
The silent tongue rejoice;
All nature from her dreams awake,
At the Eternal Voice.

Within the dreary forest wilds,
Where lurks the serpent dread,
Secure within its dark'ning shades
Fierce beasts of prey have fed,—
Shall gentle streams serenely glide
To glad those scenes of joy,
And add new charms to life's bright hours,
Which time can ne'er destroy.

The thirsty land, all parched and dry
Beneath the scalding ray
Of many a piercing summer's sun,
Which shed its beams by day,
Shall gushing springs of water send,
To feed those living streams,
And cooling fountains ope'd supply
In earth's fair fields redeemed.

An highway then shall be prepared
Within that country fair,
For all that holy, happy throng,
To walk securely there;
No lion shall go up thereon,
Nor ravenous beast of prey,
For naught unclean shall overcome
Upon that holy way.

To Zion shall the host redeemed,
With songs of rapture come,
And everlasting joy complete
In their eternal home;
Obtaining joy and gladness then,
The night of sorrow gone,
Soon shall the shadows disappear,
The morn eternal dawn!

THE RESURRECTION.—No. 1.

The fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians contains St. Paul's great argument on the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, called forth by the shipwreck some in the Corinthian church had made of their faith. "How say some among you there is no resurrection of the dead?"—v. 12. The apostle himself maintains the doctrine, and boldly affirms, "The dead shall be raised incorruptible."—v. 52. However, in his masterly argument, he contemplates what would be the inevitable result, providing his opponents in faith, or the unbelievers in the resurrection, were correct, and himself wrong. While the resurrection of all men is affirmed, plainly and unequivocally: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive,"—v. 22, the resurrection of the just is more particularly the subject of argument. "They that are Christ's."—v. 23. "We shall all be changed."—v. 51.

In this great and unanswerable argument, St. Paul shows that there are seven absurdities as the absolute conclusion,—"If the dead rise not at all."—v. 29. Let us note them.

1st. The gospel is a complete failure. "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel, which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved."—v. 1, 2.

An epitome of the gospel he preached, which they had received, and wherein they for a time stood; and by which only they could BE SAVED, is then given; embracing the "death," "burial," and "resurrection of Christ," "According to the Scriptures," (v. 3, 4), and upon which he bases the hope of forgiveness and justification from sins, and future life and immortality by a resurrection from the dead.—Vers. 12–38. But, "If the dead rise not at all," this gospel is null and void.

2d. Christ is not raised. "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised."—v. 16.

The resurrection of Christ is both the pledge and pattern of his people, of whom he is "the first fruits."—v. 20. "Knowing that He which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus." "And God hath raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his power."—2 Cor. 4: 14; 1 Cor. 4: 14; Rom. 8: 11. "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?"—v. 12. He "hath begotten us again to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."—1 Pet. 1: 3.

But "If the dead rise not," then may we prove the non-resurrection of Christ; and so also, "If Christ be not raised," (v. 17), we may rest assured the dead will not have a resurrection. The two are interlinked inseparably; and stand or fall together.

3d. The apostles, together with the five hundred witnesses (v. 6) of Christ's resurrection, are chargeable with perjury. "Yea, we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up if so be that the dead rise not."—Vers. 5–8, 15.

4th. The christian faith is vain. "Your faith is also vain."—v. 14. "Your faith is vain."—v. 17.

The christian faith requires belief in the resurrection of Jesus Christ as the first fruits of them that sleep, (vers. 12–20); or, in other words, faith in the resurrection of the dead, both of Christ and his people: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."—Rom. 10: 9. They "preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead."—Acts 4: 2. "Touching the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question by you this day."—Acts 24: 21.

This faith is essential to salvation where the gospel is preached; but "if the dead rise not at all," the faith is vain.

5th. The world is without a satisfactory atonement—and believers are still in their sins. "Ye are yet in your sins."—v. 17.

St. Paul declares that the gospel affirms, that Jesus "was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification."—Rom. 4: 25.

If Christ is not raised, the world has no satisfactory sin-offering acceptable to God! Penitent believers no officiating High Priest! And there is no living Savior of men! What atoning offering shall we bring before God which he will accept? Will he "be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? Shall I give my first-born for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?"—Micah 6: 6, 7. This will not suffice, for "it is not possible that" these "should take away sins."—Heb. 10. All these are "a smoke in his nose," and refused. Therefore if Christ be not raised, christianity is dead and buried beyond all hope of a resurrection; and the world "are yet in their sins," without hope of mercy from divine justice!

6th. The ordinance of christian baptism is a useless and unmeaning ceremony. "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they baptized for the dead?"—v. 29.

When a person is baptized, he professes faith in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead; both of Christ's past resurrection, and the future resurrection of all his people at Christ's coming. But if there is no such thing as the resurrection, the ordinance is vain; and the candidate, buried in baptism, planted in the likeness of death, and raised in the likeness of a resurrection, is chargeable with the extreme folly of illustrating by the rite, and prefiguring that which has not been and is not to be!

7th. There is no future life. "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—v. 18. If in this life only we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable."—v. 19.

St. Paul here plainly teaches that "if the dead rise not at all," there is no future existence. And he further adds: "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die."—v. 32. He expected no reward for his sufferings; and tells the Corinthian brethren that they might at once adopt the infidel sentiment—"Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die." "Death is an eternal sleep." "And behold joy and gladness, slaying oxen, and killing sheep, eating flesh, and drinking wine; let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die."—Isa. 22: 13.

SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES SUCCESSFULLY.

Very many fail in their attempts in this greatest of undertakings, and still grope their way in the darkness of error, because they are utterly unprepared in their minds for such an undertaking.

Do I, after all, really wish to know the whole truth "as it is in Jesus," whatever becomes of my former beloved theories? O how hard to unlearn what has become as second nature to us! how crucifying to self to give up, and own we have been mistaken and must begin to learn as it were our A B C's of Him who is meek and lowly, the Great Teacher. But so is the teaching of one inspired, who had passed through the struggle, and after being brought up "at the feet of Gamaliel," as a child takes his place at the feet of Jesus, and having there been taught the great things of God and his kingdom, he exclaims, "If any man among you thinketh that he is wise, let him become a fool, that he may be wise."

There is nothing more inconsistent and insulting to God than the common popular course, viz: when we would ascertain the will of God as revealed to mortal man, the general course is, to go to standard human authors, to [illegible] of faith rather than directly to the sacred Scriptures with simple faith and prayer. No marvel that the theological world this hour is one vast Babel, and is if possible becoming more so. Men standing in high places as watchmen and shepherds to the flock of Christ, neither "search the Scriptures" in the light of prophecy, nor encourage their flocks so to do, but they do much to discourage the work so positively enjoined on us all by our now absent Lord.

The most plausible and fatal subterfuge now being used by the "father of lies" in theological circles is probably this: The prophecies are designed to be understood only when they become history. Then their fulfillment will be so marked and striking that it will serve as a great and powerful instrumentality in the future work of this world's conversion. We are thus virtually taught that we have nothing to do in the way of a vigorous attempt to search and understand the Scriptures. Hence the pastors and flocks are quietly waiting for history to explain prophecy. This dreadful delusion is directly calculated, as must be seen, to relieve the watchmen from the fearful responsibility that God has fixed upon them, and also to induce the fatal slumber and consequent indolence now so evident ly and fearfully resting down upon the various religious organizations of our day. Hence spiritual death and worldly-mindedness reign almost universally.

Now is the time for the faithful servants to "render to each a portion in due season." "Blessed is that servant whom the Lord when he cometh shall find so doing." May the number of such servants be vastly multiplied.

PTOLEMY THE "HEATHEN."

More than once, in the controversy respecting the Canon, Ptolemy has been called a "heathen," as if such an epithet contained some argument against the reliability of the document in question. This mode of reasoning goes beyond a prejudice against the classic writings which has often appeared. Virgil and Horace have been sometimes discarded from a collegiate course of study, not so much because they were "heathen" as because their amorous poetry is sometimes indelicate. Other classic writings have been sometimes less esteemed, not because they were very bad, but because their moral standard was not so good as Christianity. But I do not know that any one has alleged against the Logic of Aristotle the fact that Aristotle was a heathen. Nor do I know that any Christian has thought less of the Geometry of Euclid, because Euclid was born 300 years before the era of our salvation, and in some heathen place still unknown. On the contrary, Playfair's "Euclid" is, if I mistake not, almost a literal translation from the Greek of 2000 years ago, book for book and proposition for proposition; and it was the standard treatise on the subject until the present generation. Indeed, Legendre's substitute has been deemed too easy, and Loomis' work on the subject is framed more according to the rigorous demonstrations of the old master.

The case of Ptolemy, more than of any ancient writer, save perhaps Aristotle, is like that of Euclid. Ptolemy was not only an astronomer, but a geographer also. Indeed no one can compute eclipses accurately without an intimate knowledge of geography. And Ptolemy's Geography, "heathen" though he may have been, was the standard authority in the schools of Christendom for fourteen centuries. A copy is in the Boston Athenæum, which may satisfy the curious that Ptolemy knew tolerably well what was about him, if he did not in all things know what he was about. "Heathen though he may have been" —I just said. He lived in Alexandria, in the middle of the second century. There were thousands of Christians in that city then. I do not know that Ptolemy any where avows his adherence to the decaying heathen system, or that he says a word against Christ, or that there is any positive evidence that he was not a Christian. I do not, indeed, think that he was a Christian, but this is only my guess. And in such a case, as I hope not to be judged, I have no right to judge, or to call any man "heathen," unless I know him to be such. Especially if they who hear the word think it is a fatal condemnation.

Ptolemy represents the Ptolemaic system of astronomy, or the theory that the sun and stars move round the earth as the moon does, and that the planets move also in "epicycles," or circles upon circles, and for that reason seem sometimes to stand still and to move backward. Ptolemy represents this system. He was not the author of it. He was born into it, just as the present generation is born into the Copernican system, and we are all taught from childhood that the sun really stands still, and the earth travels round it. Ptolemy was not in fault because he did not anticipate the reform made by Copernicus, 1300 years later. And Ptolemy did not go so far as to say, with some modern Adventists I know, that the earth is flat, and does n't turn over at all, or we should all fall off and down to the bottom of bottomless space.

Now if any one thinks that Ptolemy should not teach us, because he held the old and now obsolete theory of the big sun traveling round our little earth, I have only to reply, I do not know but the apostle Paul himself held the same theory. It was the universal theory of the age; and there is the same proof that Paul held it, and even greater, as that Ptolemy was a heathen. The Ptolemaic system was undisputed in the whole Roman empire. Heathenism was disputed, in the streets of Alexandria, daily, by such men as Athenagoras and Clement, whose books in defence of Christianity are well worth reading now. And the Ptolemaic system was held by all the Fathers of the Church, if not by the Gentile fathers—and survived the fall of heathenism a full thousand years, until the time of Galileo, who was imprisoned by Christian doctors for denying it. And we all know what a hue and cry the opponents of Christianity have made ever since, about Christian teachers who try to test science by revelation as they interpret it.

But some one asks if Ptolemy's system, with its puzzling "epicycles," did not impair the value of his astronomical observations? I reply, an observation is an observation, whether one's theory is true, or false, or none. Ptolemy could divide a circle into 360 degrees as well as Euclid or Legendre; and he could say how many degrees the moon is from the sun, and at what o'clock it is eclipsed, as well as a modern observer,—lacking only the advantage of "micrometers" to measure very small parts of a degree or of a second.

And besides, his theory of "epicycles" was not utterly false. The moon actually goes round the sun in an epi-ellipse, which is next thing to an epicycle. And the ellipse in which the moon does go round the earth might be made by the epicycle in which Ptolemy supposed the moon to move.

With a little digression, digressing only a little, I will close. Ptolemy's book of the astronomical system was the best known for over a thousand years. In the fourth century it received a copious commentary from Theon, also of Alexandria. Theon had a daughter, Hypatia, accomplished in the philosophical speculations of the age. If she did not accept Christianity, some reason may appear for it presently. With the pride of native genius, and with her admiration for whatever was profound or sublime in Plato and Plotinus, she became an expounder and champion of the old and waning systems, thinking, doubtless, that the Christians borrowed such virtues as they boasted from those now smoldering fires. Just then Cyril was Bishop in Alexandria; and he dreaded and hated speculation, as men naturally dread any thing which they do not know just how to refute, and which they can not understand. But in the struggle between Paganism and Christianity the latter was beginning to triumph. Heated with zeal, and bold with growing success, Cyril instigated and inflamed the passions of his flock against the "heathen" Hypatia, and she was murdered by a Christian mob.

Times have changed. I do not think that those Christians, who now call Ptolemy a "heathen," would think it wise, or desirable, to harm a hair of his head if he were living. The epithet is designed only as a criticism upon his Canon. Yet I am sure it will impair the confidence of no reflecting reader in Ptolemy's sagacity or veracity. The epithet contains no argument whatever, unless it means that his astronomical system is out of date; and that fact, if it were an argument, is more properly stated in other words. But though the epithet can not have even the just reputation of the greatest astronomer the world knew for 5000 years, it may, by exciting a false prejudice, defraud some readers of the healthy respect which is Ptolemy's due, and of the actual information which he is competent to give.

THE VOICE OF HISTORIANS.

"The Lord's Day"—The True Christian Sabbath.

(From Neander's History, translated by Torsey, Vol. I, pp. 234, 235.)

NUMBER TWO.

"When the Montanists were wishing to introduce new fasts by law, which were to be confined to stated times, what Paul had written in the epistle to the Galatians against the Jewish observance of times was very justly quoted against them; but Tertullian, the defender of Montanism, whom we have described above as standing on the dividing line between the early christian, the purely evangelical period, and the Christian Jewish period which was now about to commence, already shows himself incapable of rightly distinguishing the two positions, that of the Old, and that of the New Testament; for he conceives the Judaizing spirit, reprobated by St. Paul, to consist simply in the observance of Jewish festivals, and not in the whole relation corresponding to the Jewish position of particular days,—whatever days they might be,—to the religious consciousness. According to his view, it would savor in no respect of Judaism, if feasts which had reference to what is simply Christian, were placed in such a relation to the religious consciousness.

"The weekly and yearly festivals of the Christians originated in the same fundamental idea, which formed the centre of the whole christian life,—the idea of imitating Christ, the crucified and the risen,—imitating him in his death, by appropriating through faith and repentance the effects of his death, by dying to self and to the world,—imitating him in his resurrection, by rising with him, in faith and through the power which he imparts, to a new and holy life, consecrated to God, commencing here in the germ, and unfolding itself to maturity in another world. Hence, the jubilee and the festival of the resurrection; and the preparation for it, the remembrance of Christ's sufferings with penitence and crucifixion of the flesh, was the day of fasting and penitence. Accordingly in the week, the jubilee, the festival of joy, was Sunday; the preparation for it were the days of fasting and prayer consecrated to the remembrance of the sufferings of Christ, and of what preceded them, on Thursday and Friday. Accordingly the yearly festivals were in remembrance of Christ's sufferings and the fasts. Having presented this general view, we shall now proceed to consider, more in detail, the several weekly and yearly festivals.

"The opposition to Judaism early led to the special observance of Sunday instead of the Sabbath. The first intimation of this change is in Acts 20: 7, where we find the church assembled on the first day of the week; a still later one is in Rev. 1: 10, where by the 'Lord's day' can hardly be understood the day of judgment. Thus in the catholic epistle ascribed to Barnabas, at the close of the 15th chapter, Sunday is designated as the day of jubilee in remembrance of Christ's resurrection and ascension to heaven, and of the new creation which then commenced; and in the epistle of Ignatius to the Magnesians, it is presupposed that even the Jews, who had come over to christianity, substituted Sunday instead of the Sabbath. As the Sabbath was regarded as representing Judaism, Sunday was contemplated as a symbol of the new life consecrated to the risen Christ and grounded in his resurrection. Sunday was distinguished as a day of joy, by being exempted from fasts, and by the circumstance that prayer was performed on this day in a standing and not in a kneeling posture, as Christ, by his resurrection, had raised up fallen man again to heaven. But as we have already observed in Tertullian a confounding of the Jewish with the christian view of feasts, so we find also in him indications of the transfer of the law of the Jewish Sabbath to Sunday; for by him, attending to any business on Sunday seems to have been regarded as sinful."

CHRISTIAN UNION.—No. 3.

"And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul."

"That they may all be one!" a blessed prayer,
Echoed by holy hearts, and felt within,
As answered ever more and everywhere
Among the souls redeemed from death and sin!
For by whatever name the world may care
To mock those happy ones of earth who win
The prize of our high calling; still, as one
They stand together, one in kith and kin—
Serving the Father, ransomed by the Son,
And through the Spirit made to live for heaven!
O friends! much loving, because much forgiven,
Let us be one in heart throughout the globe—
Renouncing narrow thoughts and bitter leaven—
One, without rent, like Jesus' woven robe.

Testimonials continued, that in the mouth not only of two or three witnesses, but in the mouths of hundreds, thousands, and tens of thousands, every word may be established. For where is there a Bible christian, a true and faithful servant of God, a meek and lowly follower of Jesus, that does not abominate, hate with perfect hatred, the spirit of cast, of schism, that divides and subdivides christians into schools and parties, divisions and subdivisions, with religious creeds, church disciplines, confessions of faith, almost innumerable? When God says, "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, and in you all."—Eph. 4: 4, 5, 6. "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office; so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another."—Rom 12: 4, 5.

"Heirs of the same immortal bliss,
Our hopes and fears the same,
With bands of love our hearts unite,
With mutual love inflame."

But to the renewed testimonials, in favor of "christian union," and in opposition to sects and sectarianism. Professor H. Cowles, alluding to the happy, joyful, and glorious state of things, when the last prayer of Jesus for this blessed christian union shall be fulfilled, reasons in this way:—

"It would not be easy to estimate adequately the value of this union in promoting love among brethren, making prayer acceptable to God, in preparing christian hearts for the indwelling of the Spirit, and in removing from christianity an indefinite amount of scandal. It reminds us of the prayer of our Savior "that all may be one," and of the great end to be gained by this union, viz., "that the world may believe that thou has sent me." The tendency and the power of this union to enforce conviction as to Christ's divine mission, and thus to promote a saving faith in him, have been shown to be very great. Only let this union become complete—then we shall see the way of the Lord prepared for salvation to our world."

President C. G. Finney, of Oberlin College, on the evils of sects and sectarianism, speaks thus:—

"Sectarianism has been one cause of failure in the world's conversion, perhaps the chief. Sectarian ambition, jealousy, collision, these and innumerable other evils have clustered around this growing abomination. Nine-tenths, and perhaps I might say ninety-nine hundredths, of both ministerial and lay effort has lost its power by reason of a sectarian spirit. Go where you please over this great west, and over the east too, and what do you see? Why! in a small village, with a population perhaps just enough to make one respectable congregation, you find half a dozen or more feeble churches, of divers sects, with as many half-starved, and deservedly half-starved ministers, keeping up their sectarian bars, and perhaps undesignedly keeping alive the very prejudice that prevents the success of the gospel. One man comes on to the ground to attend the Presbyterian or Congregational interests in that place and region. Another must be thrust in to attend to the Close Baptist interests and another to attend to the Free-will Baptist interest. Next there must be two or three Methodist ministers to attend to the Episcopal interests and the Wesleyan Methodist interests, and then there must be the high church Episcopal interests, and the low church Episcopal interests; next, but not least, the New School interest, and the Old School interest, and among them all, they seem very generally to attend pretty thoroughly to the devil's interest. I mean that by this arrangement the devil's interest is really in the best way secured; not that they really intended any such thing; God forbid that I should make any such insinuations. They really meant, (as they profess) to secure the interests of their respective denominations. But in this way they most effectually hinder the success of the kingdom of Christ. In this way just those jealousies are kept up which grieve the Spirit, alienate the hearts of christians from each other, weaken the hands of the ministers, disgust the impenitent and please the devil. Now I have not the least doubt that in the great majority of cases, if not in nine cases out of ten, if all the ministers but one, would leave the ground, if they would all go off to the heathen, or to destitute regions in our own country, and [illegible] of their denominational interests, we should never again hear such things as going out to nurse the interests of this sect and that sect. They would give themselves directly to the work of converting the world to God, and almost infinitely more could be done than is done now.

The fact is that the spirit of sectarianism instantly cools individual piety; it curses churches; it ruins communities; it swallows up a great part of the ministerial influence of the church. In most of the villages throughout the land, where they should all unite in one congregation, and where if they would, they are abundantly able to support the ministry and do much for the spread of the gospel abroad, being cut up as they are into little churches, they must build each of them a house, a little house that will hold two or three or four hundred people, and get a minister, and measure out to him his salt and potatoes, and he must preach on the Sabbath to some fifty or a hundred souls, and spend his week-time chiefly either on a farm, or in some other lucrative employment to keep his family in bread. Now what do my brethren think themselves engaged in? Is this the way for ministers to be used up? What? when twenty thousand ministers are at once demanded in India, and hundreds of thousands in other parts of the world? Why, men and brethren, we might better than not spare eight-tenths of all the ministers in the land, if they would clear out, and but one stay in a place. I have long thought that I never would consent to settle down and give myself up to preach the gospel under such circumstances as I have named. I would never occupy a position where there were a number of ministers; and the work might as well and better be done by one. I do not believe that God can ever bless any such thing as this, and I am agonized and pained to my very heart to see this the general state of the church over the whole land. I have known that many of my brethren have felt with me, distressed on the subject. The remedy is at hand. Let the true spirit of the world's conversion only take possession of the entire ministry, and the sectarianism is numbered and finished. Then the present ministry may be spread over a field five or ten times as great as that which they now occupy, and even then much more fully meet the real wants of the people than they now do."

"No more will converts then be few,
But numerous as the drops of dew,
Which silently distilled at night,
Are brought to view by morning light,
A'host to charm our raptured sight,
And fill the earth with glory bright."

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER NINE.

For then he will either take "French leave" of his estates, or they of him. The Lord's coming was not to be till Antichrist had reached his height, and had partly consumed away; and no matter whether Louis Napoleon, the eighth head restored, being of the seventh, so ably made out by so many learned and good commentators,—a few short years will seal and close all prophecy.

It is apparent to all classes of minds that some mighty crisis or event is now pending and may at any time burst upon the world, for the signs of the times and seasons are so plain and unmistakable that he who runs may read; and there does not seem to be any room to doubt that the next event in earth's history is the second coming of Christ. What glad tidings is this to proclaim to a perishing and passing world! What better news can the church of God have than to know that in a few years Christ will come again to reign; that all his sleeping saints will rise from their dusty beds, to reign with him; when long-parted friends will see each other in a better world than this, where no pain ever comes again; where the tree of life is again planted in paradise restored, where we may live for ever.

And what is most astounding in this view of things is, to find at this time not only professing christians but "watchmen of the flock" asleep on the signs of the times and seasons, having no desire to know and withal believing that nothing can be known on this great event, of which Christ has been so particular to inform us. They scoff with the world.

It was only yesterday, Feb. 10th, 1865, that I loaned a Crisis to the Methodist minister. He returned the compliment by giving me the Farmington Chronicle of Feb. 9, 1865, which contained a very long article, over a column, taken from a popular work, "A T Autocrat of the Breakfast Table." This article was a long tirade against Millerism, alias Adventism. And for fear I might overlook it, it was specially marked. Such watchmen may exclaim, What good will be done by proclaiming such views? I hold it to be a principle that all truth is essential, and that whenever there is a tongue to speak, or willing ears to hear, the "blessed hope" should be proclaimed. When this blessed hope is realized, what a day of joy to a long-darkened world, when not merely its worst enemy will fall, but its glorious Deliverer shall have come.

That God has revealed the time, is sufficiently proved by the fulfillment of the divine testimony, as it reads in Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets";—in different ways, according to men, and the age of the world, as it reads in Hab. 1: 1, 2,—"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." And he now reveals his secrets unto those who preach his gospel, by moving them to the study of the prophetic word, and causing them to apprehend the "sure word of prophecy," as the apostle says,—"Ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn."

Since the time of the end commenced, the church has studied more of the prophetic word than ever known before. Christ has told us of this time, when we might know when his coming was near, even at the door. "Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things (the signs spoken of in Matt. 24th, Mark 13th, Luke 21st, and Rev. 6th), know that is (He, Christ, see margin) is near, even at the door." Thus the nearness of the end was to be known for a period previous to its occurrence. In consideration of this, the Savior says, "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares."

Thus are christians to live as it is expressed in Titus 2: 13,—"Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." If a christian performs his duty aright, he will make a proper preparation, and obtain a worthiness for the coming of Christ, as we learn from the thirty-sixth verse,—"Watch ye, therefore, and pray always; that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

Many say that it is not right to look into this time question. I think that it evidently is our duty to look into it, and make inquiries respecting it. In Isa. 21: 11, 12, we read, "Watchman, what of the night?" "Inquire ye, come."

FATHER.

What a charm in the word father! Dear reader, are you honored by sustaining this endearing appellation? It may be that a thrill of inexpressible delight has warmed your heart and enlivened your eye as the little prattler by your side has smiled in your face and affectionately uttered the words, "My father! dear father." You have felt ready to say, "Ask for anything, and it shall be given."

The attractions of home are greatly augmented by the presence and enlivening influence of a child. A dutiful, affectionate son or daughter, how lovely! It should cause anxious solicitude to know how to perpetuate and increase the beauty of these pleasant buds of promise. It is not enough that a hedge be placed around them to guard against the rude attacks of what is worse than beasts of prey. An enemy is already within, sowing the seeds of anger, strife, revenge, disobedience, and the like, which will soon germinate, and grow luxuriantly, unless carefully watched by the parental eye, and a tender hand applied with firmness to pluck up, as far as possible, the tender blade of evil passions. This must be done, not only by suitable instructions day by day, but by example, the most effectual mode of teaching.

Would you see your child amiable, kind, and affectionate? Then be so yourself, not only toward the child, but toward the wife and mother; every intonation of your voice, and the ever-varying expression of your countenance, are noticed by the little observer, and a faithful impression is made upon that delicate mind. Perhaps the father's deportment toward the wife may do more toward training the child than any other circumstance. If in relation to her he is at all times affectionate and kind, so the child is likely to be. Should he speak harshly, appear regardless of her feelings and wishes, so, in most instances, will the child do.

Whatever may have been the vexations of the wife, the husband always expects a pleasant greeting and gentle words; and ought not the wife to receive the same in return, not only for her own sake, but for the mutual influence on parents and children? Let the father be ever watchful to cherish affectionate feelings toward the wife, as well as toward the child, if he would have a happy home and train his children to "honor their father and mother." Is it not a time when all who have access to the throne of grace should pray earnestly that the hearts of fathers may be turned to the children, and the children to the fathers?

POWER FROM ON HIGH.

I remember how I felt many years ago at campmeeting; having the witness of the Spirit —the blessing of sanctification and testifying what the Lord had done for me. I heard many talk coldly about these things, saying they did not enjoy that state, and they did not seem to have very strong desires for it. It seemed to me it was not right for them to stand on such ground,—it was not only their privilege, but also their duty to "ask and receive" the fulness of the blessing.

Now another prospect opens before me. I have felt for years that it might become my privilege to be endowed with "power from on high." I have had by faith a glimpse of such a blessing. But now it is brought home to me by the sister who writes: "If you refuse to accept and advance to this higher state, you cannot retain your justification before God." Sister, I believe it. It has never been presented to me in that light before. But I have felt that it was difficult to retain a lively sense of justification; and now I feel sure I should fall into condemnation if I "refuse to accept and advance to this higher state." Casting a parting glance back upon the twenty-two years since I first found peace in believing; acknowledging with shame all my backslidings, and praising God who has spared the unfruitful tree; feeling that I need to "be endowed with power from on high," I would pray effectually, "Lord, I believe; I claim the blessing mine." I feel sure that without it I can do nothing. I feel that without that endowment I cannot "be strong in the Lord." O all ye praying souls, bear me in your prayers before God, that he may show me clearly the way in which I should walk, and LEAD ME THERE.

PARAPHRASE ON ISAIAH THIRTY-FIFTH.

The wilderness shall blossom
As blooms the rose of spring,
And flowers of rarest beauty
The deserts forth shall bring;
With notes of joy and gladness
The valleys shall resound,
And rising o'er the hilltops
Re-echo earth around.

Fair flowers in rich abundance
The desert blooming o'er,
While strains of glad rejoicing
Resound from shore to shore;
The glorious light of Lebanon
Shall grace the world below,
While Carmel too, and Sharon,
Their excellence bestow.

Secure from sin and sorrow,
God's glory earth shall see,
Rejoicing in his presence,
From all commotions free.
Then strengthen ye the fainting,
The feeble hands uphold,
And gently soothe their spirits,
With tender love enfold.

Say to the fearful, trembling,
Fear not, your God will come,
With righteous vengeance to bestow,
And seal the sinner's doom;
Yet with a recompense for those
Who, trusting in his power,
Have leaned upon his gracious arm
In dark temptation's hour;

Safe from the storms of life to rest,
On those fair healthful plains,
Where tear drops never dim the eye,
And gladness ever reigns.
Then shall the sightless orbs be ope'd
To view the rapturous scene;
Fair earth in bridal robes arrayed,
And beauteous evergreen.

Then shall the ears that never list
To catch melodious sound,
Be ope'd to hear the songs of praise
Re-echoing all around;
Then shall the lame man leap for joy,
The silent tongue rejoice;
All nature from her dreams awake,
At the Eternal Voice.

Within the dreary forest wilds,
Where lurks the serpent dread,
Secure within its dark'ning shades
Fierce beasts of prey have fed,—
Shall gentle streams serenely glide
To glad those scenes of joy,
And add new charms to life's bright hours,
Which time can ne'er destroy.

The thirsty land, all parched and dry
Beneath the scalding ray
Of many a piercing summer's sun,
Which shed its beams by day,
Shall gushing springs of water send,
To feed those living streams,
And cooling fountains ope'd supply
In earth's fair fields redeemed.

An highway then shall be prepared
Within that country fair,
For all that holy, happy throng,
To walk securely there;
No lion shall go up thereon,
Nor ravenous beast of prey,
For naught unclean shall overcome
Upon that holy way.

To Zion shall the host redeemed,
With songs of rapture come,
And everlasting joy complete
In their eternal home;
Obtaining joy and gladness then,
The night of sorrow gone,
Soon shall the shadows disappear,
The morn eternal dawn!

THE RESURRECTION.—No. 1.

The fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians contains St. Paul's great argument on the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, called forth by the shipwreck some in the Corinthian church had made of their faith. "How say some among you there is no resurrection of the dead?"—v. 12. The apostle himself maintains the doctrine, and boldly affirms, "The dead shall be raised incorruptible."—v. 52. However, in his masterly argument, he contemplates what would be the inevitable result, providing his opponents in faith, or the unbelievers in the resurrection, were correct, and himself wrong. While the resurrection of all men is affirmed, plainly and unequivocally: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive,"—v. 22, the resurrection of the just is more particularly the subject of argument. "They that are Christ's."—v. 23. "We shall all be changed."—v. 51.

In this great and unanswerable argument, St. Paul shows that there are seven absurdities as the absolute conclusion,—"If the dead rise not at all."—v. 29. Let us note them.

1st. The gospel is a complete failure. "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel, which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved."—v. 1, 2.

An epitome of the gospel he preached, which they had received, and wherein they for a time stood; and by which only they could BE SAVED, is then given; embracing the "death," "burial," and "resurrection of Christ," "According to the Scriptures," (v. 3, 4), and upon which he bases the hope of forgiveness and justification from sins, and future life and immortality by a resurrection from the dead.—Vers. 12–38. But, "If the dead rise not at all," this gospel is null and void.

2d. Christ is not raised. "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised."—v. 16.

The resurrection of Christ is both the pledge and pattern of his people, of whom he is "the first fruits."—v. 20. "Knowing that He which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus." "And God hath raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his power."—2 Cor. 4: 14; 1 Cor. 4: 14; Rom. 8: 11. "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?"—v. 12. He "hath begotten us again to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."—1 Pet. 1: 3.

But "If the dead rise not," then may we prove the non-resurrection of Christ; and so also, "If Christ be not raised," (v. 17), we may rest assured the dead will not have a resurrection. The two are interlinked inseparably; and stand or fall together.

3d. The apostles, together with the five hundred witnesses (v. 6) of Christ's resurrection, are chargeable with perjury. "Yea, we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up if so be that the dead rise not."—Vers. 5–8, 15.

4th. The christian faith is vain. "Your faith is also vain."—v. 14. "Your faith is vain."—v. 17.

The christian faith requires belief in the resurrection of Jesus Christ as the first fruits of them that sleep, (vers. 12–20); or, in other words, faith in the resurrection of the dead, both of Christ and his people: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."—Rom. 10: 9. They "preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead."—Acts 4: 2. "Touching the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question by you this day."—Acts 24: 21.

This faith is essential to salvation where the gospel is preached; but "if the dead rise not at all," the faith is vain.

5th. The world is without a satisfactory atonement—and believers are still in their sins. "Ye are yet in your sins."—v. 17.

St. Paul declares that the gospel affirms, that Jesus "was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification."—Rom. 4: 25.

If Christ is not raised, the world has no satisfactory sin-offering acceptable to God! Penitent believers no officiating High Priest! And there is no living Savior of men! What atoning offering shall we bring before God which he will accept? Will he "be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? Shall I give my first-born for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?"—Micah 6: 6, 7. This will not suffice, for "it is not possible that" these "should take away sins."—Heb. 10. All these are "a smoke in his nose," and refused. Therefore if Christ be not raised, christianity is dead and buried beyond all hope of a resurrection; and the world "are yet in their sins," without hope of mercy from divine justice!

6th. The ordinance of christian baptism is a useless and unmeaning ceremony. "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they baptized for the dead?"—v. 29.

When a person is baptized, he professes faith in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead; both of Christ's past resurrection, and the future resurrection of all his people at Christ's coming. But if there is no such thing as the resurrection, the ordinance is vain; and the candidate, buried in baptism, planted in the likeness of death, and raised in the likeness of a resurrection, is chargeable with the extreme folly of illustrating by the rite, and prefiguring that which has not been and is not to be!

7th. There is no future life. "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—v. 18. If in this life only we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable."—v. 19.

St. Paul here plainly teaches that "if the dead rise not at all," there is no future existence. And he further adds: "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die."—v. 32. He expected no reward for his sufferings; and tells the Corinthian brethren that they might at once adopt the infidel sentiment—"Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die." "Death is an eternal sleep." "And behold joy and gladness, slaying oxen, and killing sheep, eating flesh, and drinking wine; let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die."—Isa. 22: 13.

SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES SUCCESSFULLY.

Very many fail in their attempts in this greatest of undertakings, and still grope their way in the darkness of error, because they are utterly unprepared in their minds for such an undertaking.

Do I, after all, really wish to know the whole truth "as it is in Jesus," whatever becomes of my former beloved theories? O how hard to unlearn what has become as second nature to us! how crucifying to self to give up, and own we have been mistaken and must begin to learn as it were our A B C's of Him who is meek and lowly, the Great Teacher. But so is the teaching of one inspired, who had passed through the struggle, and after being brought up "at the feet of Gamaliel," as a child takes his place at the feet of Jesus, and having there been taught the great things of God and his kingdom, he exclaims, "If any man among you thinketh that he is wise, let him become a fool, that he may be wise."

There is nothing more inconsistent and insulting to God than the common popular course, viz., when we would ascertain the will of God as revealed to mortal man, the general course is, to go to standard human authors, to creeds and confessions of faith, rather than directly to the sacred Scriptures with simple faith and prayer. No marvel that the theological world this hour is one vast Babel, and is if possible becoming more so. Men standing in high places as watchmen and shepherds to the flock of Christ, neither "search the Scriptures" in the light of prophecy, nor encourage their flocks so to do, but they do much to discourage the work so positively enjoined on us all by our now absent Lord.

The most plausible and fatal subterfuge now being used by the "father of lies" in theological circles is probably this: The prophecies are designed to be understood only when they become history. Then their fulfillment will be so marked and striking that it will serve as a great and powerful instrumentality in the future work of this world's conversion. We are thus virtually taught that we have nothing to do in the way of a vigorous attempt to search and understand the Scriptures. Hence the pastors and flocks are quietly waiting for history to explain prophecy. This dreadful delusion is directly calculated, as must be seen, to relieve the watchmen from the fearful responsibility that God has fixed upon them, and also to induce the fatal slumber and consequent indolence now so evident ly and fearfully resting down upon the various religious organizations of our day. Hence spiritual death and worldly-mindedness reign almost universally.

Now is the time for the faithful servants to "render to each a portion in due season." "Blessed is that servant whom the Lord when he cometh shall find so doing." May the number of such servants be vastly multiplied.

For the World's Crisis.

PTOLEMY THE "HEATHEN."

More than once, in the controversy respecting the Canon, Ptolemy has been called a "heathen," as if such an epithet contained some argument against the reliability of the document in question. This mode of reasoning goes beyond a prejudice against the classic writings which has often appeared. Virgil and Horace have been sometimes discarded from a collegiate course of study, not so much because they were "heathen" as because their amorous poetry is sometimes indelicate. Other classic writings have been sometimes less esteemed, not because they were very bad, but because their moral standard was not so good as Christianity. But I do not know that any one has alleged against the Logic of Aristotle the fact that Aristotle was a heathen. Nor do I know that any Christian has thought less of the Geometry of Euclid, because Euclid was born 300 years before the era of our salvation, and in some heathen place still unknown. On the contrary, Playfair's "Euclid" is, if I mistake not, almost a literal translation from the Greek of 2000 years ago, book for book and proposition for proposition; and it was the standard treatise on the subject until the present generation. Indeed, Legendre's substitute has been deemed too easy, and Loomis' work on the subject is framed more according to the rigorous demonstrations of the old master.

The case of Ptolemy, more than of any ancient writer, save perhaps Aristotle, is like that of Euclid. Ptolemy was not only an astronomer, but a geographer also. Indeed no one can compute eclipses accurately without an intimate knowledge of geography. And Ptolemy's Geography, "heathen" though he may have been, was the standard authority in the schools of Christendom for fourteen centuries. A copy is in the Boston Athenæum, which may satisfy the curious that Ptolemy knew tolerably well what was about him, if he did not in all things know what he was about. "Heathen though he may have been"—I just said. He lived in Alexandria, in the middle of the second century. There were thousands of Christians in that city then. I do not know that Ptolemy any where avows his adherence to the decaying heathen system, or that he says a word against Christ, or that there is any positive evidence that he was not a Christian. I do not, indeed, think that he was a Christian, but this is only my guess. And in such a case, as I hope not to be judged, I have no right to judge, or to call any man "heathen," unless I know him to be such. Especially if they who hear the word think it is a fatal condemnation.

Ptolemy represents the Ptolemaic system of astronomy, or the theory that the sun and stars move round the earth as the moon does, and that the planets move also in "epicycles," or circles upon circles, and for that reason seem sometimes to stand still and to move backward. Ptolemy represents this system. He was not the author of it. He was born into it, just as the present generation is born into the Copernican system, and we are all taught from childhood that the sun really stands still, and the earth travels round it. Ptolemy was not in fault because he did not anticipate the reform made by Copernicus, 1300 years later. And Ptolemy did not go so far as to say, with some modern Adventists I know, that the earth is flat, and does n't turn over at all, or we should all fall off and down to the bottom of bottomless space.

Now if any one thinks that Ptolemy should not teach us, because he held the old and now obsolete theory of the big sun traveling round our little earth, I have only to reply, I do not know but the apostle Paul himself held the same theory. It was the universal theory of the age; and there is the same proof that Paul held it, and even greater, as that Ptolemy was a heathen. The Ptolemaic system was undisputed in the whole Roman empire. Heathenism was disputed, in the streets of Alexandria, daily, by such men as Athenagoras and Clement, whose books in defence of Christianity are well worth reading now. And the Ptolemaic system was held by all the Fathers of the Church, if not by the Gentile fathers,—until it survived the fall of heathenism a full thousand years, until the time of Galileo, who was imprisoned by Christian doctors for denying it. And we all know what a hue and cry the opponents of Christianity have made ever since, about Christian teachers who try to test science by revelation as they interpret it.

But some one asks if Ptolemy's system, with its puzzling "epicycles," did not impair the value of his astronomical observations? I reply, an observation is an observation, whether one's theory is true, or false, or none. Ptolemy could divide a circle into 360 degrees as well as Euclid or Legendre; and he could say how many degrees the moon is from the sun, and at what o'clock it is eclipsed, as well as a modern observer,—lacking only the advantage of "micrometers" to measure very small parts of a degree or of a second.

And besides, his theory of "epicycles" was not utterly false. The moon actually goes round the sun in an epi-ellipse, which is next thing to an epicycle. And the ellipse in which the moon does go round the earth might be made by the epicycle in which Ptolemy supposed the moon to move.

With a little digression, digressing only a little, I will close. Ptolemy's book of the astronomical system was the best known for over a thousand years. In the fourth century it received a copious commentary from Theon, also of Alexandria. Theon had a daughter, Hypatia, accomplished in the philosophical speculations of the age. If she did not accept Christianity, some reason may appear for it presently. With the pride of native genius, and with her admiration for whatever was profound or sublime in Plato and Plotinus, she became an expounder and champion of the old and waning systems, thinking, doubtless, that the Christians borrowed such virtues as they boasted from those now smoldering fires. Just then Cyril was Bishop in Alexandria; and he dreaded and hated speculation, as men naturally dread any thing which they do not know just how to refute, and which they can not understand. But in the struggle between Paganism and Christianity the latter was beginning to triumph. Heated with zeal, and bold with growing success, Cyril instigated and inflamed the passions of his flock against the "heathen" Hypatia, and she was murdered by a Christian mob.

Times have changed. I do not think that those Christians, who now call Ptolemy a "heathen," would think it wise, or desirable, to harm a hair of his head if he were living. The epithet is designed only as a criticism upon his Canon. Yet I am sure it will impair the confidence of no reflecting reader in Ptolemy's sagacity or veracity. The epithet contains no argument whatever, unless it means that his astronomical system is out of date; and that fact, if it were an argument, is more properly stated in other words. But though the epithet can not have even the just reputation of the greatest astronomer the world knew for 5000 years, it may, by exciting a false prejudice, defraud some readers of the healthy respect which is Ptolemy's due, and of the actual information which he is competent to give.

THE VOICE OF HISTORIANS.

"The Lord's Day"—The True Christian Sabbath.

(From Neander's History, translated by Torrey, Vol. I, pp. 234, 235.)

NUMBER TWO.

"When the Montanists were wishing to introduce new fasts by law, which were to be confined to stated times, what Paul had written in the epistle to the Galatians against the Jewish observance of times was very justly quoted against them; but Tertullian, the defender of Montanism, whom we have described above as standing on the dividing line between the early christian, the purely evangelical period, and the Christian Jewish period which was now about to commence, already shows himself incapable of rightly distinguishing the two positions, that of the Old, and that of the New Testament; for he conceives the Judaizing spirit, reprobated by St. Paul, to consist simply in the observance of Jewish festivals, and not in the whole relation corresponding to the Jewish position of particular days,—whatever days they might be,—to the religious consciousness. According to his view, it would savor in no respect of Judaism, if feasts which had reference to what is simply Christian, were placed in such a relation to the religious consciousness.

"The weekly and yearly festivals of the Christians originated in the same fundamental idea, which formed the centre of the whole christian life,—the idea of imitating Christ, the crucified and the risen,—imitating him in his death, by appropriating through faith and repentance the effects of his death, by dying to self and to the world,—imitating him in his resurrection, by rising with him, in faith and through the power which he imparts, to a new and holy life, consecrated to God, commencing here in the germ, and unfolding itself to maturity in another world. Hence, the jubilee and the festival of the resurrection; and the preparation for it, the remembrance of Christ's sufferings with penitence and crucifixion of the flesh, was the day of fasting and penitence. Accordingly in the week, the jubilee, the festival of joy, was Sunday; the preparation for it were the days of fasting and prayer consecrated to the remembrance of the sufferings of Christ, and of what preceded them, on Thursday and Friday. Accordingly the yearly festivals were in remembrance of Christ's sufferings and the fasts. Having presented this general view, we shall now proceed to consider, more in detail, the several weekly and yearly festivals.

"The opposition to Judaism early led to the special observance of Sunday instead of the Sabbath. The first intimation of this change is in Acts 20: 7, where we find the church assembled on the first day of the week; a still later one, is in Rev. 1: 10, where, by the 'Lord's day' can hardly be understood the day of judgment. Thus in the catholic epistle ascribed to Barnabas, at the close of the 15th chapter, Sunday is designated as the day of jubilee in remembrance of Christ's resurrection and ascension to heaven, and of the new creation which then commenced; and in the epistle of Ignatius to the Magnesians, it is presupposed that even the Jews, who had come over to christianity, substituted Sunday instead of the Sabbath. As the Sabbath was regarded as representing Judaism, Sunday was contemplated as a symbol of the new life consecrated to the risen Christ and grounded in his resurrection. Sunday was distinguished as a day of joy, by being exempted from fasts, and by the circumstance that prayer was performed on this day in a standing and not in a kneeling posture, as Christ, by his resurrection, had raised up fallen man again to heaven. But as we have already observed in Tertullian a confounding of the Jewish with the christian view of feasts, so we find also in him indications of the transfer of the law of the Jewish Sabbath to Sunday; for by him, attending to any business on Sunday seems to have been regarded as sinful."

CHRISTIAN UNION.—No. 3.

"And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul."

"That they may all be one!" a blessed prayer,
Echoed by holy hearts, and felt within,
As answered ever more and everywhere
Among the souls redeemed from death and sin!
For by whatever name the world may care
To mock those happy ones of earth who win
The prize of our high calling; still, as one
They stand together, one in kith and kin—
Serving the Father, ransomed by the Son,
And through the Spirit made to live for heaven!
O friends! much loving, because much forgiven,
Let us be one in heart throughout the globe—
Renouncing narrow thoughts and bitter leaven—
One, without rent, like Jesus' woven robe.

Testimonials continued, that in the mouth not only of two or three witnesses, but in the mouths of hundreds, thousands, and tens of thousands, every word may be established. For where is there a Bible christian, a true and faithful servant of God, a meek and lowly follower of Jesus, that does not abominate, hate with perfect hatred, the spirit of cast, of schism, that divides and subdivides christians into schools and parties, divisions and subdivisions, with religious creeds, church disciplines, confessions of faith, almost innumerable? When God says, "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, and in you all."—Eph. 4: 4, 5, 6. "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office; so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another."—Rom. 12: 4, 5.

"Heirs of the same immortal bliss,
Our hopes and fears the same,
With bands of love our hearts unite,
With mutual love inflame."

But to the renewed testimonials, in favor of "christian union," and in opposition to sects and sectarianism. Professor H. Cowles, alluding to the happy, joyful, and glorious state of things, when the last prayer of Jesus for this blessed christian union shall be fulfilled, reasons in this way:—

"It would not be easy to estimate adequately the value of this union in promoting love among brethren, making prayer acceptable to God, in preparing christian hearts for the indwelling of the Spirit, and in removing from christianity an indefinite amount of scandal. It reminds us of the prayer of our Savior "that all may be one;" and of the great end to be gained by this union, viz., "that the world may believe that thou has sent me." The tendency and the power of this union to enforce conviction as to Christ's divine mission, and thus to promote a saving faith in him, have been shown to be very great. Only let this union become complete—then we shall see the way of the Lord prepared for salvation to our world."

President C. G. Finney, of Oberlin College, on the evils of sects and sectarianism, speaks thus:—

"Sectarianism has been one cause of failure in the world's conversion, perhaps the chief. Sectarian ambition, jealousy, collision, these and innumerable other evils have clustered around this growing abomination. Nine-tenths, and perhaps I might say ninety-nine hundredths, of both ministerial and lay effort has lost its power by reason of a sectarian spirit. Go where you please over this great west, and over the east too, and what do you see? Why! in a small village, with a population perhaps just enough to make one respectable congregation, you find half a dozen or more feeble churches, of divers sects, with as many half-starved, and deservedly half-starved ministers, keeping up their sectarian bars, and perhaps undesignedly keeping alive the very prejudice that prevents the success of the gospel. One man comes on to the ground to attend the Presbyterian or Congregational interests in that place and region. Another must be thrust in to attend to the Close Baptist interests and another to attend to the Free-will Baptist interest. Next there must be two or three Methodist ministers to attend to the Episcopal interests and the Wesleyan Methodist interests, and then there must be the high church Episcopal interests, and the low church Episcopal interests; next, but not least, the New School interest, and the Old School interest, and among them all, they seem very generally to attend pretty thoroughly to the devil's interest. I mean that by this arrangement the devil's interest is really in the best way secured; not that they really intended any such thing; God forbid that I should make any such insinuations. They really meant, (as they profess) to secure the interests of their respective denominations. But in this way they most effectually hinder the success of the kingdom of Christ. In this way just, those jealousies are kept up which grieve the Spirit, alienate the hearts of christians from each other, weaken the hands of the ministers, disgust the impenitent and please the devil. Now I have not the least doubt that in the great majority of cases, if not in nine cases out of ten, if all the ministers but one, would leave the ground, if they would all go off to the heathen, or to destitute regions in our own country, and spread themselves out, and never again think of their denominational interests, we should never again hear such things as going out to nurse the interests of this sect and that sect. They would give themselves directly to the work of converting the world to God, and almost infinitely more could be done than is done now.

The fact is that the spirit of sectarianism instantly cools individual piety; it curses churches; it ruins communities; it swallows up a great part of the ministerial influence of the church. In most of the villages throughout the land, where they should all unite in one congregation, and where if they would, they are abundantly able to support the ministry and do much for the spread of the gospel abroad, being cut up as they are into little churches, they must build each of them a house, a little house that will hold two or three or four hundred people, and get a minister, and measure out to him his salt and potatoes, and he must preach on the Sabbath to some fifty or a hundred souls, and spend his week-time chiefly either on a farm, or in some other lucrative employment to keep his family in bread. Now what do my brethren think themselves engaged in? Is this the way for ministers to be used up? What? when twenty thousand ministers are at once demanded in India, and hundreds of thousands in other parts of the world? Why, men and brethren, we might better than not spare eight-tenths of all the ministers in the land, if they would clear out, and but one stay in a place. I have long thought that I never would consent to settle down and give myself up to preach the gospel under such circumstances as I have named. I would never occupy a position where there were a number of ministers; and the work might as well and better be done by one. I do not believe that God can ever bless any such thing as this, and I am agonized and pained to my very heart to see this the general state of the church over the whole land. I have known that many of my brethren have felt with me, distressed on the subject. The remedy is at hand. Let the true spirit of the world's conversion only take possession of the entire ministry, and the sectarianism is numbered and finished. Then the present ministry may be spread over a field five or ten times as great as that which they now occupy, and even then much more fully meet the real wants of the people than they now do."

"No more will converts then be few,
But numerous as the drops of dew,
Which silently distilled at night,
Are brought to view by morning light,
A host to charm our raptured sight,
And fill the earth with glory bright."

WILL THE TIMES AND SEASONS EVER BE DEFINITELY KNOWN?

NUMBER NINE.

For then he will either take "French leave" of his estates, or they of him. The Lord's coming was not to be till Antichrist had reached his height, and had partly consumed away; and no matter whether Louis Napoleon, the eighth head restored, being of the seventh, so ably made out by so many learned and good commentators,—a few short years will seal and close all prophecy.

It is apparent to all classes of minds that some mighty crisis or event is now pending and may at any time burst upon the world, for the signs of the times and seasons are so plain and unmistakable that he who runs may read; and there does not seem to be any room to doubt that the next event in earth's history is the second coming of Christ. What glad tidings is this to proclaim to a perishing and passing world! What better news can the church of God have than to know that in a few years Christ will come again to reign; that all his sleeping saints will rise from their dusty beds, to reign with him; when long-parted friends will see each other in a better world than this, where no pain ever comes again; where the tree of life is again planted in paradise restored, where we may live for ever.

And what is most astounding in this view of things is, to find at this time not only professing christians but "watchmen of the flock" asleep on the signs of the times and seasons, having no desire to know and withal believing that nothing can be known on this great event, of which Christ has been so particular to inform us. They scoff with the world.

It was only yesterday, Feb. 10th, 1865, that I loaned a Crisis to the Methodist minister. He returned the compliment by giving me the Farmington Chronicle of Feb. 9, 1865, which contained a very long article, over a column, taken from a popular work, "A I Autocrat of the Breakfast Table." This article was a long tirade againt Millerism, alias Adventism. And for fear I might overlook it, it was specially marked. Such watchmen may exclaim, What good will be done by proclaiming such views? I hold it to be a principle that all truth is essential, and that whenever there is a tongue to speak, or willing ears to hear, the "blessed hope" should be proclaimed. When this blessed hope is realized, what a day of joy to a long-darkened world, when not merely its worst enemy will fall, but its glorious Deliverer shall have come.

That God has revealed the time, is sufficiently proved by the fulfillment of the divine testimony, as it reads in Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets";—in different ways, according to men, and the age of the world, as it reads in Heb. 1: 1, 2,—"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." And he now reveals his secrets unto those who preach his gospel, by moving them to the study of the prophetic word, and causing them to apprehend the "sure word of prophecy," as the apostle says,—"Ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn."

Since the time of the end commenced, the church has studied more of the prophetic word than ever known before. Christ has told us of this time when we might know when his coming was near, even at the door. "Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things (the signs spoken of in Matt. 24th, Mark 13th, Luke 21st, and Rev. 6th), know that it (He, Christ, see margin) is near, even at the door." Thus the nearness of the end was to be known for a period previous to its occurrence. In consideration of this, the Savior says, "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares."

Thus are christians to live as it is expressed in Titus 2: 13,—"Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." If a christian performs his duty aright, he will make a proper preparation, and obtain a worthiness for the coming of Christ, as we learn from the thirty-sixth verse,—"Watch ye, therefore, and pray always; that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."

Many say that it is not right to look into this time question. I think that it evidently is our duty to look into it, and make inquiries respecting it. In Isa. 21: 11, 12, we read, "Watchman, what of the night?" "Inquire ye, come."

FATHER.

What a charm in the word father! Dear reader, are you honored by sustaining this endearing appellation? It may be that a thrill of inexpressible delight has warmed your heart and enlivened your eye as the little prattler by your side has smiled in your face and affectionately uttered the words, "My father! dear father." You have felt ready to say, "Ask for anything, and it shall be given."

The attractions of home are greatly augmented by the presence and enlivening influence of a child. A dutiful, affectionate son or daughter, how lovely! It should cause anxious solicitude to know how to perpetuate and increase the beauty of these pleasant buds of promise. It is not enough that a hedge be placed around them to guard against the rude attacks of what is worse than beasts of prey. An enemy is already within, sowing the seeds of anger, strife, revenge, disobedience, and the like, which will soon germinate, and grow luxuriantly, unless carefully watched by the parental eye, and a tender hand applied with firmness to pluck up, as far as possible, the tender blade of evil passions. This must be done, not only by suitable instructions day by day, but by example, the most effectual mode of teaching.

Would you see your child amiable, kind, and affectionate? Then be so yourself, not only toward the child, but toward the wife and mother; every intonation of your voice, and the ever-varying expression of your countenance, are noticed by the little observer, and a faithful impression is made upon that delicate mind. Perhaps the father's deportment toward the wife may do more toward training the child than any other circumstance. If in relation to her he is at all times affectionate and kind, so the child is likely to be. Should he speak harshly, appear regardless of her feelings and wishes, so, in most instances, will the child do.

Whatever may have been the vexations of the wife, the husband always expects a pleasant greeting and gentle words; and ought not the wife to receive the same in return, not only for her own sake, but for the mutual influence on parents and children? Let the father be ever watchful to cherish affectionate feelings toward the wife, as well as toward the child, if he would have a happy home and train his children to "honor their father and mother." Is it not a time when all who have access to the throne of grace should pray earnestly that the hearts of fathers may be turned to the children, and the children to the fathers?

POWER FROM ON HIGH.

I remember how I felt many years ago at campmeeting; having the witness of the Spirit—the blessing of sanctification and testifying what the Lord had done for me. I heard many talk coldly about these things, saying they did not enjoy that state, and they did not seem to have very strong desires for it. It seemed to me it was not right for them to stand on such ground,—it was not only their privilege, but also their duty to "ask and receive" the fulness of the blessing.

Now another prospect opens before me. I have felt for years that it might become my privilege to be endowed with "power from on high." I have had by faith a glimpse of such a blessing. But now it is brought home to me by the sister who writes: "If you refuse to accept and advance to this higher state, you cannot retain your justification before God." Sister, I believe it. It has never been presented to me in that light before. But I have felt that it was difficult to retain a lively sense of justification; and now I feel sure I should fall into condemnation if I "refuse to accept and advance to this higher state." Casting a parting glance back upon the twenty-two years since I first found peace in believing; acknowledging with shame all my backslidings, and praising God who has spared the unfruitful tree; feeling that I need to "be endowed with power from on high," I would pray effectually, "Lord, I believe; I claim the blessing mine." I feel sure that without it I can do nothing. I feel that without that endowment I cannot "be strong in the Lord." O all ye praying souls, bear me in your prayers before God, that he may show me clearly the way in which I should walk, and LEAD ME THERE.

SERIOUS THINGS.

Clouds and darkness hang o'er the face of nature. It is the mournful season of the year. The sighing of the wind through the leafless boughs of the trees seems almost an innovation upon the deep monotony that prevails around, as I sit penning a few lines to the dearly beloved in Christ, scattered abroad in the midst of the perils of these very last days. O what a transitory state is human probation.

I have been making a short journey of late among friends in fields where I have labored in by-gone days. Alas! what changes has time made. O Death! how indiscriminate have been thy unrelenting ravages. Eyes that were wont to sparkle with sweet delight, and faces beaming with joy, are now dim and cold in death. Hands once extended in warm and hearty welcome to the tired and weary pilgrim are now folded within the coffin upon the cold bosom, where once pulsated a warm heart glowing with the love of God; from which came gushing forth those tender and affectionate emotions of christian sympathy and love, the recollections of which time can never efface. Husbands mourn the loss of wives. Widows mourn their companions. Children mourn in bitter plaint the loss of father and mother, and parents mourn the loss of early dead. The church mourns the loss of dear ones dead. 'Tis her night of weeping. She is now clothed with the weeds of widowhood. Ties that entwine around the tendrils of fond hearts are constantly severing, and how often, as the weeping Jeremiah exclaims, are we in the same condition; "She wept sore in the night, her tears are on her cheeks." And like David, the sweet singer, the man whom God raised up, "I have mingled my drink with weeping."

Bonds of love, cemented by the stronger cord than nature, the precious blood of Jesus, are constantly being riven, and we cannot "refrain our voice from weeping and our eyes from tears." O! who can behold juvenile innocence in grief, see the swelling bosom expand with agony of heart, and the scalding tears chasing each other in rapid succession over the faces of sweet, crushed innocence, and refrain from "weeping with those who weep"?

> I hear the wail, the plaint, the moan,
> Through all the paths I tread;
> Around the sick are thickly strewn,
> Beneath me lie the dead.

Since tracing these few lines, what multitudes have gathered up their feet in death. The hand that sets this in type may move with great dexterity to place each separate letter, but with far greater velocity mortals are every instant groaning out their existence in the agonies of death. To every tick of the watch, and every throb of the pulse, what increasing numbers are closing their eyes in death. Truly earth is a huge graveyard, a "golgotha," a place of dead men's skulls and bones.

Dearly beloved, in view of the mutability of everything in this present state, how very essential it is that we should place our affections upon things heavenly and divine, and have the Spirit of God bearing witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. Death is on our track; and if Jesus comes not soon, some more of us must fall asleep. Many that I have heard say, in years past, that they expected to live to see the Lord appear, are now silent in the grave. Time is fast making inroads upon some of us. The few locks that remain upon some of our heads are whitened with labor, infirmities, and years; and as we wait all the days of our appointed time until our change comes, we often sing in the house of our pilgrimage—

> "I am weary of sighing o'er sorrows of earth,
> O'er joy's glowing visions that fade at their birth;
> O'er the pangs of the loved that we cannot assuage,
> O'er the blightings of youth and the weakness of age."

And so it will be until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory. Then down deep in the dark blue sea, the dust that now slumbers in old ocean's caverns, o'er which its ever restless billows, amid the war of elements, hath remained unconscious, will hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth.

Then the glorious army of martyrs who have laid down their lives for the love of the truth and the testimony of Jesus, whose bones have been calcined by the fires of Papal abomination and fury, will come to the city of the living God, with songs and everlasting joy upon their head. Amen! Then

> "From the East, from the West, from the South, from the North,
> All the vast generations of men will come forth."

O illustrious morning, dawn! For the shadows of evening are fast closing around. The ways of Zion mourn. Few love or come to her solemn assemblies. Thy professed spouse hath forsaken her vow, and committed adultery with the world. She taketh more pleasure in the giddy halls of mirth and frivolity, amid religious frolics, festivals, and picnics, where the jeer, the jibe, and the scoff drop from the lips of the unregenerate in heart. O! merciful Redeemer, hasten thy appearing, for millions of earth's teeming population are now constantly crossing the line of accountability, and but very few are brought to a saving knowledge of the truth.

O! glorious Emancipator, hasten the universal jubilee of jubilees, when every yoke, bond, chain and fetter shall melt away at the brightness of thine appearing;—when the multitudinous host, redeemed by thy precious, all-cleansing blood, shall burst forth in the rich, sweet, melting, universal acclaim, "as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Then we shall have an eternal reunion. Then heaven, earth, air, mountains, hills and vales, rivers, rills and flowing fountains, above, around, throughout a redeemed universe,—every object that presents itself to the admiration of the palm-bearing, multitudinous throng, will be instinct with IMMORTALITY. O! who, I ask, that possesses "the earnest of the inheritance" within their heart, can avoid joining in the apocalyptic prayer with the seer on the isle of Patmos, in view of the glory soon to be revealed,—"AMEN. EVEN SO, COME, LORD JESUS."

> "Hallelujah! hark! the sound,
> From the centre to the skies,
> Wakes above, beneath, around,
> All creation's harmonies.
> He shall reign from pole to pole,
> With illimitable sway;
> He shall reign when like a scroll
> Yonder heavens shall pass away."

The World's Crisis AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, March 7, 1865.

DISCUSSION IN BOSTON.

The undersigned have agreed to hold a public oral debate in Kast Hall, Boston, on the following question:—"DO THE SCRIPTURES TEACH THE NON-RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED?" The invitation to debate originated with Bro. R. Wendell, who takes the affirmative. The discussion has been arranged to commence on Tuesday evening, March 14th. Six evenings have been definitely arranged for, and two more evenings conditionally. On the fifth evening the audience shall decide by vote whether there shall be a seventh evening; and on the sixth evening (in case it does not conclude the discussion) it shall in like manner be decided whether there shall be an eighth. The debate will occupy two hours each evening, and the speeches are to be twenty minutes in length. J. F. PICKERING, Esq., has consented to act as Moderator.

RUFUS WENDELL,
MILES GRANT.

☞ The change of time from Monday evening, 13th, to Tuesday evening, 14th, is made necessary by the unavoidable occupancy of the Hall on Monday evening for other purposes. R. W.

SIGN YOUR NAME.

We wish to repeat again to those who write for "our paper," that if they expect to see their articles in its columns, they must send their names with their contributions. We frequently receive very good communications, but with no name unless it may be their initials. Such a one was sent this week, signed "G." Do not be ashamed of your name, any more than you would in any company of christian brethren and sisters. Do not be over nice. Your articles are read with much more interest when your names are signed. Please remember now what we have said.

"THE SEALED BOOK."

In Daniel 12: 4, he is instructed to "seal the book, even to the time of the end." The question very naturally arises, how was the book of Daniel "sealed," so that it should not be correctly understood, or opened till "the time of the end?" That it has been sealed, we cannot deny, unless we doubt the saying of the prophet, which, of course, no believer in the Bible will do.

When it is said, "the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end," it cannot mean that the reading matter in any part of the book of Daniel is "closed up and sealed," so that no one can read the words; but that when they read them, they will not get the right understanding of them "till the time of the end." As the words were to be "closed up" "till that time, it is very plainly shown that some time before the end takes place, that which was sealed will be unsealed and opened to the understanding of the children of the Lord.

If it could be proved that we are not in the time of the end, then it would follow that the seal was not yet broken. It is certain that the time is at least a part of that which was to be "sealed," because that was a special point under consideration, as may be seen by the following inquiry: "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?"—(v. 6). After hearing the answer, Daniel says: "I heard, but I understood not; then said I, O, my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."—(Dan. 12: 8, 9).

We come again to the question, how was this prophecy sealed up? We can but think of but two ways that look reasonable: 1, by putting a wrong construction upon the Scripture, or, 2, by applying it to the wrong events. In relation to the first method of sealing it, the time might be taken as so many literal weeks and days; but we believe nearly all commentators, whether Catholic or Protestant, hold that the seventy weeks, sixty-nine weeks, sixty-two weeks, one week, and the 2300 days, are symbols of years, and we see no reason to come to any other conclusion. We think the seal was not on this point.

It now remains to be shown that the periods of Daniel have been sealed up to the church, and were to be till "the time of the end," because they have been commenced at the wrong dates. On this point, we see no room to doubt; indeed, past failures demonstrated this position. As Ptolemy's Canon forbid the beginning the sixty-nine weeks at the only point where the Bible places their commencement, in the first year of Cyrus,—B. C. 536, it was then concluded they began at the seventh year of Artaxerxes, B. C. 457, and beginning them there, the 2300 days would end in 1843–4, where Bro. Miller and others expected the coming of Christ. As the event did not then transpire, we now know that the seventh of Artaxerxes was not the right place to commence those prophetic periods.

The next point, and the last, we think, that can be taken, for any event that has even the semblance of a commandment to build Jerusalem, was thirteen years later, in the twentieth of Artaxerxes, which according to Ptolemy's Canon was B. C. 445. This is the point where Bro. Stevenson begins the 2300 days and seventy weeks, on his great chart. But if we begin them there, then the 2300 days ended in 1855, or the spring of 1856. For, if we take 445 from 2300, it leaves 1855. We can see no possibility to extend the 2300 days any further, if we follow Ptolemy's Canon, and take the very last event that any one can claim as a decree in any sense to build Jerusalem. But if we begin the seventy weeks, 2300 days, and sixty-nine weeks together, as most have done in time past, and start them at the twentieth of Artaxerxes, B. C. 445, then the Savior would have been thirty-seven or thirty-eight years of age, at his crucifixion, even if he was cut off at the end of the sixty-nine weeks; whereas it may be very clearly shown that he was only about thirty-three and one-half years of age, when crucified. This point will appear plain from a moment's examination. In seventy weeks there are four hundred and ninety days, representing in this case four hundred and ninety years. Now if they begin B. C. 445, in the twentieth of Artaxerxes, take this number (445) from the sixty-nine weeks, or four hundred and eighty-three days, (years), and thirty-eight remains to represent the age of Christ at his crucifixion; but if we have him crucified in the midst of the seventieth week, as claimed by many expositors, and by Bro. Stevenson, then it would make the Savior forty-one or forty-two years of age at his death, if the 2300 days had ended in 1855. But now we are ten years this side of there, and the sanctuary is still trodden down by the Gentiles, consequently the 2300 days are not ended; so that if the 2300 days were to end this year (1865), if the seventy and sixty-nine weeks began B. C. 445, as claimed, it would make the Savior over fifty years of age at his crucifixion, or some eighteen years older than his true age, as may be clearly found.

Now let it be observed that all this confusion arises from trying to harmonize the Bible with Ptolemy's Canon. And just so long as we endeavor to do this, we are getting further and further into darkness. As there was no proof that the Savior was so old as he must have been, if Ptolemy was right in his dates of the Persian kings, provided the very latest point claimed—B. C. 445—be taken for the commencement of the seventy weeks and the 2300 days; expositors of the Bible were driven to one of two positions; either that there was no connection between the seventy weeks and the 2300 days; or, that the 2300 days were ended. We think it is evident that neither can be true.

Now that which prevented the church from seeing the light on this subject must be what sealed it up, so that they did not understand it. It is very evident that the decree of Cyrus, as recorded in Ezra 1: 1–5, is the only one that answers to the prophecy in Isa. 44: 28, 45: 1, 13:

"That saith of Cyrus, he is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: even saying to Jerusalem, thou shalt be built; and to the temple, thy foundation shall be laid. Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the twoleaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut. I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct all his ways: he shall build my city, and he shall let go my captives, not for price nor reward, saith the Lord of hosts."

That which has "sealed" the book of Daniel to all expositors, so far as commencing the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9: 25, where the prophet locates them, at the commandment of Cyrus "to restore and to build Jerusalem," was their trust in Ptolemy's canon; then, of course, it will not be unsealed till that canon is shown to be wrong, which we think has been most fully accomplished by Bro. Thurman, in his "Sealed Book of Daniel Opened," which we hope all will read with prayerful candor.

If it be assumed that Ptolemy is correct, then it follows that we are still in darkness as to any event for the commencement of the seventy weeks, sixty-nine weeks, sixty-two weeks, and the 2300 days; and when the light does come; or the book is unsealed, then it will be shown that Cyrus' commandment went forth just sixty-nine weeks before the birth of Messiah the Prince, which is just as we have it now, after correcting Ptolemy's canon, or breaking the seal, as we believe. The more fully we investigate this matter, the clearer it looks. Praise the Lord for the light that now shines "out of darkness."

"MAKE AN END OF SINS." Dan. 9: 24.

In Dan. 9: 24, we read as follows:—"Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish (margin, restrain) the transgression, and to make an end of sins" (margin, to seal up).

The expression, "make an end of sins," has always been obscure to our mind, as to its application. We could not see how an end of sins was made at the close of the seventy weeks, let them begin and terminate wherever they might in the past; for it is a fact that sin has been greatly increased since the advent of our Savior, especially in these last days. And instead of ending the sins of the Jews at the close of the seventy weeks, they seem to be more wicked, and the results of their former sins are more manifest by the displeasure of the Lord in sending against them the Roman armies for the destruction of their city.

The Hebrew word ghahtham, rendered end, in Dan. 9: 24, occurs 28 times, and is found in the following passages, and represented by the words in italics:—"Or his flesh be stopped from his issue."—Lev. 15: 3. "Is not this . . . sealed up among my treasures."—Deut. 32: 34. "So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal."—1 Kings 21: 8. "We make a sure covenant, and write it, and our princes . . . seal unto it."—Neh. 9: 38. "Now those that sealed were, Nehemiah . . . and . . . Jeremiah."—Neh. 10: 1. "In the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring."—Esther 3: 12. "Write ye . . . in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring; for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may no man reverse."—Est. 8: 8. "He wrote in king Ahasuerus' name, and sealed it with the king's ring."—Esther 8: 10. "Which commandeth the sun and it riseth not, and sealeth up the stars."—Job 9: 7. "My transgression is sealed up."—Job 14: 17. "In the dark they dig through houses which they had marked for themselves in the day time."—Job 24: 16. "Then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction."—Job 33: 16. "He sealeth up the hand of every man."—Job 37: 7. "A spring shut up, a fountain sealed."—Cant. 4: 12. "Bind up the testimony, seal the law among my disciples."—Isa. 8: 16. "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed."—Isa. 29: 11. "I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it."—Jer. 32: 10. "So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed, . . . and that which was open."—Jer. 32: 11. "Take these evidences, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open."—Jer. 32: 14. "Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them."—Jer. 32: 44. "Thou sealest up the sum."—Ezk. 28: 12. "And the king sealed it with his own signet."—Dan. 6: 17. "Seventy weeks are determined . . . to seal up the vision and prophecy."—Dan. 9: 24. "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book."—Dan. 12: 4. "And he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."—Dan. 12: 9.

We have now given all the examples where the word occurs, excepting its use in Dan. 9: 24, where it is rendered "to make an end." It will be observed that it is not thus rendered in any other case. The simple and obvious meaning of the word appears to be to seal, make sure, or fasten firmly. Gesenius defines the word, "to seal, to seal up."

In Dan. 9: 24 it appears to signify, judging from its connection, that the sins of the Jewish people would be sealed up for judgment, with no opening for pardon, or further trial. Their favors would end with the seventy weeks, and they would be given up to the desolations of the Romans.

OUR POSITION.

Under the above heading we find an editorial article in the Voice of the West, Feb. 7th, 1865, which will be read with interest by many of our readers. We are glad that Bro. Himes has spoken out so plainly on a very important point. We believe it is man's duty to let the light shine as fast as he sees it, in order that others may be benefited. The editor says:

"Bro. Samuel Chapman in a private letter has put several important questions to us relative to our change of views on the state of the dead and the destiny of the wicked. We have concluded to give a public answer to them, that all may know where we stand. We have been slow and very cautious in the adoption of the views we now hold, and nothing short of a flood of light on the subject could have led us out where we now stand.

Our old fellow-laborer and dear Bro. Chapman is still in the field, enjoying good health, and laboring as from the first with great patience and industry. We learn by a private note as also by a published letter from him, that he has recently visited Pike, Iowa, and labored with the little flock there with good success. We wish them prosperity and enlargement.

Bro. Gibson, it seems, had been laboring among them, and had preached on the state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked. His views were not favorably received by some members of the church, and did not take with some of the community. So Bro. Chapman gave his view of the matter, as he had a perfect right to do, in which he seems to have interested the community, and converted one brother from his belief in the destruction of the wicked to the doctrine of their eternal misery and torment. He examined the Scriptures with this brother for several days, and the result was that the brother gave up his former views and adopted Bro. Chapman's interpretation.

We suppose that Bro. C. depends upon the same arguments that we and others did formerly; arguments which we think have never fairly met objections on the other side. We have not felt satisfied with the manner in which our former position was sustained by those who advocated the existence of the proper man in life, after he was dead, against those who believed that man in death was dead, and had no life or knowledge in this condition, and would not, and could not have till the resurrection.

We said we had not been satisfied with the manner in which the arguments of those advocating the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked had been met; and yet, there were old prejudices in favor of the opposite view which we could not give up for a long time.

First, We remark that early in the controversy we were driven from the position that man had an immortal soul or spirit. We had to give up this idea entirely, as unscriptural.

Second, That man did not consist of two beings in one. But the man was made out of the dust of the ground, and then, when all the organs of life were perfected, God breathed into him the breath of life, and man became a living being, or soul; not two beings, but one organized being in life, consisting of soul, body, and spirit—making the perfect man.

Third, In death there is a cessation of all the functions of life. Solomon spoke the truth when he said, 'The dead know not anything.' (Eccl. 9: 5.) And there is no knowledge in the grave whither thou goest. Eccl. 9: 10.)

Fourth, 'As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.' (1 Cor. 15: 22.) We can only hope to live again through Christ. And if Christ was not raised, then there is no resurrection—and they that have fallen asleep (or died] in Christ are perished (1 Cor. 15: 12) beyond all hope of life, or living again. Between death and the resurrection there is no conscious existence, for the best of reasons. The man is dead! For the same reason, man is not rewarded till the resurrection. There is nothing to reward until the man lives again. So the Savior assures us that when he comes the second time he will 'reward every man according to his works.' And, 'when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we appear with him in glory,' and not till then: for we shall not live again till that time. 'They that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.' (1 Thess. 4: 14.) From where? Yes, from where will he bring them? 'For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive [the living] and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep;' for we which are living when the Lord shall come, will not rise to meet the Lord in the air before the dead saints. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, and the DEAD in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them [the dead ones brought to life] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord. (1 Thess. 4: 14–17.)

Now mark: there is not a word in the Bible about these dead saints coming from heaven to inhabit their bodies, at the coming of Christ. And where the resurrection is spoken of, there is no intimation of any living part of man that comes to take possession of a dead part revived; but in all cases it is the dead that is raised to life. And this is the apostolic doctrine. It is this mortal that puts on immortality. Thus mortality is swallowed up of life. Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. (1 Cor. 15: 54–57.)

But if the man had been living all the time in heaven, or hades, or any where else, then the man proper was not dead. The clay returned to the dust, but he existed without the body in a state of triumph. The man never did die. In this view when it is said, 'the soul that sinneth it shall die,' it is meant that it shall be more alive when dead, than when living in the body. So the apostle James says (2: 26.) For the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also. Let it be remembered that the word spirit here is in the margin rendered breath. So the body without the 'breath of life' (Gen. 2: 7) is a dead mass of inert matter, until 'bone shall come to its bone' again, and 'God shall breathe on the slain, that they may live,' (Ezek. 37: 9.) The only hope of man, then, is in the resurrection. If there is no resurrection, then there is no future life. How heart-cheering, then, to the child of God, to hear the voice of the Savior of men, saying, 'I am the resurrection and the life.' (John 11: 25.) And that other voice, 'Behold I come quickly, to give to every man according as his work shall be.' (Rev. 22: 12.) Let us all be ready."

TO PREACHERS.

The following advice to preachers we think the best, and fullest of common sense, of any thing we ever read from an uninspired pen. We hope every preacher will carefully consider these rules, treasure them up and observe them. They need only to be read to be prized. We would especially call attention to No's 3, 8, 15, 17, 21, 22, and 25. Without further comment, we introduce the rules:—

SERMONS—HOW TO PREPARE AND HOW TO DELIVER THEM.

(A Page from a very old Note Book.)

1. Discover no more of your method than needs must.
2. Pass not anything till you have bolted it to the brain.
3. Use the mother speech and tone, without affectation or imitation of any man, that you may not seem to act a comedy instead of a sermon.
4. Clog not your memory too much, it will exceedingly hinder invention and mar delivery.
5. Be sure you eye God, his glory, the good of souls; having the day before mastered self and man-pleasing.
6. Let your words be soft, few, and slow, and see they come no faster than the weakest hearer can digest each morsel. Pause a little, and look in the child's eye till he swallow his bit.
7. Look to your affections most carefully that they be not (1.) feigned, nor (2.) forcedly let loose to have their full scope; for then they will either overrun your judgment, or be a temptation to vain glory.
8. Preach speaking or talking to the people; look on the people, not on the roof or walls, and look on the most mortified faces in the assembly; let them know your preaching is a real talking with them, whereby they may be provoked, as it were, to answer you again.
9. Take heed of overwording anything.
10. Be sure you have made the people understand thoroughly what is the good you exhort them to, and the evil you deport them from, before you bring your motives and means.
11. Touch no Scriptures lightly; trouble not many, but open the metaphors, and let one Scripture point out the other, the one a key to the other.
12. Let the Scripture teach you, and not you it.
13. Be sure you feed yourself on every pause with the people, before you pass it; else that will do them little good, and you none at all. Oh, taste every bit.
14. Take these four candles to find out what to say to the people. (1.) The Scriptures unbiassed; (2.) the thoughts and experience of good men; (3.) your own experiences, (4.) the condition of the people.
15. Break off anywhere, rather than run upon any of these two conveniences, (1.) either to huddle or tumble together spiritual things, (2.) or tire the weakest of the flock.
16. Never pass over one point while you have any thing material to say of it, provided it be on a spiritual point.
17. Let your doctrine, and the constant strain of your preaching be about the chiefest spiritual things, and let small controversies and external duties come in by the by.
18. Beware of forms, neither be tied to any one method.
19. Be always upon that subject which is next your heart, and be not too thrifty or careful what to say next, for God will provide. It will stink like kept manna if reserved through ditrust till next day.
20. Be sure to extricate carefully any godly point you speak of out of the notions and terms of divinity, else it will freeze inevitably in you mouth and in their ears.
21. Let there not be disfiguring of face, nor snuffing of the nose, or teasling of the throat, or any antic gesture, pretended devotion, made gravity, which will make you seem a loathsome Pharisee, or a distracted man broke loose out of bedlam.
22. Do not care so much whether the people receive your doctrine, as whether you and it are acceptable to the Lord.
23. Do not conceive that your zeal or earnestness will prevail with the people; but the force of spiritual reason, the evidence of Scripture, and the power of the Holy Ghost.
24. Do not think that the hearers can receive as you conceive, and so make your own conception the rule of dealing the bread of life; so shall you only please yourself and be admired, but not understood by others.
25. Let there be something in every sermon to draw poor sinners to Jesus Christ.
26. Take heed that your comparisons be not ridiculous, and yet be not shy of homely ones.
27. Study every Scripture you are to speak of beforehand, lest you overburden invention, or presume too much on your own parts.
28. Take heed of bolting truth of extravagances, quidlibet ex quodlibet, needless digressions, heads, and enumerations.
29. Shun apologies' for they always stink.

OMISSION.—In Bro. Hastings' article on "Thurman's Astronomy," in the last Crisis, near the top of the fifth column of the first page, the following is omitted after the words, "Mr. Thurman may be able to teach what he knows of astronomy in a little while":—"I have known persons who could teach the French language in twelve lessons, of an hour each. I could teach all I know about it in half the time, but I fear my pupils would not get through Paris creditably on the strength of it."

BRO. GRANT:—In my first number of the Voice of Historians, etc., the types make me say that the extracts from Coleman are found on p. 5 of his work. It should be from p. 526 to p. 530. T. M. PREBLE.

ERRATA.—In the article on Ptolemy, first page, last paragraph, for "the epithet can not have," read haram.

PRICE OF THE BAKING PANS.—When we put in the notice of the baking pans, manufactured by "Ford and Co., Concord, N. H.," (see Health Department), we did not know the price of them, which is as follows:—Price at the manufacturers, in Concord, for the "French Roll" pans, $7 per dozen, retail 75 cts. Small "Egg Pans," $5 per dozen, retail 62 cts. Handles $1.25 per dozen, retail 12 cts. The handle will be found very convenient, not only for taking the pans out of the oven, but for various other purposes about a stove.

A Good Investment.

A brother in Shamrock Mills, R. I., writes:—

"In casting about me for some profitable enterprise in which to invest a small amount, I conclude to try the "Bank of the Lord's Poor," and therefore send the enclosed $10.00, for which you can assign to me my stock, and I will wait to see what dividend it will pay in the "state beyond." S. P. C.

Send it to your Friends.

A brother in New York writes:—

"I have a friend whom I desire to know the truth, and, although he is abundantly able to pay for it himself, I send you the subscription price, for which you will please send him the Crisis for one year." C. C.

A sister writes from New Hampshire:—

"I have a brother out of Christ, whose health is very poor; and, as I have hope that the World's Crisis and Second Advent Messenger will do him much good, I feel anxious that he should have it. I therefore enclose the price for six months, and may the Lord sanctify it to him to his everlasting good." E. T.

A brother in Connecticut writes:—

"Enclosed find five dollars; $2.50 on my account, and $2.50 for two new subscribers in Iowa, as follows. . . . They are not of our faith, but have agreed to read the Crisis if I would have it sent to them. I therefore pay for it cheerfully, hoping it will do them good." J. A.

New Subscribers in February.

February has brought us in a goodly number of new subscribers,—if not so many as her elder sister, January, yet a very acceptable number, 175,—which she has gathered from the different States, as follows:—

Massachusetts	24	Iowa	12
Maine	25	Illinois	8
New Hampshire	17	Michigan	4
Vermont	7	Wisconsin	2
Rhode Island	14	Minnesota	5
Connecticut	18	Canada East	2
New York	17	Canada West	3
Pennsylvania	6	Nova Scotia	1
Ohio	9	Scotland	1

With a few more workers, and a little more effort, this number may be more than doubled every month. Shall it not be done? What say you, brethren?

For the World's Crisis.

HOW I FIRST SAW THE TRUTH.

In the spring of 1863, while canvassing the town of Rensselaer and vicinity, in Jasper county, Indiana, for the sale of fruit trees, I stopped at the house of an elderly looking man, and called for dinner. I was hospitably entertained, and, in the course of our conversation, I found that he was a member of the Second Advent church: and that his name was M. H Grant. I was a member of the Baptist church at that time. Before I took my leave of him, he handed me three or four numbers of the Crisis, and requested me to take them along with me and read them. I read them, and found that the doctrine taught by the Crisis has the ring of the true metal. Many thanks to the good old brother for his kindness in furnishing me the numbers before mentioned. I am now a firm believer in the doctrine of the near approach of the kingdom and reign of our blessed Savior upon earth. The Bible is no longer to me a mysterious riddle; but, as I read, a halo of light illumes the sacred page. May the Lord bless you, Bro. Grant, and make you instrumental, through the Crisis, in arousing the slumbering church to heed the cry, "Beaold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him."

ENCOURAGING.

BRO. GRANT:—When there are symptoms of good among the people, it is blessed to make it known to the church, that all may rejoice together.

Recently I spent a little time in Northwood, N. H., and preached two evenings; and although stormy and drifted, a goodly number were out, and all indicated a good state of things among them. From here went to Lee. Attended meeting with them, and found their recent conference had done them much good. The steadfast were more awake, and others were leaving their backslidings, with a strong determination to live for the kingdom in the future. I was glad to find a healthy state of things here. O that men would be wholly for God, believing the truth!

My next call was at Biddeford, Me. Here I spent two Sundays, with meetings every night; and I could but praise the Lord for what he had done and was doing for them. For six years a few faithful, self-sacrificing brethren have been tugging, toiling and praying that truth might prosper, and men might fall in love with Jesus, the Messiah, and his coming; and they would not give it up. Thank God, they are seeing the result of their labors. They have a refreshing shower of divine love, and there is a blessed state of things among them; conversions to the truth and accessions to their numbers are daily increasing.

It was a blessing to be among them. Love predominated, with a desire to serve one another for Christ's sake. Many were just receiving our interpretations of the living oracles, and their eyes are seeing new beauties and new glories in the sacred word. This illuminates and quickens their very being, and is like fire shut up in their bones. The meetings were full of interest. The new learners would shout for joy, when responses of glory, blessing and hallelujah from all voices could be heard.

How blessed for the church to be in the love and freedom of the gospel, all full of interest for the salvation of men. All those little differences which create discord, and divide, and annihilate all that is lovely, were lost sight of and left, and prosperity was attending them; the word of the Lord was having free course. To God be all the glory. Amen. L. BOUTELL.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Wm. McCulloch.

DEAR BROTHER:—Perhaps the scattered flock will be interested to know what we are doing in this great Western field, to awaken an interest upon the subject of the Savior's return. We are doing all we possibly can. Have not seen home for over five weeks, and do not expect to for some time to come. We have great reason to rejoice as we go preaching the word; it causes sinners to tremble and saints to rejoice, and God is glorified. Praise his name!

Have been preaching almost every evening during the whole time, besides twice or thrice on Sabbath days, and feel at times the need of rest; but we see so many perishing for the word of life, we labor on, hoping for rest when the Master comes.

I said we have many things to encourage. Yes. When I see those who once enjoyed the blessed hope and had grown cold, revived, I do rejoice; also, when the sinners are inquiring, What shall I do to be saved? I rejoice to be able to point them to Jesus, the sinner's Friend; and I rejoice to hear their broken accents of praise to the name of Jesus.

But I mourn over the indifference of the professed people of God. Instead of the cause of Christ being first and uppermost, it has the second or third place in their minds. Everything of a worldly nature must be first attended to, and then if there is no excuse, they feel compelled to attend to the requirements of the gospel, (for they do not like to lose their name). But it seems then more difficult for the preacher to get up an interest where there is a sleepy church, than where there is no church at all. Such is my experience. Yet if the church is not sleeping as do others, we commence our labor with the church holding up our hands, giving us their prayers, and the work moves from the start, and conviction rests upon the ungodly, and they cry out in the anguish of soul, Lord, have mercy!

Dear brethren in the Lord, keep awake; notwithstanding the opposition to God and his truth, Jesus is soon coming to discharge us from the warfare and crown us with eternal life and glory. Remember, Jesus says he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

I am now visiting the church at Milroy, Knox Co., which, we trust, is of our Heavenly Father's planting. It was set in order by myself and Bro. O. S. Clark, three years ago this present month, and it has enjoyed the labors of Bro. G. W. Hurd the greater part of the time since its organization; and we rejoice to find them awake to the interests of the Master. Yet we have to regret that some have grown rather cold, and I fear, others have given up the blessed hope; but our prayer is that God will revive them again before the trumpet sounds. How dangerous to go to sleep now when so near the journey's end! The old ship has almost reached her haven home. Church of the living God, lift up thy head, and rejoice; for thy redemption draweth nigh. Praise the Lord! Thy brother in hope, WM. MCCULLOCH, Evangelist.

From Bro. N. Wheeler.

BRO. GRANT:—It is with much pleasure that I peruse the columns of the Crisis from week to week, and learn the condition of the scattered flock, over which the Holy Spirit hath given God's faithful servants the oversight, and unto which they are giving meat in due season. It rejoices my heart to hear that the dear saints are walking in the truth, and also in love. If they have trials, we wish to know it, that we may bear each other's burdens; or do they rejoice, let all the members rejoice together.

A few weeks since I saw a notice in the Crisis for a meeting at Whitefield, N. H., and immediately received a line from Bro. J. A. Cleaveland, requesting me to be present and labor through the series. I felt that it was of the Lord, and resolved that I would go in his name and strength. We had a good attendance the first evening; twenty-six testimonies in favor of Jesus and his truth; several were youths who had recently espoused the cause of their Redeemer. They seemed to understand what a gospel hope is. They spoke of a coming Savior, a resurrection, and of a kingdom under the whole heavens, but said nothing about preparing for death. The meeting increased in interest and numbers until its close. Many were revived in the spirit of their mind, and two gave their hearts to the Lord. Several preaching brethren were present, who assisted and added much to the interest of the meeting.

The church in W. are a unit; they seem to love each other, and God has blessed them by adding to their numbers and graces, under the faithful labors of their pastor. Their liberality was a sure token that they love the cause of God more than this world. Bro. Coburn of Troy, Vt., and Bro. Cleaveland were to continue the meetings each successive evening as long as it was thought advisable. I anticipate good news from that quarter.

The brethren and sisters in Cabot, Vt., are trying to sustain the cause of truth and make their way to the kingdom. We have been much encouraged of late by the union manifest and determination to sustain the glorious cause to the end. Our meetings are well attended, and a growing interest is visible to all. We are almost home, thank the Lord. Let us be faithful a little longer, and we shall meet all the dear family in the kingdom. Pray for us. N. WHEELER.

SERIOUS THINGS.

Clouds and darkness hang o'er the face of nature. It is the mournful season of the year. The sighing of the wind through the leafless boughs of the trees seems almost an innovation upon the deep monotony that prevails around, as I sit penning a few lines to the dearly beloved in Christ, scattered abroad in the midst of the perils of these very last days. O what a transitory state is human probation.

I have been making a short journey of late among friends in fields where I have labored in by-gone days. Alas! what changes has time made. O Death! how indiscriminate have been thy unrelenting ravages. Eyes that were wont to sparkle with sweet delight, and faces beaming with joy, are now dim and cold in death. Hands once extended in warm and hearty welcome to the tired and weary pilgrim are now folded within the coffin upon the cold bosom, where once pulsated a warm heart glowing with the love of God; from which came gushing forth those tender and affectionate emotions of christian sympathy and love, the recollections of which time can never efface. Husbands mourn the loss of wives. Widows mourn their companions. Children mourn in bitter plaint the loss of father and mother, and parents mourn the loss of early dead. The church mourns the loss of dear ones dead. 'Tis her night of weeping. She is now clothed with the weeds of widowhood. Ties that entwine around the tendrils of fond hearts are constantly severing, and how often, as the weeping Jeremiah exclaims, are we in the same condition; "She wept sore in the night, her tears are on her cheeks." And like David, the sweet singer, the man whom God raised up, "I have mingled my drink with weeping."

Bonds of love, cemented by the stronger cord than nature, the precious blood of Jesus, are constantly being riven, and we cannot "refrain our voice from weeping and our eyes from tears." O! who can behold juvenile innocence in grief, see the swelling bosom expand with agony of heart, and the scalding tears chasing each other in rapid succession over the faces of sweet, crushed innocence, and refrain from "weeping with those who weep"?

> I hear the wail, the plaint, the moan,
> Through all the paths I tread;
> Around the sick are thickly strewn,
> Beneath me lie the dead.

Since tracing these few lines, what multitudes have gathered up their feet in death. The hand that sets this in type may move with great dexterity to place each separate letter, but with far greater velocity mortals are every instant groaning out their existence in the agonies of death. To every tick of the watch, and every throb of the pulse, what increasing numbers are closing their eyes in death. Truly earth is a huge graveyard, a "golgotha," a place of dead men's skulls and bones.

Dearly beloved, in view of the mutability of everything in this present state, how very essential it is that we should place our affections upon things heavenly and divine, and have the Spirit of God bearing witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. Death is on our track; and if Jesus comes not soon, some more of us must fall asleep. Many that I have heard say, in years past, that they expected to live to see the Lord appear, are now silent in the grave. Time is fast making inroads upon some of us. The few locks that remain upon some of our heads are whitened with labor, infirmities, and years; and as we wait all the days of our appointed time until our change comes, we often sing in the house of our pilgrimage—

> "I am weary of sighing o'er sorrows of earth,
> O'er joy's glowing visions that fade at their birth;
> O'er the pangs of the loved that we cannot assuage,
> O'er the blightings of youth and the weakness of age."

And so it will be until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory. Then down deep in the dark blue sea, the dust that now slumbers in old ocean's caverns, o'er which its ever restless billows, amid the war of elements, hath remained unconscious, will hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth.

Then the glorious army of martyrs who have laid down their lives for the love of the truth and the testimony of Jesus, whose bones have been calcined by the fires of Papal abomination and fury, will come to the city of the living God, with songs and everlasting joy upon their head. Amen! Then

> "From the East, from the West, from the South, from the North,
> All the vast generations of men will come forth."

O illustrious morning, dawn! For the shadows of evening are fast closing around. The ways of Zion mourn. Few love or come to her solemn assemblies. Thy professed spouse hath forsaken her vow, and committed adultery with the world. She taketh more pleasure in the giddy halls of mirth and frivolity, amid religious frolics, festivals, and picnics, where the jeer, the jibe, and the scoff drop from the lips of the unregenerate in heart. O! merciful Redeemer, hasten thy appearing, for millions of earth's teeming population are now constantly crossing the line of accountability, and but very few are brought to a saving knowledge of the truth.

O! glorious Emancipator, hasten the universal jubilee of jubilees, when every yoke, bond, chain and fetter shall melt away at the brightness of thine appearing;—when the multitudinous host, redeemed by thy precious, all-cleansing blood, shall burst forth in the rich, sweet, melting, universal acclaim, "as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Then we shall have an eternal reunion. Then heaven, earth, air, mountains, hills and vales, rivers, rills and flowing fountains, above, around, throughout a redeemed universe,—every object that presents itself to the admiration of the palm-bearing, multitudinous throng, will be instinct with IMMORTALITY. O! who, I ask, that possesses "the earnest of the inheritance" within their heart, can avoid joining in the apocalyptic prayer with the seer on the isle of Patmos, in view of the glory soon to be revealed,—"AMEN. EVEN SO, COME, LORD JESUS."

> "Hallelujah! hark! the sound,
> From the centre to the skies,
> Wakes above, beneath, around,
> All creation's harmonies.
> He shall reign from pole to pole,
> With illimitable sway;
> He shall reign when like a scroll
> Yonder heavens shall pass away."

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, March 7, 1865.

DISCUSSION IN BOSTON.

The undersigned have agreed to hold a public oral debate in Kast Hall, Boston, on the following question:—"DO THE SCRIPTURES TEACH THE NON-RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED?" The invitation to debate originated with Bro. R. Wendell, who takes the affirmative. The discussion has been arranged to commence on Tuesday evening, March 14th. Six evenings have been definitely arranged for, and two more evenings conditionally. On the fifth evening the audience shall decide by vote whether there shall be a seventh evening; and on the sixth evening (in case it does not conclude the discussion) it shall in like manner be decided whether there shall be an eighth. The debate will occupy two hours each evening, and the speeches are to be twenty minutes in length. J. F. PICKERING, Esq., has consented to act as Moderator.

RUFUS WENDELL,
MILES GRANT.

☞ The change of time from Monday evening, 13th, to Tuesday evening, 14th, is made necessary by the unavoidable occupancy of the Hall on Monday evening for other purposes. R. W.

SIGN YOUR NAME.

We wish to repeat again to those who write for "our paper," that if they expect to see their articles in its columns, they must send their names with their contributions. We frequently receive very good communications, but with no name unless it may be their initials. Such a one was sent this week, signed "G." Do not be ashamed of your name, any more than you would in any company of christian brethren and sisters. Do not be over nice. Your articles are read with much more interest when your names are signed. Please remember now what we have said.

"THE SEALED BOOK."

In Daniel 12: 4, he is instructed to "seal the book, even to the time of the end." The question very naturally arises, how was the book of Daniel "sealed," so that it should not be correctly understood, or opened till "the time of the end?" That it has been sealed, we cannot deny, unless we doubt the saying of the prophet, which, of course, no believer in the Bible will do.

When it is said, "the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end," it cannot mean that the reading matter in any part of the book of Daniel is "closed up and sealed," so that no one can read the words; but that when they read them, they will not get the right understanding of them "till the time of the end." As the words were to be "closed up" "till that time, it is very plainly shown that some time before the end takes place, that which was sealed will be unsealed and opened to the understanding of the children of the Lord.

If it could be proved that we are not in the time of the end, then it would follow that the seal was not yet broken. It is certain that the time is at least a part of that which was to be "sealed," because that was a special point under consideration, as may be seen by the following inquiry: "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?"—(v. 6). After hearing the answer, Daniel says: "I heard, but I understood not; then said I, O, my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said go thy way, Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."—(Dan. 12: 8, 9).

We come again to the question, how was this prophecy sealed up? We can but think of but two ways that look reasonable: 1, by putting a wrong construction upon the Scripture, or, 2, by applying it to the wrong events. In relation to the first method of sealing it, the time might be taken as so many literal weeks and days; but we believe nearly all commentators, whether Catholic or Protestant, hold that the seventy weeks, sixty-nine weeks, sixty-two weeks, one week, and the 2300 days, are symbols of years, and we see no reason to come to any other conclusion. We think the seal was not on this point.

It now remains to be shown that the periods of Daniel have been sealed up to the church, and were to be till "the time of the end," because they have been commenced at the wrong dates. On this point, we see no room to doubt; indeed, past failures demonstrated this position. As Ptolemy's Canon forbid the beginning the sixty-nine weeks at the only point where the Bible places their commencement, in the first year of Cyrus,—B. C. 536, it was then concluded they began at the seventh year of Artaxerxes, B. C. 457, and beginning them there, the 2300 days would end in 1843–4, where Bro. Miller and others expected the coming of Christ. As the event did not then transpire, we now know that the seventh of Artaxerxes was not the right place to commence those prophetic periods.

The next point, and the last, we think, that can be taken, for any event that has even the semblance of a commandment to build Jerusalem, was thirteen years later, in the twentieth of Artaxerxes, which according to Ptolemy's Canon was B. C. 445. This is the point where Bro. Stevenson begins the 2300 days and seventy weeks, on his great chart. But if we begin them there, then the 2300 days ended in 1855, or the spring of 1856. For, if we take 445 from 2300, it leaves 1855. We can see no possibility to extend the 2300 days any further, if we follow Ptolemy's Canon, and take the very last event that any one can claim as a decree in any sense to build Jerusalem. But if we begin the seventy weeks, 2300 days, and sixty-nine weeks together, as most have done in time past, and start them at the twentieth of Artaxerxes, B. C. 445, then the Savior would have been thirty-seven or thirty-eight years of age, at his crucifixion, even if he was cut off at the end of the sixty-nine weeks; whereas it may be very clearly shown that he was only about thirty-three and one-half years of age, when crucified. This point will appear plain from a moment's examination. In seventy weeks there are four hundred and ninety days, representing in this case four hundred and ninety years. Now if they begin B. C. 445, in the twentieth of Artaxerxes, take this number (445) from the sixty-nine weeks, or four hundred and eighty-three days, (years), and thirty-eight remains to represent the age of Christ at his crucifixion; but if we have him crucified in the midst of the seventieth week, as claimed by many expositors, and by Bro. Stevenson, then it would make the Savior forty-one or forty-two years of age at his death, if the 2300 days had ended in 1855. But now we are ten years this side of there, and the sanctuary is still trodden down by the Gentiles, consequently the 2300 days are not ended; so that if the 2300 days were to end this year (1865), if the seventy and sixty-nine weeks began B. C. 445, as claimed, it would make the Savior over fifty years of age at his crucifixion, or some eighteen years older than his true age, as may be clearly found.

Now let it be observed that all this confusion arises from trying to harmonize the Bible with Ptolemy's Canon. And just so long as we endeavor to do this, we are getting further and further into darkness. As there was no proof that the Savior was so old as he must have been, if Ptolemy was right in his dates of the Persian kings, provided the very latest point claimed—B. C. 445—be taken for the commencement of the seventy weeks and the 2300 days; expositors of the Bible were driven to one of two positions; either that there was no connection between the seventy weeks and the 2300 days; or, that the 2300 days were ended. We think it is evident that neither can be true.

Now that which prevented the church from seeing the light on this subject must be what sealed it up, so that they did not understand it. It is very evident that the decree of Cyrus, as recorded in Ezra 1: 1–5, is the only one that answers to the prophecy in Isa. 44: 28, 45: 1, 13:

"That saith of Cyrus, he is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: even saying to Jerusalem, thou shalt be built; and to the temple, thy foundation shall be laid. Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the twoleaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut. I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct all his ways: he shall build my city, and he shall let go my captives, not for price nor reward, saith the Lord of hosts."

That which has "sealed" the book of Daniel to all expositors, so far as commencing the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9: 25, where the prophet locates them, at the commandment of Cyrus "to restore and to build Jerusalem," was their trust in Ptolemy's canon; then, of course, it will not be unsealed till that canon is shown to be wrong, which we think has been most fully accomplished by Bro. Thurman, in his "Sealed Book of Daniel Opened," which we hope all will read with prayerful candor.

If it be assumed that Ptolemy is correct, then it follows that we are still in darkness as to any event for the commencement of the seventy weeks, sixty-nine weeks, sixty-two weeks, and the 2300 days; and when the light does come; or the book is unsealed, then it will be shown that Cyrus' commandment went forth just sixty-nine weeks before the birth of Messiah the Prince, which is just as we have it now, after correcting Ptolemy's canon, or breaking the seal, as we believe. The more fully we investigate this matter, the clearer it looks. Praise the Lord for the light that now shines "out of darkness."

"MAKE AN END OF SINS." Dan. 9: 24.

In Dan. 9: 24, we read as follows:—"Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish (margin, restrain) the transgression, and to make an end of sins" (margin, to seal up).

The expression, "make an end of sins," has always been obscure to our mind, as to its application. We could not see how an end of sins was made at the close of the seventy weeks, let them begin and terminate wherever they might in the past; for it is a fact that sin has been greatly increased since the advent of our Savior, especially in these last days. And instead of ending the sins of the Jews at the close of the seventy weeks, they seem to be more wicked, and the results of their former sins are more manifest by the displeasure of the Lord in sending against them the Roman armies for the destruction of their city.

The Hebrew word ghahtham, rendered end, in Dan. 9: 24, occurs 28 times, and is found in the following passages, and represented by the words in italics:—"Or his flesh be stopped from his issue."—Lev. 15: 3. "Is not this . . . sealed up among my treasures."—Deut. 32: 34. "So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal."—1 Kings 21: 8. "We make a sure covenant, and write it, and our princes . . . seal unto it."—Neh. 9: 38. "Now those that sealed were, Nehemiah . . . and . . . Jeremiah."—Neh. 10: 1. "In the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring."—Esther 3: 12. "Write ye . . . in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring; for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may no man reverse."—Est. 8: 8. "He wrote in king Ahasuerus' name, and sealed it with the king's ring."—Esther 8: 10. "Which commandeth the sun and it riseth not, and sealeth up the stars."—Job 9: 7. "My transgression is sealed up."—Job 14: 17. "In the dark they dig through houses which they had marked for themselves in the day time."—Job 24: 16. "Then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction."—Job 33: 16. "He sealeth up the hand of every man."—Job 37: 7. "A spring shut up, a fountain sealed."—Cant. 4: 12. "Bind up the testimony, seal the law among my disciples."—Isa. 8: 16. "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed."—Isa. 29: 11. "I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it."—Jer. 32: 10. "So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed, . . . and that which was open."—Jer. 32: 11. "Take these evidences, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open."—Jer. 32: 14. "Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them."—Jer. 32: 44. "Thou sealest up the sum."—Ezk. 28: 12. "And the king sealed it with his own signet."—Dan. 6: 17. "Seventy weeks are determined . . . to seal up the vision and prophecy."—Dan. 9: 24. "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book."—Dan. 12: 4. "And he said, Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."—Dan. 12: 9.

We have now given all the examples where the word occurs, excepting its use in Dan. 9: 24, where it is rendered "to make an end." It will be observed that it is not thus rendered in any other case. The simple and obvious meaning of the word appears to be to seal, make sure, or fasten firmly. Gesenius defines the word, "to seal, to seal up."

In Dan. 9: 24 it appears to signify, judging from its connection, that the sins of the Jewish people would be sealed up for judgment, with no opening for pardon, or further trial. Their favors would end with the seventy weeks, and they would be given up to the desolations of the Romans.

OUR POSITION.

Under the above heading we find an editorial article in the Voice of the West, Feb. 7th, 1865, which will be read with interest by many of our readers. We are glad that Bro. Himes has spoken out so plainly on a very important point. We believe it is man's duty to let the light shine as fast as he sees it, in order that others may be benefited. The editor says:

"Bro. Samuel Chapman in a private letter has put several important questions to us relative to our change of views on the state of the dead and the destiny of the wicked. We have concluded to give a public answer to them, that all may know where we stand. We have been slow and very cautious in the adoption of the views we now hold, and nothing short of a flood of light on the subject could have led us out where we now stand.

Our old fellow-laborer and dear Bro. Chapman is still in the field, enjoying good health, and laboring as from the first with great patience and industry. We learn by a private note as also by a published letter from him, that he has recently visited Pike, Iowa, and labored with the little flock there with good success. We wish them prosperity and enlargement.

Bro. Gibson, it seems, had been laboring among them, and had preached on the state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked. His views were not favorably received by some members of the church, and did not take with some of the community. So Bro. Chapman gave his view of the matter, as he had a perfect right to do, in which he seems to have interested the community, and converted one brother from his belief in the destruction of the wicked to the doctrine of their eternal misery and torment. He examined the Scriptures with this brother for several days, and the result was that the brother gave up his former views and adopted Bro. Chapman's interpretation.

We suppose that Bro. C. depends upon the same arguments that we and others did formerly; arguments which we think have never fairly met objections on the other side. We have not felt satisfied with the manner in which our former position was sustained by those who advocated the existence of the proper man in life, after he was dead, against those who believed that man in death was dead, and had no life or knowledge in this condition, and would not, and could not have till the resurrection.

We said we had not been satisfied with the manner in which the arguments of those advocating the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked had been met; and yet, there were old prejudices in favor of the opposite view which we could not give up for a long time.

First, We remark that early in the controversy we were driven from the position that man had an immortal soul or spirit. We had to give up this idea entirely, as unscriptural.

Second, That man did not consist of two beings in one. But the man was made out of the dust of the ground, and then, when all the organs of life were perfected, God breathed into him the breath of life, and man became a living being, or soul; not two beings, but one organized being in life, consisting of soul, body, and spirit—making the perfect man.

Third, In death there is a cessation of all the functions of life. Solomon spoke the truth when he said, 'The dead know not anything.' (Eccl. 9: 5.) And there is no knowledge in the grave whither thou goest. Eccl. 9: 10.)

Fourth, 'As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.' (1 Cor. 15: 22.) We can only hope to live again through Christ. And if Christ was not raised, then there is no resurrection—and they that have fallen asleep (or died] in Christ are perished (1 Cor. 15: 12) beyond all hope of life, or living again. Between death and the resurrection there is no conscious existence, for the best of reasons. The man is dead! For the same reason, man is not rewarded till the resurrection. There is nothing to reward until the man lives again. So the Savior assures us that when he comes the second time he will 'reward every man according to his works.' And, 'when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we appear with him in glory,' and not till then: for we shall not live again till that time. 'They that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.' (1 Thess. 4: 14.) From where? Yes, from where will he bring them? 'For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive [the living] and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep;' for we which are living when the Lord shall come, will not rise to meet the Lord in the air before the dead saints. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, and the DEAD in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them [the dead ones brought to life] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord. (1 Thess. 4: 14–17.)

Now mark: there is not a word in the Bible about these dead saints coming from heaven to inhabit their bodies, at the coming of Christ. And where the resurrection is spoken of, there is no intimation of any living part of man that comes to take possession of a dead part revived; but in all cases it is the dead that is raised to life. And this is the apostolic doctrine. It is this mortal that puts on immortality. Then mortality is swallowed up of life. Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. (1 Cor. 15: 54–57.)

But if the man had been living all the time in heaven, or hades, or any where else, then the man proper was not dead. The clay returned to the dust, but he existed without the body in a state of triumph. The man never did die. In this view when it is said, 'the soul that sinneth it shall die,' it is meant that it shall be more alive when dead, than when living in the body. So the apostle James says (2: 26.) For the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also. Let it be remembered that the word spirit here is in the margin rendered breath. So the body without the 'breath of life' (Gen. 2: 7) is a dead mass of inert matter, until 'bone shall come to its bone' again, and 'God shall breathe on the slain, that they may live,' (Ezek. 37: 9.) The only hope of man, then, is in the resurrection. If there is no resurrection, then there is no future life. How heart-cheering, then, to the child of God, to hear the voice of the Savior of men, saying, 'I am the resurrection and the life.' (John 11: 25.) And that other voice, 'Behold I come quickly, to give to every man according as his work shall be.' (Rev. 22: 12.) Let us all be ready."

TO PREACHERS.

The following advice to preachers we think the best, and fullest of common sense, of any thing we ever read from an uninspired pen. We hope every preacher will carefully consider these rules, treasure them up and observe them. They need only to be read to be prized. We would especially call attention to No's 3, 8, 15, 17, 21, 22, and 25. Without further comment, we introduce the rules:—

SERMONS—HOW TO PREPARE AND HOW TO DELIVER THEM.

1. Discover no more of your method than needs must.
2. Pass not anything till you have bolted it to the brain.
3. Use the mother speech and tone, without affectation or imitation of any man, that you may not seem to act a comedy instead of a sermon.
4. Clog not your memory too much, it will exceedingly hinder invention and mar delivery.
5. Be sure you eye God, his glory, the good of souls; having the day before mastered self and man-pleasing.
6. Let your words be soft, few, and slow, and see they come no faster than the weakest hearer can digest each morsel. Pause a little, and look in the child's eye till he swallow his bit.
7. Look to your affections most carefully that they be not (1.) feigned, nor (2.) forcedly let loose to have their full scope; for then they will either overrun your judgment, or be a temptation to vain glory.
8. Preach speaking or talking to the people; look on the people, not on the roof or walls, and look on the most mortified faces in the assembly; let them know your preaching is a real talking with them, whereby they may be provoked, as it were, to answer you again.
9. Take heed of overwording anything.
10. Be sure you have made the people understand thoroughly what is the good you exhort them to, and the evil you deport them from, before you bring your motives and means.
11. Touch no Scriptures lightly; trouble not many, but open the metaphors, and let one Scripture point out the other, the one a key to the other.
12. Let the Scripture teach you, and not you it.
13. Be sure you feed yourself on every pause with the people, before you pass it; else that will do them little good, and you none at all. Oh, taste every bit.
14. Take these four candles to find out what to say to the people. (1.) The Scriptures unbiassed; (2.) the thoughts and experience of good men; (3.) your own experiences, (4.) the condition of the people.
15. Break off anywhere, rather than run upon any of these two conveniences, (1.) either to huddle or tumble together spiritual things, (2.) or tire the weakest of the flock.
16. Never pass over one point while you have any thing material to say of it, provided it be on a spiritual point.
17. Let your doctrine, and the constant strain of your preaching be about the chiefest spiritual things, and let small controversies and external duties come in by the by.
18. Beware of forms, neither be tied to any one method.
19. Be always upon that subject which is next your heart, and be not too thrifty or careful what to say next, for God will provide. It will stink like kept manna if reserved through distrust till next day.
20. Be sure to extricate carefully any godly point you speak of out of the notions and terms of divinity, else it will freeze inevitably in you mouth and in their ears.
21. Let there not be disfiguring of face, nor snuffing of the nose, or teasling of the throat, or any antic gesture, pretended devotion, made gravity, which will make you seem a loathsome Pharisee, or a distracted man broke loose out of bedlam.
22. Do not care so much whether the people receive your doctrine, as whether you and it are acceptable to the Lord.
23. Do not conceive that your zeal or earnestness will prevail with the people; but the force of spiritual reason, the evidence of Scripture, and the power of the Holy Ghost.
24. Do not think that the hearers can receive as you conceive, and so make your own conception the rule of dealing the bread of life; so shall you only please yourself and be admired, but not understood by others.
25. Let there be something in every sermon to draw poor sinners to Jesus Christ.
26. Take heed that your comparisons be not ridiculous, and yet be not shy of homely ones.
27. Study every Scripture you are to speak of beforehand, lest you overburden invention, or presume too much on your own parts.
28. Take heed of bolting truth of extravagances, quidlibet ex quodlibet, needless digressions, heads, and enumerations.
29. Shun apologies' for they always stink.

OMISSION.—In Bro. Hastings' article on "Thurman's Astronomy," in the last Crisis, near the top of the fifth column of the first page, the following is omitted after the words, "Mr. Thurman may be able to teach what he knows of astronomy in a little while":—"I have known persons who could teach the French language in twelve lessons, of an hour each. I could teach all I know about it in half the time, but I fear my pupils would not get through Paris creditably on the strength of it."

BRO. GRANT:—In my first number of the Voice of Historians, etc., the types make me say that the extracts from Coleman are found on p. 5 of his work. It should be from p. 526 to p. 530. T. M. PREBLE.

ERRATA.—In the article on Ptolemy, first page, last paragraph, for "the epithet can not have," read bears.

PRICE OF THE BAKING PANS.—When we put in the notice of the baking pans, manufactured by "Ford and Co., Concord, N. H.," (see Health Department), we did not know the price of them, which is as follows:—Price at the manufacturers, in Concord, for the "French Roll" pans, $7 per dozen, retail 75 cts. Small "Egg Pans," $5 per dozen, retail 62 cts. Handles $1.25 per dozen, retail 12 cts. The handle will be found very convenient, not only for taking the pans out of the oven, but for various other purposes about a stove.

A Good Investment.

A brother in Shamrock Mills, R. I., writes:—

"In casting about me for some profitable enterprise in which to invest a small amount, I conclude to try the "Bank of the Lord's Poor," and therefore send the enclosed $10.00, for which you can assign to me my stock, and I will wait to see what dividend it will pay in the "state beyond." S. F. C.

Send it to your Friends.

A brother in New York writes:—

"I have a friend whom I desire to know the truth, and, although he is abundantly able to pay for it himself, I send you the subscription price, for which you will please send him the Crisis for one year." C. C.

A sister writes from New Hampshire:—

"I have a brother out of Christ, whose health is very poor; and, as I have hope that the World's Crisis and Second Advent Messenger will do him much good, I feel anxious that he should have it. I therefore enclose the price for six months, and may the Lord sanctify it to him to his everlasting good." E. T.

A brother in Connecticut writes:—

"Enclosed find five dollars; $2.50 on my account, and $2.50 for two new subscribers in Iowa, as follows. . . . They are not of our faith, but have agreed to read the Crisis if I would have it sent to them. I therefore pay for it cheerfully, hoping it will do them good." J. A.

New Subscribers in February.

February has brought us in a goodly number of new subscribers,—if not so many as her elder sister, January, yet a very acceptable number, 175,—which she has gathered from the different States, as follows:—

Massachusetts	24	Iowa	12
Maine	25	Illinois	8
New Hampshire	17	Michigan	4
Vermont	7	Wisconsin	2
Rhode Island	14	Minnesota	5
Connecticut	18	Canada East	2
New York	17	Canada West	3
Pennsylvania	6	Nova Scotia	1
Ohio	9	Scotland	1

With a few more workers, and a little more effort, this number may be more than doubled every month. Shall it not be done? What say you, brethren?

For the World's Crisis.

HOW I FIRST SAW THE TRUTH.

In the spring of 1863, while canvassing the town of Rensselaer and vicinity, in Jasper county, Indiana, for the sale of fruit trees, I stopped at the house of an elderly looking man, and called for dinner. I was hospitably entertained, and, in the course of our conversation, I found that he was a member of the Second Advent church: and that his name was M. H Grant. I was a member of the Baptist church at that time. Before I took my leave of him, he handed me three or four numbers of the Crisis, and requested me to take them along with me and read them. I read them, and found that the doctrine taught by the Crisis has the ring of the true metal. Many thanks to the good old brother for his kindness in furnishing me the numbers before mentioned. I am now a firm believer in the doctrine of the near approach of the kingdom and reign of our blessed Savior upon earth. The Bible is no longer to me a mysterious riddle; but, as I read, a halo of light illumes the sacred page. May the Lord bless you, Bro. Grant, and make you instrumental, through the Crisis, in arousing the slumbering church to heed the cry, "Beaold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him."

For the World's Crisis.

ENCOURAGING.

BRO. GRANT:—When there are symptoms of good among the people, it is blessed to make it known to the church, that all may rejoice together.

Recently I spent a little time in Northwood, N. H., and preached two evenings; and although stormy and drifted, a goodly number were out, and all indicated a good state of things among them. From here went to Lee. Attended meeting with them, and found their recent conference had done them much good. The steadfast were more awake, and others were leaving their backslidings, with a strong determination to live for the kingdom in the future. I was glad to find a healthy state of things here. O that men would be wholly for God, believing the truth!

My next call was at Biddeford, Me. Here I spent two Sundays, with meetings every night; and I could but praise the Lord for what he had done and was doing for them. For six years a few faithful, self-sacrificing brethren have been tugging, toiling and praying that truth might prosper, and men might fall in love with Jesus, the Messiah, and his coming; and they would not give it up. Thank God, they are seeing the result of their labors. They have a refreshing shower of divine love, and there is a blessed state of things among them; conversions to the truth and accessions to their numbers are daily increasing.

It was a blessing to be among them. Love predominated, with a desire to serve one another for Christ's sake. Many were just receiving our interpretations of the living oracles, and their eyes are seeing new beauties and new glories in the sacred word. This illuminates and quickens their very being, and is like fire shut up in their bones. The meetings were full of interest. The new learners would shout for joy, when responses of glory, blessing and hallelujah from all voices could be heard.

How blessed for the church to be in the love and freedom of the gospel, all full of interest for the salvation of men. All those little differences which create discord, and divide, and annihilate all that is lovely, were lost sight of and left, and prosperity was attending them; the word of the Lord was having free course. To God be all the glory. Amen. L. BOUTELL.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Wm. McCulloch.

DEAR BROTHER:—Perhaps the scattered flock will be interested to know what we are doing in this great Western field, to awaken an interest upon the subject of the Savior's return. We are doing all we possibly can. Have not seen home for over five weeks, and do not expect to for some time to come. We have great reason to rejoice as we go preaching the word; it causes sinners to tremble and saints to rejoice, and God is glorified. Praise his name!

Have been preaching almost every evening during the whole time, besides twice or thrice on Sabbath days, and feel at times the need of rest; but we see so many perishing for the word of life, we labor on, hoping for rest when the Master comes.

I said we have many things to encourage. Yes. When I see those who once enjoyed the blessed hope and had grown cold, revived, I do rejoice; also, when the sinners are inquiring, What shall I do to be saved? I rejoice to be able to point them to Jesus, the sinner's Friend; and I rejoice to hear their broken accents of praise to the name of Jesus.

But I mourn over the indifference of the professed people of God. Instead of the cause of Christ being first and uppermost, it has the second or third place in their minds. Everything of a worldly nature must be first attended to, and then if there is no excuse, they feel compelled to attend to the requirements of the gospel, (for they do not like to lose their name). But it seems then more difficult for the preacher to get up an interest where there is a sleepy church, than where there is no church at all. Such is my experience. Yet if the church is not sleeping as do others, we commence our labor with the church holding up our hands, giving us their prayers, and the work moves from the start, and conviction rests upon the ungodly, and they cry out in the anguish of soul, Lord, have mercy!

Dear brethren in the Lord, keep awake; notwithstanding the opposition to God and his truth, Jesus is soon coming to discharge us from the warfare and crown us with eternal life and glory. Remember, Jesus says he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

I am now visiting the church at Milroy, Knox Co., which, we trust, is of our Heavenly Father's planting. It was set in order by myself and Bro. O. S. Clark, three years ago this present month, and it has enjoyed the labors of Bro. G. W. Hurd the greater part of the time since its organization; and we rejoice to find them awake to the interests of the Master. Yet we have to regret that some have grown rather cold, and I fear, others have given up the blessed hope; but our prayer is that God will revive them again before the trumpet sounds. How dangerous to go to sleep now when so near the journey's end! The old ship has almost reached her haven home. Church of the living God, lift up thy head, and rejoice; for thy redemption draweth nigh. Praise the Lord! Thy brother in hope, WM. MCCULLOCH, Evangelist.

Milroy, Knox Co., Ill.

From Bro. N. Wheeler.

BRO. GRANT:—It is with much pleasure that I peruse the columns of the Crisis from week to week, and learn the condition of the scattered flock, over which the Holy Spirit hath given God's faithful servants the oversight, and unto which they are giving meat in due season. It rejoices my heart to hear that the dear saints are walking in the truth, and also in love. If they have trials, we wish to know it, that we may bear each other's burdens; or do they rejoice, let all the members rejoice together.

A few weeks since I saw a notice in the Crisis for a meeting at Whitefield, N. H., and immediately received a line from Bro. J. A. Cleaveland, requesting me to be present and labor through the series. I felt that it was of the Lord, and resolved that I would go in his name and strength. We had a good attendance the first evening; twenty-six testimonies in favor of Jesus and his truth; several were youths who had recently espoused the cause of their Redeemer. They seemed to understand what a gospel hope is. They spoke of a coming Savior, a resurrection, and of a kingdom under the whole heavens, but said nothing about preparing for death. The meeting increased in interest and numbers until its close. Many were revived in the spirit of their mind, and two gave their hearts to the Lord. Several preaching brethren were present, who assisted and added much to the interest of the meeting.

The church in W. are a unit; they seem to love each other, and God has blessed them by adding to their numbers and graces, under the faithful labors of their pastor. Their liberality was a sure token that they love the cause of God more than this world. Bro. Coburn of Troy, Vt., and Bro. Cleaveland were to continue the meetings each successive evening as long as it was thought advisable. I anticipate good news from that quarter.

The brethren and sisters in Cabot, Vt., are trying to sustain the cause of truth and make their way to the kingdom. We have been much encouraged of late by the union manifest and determination to sustain the glorious cause to the end. Our meetings are well attended, and a growing interest is visible to all. We are almost home, thank the Lord. Let us be faithful a little longer, and we shall meet all the dear family in the kingdom. Pray for us. N. WHEELER.

Cabot, Vt.

From Bro. S. B. Colton.

Bro. Grant:—Unless I am seriously misguided, I have for a long time seen a portentous cloud arising, yes, more than one, and it seems that they must soon dash with fury upon the little church of Christ. And well might he inquire, "Shall I find faith on the earth?" Declension and infidelity in the church, with conformity to the world; its members with hardly vitality enough to be called lukewarm; Spiritualism, the great prophetic antichrist, exalting itself above all that is called God; the professed church acquiescing and thus ignoring and virtually endeavoring to annul the entire plan of redemption; the world growing in wickedness, and evil men and seducers waxing worse and worse;—realizing these things, and much more, I can but say, our faith as a people must be tried. I see no friends rising up in our defence, save Him who was once asleep in the hindermost part of the ship.

The professed church, which I have always loved, oh how degenerate and forsaken! and they seem not to comprehend it. She has operated in favor of the world like an anchor to a ship in a storm, to keep them from being driven away by the storm of God's displeasure; as when Abraham pleaded with God to save the city on account of the righteous, had there been ten such. In the word of God instances are not rare where the people of God have been instrumental in averting judgments, and it has been in answer to the pleadings of his children, who are represented as "the salt of the earth." Even up to the present time, the regard which God has in exercise for his chosen ones has kept the community from being driven away by the storm of his fury; the church exercising a restraining influence on the world and holding them in check.

How is it now? Christ says to the church, "Be not conformed to this world"; but the church personating the anchor does not hold them back. The world drags the church after it. The world demanding, the church conforming, until we see the people of the world taking the lead in all their popular gatherings.

O brethren and sisters, now is indeed our peril. I feel that we, as those who watch for the morning, are not half awake to the reality of our duty and privilege. God is requiring much at our hands now. Has any one got a permit to be idle in the Master's vineyard? Brethren, and sisters too, are laboring with their might; let us encourage their hearts by word and by deed. Let us stay up their hands by our earnest petition for God to protect and shelter them in all their trials. We have thrown our sails to the breeze, and if storms are violent and tempests rage, let us fear no ill, but stick the closer to Him who has power to still the tempest by a word. Bro. Grant, read Acts 4: 29, 30, and appropriate as your own. The Lord be with you. Keep on discussing. S. B. Colton.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—I am now enjoying the sweet fellowship and hospitality of Bro. R. E. Ladd and family. He has been very sick, nigh unto death, but prayer to God has been made for him by the church, and the Lord has interposed, turning victory into triumph, restoring Bro. Ladd, adding a few years to his life, so that to-day he is on his feet, joyful in hope, full of praises to the great Physician, and, with the old prophet Hezekiah, is declaring the dead cannot praise the Lord,—"The living, the living, praise thee, as I do this day."

I have had blessed good seasons with the church in their Hall, (Barnes' Block.) Here we have represented all the differences of opinion among us, and at present they are getting along prosperously; and if they keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, with an eye single to the glory of God, not magnifying their differences, but keeping prominent that all-absorbing truth, love of Christ, or for Christ, and his appearing; then all will move on harmoniously, with all their interests blended; then the oneness of the church will be seen; love will prevail, and all will be benefitted. God grant them success in this direction.

Bro. Himes was here Thursday evening, giving us in lecture the discrepancy between Ptolemy's Canon and Thurman's Chronology, as connected with the 2300 days, or the eighth of Daniel. With his accustomed zeal he is at the "specific work" of keeping all interested in the soon coming of Jesus the Messiah. All were joyfully interested, and could but welcome to our hearts any evidence that we were soon to realize our hopes.

Success to the lovers of Jesus in Springfield. L. Boutell.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 27.

From Bro. C. L. Low.

Bro. Grant:—I send for the "History of the Immortality of the Soul," because I wish to have some of my friends read them; for I regard the doctrine of the immortality of the soul as doing incalculable mischief, in turning the minds of men away from the truth as it stands revealed in the Bible.

Some fourteen years ago, it was the sublime and God-given doctrine of the entire mortality of man, that brought me out of the darkness of human theology and mythology, into the true theology of the plain, simple word of God. It is impossible for a professed minister of the gospel to stand upon the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and preach the whole truth to his fellow-men. The idea of inherent immortality is the corrupt fountain from which issue all the theological and muddy streams that darken and bewilder the human mind.

The great work of those who know the truth, is to uneducate men, and bring them out into the heavenly daylight of God, and then re-educate them in the things pertaining to the coming and kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is indeed a great work, and there is great responsibility attending it, and those employed in the work need much grace and wisdom, which may the Lord grant for his Son's sake, amen. C. W. Low.

P. S. Bro. Grant, I will give one example, showing the evil tendency of the immortal soul theory. A soldier died in this place, and he was a member of the —— church; his funeral was held at the church on Sunday. The pastor told the congregation on that occasion, that "Johnny was not dead, this," said he, "is the first Sabbath he has spent in the presence of his God."

Now how different was our Savior's teaching on the occasion of the death of Lazarus. He said that Lazarus was dead, and he went to Martha, "Thy brother shall rise again." If to die is to go into the presence of God, why did not the Savior teach it to Mary and Martha, by way of comforting their sorrowing hearts? But we see that men make the Savior a liar, by teaching the immortality of the soul, and a terrible accountability rests upon them, and a fearful retribution awaits them. And I know of no power that can awake them to a sense of the doom that will soon overtake them. I can only say, O God, if there is mercy still in store, have mercy upon the blind leaders of the blind, and bring them out of darkness into thy heavenly light. Amen. C. W. L.

From Bro. H. H. Hendrix.

Bro. Grant:—You have again placed me under obligations to you, by sending me five packages of tracts, which arrived here by last mail. Please accept my thanks for this favor. I have already selected and arranged a part for distribution, and I intend that all shall be doing their work very soon. I have no doubt about their great efficiency in bringing the truth home to the understanding and conscience of many, who would not otherwise be convinced.

Many in this country are interested in the doctrine of the near appearing of the Son of God; but the greater part scoff at it. I preached a couple of discourses the past season, in one of our largest congregations, which became much interested. Some became excited. Some followed the example of the Jews at Thessalonica, when they saw the people interested in the preaching of Paul. Some (a few) believed. But by far the greater part are in doubt, and know not (as yet) what to believe. Having never doubted the immortality of the soul, they cannot at once reject it, and receive the plain teaching of the Bible, that immortality is conferred only through Jesus the Life Giver.

A large majority of the disciples here are not only Adventists but Millennialists. It is the mortality of man, and the utter destruction of the wicked that frightens them. The terms materialists, soul-sleepers, annihilationists, etc., are freely used by the leaders, and the people are afraid of something, they know not what, while the leaders look wise, and smell heresy in anything that does not sound just like the old bell.

Oh that I could go forth and labor, day and night, to rouse up a sleeping church, and warn a sinking world of the impending crisis. But I will yet do it, if the Lord will.

Cache Creek, Cal. H. H. Hendrix.

From Bro. W. Morphy.

Bro. Grant:—We still prize the Crisis as highly as ever, and eagerly devour its contents from week to week. And when we are done with them, they cross the lines to Canada, where they are read and reread several times. I expect to take the Crisis till the Lord comes, if spared.

I am quite interested on the time question as discussed in the Crisis. I would like to know how you harmonize 1 Kings 6: 1 with the periods given in Judges covering the space of time from the exode to the time of Saul.

I hope the brethren may avoid being too positive, considering that we are not infallible in judgment but liable to make mistakes. I do not wish to deter any one from trying to gain all possible light on this important subject. God forbid; I know that God's word is yea and amen, and I know, too, that it requires much study as well as the divine influence to enable us to understand the chronology of the Bible. But we are not altogether dependent on chronology for our knowledge of the nearness of the Lord's coming. The signs thicken. I regard the agreement between Louis Napoleon and Victor Emmanuel, concerning the withdrawal of the French troops from Rome in 1866, as very significant.

Truly we are the people upon whom the ends of the world are come. O that we were all ready to meet the Lord! to hail the King to join the glad shout, "This is the Lord; we have waited for him." O may the Lord wake up his people to the work! What work? Why, saving souls, awakening sinners.

O! brethren in the ministry, put away all minor considerations. What time you have, let it be occupied in work of importance. Feed the flock, not forgetting the lambs; and when the Chief Shepherd appears ye shall have a crown of glory. Wm. Morphy.

Massena, N. Y.

From Bro. P. Mitson.

Bro. Grant:—I am trying by the help of God to show the people that the Lord is soon coming to take the kingdom under the whole heaven and give it to his people. I meet with opposition from the Orthodox churches. Sometimes I hear the preachers call me a vain babbler, because I show from the Bible that the dead know not anything, and the reward is not given till the resurrection. Sometimes when I send out an appointment they will warn the people against me, and tell them that I do not preach the faith of the apostles; but, dear brother, although they are the great and learned, and I am one of the ignorant and unlearned, I know whereof I affirm; and I intend by the help of the Lord to do all I can to show my fellow-men the truth as it is in the Bible. I want to make sure work for the coming of the Lord, and I know if I am saved I must follow the Captain of our salvation. Pray for me that I may have wisdom from God.

New Oregon, Ia. Peter Mitson.

Mrs. R. B. Dockum, South Poland, Me., writes:—

Bro. Grant:—The Lord has blest us here very much. Bro. Munger has been here and preached to us a number of times, and he has done us good, and our brethren around us. Do not forget to come and give us the word occasionally. We were in darkness until last fall, when Bro. Munger came among us, and gave us the truth, and about a dozen of us have come into the light, and all feel to thank God that he sent his servant here.

Mrs. S. A. S. writes:—

Mr. Grant:—Dear Sir,—Through the kindness of a friend, your paper, the Crisis, comes a welcome messenger to me every week, and I read it with much pleasure. I have not much money, but want a package of tracts to give to my friends, hoping they may do good. Pure and undefiled religion does not abound in this place. Many profess godliness, but by their works deny its power. I am not a christian, yet how I wish that I could lay all on the altar, give all to Christ. Since reading your good paper, I have many times thought I would, but am so wicked. For ten years I have been wandering in the dark, believing that all would at last be saved. But now the influence of that belief is gone. Your paper was put into my hands. I commenced studying the Bible. There I find the destiny of the sinner plainly set forth. Now I am seeking for the truth as it is in Jesus. For the money enclosed send me some tracts. Will you pray for me, that I may be led into the right way, and be ready for every good word and work, and ready when Christ comes to reign. Mrs. S. A. S.

Obituaries.

F. T. Davis.

Died at Annapolis, Md., U. S. General Hospital, Dec. 30th, 1864, Fred. T. Davis, son of Bro. Joseph and Sr. Susan Davis, of Freeport, Me., aged twenty-two years.

Nearly three years since Fred. was induced to enlist in the government service, thinking, like many others, that "it would be better to enlist than to be drafted." In the battle of the Wilderness, he was wounded, May 5th, 1864, and taken prisoner by the "Confederates." After several months' imprisonment, during which he suffered many hardships, he was "paroled," expecting to obtain a furlough and return to his home. But when loving friends were anxiously watching for his return, the sad news came that he was dead.

By the kindness of those in charge at the hospital, he was embalmed and sent home for burial. His funeral was attended by the writer. May the God of all comfort console the bereaved friends, and bring them to that blessed land, where peace shall reign forever. R. R. York.

Jason Mann.

Died in Holden, Mass., Feb. 24th, 1865, Jason Mann, aged seventy-five years.

For about ten years he has been a firm believer in the great truths of the Bible relating to the sleep of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, the second coming of Christ to raise the dead, and set up his everlasting kingdom upon earth renewed. Weekly prayer meetings have been held at his house for about eight years, which he enjoyed very much. A widow and three daughters are left to mourn the loss of a kind husband and affectionate father. He was a liberal supporter of the cause of Christ.

A few days before his death he requested that Eld. Grant should preach his funeral sermon; but as he could not be obtained, the services were conducted by Dr. Paine, of Holden. John Richardson.

Mary Stratton.

Died in Waltham, Mass., Sept. 18th, 1864, Mary C. Stratton, aged sixty-five years.

She was a true christian, loving the appearing of Jesus, and died in the blessed hope of being awakened soon to see him coming in all his glory. She was buried in Holden, Mass., her native place. J. Richardson.

Abner Hough.

Died in Cascade, Iowa, Feb. 4th, 1865, Abner Chancy, youngest son of P. W. and Sarah P. Hough, of Cascade, aged twelve years and five days.

He came to his death by drowning. May the time soon come when death itself shall die. P. W. Hough.

Delos Moulton.

Died of yellow fever, in November, 1864, at the Foster General Hospital, N. C., Delos D. Moulton, son of our late Bro. Daniel E. Moulton, and Sr. I. M. Moulton. S. S. Brewer.

Married.

In Kendall, N. Y., Feb. 17th, 1865, by Joseph Burt, Mr. Ephraim Horner and Miss Libby Harris, all of Carlton, N. Y.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool Feb. 18th, Queenstown 19th.

The Duke of Northumberland died on the 11th inst.

Letters from Rome state that the Pope declines to conclude a concordat with Mexico, but will not withdraw the Nuncio from Mexico.

The London Star's Paris correspondent notices the fact, which is much commented upon in the French capital, that at Prince Napoleon's ball no member of the Southern Confederate party was present, and that none had received an invitation, while invitations were liberally given to Americans of Northern politics.

Great depression prevailed in commercial and financial circles on the 15th, under the influence of the peace negotiation rumors brought by the Canada. The Liverpool cotton market was almost paralyzed, and prices were nominal at about 2d. decline. The London Stock exchange was materially affected. Consols declined about 1–2 per cent., owing to fears that a sudden peace in America would cause serious derangement in financial affairs, by a fall in cotton, and also on account of political contingencies. The prospects of peace were eagerly debated, and the likelihood of its being brought about obtained greater credence than at any previous time.

The French Chambers were opened on the 15th, by a speech from the Emperor. The speech was mainly related to domestic affairs. It was quite silent on the American question; refers to the settlement of the Danish question, and the French neutrality therein; expatiates on the Italian Convention, and the benefit to be derived by Italy as well as the Holy See, and says it permits France to withdraw her troops from Rome; and is a work of peace and conciliation. As regards Mexico the speech briefly says the new throne is becoming consolidated, the country is being pacified, its immense resources developed, by the happy effect of the valor of our soldiers, the good sense of the Mexican population, and the intelligence and energy of the Sovereign. The Emperor rejoices at the French triumphs in Japan, Africa, etc., and then proceeds to enlarge upon measures of domestic legislation, proclaiming an ardent desire to cultivate the arts of peace, to cultivate friendship with the different powers, and to only allow the voice of France to be heard for right and justice.

The long anticipated death of Cardinal Wiseman took place on the 15th.

FOUR DAYS LATER.

Liverpool Feb. 22d, Queenstown 23d.

FRANCE.

A treaty of commerce has been signed between France and Sweden.

The Pall Mall Gazette says the question of the cession of certain provinces of Mexico to France had been discussed in the French Privy Council. The project was advocated by Duke de Morny, who was supported by M. Fould, but Drouyn de L'Huys objected on account of a possible war with the United States, and the Emperor ultimately agreed with him.

SPAIN.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs announced to Congress that a treaty of peace had been signed between Spain and Peru, the latter paying an indemnity of four hundred million reals.

A royal decree has been issued extending to Cuba, the law regulating companies and public works.

It is reported that the Peruvian indemnity is to be made in consignments of guano.

ITALY.

A Turin telegram says great uneasiness prevailed there. It is thought that Mazzini was at the bottom of the agitation.

The eruption of Vesuvius was increasing, although there was no danger at last accounts. That of Etna was diminishing.

TURKEY.

A difficulty has arisen between the Turkish and the Persian governments, the latter having refused to conclude a treaty of commerce with Turkey on the same basis as with other powers. The Porte threatens to withdraw the license to Persian traders.

New York, March 2. The Herald's Havana correspondence says the city of Oajaca, Mexico, has been surrendered to the Imperialists, together with several thousand Republicans. Gen. Diaz, the Republican, attempted to escape in disguise, and was discovered and shot. The guerillas under Rojas and Romero had been almost annihilated by the Imperialists. Their commanders were among the slain.

New Orleans, Feb. 25, via Cairo, March 6. The Times reports that the American Consul at Matamoras has been delivered his passports by the officials of Maximilian, on account of the non-recognition of the French-Austrian authorities in Mexico by the United States.

DOMESTIC.

The President's Inaugural Address.

Fellow Countrymen:

At this second appearing to take the oath of the Presidential office, there is less occasion for an extended address than there was at the first. Then a statement somewhat in detail of a course to be pursued seemed very fitting and proper. Now, at the expiration of four years, during which public declarations have constantly been called forth on every point and phase of the great contest, which still absorbs the attention and engrosses the energies of the nation, little that is new could be presented.

The progress of our arms, upon which all else chiefly depends, is as well known to the public as to myself, and it is, I trust, reasonably satisfactory and encouraging to all.

With high hope for the future, no prediction in regard to it is ventured. On the occasion corresponding to this, four years ago, all thoughts were anxiously directed to an impending civil war. All dreaded it, all sought to avoid it.

While the inaugural address was being delivered from this place, devoted altogether to saving the Union without war, insurgent agents were in the city seeking to destroy it without war, seeking to dissolve the Union and divide the effects by negotiation.

Both parties deprecated war, but one of them would make war rather than let the nation survive, and the other would accept war rather than let it perish, and the war came.

One-eighth of the whole population were colored slaves, not distributed generally over the Union, but located in the Southern part of it. These slaves contributed a peculiar and powerful interest. All knew that this interest was somehow the cause of the war. To strengthen, perpetuate and extend this interest was the object for which the insurgents would rend the Union by war, while Government claimed no right to do more than to restrict the territorial enlargement of it. Neither party expected the magnitude or the duration which it has already attained. Neither anticipated that the cause of the conflict might cease, or even before the conflict itself should cease. Each looked for an easier triumph and a result less fundamental and astounding. Both read the same Bible and pray to the same God, and each invokes His aid against the other. It may seem strange that any man should dare to ask a just God's assistance in wringing their bread from the sweat of other men's faces. But let us judge not that we be not judged. The prayer of both should not be answered. That of neither has been answered fully. The Almighty has his own purposes. "Woe unto the world because of offenses, for it must needs be that offenses come, but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh." If we shall suppose that American slavery is one of these offenses which, in the providence of God must needs come, but which having continued through his appointed time, he now wills to remove, and that he gives to both North and South this terrible war as the woe due to those by whom the offense came, shall we discern there is any departure from those divine attributes which the believers in a living God always ascribe to him? Fondly do we hope, fervently do we pray that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away.

Yet if God wills that it continue until all the wealth piled by the bondmen in 250 years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword—as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said that the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nations wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphans, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and a lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

2 P. M. Just as the President concluded his appropriate remarks the sun broke from among the clouds and lit up one of the most imposing scenes ever witnessed.

The Examiner of the 28th ult. says Columbia, S. C., is freed from the power of the Federals, but it is reported that three-fourths of the city is burned. Gen. Hampton fired his own house, and saw it in ashes before he left.

Washington, March 1—11.30 A. M.

It is evident that Congress will sustain Senator Sherman in levying high taxes wherever it is possible to obtain revenue. No more paper money can be safely issued, and taxation alone can safely sustain the public credit.

New York, March 3. Johnston assumed command as successor to Beauregard on the 25th of February.

New York, March 3. The Richmond Examiner of the 26th ult. indicates that Gen. Schofield has joined Gen. Sherman, and that Hardee's Charleston force and the remnant of Hood's old army have been cut off from uniting with Johnston.

New York, March 5. On Sunday morning the wires of the Western Union Company were connected with Pacific lines, and communication established direct between this city and San Francisco. Though the weather was bad and rain falling at the time at many points on the route, the wires worked well, and a considerable amount of business was transacted. The distance is nearly four thousand miles, and the difference of time about four hours. This is unquestionably the longest telegraphic circle ever worked, and the fact that such a length of wire was telegraphed over in one circuit is a notable era in the history of telegraphing.

New York, March 5. The Herald's Washington special dispatch says authentic information, not from Richmond, has been received that Gen. Sherman's advance has reached Fayetteville, N. C. The same dispatch also says that Porter's gunboats have also reached that point.

The Herald's New Orleans correspondent has information from Mobile to the 6th ult., at which time the rebels were receiving reinforcements, and strengthening the defenses. Beauregard was there on the 4th inspecting the works, and made a speech, expressing great confidence that the place can be held. The force in Mobile is said to be much larger than has been generally believed. Gen. Granger was at Pensacola on the 11th and reviewed the Union troops.

The Herald's Army of the Potomac correspondence says that every fresh batch of rebel deserters that come within our lines reiterate the statement made by previous ones, that the rebels are preparing to evacuate both Richmond and Petersburg.

War Department, Washington, March 5.

Maj. Gen. Dix:

The following dispatches in relation to the reported defeat and the capture of Charlottesville, have been received by this Department. Gen. Sheridan and his force commenced their movement last Monday and were at Staunton when last heard from. Maj. Gen. Hancock was placed in charge of the Middle Military Division during the absence of Gen. Sheridan, headquarters at Winchester.

E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War.

City Point, Va., March 5—11 A. M.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

Deserters in this morning report that Sheridan had routed Early and captured Charlottesville. They report four regiments having gone from here (Richmond) to reinforce Early.

(Signed) U. S. Grant.

City Point, Va., March 5—2 P. M.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

Deserters from every point of the enemy's line confirm the capture of Charlottesville by Gen. Sheridan. They say he captured Gen. Early and nearly his entire force, consisting of eighteen hundred men. Four brigades were reported as being sent to Lynchburg to get there before Sheridan, if possible.

U. S. Grant, Lieutenant-General.

A Large Income.—Somebody in the New York Sun, who has figured in the case, speaks as follows of the income of A. T. Stewart, of New York:—"One million eight hundred and forty-three thousand six hundred and thirty-seven dollars is acknowledged by A. T. Stewart, Esq., as his net income for a single year. 'Whew!' says the reader, as he writes down the immense sum and ciphers out its relation to months, days, hours and minutes, in order to comprehend its vast proportions. One hundred and fifty-three thousand six hundred and forty-six dollars per month. Thirty-five thousand four hundred and fifty-four dollars per week. Five thousand and fifty-one dollars every day. Two hundred and ten dollars per hour. Three dollars and a half each minute. Awake or sleeping, in every passing moment that brings Mr. Stewart nearer to eternity, his gains are equal to the day's wages of a skillful working man."

☞ The clothes of a man, who died of small pox in Providence the other day, were buried to prevent infection. A negro dug them up and took them to an auction room, where they were sold. By handling the goods the auctioneer took the disease and has since died. The negro was arrested and fined $3 dollars and costs.

☞ A Cincinnati paper states that out of nineteen hundred rebel prisoners at Camp Morton, Indianapolis, only about one-fourth are willing to be exchanged. The remainder want to take the oath of allegiance and remain at the North.

☞ The colored citizens of New Orleans own real estate to the value of $15,000,000. They have a daily paper, printed and edited by colored men.

Notice of Eld. J. V. Himes.

I wish to say to my many friends that I have complied with all the invitations for preaching, in my visit East, that was in my power. Duties now call me to the Western field, and I return as soon as practicable. Many thanks to friends for sympathy and aid for the cause in the West. We wish still to be remembered in our good enterprise West.
